PATHE reports that the sales-drive inaugurated on November 1st under the title of "Pearson Month" is sweeping the country "like a streak of lightning." A checking up of the reports received during the first week indicates that all past records made by Pathe for collections and new business have been surpassed, states Pathe in the statement just issued from the New York office of the distributing organization. The statement follows in part:

"Wires informing the thirty-two Pathe branch-managers of 'Pearson Month' and the conditions of the competition were sent out of the home office on Saturday, October 30th, so that it was not until the opening of business on Monday that the various managers learned of the contest. Under these circumstances, the fact that they went out and worked so earnestly as to establish new records, is a worthy tribute to Pathe's Director of Exchanges.

"Pathe managers find themselves during 'Pearson Month' in an unexcelled position to make new marks in every division of their business, for they are fortified with a list of subjects that surpassed in merit any found in the history of the great distributing organization.

"Oklahoma City, Albany, Milwaukee, and Denver are the branches called upon to defend the honors they won in March, and provided they do so this month, each member of the teams will receive a handsome remuneration.

"The selling powers of a number of individual pictures received a decided impetus during the past week. 'The Riddle: Woman' now proving itself the greatest seller in Path's annals, profited by several reasons during the work. First was the drive placed behind it by the sales force in the Pearson Month campaign. A second is the fact that the Associated Exhibitors special has been booked by the Strand in New York for the week of November 7th, a fact which reflects strongly on the box-office strength of the production, when all circumstances are considered.

"'Half a Chance', a Jesse D. Hampton special, is another which has felt the driving power of the feature sales department during the last week. 'The Money Changers', a Benjamin B. Hampton feature, Edgar Lewis's 'A Beggar in Purple'; Blanche Sweet's 'Her Unwilling Husband', Robert Brunton's 'The Devil to Pay' and H. B. Warner's 'Dice of Destiny', are current and coming productions that will figure prominently in the records of the winning teams because they are proving tremendous sellers.

"The activities of the Pathe serial department is indicative of the celerity with which the entire Pathe sales force has entered into 'Pearson Month'. 'Ruth of the Rockies', 'The Phantom Foe' and 'Velvet Fingers' are more than making good, and a good slice of each of their quotas was bitten off by the activities of the department during the opening week of the 'Pearson Month' contest. Always moving at top speed, the short subjects sales department has been hitting on all cylinders during the last seven days, and the mark established by this department is the envy of the entire Pathe force. The campaign will gain force as it progresses, and promising as was the first week of the contest, Pathe officials look to the second week being even more productive of sterling results than its predecessor."

The executives and employees of the Pioneer Film Corporation took advantage of Hallowe'en by staging a dance and party that will long be remembered as one of the most successful in the history of the Pioneer Film Corporation.

The headquarters of the Pioneer, on the seventh floor of the Leavitt Building, were turned into an impromptu combined ball room and cabaret. Everybody connected with Pioneer from President A. E. Lefcourt down to the newest employee who just joined the "Pioneer Family," assisted the special committee composed of Chairman Michael D. Fields, V. P. Maurer, Miss Zillah Goldstein, Miss Ida Gross, Miss Sybil Reder, Miss Emma Bender and G. M. Davidson in making the arrangements.

Peggy Shanor Is Cast in Pathe Serial

Peggy Shanor, well known for her performances in serial and feature films, has joined the cast of "The Man Who Stole the Moon," which is the temporary title of a fifteen-episode serial in production at the George B. Seitz studio for distribution by Pathe with June Caprice and Mr. Seitz as co-stars. This serial will serve as a vehicle in which June Caprice will make her bow as a serial heroine for Pathe.

Preparing a Press-Book for "The U. P. Trail"

The W. W. Hodkinson organization announces that a press book is now under preparation for "The U. P. Trail," a Beniamin B. Hampton production, shortly to be released by the Hodkinson corporation. "The U. P. Trail" is in every sense of the word a big production, and the press book which will accompany it is in every way worthy of so doing, says W. W. Hodkinson.

Preparing for Busy Season

Lasky Studio to Be Taxed to Full Capacity Soon; Companies at Work

WITHIN a short time the Lasky sudio will be taxed to its full capacity by productions under way for Paramount.

Wallace Reid will be engaged upon a motion picture adapted from "The Daughter of a Magnate" by Frank Spearman, scenarized by Eugene Lewis and directed by Frank Urson. Margaret Loomis is to be leading woman.

Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle in "The Dollar-A-Year Man," an original by Walter Woods, directed by James Cruze, will keep the ball rolling. Lila Lee will play opposite the heavyweight Paramount star.

William DeMille has already got a good start on Barrie's play scenarized by Olga Printslau, "What Every Woman Knows," in which Conrad Nagel and Lois Wilson have the leads.

Cecil S. DeMille will begin on a new production for Paramount, the name and nature of which both withheld at the present writing. That it will be a genuine novelty however, is assured.

Thomas Meighan will return to the coast to resume work at Lasky's under Tom Forman's direction, but the title of his picture is not yet stated.

George Melford will begin production of a new original story by Hector Turnbull, scenarized by Mary H. O'Connor. The title is not yet selected.

Two Realart Companies, William D. Taylor's and Mary Miles Minter's will have space at the big plant. Thomas Heffron will direct the latter. Thus it will be seen that the wheels will be buzzing right merrily during the holiday season and turkey will be eaten heartily by all concerned. The new cutting room is nearing completion and this will greatly relieve the overcrowded laboratory, where already a record amount of films is turned out every week.

General Manager Charles Eyton is laying plans for this exceptionally busy period, which, from all accounts, is to be virtually a regular thing from now on.

Vitagraph Improves Studio

New Facilities in Brooklyn Plant Has Made It One of Best in World

THROUGH numerous additions to its laboratories and improvements in its already existing facilities, at its Eastern studios at Brooklyn, the Vitagraph Company of America now has one of the most modern and complete plants in the world. During the past year and a half, anticipating the increased demand for Vitagraph productions which has come, improvements and new equipment have been steadily installed until now the facilities are the greatest in the history of this pioneer in filmdom, and so elastic that there is ample room for further increase as the occasion arises. The capacity for finished prints is now fully ten times as great as it was two years ago.

One of the most important changes made in the Brooklyn laboratories during the past two years was the installation of an entirely new and novel system of developing, fixing, tinting, and drying of film, perfected by Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph. The new system entirely does away with the old-fashioned and obsolete racks for developing, and the cumbersome, space-grabbing drums for drying. As produced at the Vitagraph studios the film is handled mechanically—human hands do not touch the print until it is ready to be shipped, declares Vitagraph.

Not alone in the printing and developing departments has Vitagraph increased and perfected its facilities but in all the other branches of the mechanical department as well. New and additional perforating Duplex printing, joining and splicing machines have been put in operation, and an additional battery of Simplex projecting machines installed.

When the newest addition to the Brooklyn studios was built a few years ago ample provision was made for increased floor space as the occasion demanded. Now these additional rooms are coming into use. The fire proofing and fire apparatus is the most modern, and city water is obtainable in addition to that supplied by Vitagraph's own artesian wells. Steel and concrete vaults insure the absolute safety of film, especially the master prints.

Kansas City Run of Fox Special Goes Big

Reports received from Fox Film Corporation's exchanges in Kansas City, Mo., immediately following the week's run of "While New York Sleeps" at the Shubert theatre in that city, indicate a keen interest in this production on the part of Missouri showmen. In many cities and towns of the state, as well as in Kansas across the river, theatre owners have awakened to the fact that in this film Fox has a box-office attraction of the first water.

For one week "While New York Sleeps" played the Shubert theatre in Kansas City on a two-a-day schedule—one matinee and one night performance. With the prices at a dollar top the Shubert drew its crowds, daily and nightly, a block and a half off Main street and against the keenest sort of competition on the chief thoroughfare of the city, declares Fox Film.

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

Special Service on

Otis Skinner in "Kismet"

"KISMET" is an adaptation of Edward Knoblock's stage play of the same name which created a sensation when it was produced in London and New York several seasons ago. This is one of many dramas which this well known playwright has written.

His "Kismet" was the first of the Oriental spectacles to appear upon the New York stage, and its value can be appreciated by the fact that similar offerings which followed fall short in comparison.

The story of "Kismet" is a day's adventure in the life of Hajj, the Beggar, in Bagdad of a thousand and one years ago—a story which is as exotic, colorful, bizarre, picturesque and unique as its setting.

In addition to Otis Skinner, who makes his screen debut in the role he created upon the New York stage, the cast including Rosemary Theby as "Kut-Ul-Kulub," Elinor Fair as "Marsinah," the daughter of "Hajj," Nicholas Dunaew as "Nasir," Herschel Mayall as "Jawan," Leon Bary as "Caliph Abdullah," and Hamilton Revelle as "Mansur," the Grand Vizier. The latter is also playing his identical role that he assumed in the stage production. These players are all well known to the steady picturegoer. Some have been starred; all have been, some time or other, identified with leading roles.

The cast is supplemented by a large body of supernumeraries and the collective group has been selected for an adaptability for the parts portrayed not only in creating types but also in living them. The production itself is on a truly lavish scale—a production marked for its painstaking detail, rich atmosphere, perfect costuming, and splendid appointments. It is not a misstatement in declaring it to be Bagdad to the life as the imagination pictures it. The appeal to all classes of patrons is a certainty.

Advance Advertising Suggestions

The best exploitation angle of this picture is the name of the star. Everyone who has followed the theatre certainly knows that Otis Skinner is considered one of the REAL artists of the stage. Doubtless the majority of picturegoers have seen him some time or other. The point to bring out is the fact that he makes his screen debut in his greatest stage vehicle. The progressive exhibitor can concentrate upon the idea that the public is ever in search of new faces. Then the fame of the author should be considered. After planting these personages in the public mind, the next best angle would be to bring out the play itself and the lavishness of the production. The director's name should not be neglected for the benefit of the "dyed-in-the-wool" fan.

In announcing that Otis Skinner is coming in "Kismet" make it emphatic that he is America's foremost romantic actor. Emphasize also that this is the greatest play in which the star ever appeared. A good idea would be to stimulate interest by featuring the production in newspaper teasers or posters, simply telling that Otis Skinner is coming in "Kismet." Don't give the date. This is following the big circus methods. In adopting this idea, the anouncements must be made far in advance. Thus the way is paved to develop the "follow-up" campaign. About a week later you can announce the date of the showing, though in the meantime the public should be constantly fed with the merits of the production and intimate stories of Skinner. The costumes are so lavish in the offering that in the "paper" issued, the colors are brought out in striking fashion. Here is a great opportunity for the employment of an artist. And a good sketcher should be able to do wonders with a "head and shoulders" sketch of Skinner for the frames on the exterior of the house. He can gather his inspiration from one of the stills.

THESE Special Service Sections are written with the purpose of suggesting to exhibitors how to get the most out of pictures that they have booked. They are prepared after studying the picture and the best way of exploiting them. Won't you let us know any use that you made of suggestions printed here and the original ideas that you have used in putting over this picture?

THE fact that this picture is an adaptation of one of the greatest plays of all times, with Otis Skinner, who is perhaps better known than the majority of stage stars who come to the screen in their initial production, in his original role, makes "Kismet" an attraction where the ordinary methods of judging box office values are to be disregarded. Two things should be paramount in billing this picture the reputation of the play and the fame of the star. Even the smallest town has heard of Otis Skinner and "Kismet" and each resident will want to see the production.

IN billing "Kismet" the wise exhibitor will bend a great deal of effort toward attracting the people who do not as a rule attend picture performances with any degree of regularity. To do this some out of the ordinary methods must be resorted to. The thing to impress on the people we have referred to is that this is the kind of a picture they will enjoy, that it is produced with the expectation of pleasing those who find fault with motion picture standards in story and plot, as they usually run. Get the preachers, doctors, lawyers, bankers, etc., interested. Make your advertising to them distinctive and dignified and above all don't "bally hoo" this picture.

There was no tailor's trust in Bagdad and no high cost of living and Hajj, the beggar, got rich on nothing.

The harem ladies liked pretty clothes, but you'd never think it to look at the size of their wardrobe.

Poor Hajj, the beggar, had to be arraigned before the man whose administration had been a reign of blood.

Announce That Star Makes Screen Debut In This

As far as the plot is concerned there is no real necessity of going into detail. It presents a very complicated story anyway. And the announcement that it is a tale of Bagdad, the wonder city of a thousand and one years ago, is sufficient to excite curiosity. The very title is significant with mystery and color and atmosphere. You can arouse enough interest by simply telling that it is like a page from the Arabian Nights. While you are making your plans in this direction, your local editors are co-operating with you in exploiting the name and fame of Skinner, and the inside facts of the play. They are running cuts of him and of the play itself. They are constantly publicizing the worth of this picture. Stories of the leading character should be fed the public and quotations of his philosophy.

An excellent angle on the opening day would be to link up with the Shriners if such a lodge is located in your city. Have them come in a body to the theatre. In their uniforms if possible. Or present the picture in the Masonic Temple or the headquarters of the Shriners as a private showing only. Another good suggestion would be to put on a sort of miniature circus parade. If it is possible try to get hold of some camels and elephants, ridden by men disguised as Arabs. A parade would surely gain the publicity and might reach those patrons who don't pay much attention to a newspaper campaign. The figure on the camel could be made up to resemble "Hajj", the Beggar. Of course you can employ men who would be eager to disguise themselves as Arabs. And these circulating in and out of your lobby and in front of the house would give the picture a deal of local color. This is copying the Coney Island methods and may seem cheap in putting such an artistic picture across—a picture which should be well patronized on the strength of Skinner's name.

However, "Kismet" has great "bally-hoo" possibilities and those exhibitors who follow that style of campaign should find the stunts valuable. Why "Hajj", the Beggar, can live again right on your streets, three or four days preceding the showing or during the presentation. He can walk around in his rags and tatters, although advised not to beg alms as he does in the picture. In the display advertising you have the colorful stills and "paper" for your lobby. Give most of your attention to the star, the author, and title, mentioning the fact that it is a superb picture made from an equally superb play.

Prologue Suggestions

Those exhibitors who wish to stage a prologue (progressive and artistic exhibitors are ever staging prologues in worth-while pictures) should take a scene from the play—any outstanding scene would do, though it would be our plan to present a reproduction of the original flash. You can employ "Hajj," the Beggar, again, seated on the steps of the Mosque begging alms. Incense can be used curling up from fires on the stage. You can people the scene with figures from the play—people who are constantly on the move, praying, chanting, selling merchandise, etc. The costumes should be easy to obtain. You can use shadow effects which would climinate the trouble of building massive sets. This would introduce the proper illusion. Put plenty of color and atmosphere into the set.

Your musical setting should be exploited for its atamosphere, too. A soprano singing Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hindoo Love Song" should precede the feature. This is the song that Alma Gluck features in her repertoire. Or if you prefer the artist singing "Less Than the Dust" you can employ Miss Gluck's voice off-stage on the talking machine to bring color to the presentation. The producers have arranged a musical setting by James C. Bradford which is ideal. It is composed of Oriental strains and excerpts from scores which are distinctly Eastern in flavor. Such a picture is made more enjoyable through giving it the correct interpretation.

If you employ only an organist or pianist and the Bradford arrangement is not obtainable, advise him to stress the Oriental flavor. Strains from Russian music, such as Tchaikowsky's "Andante Cantabile for String Quartet", Glinka's "March of the Sirdar Tribe", Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scherezade" or the famous "Egyptian Ballet" would give it an ideal setting. Your ushers must be garbed in strictly Oriental style. If you employ girls, you can have them bedeck themselves in really startling colors—with the veils hiding their faces as per custom.

The main thing to achieve harmony. Here you have a rich and spectacular production with an Oriental setting. By staging a prologue identical with a certain scene in the picture, and embellishing it with the proper atmosphere which is generated through the music and the ushers who are costumed in an appropriate manner, your house is placed in a sympathetic state of mind.

Otis Skinner, America's foremost romantic actor, will appear at the . . . next . . . in "Kismet," a screen reproduction of the famous play in which he scored the greatest success of his career.

Bagdad, the beautiful Bagdad, the city of the Orient that flourished a thousand and one years ago—will be presented to patrons of the . . . theatre next . . . . It forms a setting for "Kismet," the Otis Skinner picture.

"Hajj", the Beggar, lived a thousand and one years ago in the beautiful city of Bagdad. He begged alms from dawn to sunset. Into his life was woven a rich pattern of adventure. A day arrived when "Hajj" climbed to the heights but when the sun sank behind the towers of the city, fate led him down to his beggarly kingdom.

Edward Knoblock's celebrated play, "Kismet", transferred to the screen with all its adventure, dramatic sweep, vivid actiion, color and atmosphere.

Can a beggar rise above his rags and tatters? And still be a beggar at heart? That is the story of "Kismet"—the story of "Hajj", the Beggar, who lived in Bagdad a thousand years ago.

"Alms, alms, for the love of Allah", was the cry of "Hajj", the Beggar, from dawn to sunset. Some gave begrudgingly; others gave generously. And "Hajj", the Beggar, prospered. He found audience with the high and mighty and so well could he play his part that many mistook him for the Caliph. He was drawn into a net of intrigue and adventure and the only way he could extricate himself was in becoming a Beggar again. That is the story of "Kismet."

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES

E. W. Hornung's Masterpiece

"DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES"—the murderous motto of the cold-blooded Senor Santos. The big gold strike in Australia was on. He lusted for a share of the yellow treasure being shipped from the mines. With that lust was born his devilish creed. He tempted and won the captain of the treasure ship. Gunpowder was secretly put aboard with the gold. And when the little ship and its cargo of gold and human beings sailed away, the dastardly design to blow it up at sea was full blown. Lifeboats were scuttled. None but the black-hearted rascals would escape.

Squire Rattray, well meaning but weak, is drawn into the murderous scheme by his love for Eva, the fair daughter of the villain Santos. With his private yacht he is to pick up the villains and their loot. Among the unsuspecting passengers is Cole, a young barrister. He and the lovely Eva are strangely attracted to each other. Then comes the fatal night—the removal of the gold by Santos and his gang. They steal away from the doomed ship and then comes the blast of the touched off gunpowder. The staunch little schooner is rent into a thousand pieces and with its human cargo of men, women and children scattered over the lonely waste. Cole alone escapes and later is picked up by a passing vessel. On reaching home the scoundrels seek to kill him. But they do not reckon with Eva, or the really good Rattray who passionately loves the girl.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales" will live forever in the minds of those who see it. As a vivid dramatic and flaming novel, it has moved millions in the past to shuddering gasps, tears and laughter. The power of its pages has been doubled—yes, trebled by the superb and glamorous production Vitagraph has given it for the screen.

Live Notes from the Studios

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN R. GALE

ABOUT DIRECTORS

JEROME STORM, after many years of experience, is enjoying a new wrinkle in the "directorial game." It should be enough that he directed one star (Charles Ray) in fourteen consecutive pictures, during which the director met with varied experiences. But this is not a matter of temperament upon the part of either the star or the director. On the contrary, quite the reverse.

One reads, often, stories about temperamental stars who hold up a director's work by arriving two hours later than the time set for "shooting"? But did you ever hear of a star who arrived ahead of time? Mr. Storm is undergoing such an experience. Sometimes he has to forego breakfast in order to uphold the tradition that the director always arrives before the star. Even then, he admits, he doesn't always make it. According to latest bulletin, obtained from the director, himself, the contest is about a tie, with Miss Gish possibly in the lead. But Mr. Storm has hopes, since he has finished rehearsals and will commence shooting in the Biograph studio, where he will have an alibi if he is a few moments late, as it seems Miss Gish's hotel is several blocks nearer the studio than Mr. Storm's.

According to information received from Denison Clift, by his friends in Hollywood, who passed the good word along, Mr. Clift, former scenario editor and director for William Fox (West Coast studio) has accepted a proposition made him by Ideal Films, of London, to produce a screen adaptation of the Guy DeMaupassant famous story, "The Diamond Necklace." Several months ago Mr. Clift was granted a leave of absence from the studio. He immediately left for a tour of Europe, believing that he could best spend the time traveling there as he accumulated material for picture stories, and at the same time learn of film conditions on the Continent first hand which would be of particular value to him. Mr. Clift traveled to many parts of Europe and it was while on his return to America that he stopped in London and was offered a very gratifying contract, which he accepted. While en route to Europe Mr. Clift accepted the offer of the English company to write a screen version of the story. He started on this while en route from London to Paris by aeroplane, so his correspondent states, and the men interested in making the firm were so pleased with the script Mr. Clift produced that they made him the offer to assume charge of the production upon his return.

It is Mr. Clift's intention to return to the Fox organization as soon as "The Diamond Necklace" production is completed.

"Lavender and Old Lace," in the opinion of the director, Lloyd Ingraham, is the best picture of his career. The author's characters and story are faithfully reproduced, and in the words of Mr. Ingraham, "if hard work and enthusiasm on the part of us all counts for anything, this picture should be a record breaker. Mr. Ingraham has a list of previous successes to his credit.

Joseph DeGrasse, and friend wife, Ida May Park, both directors of motion pictures, are spending their first vacation in many moons, in New York. Mr. DeGrasse is Charles Ray's present director.

"Many a good picture on the screen is spoiled," said Arthur Berthelet, director of the new Bessie Love features "by the speed with which it is run in the theatre. The man in the production booth holds in his hands the destiny of many a film.

"It is only trite to say that 'Macbeth' played on the stage at a galloping speed would not be a tragedy but a farce. Equally true is it that the tempo with which a serious feature picture is run determines whether its situations and people are seriously taken or made ridiculous.

"I make the comparison reluctantly but have you ever been in a church where the minister read the Scriptures or litany with a speed that took all the reverence out of them and turned solemn precepts into mere lip service? How can truths thus galloped over sink into the spirit and do their work?

"The tendency of the times is to so cram theatre programs with music tableaus and varied films that the feature must be raced to keep to the schedule. The result is disastrous for actors and director.

"If the situations or characters of a play seem to jump around from one spot to another as is too often the case they can't be taken any more seriously than they seem to take themselves. Many a situation that would have a fine dramatic effect played slowly is ruined by a fast tempo both for the reason given and the additional one that the audience can't grasp the deep significances if it is carried along swiftly from one scene to another.

Henry King the director has handled hundreds of actors with notable success but he had his hardest experience in managing a giant sword fish off the California coast recently. It weighed 118 pounds took one hour and a half to land and wore the flesh of two of King's fingers nearly to the bone.

Governor Thomas Riggs Jr. of Alaska has written to Edward Sloman director of the Jack London story "Burning Daylight," calling attention to a little slip in the production. After praising it highly as a whole, the Governor says, "but the wearing of shoes in the Alaskan cold is impossible. Being an old dog-musher myself I think I can speak authoritatively." Mr. Sloman thanked the executive for the tip.

ABOUT PLAYERS

BETTY BLYTHE was selected as star for "The Truant Husband," after consultation with a number of distributors and showmen, according to a statement from Rockett Brothers, who had a number of stars and leading women under consideration for their initial all-star production. The peculiar fitness of Miss Blythe for the rather difficult role assigned her, is illustrated by comments which have appeared in print:

"Miss Blythe in portraying the old and forgotten sweetheart does not resort to 'vampirical' tactics to make the impression the author intended to make. She is just human—and that's saying a lot for a screen star."

Another critic says:

"Betty Blythe deserves worlds of credit for her portrayal, especially since she seems unafraid to 'smear' her beauty with the effects of a hot railroad trip."

Miss Blythe's most recent appearance was the heroine of a First National release "Nomads of the North" in which she was most delightful. She is now engaged in enacting a most important role in a William Fox spectacle, which will probably be called "Queen of Sheba."

Gordon H. Standing, one of the famous theatrical family, some of whom are "Standings" and others known by varied sir-names, will be seen in an important role when "The Foreigner" makes its initial appearance. Mr. Standing is also one of the well balanced cast of "Man and Woman," first release of Sherman Productions Corporation.

Robert Schable, well known stage director for Ethel Barrymore, John Drew, and others, and an actor of pronounced ability, has been engaged to play the "heavy" lead in George D. Baker's first independent production, "Temple Dust." Mr. Schable's most recent Broadway appearance was in the George Fitzmaurice production "On With The Dance", his individual work winning the approval of critics who had heretofore known this versatile artist chiefly as a director, and for his work in "The Firing Line," with Irene Castle, "The Stolen Kiss" with Constance Binney and others. His latest picture is "The Romantic Adventuress", with Dorothy Dalton, shortly to be released.

Irving M. Lesser, producing "Peck's Bad Boy," announces he has secured the services of Henry Bergman, who has been associated with Charles Chaplin in pictures for the past four years. Mr. Bergman will not don the make-up this time. He will assist Nate Watt, who is directing the story. Mr. Bergman's efforts will be concentrated on Jackie Coogan, who is featured in the "Peck" film. During the time spent by Chaplin in making "The Kid," in which Jackie portrayed the title role, Mr. Bergman made a careful study of the little chap's histrionic ability, and there is probably no person who understands him as well as Mr. Bergman, who with Nate Watt will co-operate in the endeavor to bring out every talent the six-year-old has—which is said to be quite some.

Nelson McDowell as Lige Conklin, the horse-trader in "Down Home"

Walter Morosco, son of Oliver Morosco, the stage producer, has left the parental fold to cast his lot with the films. He will be in W. Christie Cabanne's next picture.

Although "Opportunity" is far from the end of its run at the Forty-eighth Street Theatre, James Crane, who is playing the leading role, is planning an early return to the screen. Mr. Crane may combine photoplay and stage work during the coming winter.

Heretofore Vincent Coleman has played the polite society leading man type in pictures. In his present photoplay, Vitagraph's "The Dress of Destiny," in which he is playing opposite Alice Calhoun, Coleman is showing his athletic prowess by performing several unusual stunts. In one case he leaps from a Ford to the top of a Rolls-Royce limousine. Some leap, say we, Vincent.

Irene Boyle did her bit in aiding Senator Harding's election. While returning from Augusta, Me., where she played the lead in "The Rider of the King Log," Miss Boyle met a Republican campaign party, and aided them by means of personal appearances in several Massachusetts towns.

Merle Johnson, who has spent six weeks getting together his company for his first personally supervised production, "Footsteps," is negotiating for the services of Red La Rocque to play the leading role.

Lark Bronlee will make her screen debut in "Beyond the Great Wall" when the Chinese drama, in six reels is presented in December, and in which Miss Bronlee will be seen in the leading feminine role. During the New York run of "East is West," Miss Bronlee played a small part and understudied the star, Fay Bainter. And previous to that she received her fundamental training in a Pittsburgh stock company. It is predicted we will hear considerable more about the little lady, who is as unusual in natural appeal, as is her pretty name.

Nothing to it, declared pretty Mildred Davis, leading lady of the Harold Lloyd comedies. Referring to a widespread rumor that she was engaged to one of the officers of the United States navy on the fleet which has been stationed at Los Angeles Harbor. Miss Davis has been quite a lioness among the navy men and has received many social attentions, but merely comments that she loves them all.

When James Morrison went west this summer he was engaged to play the role of a twenty-two-year-old in "Sowing the Wind." Then came "When We Were Twenty-One." Now he is playing a sixteen-year-old lad in "Black Beauty" for Vitagraph. "They'll have me in long dresses next," says Jimmy.

The outstanding features of James Whitcomb Riley's "The Old Swimmin' Hole," just finished by Charles Ray, will be the exterior locations says Director Joseph De Grasse. To obtain the old swimmin' hole Mr. Ray's producers had to sign a year's lease on a stretch of creek situated on one of the oldest Spanish grants in Southern California.

Antonio Moreno, who is returning to the field of feature stars after two years on the serial circuit, has purchased an estate in southern Spain. Denials of marriage, however, were issued at once thus frustrating any panic. Mr. Moreno already has commenced work on his first Vitagraph special, which is from a magazine story, "The Three Sevens," by Perley Poore Sheehan. He plans to make one feature in Spain next year.

The Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, has just purchased the Illinois and Indiana rights to another big serial, "The Lurking Peril," starring Anne Luther and George Larkin. It is in fifteen parts and is said to contain many thrilling and sensational stunts. The release date in Illinois and Indiana will be December 1st.

"The Jungle Princess," the five-reel feature adapted from Warner Brothers' serial, "The Lost City," will be distributed in the Chicago territory by the Celebrated beginning November 21st, and on December 1st, will come the release of "The Fall of the Saint" the first of the twelve Gaumont features recently contracted for by President Friedman of Celebrated.

Mr. Friedman is increasing his sales force which will handle these releases and an extensive advertising and exploitation campaign is being mapped out to put them over in a way to commensurate with their importance.

A few weeks since, Jessie Arnold finished her work in "Blackbirds," the first Famous-Players starring vehicle for Justine Johnstone. Previous to that, she had played in a Paramount-Artcraft release in the Dorothy Dalton company. A few weeks hence, Miss Arnold will again be seen with Miss Dalton, having been signed for that star's next screen production which has not yet been given a working title.

Natalie Talmadge, who has been spending a four-months' vacation abroad, has joined her sisters, Norma and Constance, and will play a part in Constance's new picture, "The Man From Toronto." Natalie was recently seen with Norma in "Yes or No?" and with Constance in "The Love Expert."

Jason Robards, who plays the juvenile lead, John Marvin, in "Lightnin" after an absence of six years, returns to the screen in "The Painted Lily," a Mae Murray picture, Paramount.

Who, but Constance Talmadge could so ably suggest the title of the new picture "A Butterfly in Harness," recently purchased for her, and which is a comedy drama by the always popular Fred and Fanny Hatton? And, to add to the happy arrangement, Chet Withey will direct, following the completion of "The Man From Toronto," which he will also make, with Miss Talmadge as the star.

Edith Stockton is leaving no stone unturned to fit her for a predicted career as an actress. She is studying diction under the tutelage of Theodore Irving, who has taught enunciation to a host of stage notables, including Alice Brady and John Drew, and is now playing with Miss Brady in "Voice of Blood." She believes that improved diction will lend her greater ease and assurance in her picture work, according to her own explanation, but with the current movement of so many screen personages to the speaking stage, one might suspect Edith of having plans which might rob the screen of a promising young leading woman.

Director Vignola on Exploitation

The question of exploitation which has come to mean so much to the exhibitor has so thoroughly proven its value and necessity that it has become a most important factor in the making of motion pictures. Today the keen producer and director, alive to his responsibilities and possibilities, gives as much consideration to the exploitation values of the production he is about to make as he does to the cast or the sets, according to Robert G. Vignola, producer and director of Vignola Special Productions for Cosmopolitan-Paramount.

There was a time when the director had no interest in his productions beyond the actual making," said Mr. Vignola. "Before he began a production he made as sure as he could that the elements of drama, comedy, love, intrigue, conflict, mystery, suspense, etc., were properly proportioned, that the cast was as well balanced as could be had, and that the sets were ably and beautifully made. When he finished a production he turned it over the sale department and let it go at that. He had little or no interest in the sales problems as they affected the exhibitor and the public.

"But today a different situation faces the director. No matter how fine a production he makes the problem of selling it to the public is as troublesome as if he had made a poor picture. In other words the public must be sold on a picture before it is a success. In the past this phase was left entirely to the sales and publicity and advertising departments and the exhibitor Today the director takes a hand. He can make a picture an 'easy seller' or he cannot. If he knows the science of exploitation—and it is a science—he can inject such elements of appeal into the picture, aside from the well known heart interest stuff, etc., that the exhibitor has no trouble interesting his patrons.

"As far as I am personally concerned I consider exploitation values just as important, and I pay just as much attention to that element as I do to any other in my productions.

Colleen Moore playing "Gwen" in "The Sky Pilot," a Catherine Curtis production directed by King Vidor

Colleen Moore in "Sky Pilot"

Colleen Moore, who plays the part of "Gwen," the vivacious daughter of "the Old-Timer" in the Cathrine Curtis production of "The Sky Pilot," although born in Port Huron, Michigan, is a graduate from the Convent of the Holy Name, in Tampa, Florida, whence she emerged to begin her career on the screen. She was originally intended for a musician and she won, at the age of fifteen, a diploma from the Detroit Conservatory of Music. Her first engagement for the screen was with David Wark Griffith, who engaged her to play the ingenue lead in "The Bad Boy," which featured the late Bobby Harron. She also played with Harron in "The Old Fashioned Young Man" and with Wilfred Lucas in "Hands up." Leaving Griffith, she was engaged in turn by Triangle, Fine Art, Ince, Selig, Paramount and Universal. Her first real hit was made in the screen version of James Whitcomb Riley's "Little Orphant Annie" and "A Hoosier Romance." She was leading woman for Charles Ray in "The Busher"; for Tom Mix in "The Wilderness Trail"; for Charles Ray, again, in "The Egg-Crate Wallop" and for Monroe Salisbury in "The Man in the Moonlight." She was featured in two Christie specials, "Her Bridal Nightmare" and "A Roman Scandal"; she was Sessue Hayakawa's leading woman in "The Devil's Claim" and was "Chic" Sale's chief support in "The Smart Aleck." Miss Moore was engaged by Marshall Neilan for the chief feminine role in "Dinty," where her success was such that Neilan signed her to a long time contract. Miss Cathrine Curtis selected her as the ideal personality for the character of "Gwen" in Miss Curtis' big production of "The Sky Pilot," founded on the popular novel by Ralph Connor, now nearing completion in Canada under the direction of King Vidor, and was

Response of a Director for Directors

MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in October 30th issue, carried an editorial entitled, "It's the Big Ben Hour," which seems to have created a "stir." The following excerpts from a letter addressed to Mr. William A. Johnston will illustrate:

"The term 'motion picture director' is an entitlement which is too often flung around and indiscriminately made to bedeck some shoulders which are most unworthy.

"Your article speaks of two directors (?) in conversation, one speaking of a third as being a 'piker because he never spent over a hundred thousand dollars upon a picture!!'

"Believing that you endeavor to live up to the slogan, 'fairness and justice to all,' it is my desire to call your attention to a body of men known as the Motion Picture Directors' Association. And as a director and member of said Association, I wish to cite a pertinent instance:

"I was in a motion picture studio, as a director, where, one day, there came an ambitious mechanic electrician. In time his aggressiveness brought him the opportunity to try out on a camera, which resulted in his becoming an ordinary camera man of mediocre ability. After drifting around from one company to another, he finally persuaded a said to be producer to let him direct a picture, which, of course, proved to be without merit.

"Another instance: A producer (?) lacking foresight and hoping to save on salary by not employing a competent man, was known to give a property boy the opportunity to direct a picture, under his, the producer's, 'personal supervision.' The result was what might be expected—no picture and a total loss of investment.

"A third instance: An assistant in a well known Philadelphia motion picture studio came over to New York looking for an engagement as a director. When asked to show a picture he had directed, which of course he did not have, he had a fake title made with his name, as director, upon it. This he cut into one of that firm's productions, exhibited it as his own, secured an engagement, but naturally 'flunked.' However, he still claims to be a director and when he can land a 'sucker' wastes the money.

"A more recent occurrence points to a young man, formerly employed in the scenario department of a motion picture company in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn. His name is being used in propaganda by a new film concern as the director, to sell stock. This young man has never directed a picture.

"These examples are brought to your attention to illustrate instances of injustice done to the man of knowledge, experience and ability by being classed with the counterfeit. And these are but a few of the many instances which might be offered.

"In answer to the question you put regarding the director's knowledge of his art: The very academic nature of the Motion Picture Directors' Association is such that every member becomes schooled in efficiency, through discussions, articles presented and read by its most talented members, relating to costs of production, waste of film, stories, etc. Thus, a fundamental knowledge is widened by the experiences of others. A long list of distinguished writers, producers and studio engineers of the industry have, by invitation, lectured and spoken before this body, which goes to show that a member of this Association is enabled to equip himself so as to make the highest grade of production, and in this, no outsider may share.

"Investigation will prove that practically all of the extravagances and losses referred to have been caused by men who were incapable in every way and were employees of employers who were as ignorant as themselves."

Ten Year Old Comedy Reminiscence

THERE was a time, and not many years ago, when the name "Florence Lawrence", meant motion pictures, serials, hazardous stunts and girlish impersonations.

Recently that same Florence Lawrence, after an extended absence from the screen, shook hands with Mack Sennett, after a lapse of ten years. Ben Turpin joined the party, Charlie Murray gravitated forth, and soon motion picture history was being turned into the reminiscences of a quartet on the Sennett lot.

Frank Powell, now a Sennett director, joined the party which made it a Royal Quintet, for he, too, was in the Biograph organization when Mack Sennett, Mary Pickford, D. W. Griffith, Florence Lawrence, Henry B. Walthall and several others, now celebrated, were in their first days with the infant art.

Turpin reminded them that he was not a Biograph man, but a rival at the "Imp", where subsequently Miss Lawrence worked, prior to the formation of the Victor Company, of which Miss Lawrence was star.

Mr. Sennett blushed with embarrassment, when Miss Lawrence reminded him of the times when, between the shooting of scenes, he and Arthur Johnston blended their voices in song at the old Irving place on Fourteenth Street, near Fifth Avenue, New York.

"He had one of the most beautiful voices I have ever heard," said Miss Lawrence. "A great, deep, booming baritone with lots of the Celtic quality of tenderness for which John McCormack is noted. I always thought Mr. Sennett should have gone into grand opera."

"That will do," interrupted Mr. Sennett, who did not need to call attention to his thirty-five acres of studio property in order to refute the argument that would have directed him to opera.

"The picture art is even younger than the musical and much more generous in its rewards," reflected Miss Lawrence, who went on to tell about her accident four years ago, the culmination of several mishaps, which nearly wrecked her health and which, till now, have kept her away from pictures.

"In those days" volunteered Mr. Sennett, "the 'double' was not yet created. Stars had not assumed the personal importance they now enjoy, and if the role called for risks, we ran 'em. We took our own chances and nobody took more of them than this plucky little lady."

Miss Lawrence visited the Sennett studios en route to San Francisco. She came to Los Angeles, playing an important role in the Marcus show, leaving it in Los Angeles to return to San Francisco, where her mother and brother reside, and where she stated, she expects to engage in business related to theatrical and motion picture enterprises.

All of which brought the confession from Charlie Murray, that before pictures claimed him, and while yet the partner of Ollie Mack, his ambition was to own and operate a circus. Pictures, it is certain, are what stopped his mad career mapped out in three rings. However, since his natural ability to extract the most comedy possible from any humorous situation attracted the attention of Mr. Sennett, the certain income and living possibilities offered, turned the Indiana comedian from the sawdust trail, for which he still yearns when reminiscing upon his farce comedy days.

Chas. E. Whittaker Illustrates "Seeking After the Obvious"

"IT'S strange," said Uncle Doolittle, "but I can't find my glasses, although I've been searching for quite a long time."

"Why Uncle!" said True Bill, "they're on your nose." And so they were.

"Every so often—too often for most people's patience," states Charles E. Whittaker, "there comes up the invariable headline in a deluded trade press, to something like this effect: Screens greatest need is good stories—Xerxes Y. Zooby, of Magnifico Films, will encourage men and women to write directly for the screen."

There was something on this order in a Sunday paper and on an adjoining column, a notice stating that the story of the picture shown at a certain Broadway house wasn't "suitable for the screen."

That story, according to Mr. Whittaker, was one written by a choice master of language and metaphysics—the son of a woman novelist whose works were popular for forty years. It starred not the least capable of an important theatrical family; the director was adequate; the supporting cast was unexceptionable. And the picture "flopped" in the eye of a kindly critic, because "the story wasn't suitable for the screen."

"If, as Mr. X. Y. Z. and his kind are always telling us (truthfully be it said) that there is a dearth of material—why don't they do something about it?" is Mr. Whittaker's query. "They will answer they are doing something about it all the time—that they are continually buying books and plays and short stories from varied magazines. And the Recording Angel turns away, hiding his head in his wings, which, you may be sure and custom-made and not hand-me-downs or misfits from Lucifer.

"The plain truth of the matter is that, of the four big producing firms which control this hectic business not one has really given any encouragement to screen writers to write original stories for the screen—and by encouragement I mean no mere pats on the head; Heaven and the publicity man know that those come often enough—but real encouragement in the shape of adequate compensation, compared with what any two-cent-a-word magazine writer or sixteenth best seller may get for his material, plus the combined advertising that is indispensable even to good work in order to put it across.

"How many screen writers, who write exclusively for the screen are known to the public or to exhibitors? Phrased otherwise, how many writers are those who could be called "featured" writers? There are four: Anthony Paul Kelly (a free-lance); Anita Loos (a Triangle discovery); C. G. Sullivan (exploited solely by Thomas Ince), and H. H. VanLoan (who created himself). I purposely exclude John Emerson, who was a playwright of renown before he even saw a motion picture studio, and Jeanie McPherson, who is overshadowed by her director.

"What sort of pecuniary reward do these screen authors get? Compared to authors of magazine stories and novels, whose works once purchased, have to be padded out or cut down or entirely remodelled to make them suitable for the screen? Very little.

"I have no axe to grind in this matter. I have been so busy during the last four years on adaptations, that I have had little leisure to devote to original work; excluding Kismet—the future of which rests on the knees of the Gods—I suppose the most popular picture I have adapted was "The Whip." I make bold to say that Kelly, Sullivan, VanLoan and Miss Loos could write a synopsis of a story as good as "The Whip" in three days. But is the day ever coming when one of the four can get something like $100,000 for a story, as rumor has it was paid for the picture rights of "A Tailor-Made Man."

"The answer is, at present, 'no'; in the future 'very doubtful' at least. The obvious reply of the producer is that the two plays mentioned have a definite advertising value. In view of the oft-repeated statement that it is not the first run houses which bring in the real profits but the smaller towns, it is permissible to ask what 'The Whip' and 'The Tailor-Made Man' mean to Minnesota, Arkansas and Wyoming? And if these plays really have a definite advertising value, and if a new star like Constance Talmadge—who has succeeded by reason of ability and not merely facial charms—can make a howling success, why can't an author of ability who writes exclusively for the screen?

"Mr. X. Y. Z.'s reply is that the author hasn't the personal touch with the public that a star possesses; that the audience can see the star's face and know him or her as a friend.

"Well, when the New York Capitol broke all home records with the 'North Wind's Malice,' how many of the patrons knew what Rex Beach looked like? Why did they pack the theatre? Because they knew that Rex Beach always gives them a good story.

"There are adapters working day in day out at all the studios. In the big studios, how many of these same adapters are being encouraged to write original stories with the hope of getting as much out of their original work as book-authors?

"Now, Messieurs, the Producers, don't all speak at once; and when you do speak, do please confine yourself to this question: 'Do you seek intrinsic merit in stories, or extrinsic value?' If the former, your glasses are on your nose; if the latter, sight has gone, and Heaven help you."

Interesting Developments in Film Field Abroad

THERE has just reached Paris an interesting report from Tchecko-Slovakia containing a number of enlightening statistics on the growth and development of the motion picture industry in this newly founded Republic. The report itself was issued by a committee of the National Assembly charged with an examination of the legislation affecting the motion picture theatres at present in existance throughout the country. The Republic of Tchecko-Slovakia, it is learned, contains in all four hundred and fifty motion picture theatres which give a total of 180,000 programs yearly to 40 million spectators. In view of the projects already undertaken and those outlined for immediate consideration, the report states that there is every reason for thinking that before long the number of motion picture theatres will be doubled. Tchecko-Slovakia has been relying almost exclusively on foreign imported films and of these 2,580,000 feet, or about 60 per cent of the total imported, were supplied from Germany. French films come next, with 582,000 feet, representing 14 per cent, while the United States is the third on the list supplying 12 per cent. The remainder are divided up between Italy, Norway and Hungary. In spite of these figures, it is to be noted that the films which enjoy the greatest popularity are those from the United States. This fact would seem to explain the announcement which accompanies the report—namely, that the American Film Company and the "Brograha" Company have joined interests to form a new company with a capital of 5,000,000 crowns, in 12,500 shares of 400 crowns, for the purpose of exploiting the film industry of the country. Both these companies have of late been displaying the greatest activity in Central Europe and it is the intention of the new company to construct a studio on a large and elaborate scale where they will produce their own pictures. On the industrial side, Tchecko-Slovakia used 60,700 feet of negative film and 262,500 of positive in its production during the year 1919 and of this nearly the entire quantity was purchased from a Berlin house. The largest motion picture theatres are at Prague, the most extensive being the Peklo theatre with a seating capacity of a thousand. The next in size is the Svetzor with 900 seats. Most of the largest theatres give three programs daily, increasing this to four on Sundays and holidays. The price of seats varies between 80 hellers and 6 crowns in the orchestra and up to seven and a half crowns for a seat in a loge. The cost of a license for a motion picture house is about 4,000 crowns. New licenses are given by preference to soldiers mutilated in the war. There is a heavy system of taxation on the picture theatres, and on the whole motion picture industry. The taxes imposed by the State and the different municipalities are as high as 22½ per cent while the war tax on the net profits reaches from 15 to 20 per cent of the price of the seats. The projection equipment employed in Tchecko-Slovakia are with very few exceptions of German make. The country possesses only one national factory where films and projection material is made. The pay of an operator in one of the largest houses varies between 800 and 1,000 crowns a month. How inadequate this is may be guessed from the fact that recently the operators in Prague made a joint demand for an increase of 3,000 crowns monthly. The demand was refused. The pay of other employees is proportionately low, varying between 600 and 800 crowns a month, that of musicians being from 800 to 1,500 crowns a month.

Paris is shortly to receive a new and original film from Italy entitled "The Bible on the Screen." It will arrive and be shown in instalments, the first one of which deals with the creation and fall of man and the flight from Paradise. It is said that the greatest attention to detail has been made in the making of this film. The whole of Italy was combed for suitable types to figure in the story which is set in magnificent scenery and backgrounds. Some of Italy's finest examples of sculpture and painting have inspired many of the groups to be seen in this film.

It is announced that Rip, the famous French cartoonist has made his debut as a scenario writer. His initial effort which is being filmed at present is called "Asmodee" and includes several of the best known French artists among its interpreters.

The Fox Film in Paris, whose offices on the Boulevard des Italiens have just been transferred to number 17 Rue Pigalle, is preparing a special feature in honor of the forthcoming celebrations of the 50th year of the Republic's existance. This will consist in the reappearance of the famous Fox picture "Un Drame d'Amour sous La Revolution Francaise," with Wil-

Lucy Cotton Represents Stage and Screen

Lucy Cotton, who has been chosen by the American Legion to represent the screen and stage at the Armistice Day Celebration, will be presented to President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson at the White House.

Miss Cotton, who has just completed the leading feminine role opposite George Arliss in his first screen essay "The Devil," has, in a very short length of time accomplished a great deal in becoming favorably identified in her chosen profession.

Arriving in Washington, a private car in which Miss Cotton will be met by military escort and the Marine Band, from thence to the Hotel Willard. In the evening the National Press Club have arranged for a showing of the Artcraft-Cosmopolitan special "The Miracle of Love," in which Miss Cotton is seen to great advantage in the leading feminine role. It will be followed by a dinner. On Thursday she will be presented to the President and Mrs. Wilson.

Miss Cotton's untiring efforts are winning for her the realization of her fondest dream, that of becoming an artist whose work will one day be pointed out as an example of art and technique, second only to her individual beauty.

Child Wrote Baker-Directed Special

Richard Washburn Child, said to be first in line for appointment of secretary to President-elect Harding, will have two large feathers in his hat, if the appointment is consummated, the other being the presentation of one of his stories, "A Whiff of Heliotrope", which appeared in magazine form under that title, and will soon be seen on the screen when the George D. Baker special, "Heliotrope", one of Mr. Baker's Cosmopolitan productions, is released. While a practicing lawyer by profession, Mr. Child is well known as an author and editor. "Heliotrope" is said to be a screen work of such promise that following its exploitation the author will be best known as a writer of photoplays.

"The First One Hundred"

It would be difficult, indeed, to find anyone better fitted to compile a history of screen favorites than Carolyn Lowrey, who, for many years has worked among the people who have made the great motion picture industry possible.

In Mrs. Lowrey's book, recently offered the market, published by Moffat, Yard and Company, we may find a detailed history of "the first one hundred" celebrities of the cinema, illustrated with a photograph of each. No expense has been spared in making Mrs. Lowrey's work a worthy addition to the library.

liam Farnum. This film is to be seen again in Paris on November 5. The Maison Aubert will mark the event with a new and equally appropriate production entitled "The Marseillaise," a short, but impressive film which depicts the birth of the great French national hymn.

The re-establishment of commercial relations between France and Germany has already led to interesting developments in the motion picture industry of the two countries. According to a report received in Paris there has been formed in Cologne a film company known as the Pax Gesellschaft, whose capital is mainly owned by Gaumont. Both countries are merely waiting for some relaxation in the stringent laws governing the importation and exportation of films to recommence a brisk and profitable trade. This modification in the existing laws is expected to take place very soon. In the meantime the German government has granted a special authorization for the entry into Germany exceptionally of the sensational French film "Les Cinq Gentlemen Maudits." On the other hand, the Germans are protesting against the acquisition by a powerful French group of 35 motion picture theatres in different towns of Bavaria. The Germans see in this operation nothing but the long stealthy arm of French propaganda which has hit upon this arrangement for obtaining a sure means of fostering the separatist movement in Bavaria.

ALL-STAR CAST
IN "DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES."
(Vitagraph.)

Don Jose Santos.....G V. Seyferstitz
Eva Denison, his stepdaughter, Catherine Calvert
Cole Harrison.....Percy Marmont

Here, at last, seems to be a picture that most nearly approaches that goal of all producers, the perfect picture. The story opens in a moment of breathless interest, and there isn't another quiet moment. It is intensely absorbing, and if your eyes leave the screen for a moment, so perfectly is the continuity maintained, that you lose a valuable scene. Never have we seen seven reels packed quite so full of consistent, logical interest and legitimately sustained suspense.

The characters behave like human beings. They do not let drop suspicious words, and actions that would instantly betray them as crooks, in real life. They keep you guessing every minute.

A very great deal of the credit for the whole thing should go, naturally, to Tom Terriss, the director, and to the continuity writers, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester. But one mustn't forget that E. W. Hornung, who wrote the book, gave these three people the material with which the thing was wrought. The cast is flawless. Catherine Calvert has never looked so beautiful, nor done such work as in "Dead Men Tell No Tales." Her costumes—those of the modern Spanish girl, lovely lace mantillas and soft white draperies—are exquisite, and add no little to her beauty. Percy Marmont, at last, has a role which fits him like a glove, and his work is consistent throughout. Gustav von Seyferstitz, who plays the incredibly villainous Santos, however, should be the star of the piece. He is superb, and Holmes Herbert likewise acquits himself well.

The picture is perfectly balanced, and the story is far above the average.

Jessen's Studio News by Wire

BRUNTON

Norris Mumpers, studio manager for the Ben Hampton productions, has returned from New York after laying plans for a policy of expanded productions with Hodkinson.

Joseph Dowling, Maude Wayne, Frank Hayes and William Lyon West have been added to Benjamin Hampton's cast for his forthcoming production, "There Was a King In Egypt."

Ruth Rowland is now engaged on the ninth episode of the "Avenging Arrow" under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. Upon the completion of this serial, the star will go to New York to make further subjects for release by the Pathe organization.

May Jane Irving, who is under contract to Robert Brunton has been loaned to William S. Hart for his current production.

The Dial Film Company is now engaged in selecting members for the cast of its new production, "The Light in the Clearing," by Irving Bacheler. T. Hayes Hunter will direct.

The Betty Compson Company, which has been taking a series of exteriors for the last three weeks at Pleasanton, California, under the direction of Art Rosson, has returned to Los Angeles.

William S. Hart has begun production work on his last release for Paramount-Artcraft this week. It is expected that this picture will be completed in January. Mr. Hart's company has gone to northern California to film exteriors for the production. Lambert Hillyer is directing Mr. Hart.

It is reported that C. Gardner Sullivan will make six productions annually for the Associated Producers. Lambert Hillyer will wield the megaphone for these pictures It is also reported that Mr. Sullivan's contract with Isaac Walper and Messmore Kendall has been cancelled.

W. H. Clifford, head of the B. B. Hampton scenario staff, who has been absent from the studio because of illness, has almost recovered, at least sufficiently to resume work at the studio.

Kenneth McGaffy, who for the past year has been publicity and personal representative for Mary Pickford, has tendered his resignation and is now taking a vacation in the mountains. McGaffy has other affiliations to which he will devote his time.

F. P. LASKY

Jesse L. Lasky arrived at Los Angeles on Monday of this week, accompanied by Edward Knoblock. Mr. Knoblock has gone to the Coast for the purpose of studying screen technique and to write original screen stories.

Elinor Glynn arrived on Friday of last week. Her trip to the Coast has also resulted from an engagement to write directly for the screen. It is expected that Miss Glynn will remain in the West for two months. The rumor that Gloria Swanson will be starred in the photoplays written by Miss Glynn has been denied.

The complete cast for Wally Reid's new starring vehicle, "The Daughter of A Magnate," includes Agnes Ayers, Theodor Roberts, Lloyd Whitlock, Sylvia Ashton, Clarence Burton, Ernest Butterworth, Snitz Edwards and Zelma Moda. Frank Urson is the director.

William de Mille continues production work on "What Every Woman Knows."

Roscoe Arbuckle is at the present time completing his current vehicle, "A Dollar a Year Man."

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Directors' Association held on Thursday of last week, Cecil B. DeMille, George Cox, Larry Semon, Fred Sullivan and Howard M. Mitchell were initiated into the organization. A banquet followed the initiation ceremony at the Hollywood Women's Club.

GOLDWYN

Mahlon Hamilton, Cullen Landis and Mary Alden have been selected for the leading roles in Reginald Barker's production, "Snow Blindness," adapted from the novel by Catherine Newlin Burt. Continuity was written by J. G. Hawks Mr. Barker's company will spend three weeks at the Goldwyn studios filming interiors, and following that, will proceed to Banff, Canada, to "shoot" the exteriors.

Victor Schertzinger has been selected to direct Tom Moore in "Mr. Barnes of New York." The continuity is being written by Gerald Duffy.

Mason Litson has begun work on a new release of the "Edgar" series, entitled "A Day's Diet."

Frank Lloyd begins production work this week at the Goldwyn studios on Gouverneur Morris's original screen story, "The Water Lily."

SPECIAL PICTURES

Louise Fazenda will begin work on November 27th in the first two-reel comedy made by A. L. Hart Productions for Special Pictures.

Chester Conklin is beginning work on his third release. The two completed subjects are "Home Rule" and "A Soft Boiled Yegg."

Dick Burrud, the producer of "Sunset-Burrud" Scenics, has returned from his trip to Alaska with a negative of several five-hundred-foot special picture releases. Mr. Burrud is now engaged in editing these subjects.

Joseph Quinn, sales manager for Special Pictures Corporation, is making a trip to San Francisco, Denver, and Seattle to investigate conditions of several exchanges in coast and inter-mountain states. He will be absent at the main office of the Corporation in Los Angeles, about three weeks.

Max Richman, general manager of the A. L. Hart productions making comedies featuring Chester Conklin, is spending several days at Tia Juana making arrangements for the filming of scenes for a comedy in which Conklin will appear as a jockey, on the opening day of the races, Thanksgiving.

The final work on the Charlott Merrian comedy, titled "Twelve P. M." is now being done and prints for this will shortly go out. Eddie Baker, James Harrison, Jay Belasco, and Margaret Cullington are principals in this cast.

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

Arthur Kay, who formerly was the director of the Boston Symphony and of Grauman's theatre, has been engaged by Maurice Tourneur to prepare a musical score for "The Last of the Mohicans."

Mack Sennett will make four special comedies, ranging from three to four-reels each, and six five-reel comedy dramas with all-star cases for Associated Producers, in addition to twelve two-reel comedies to be made during the early part of the coming year.

"Bell Boy 13" has been selected as the temporary title of the production starring Douglas MacLean which is being made by Thomas Ince under the direction of William A. Seiter. Continuity for this picture was written by Violet Clark. Margaret Loomis will play opposite Mr. MacLean.

Upon the completion of the current Fairbanks picture, Fred Niblo will return to direct for Ince.

C. Gardner Sullivan is now writing a story in continuity which is to be put into production for release by Associated Producers.

The persistent rumor that Mack Sennett would enter the dramatic or light production field was given confirmation when Ethel Grey Terry was placed under contract to play the featured role in a romantic comedy tentatively titled "Heartbaum," which is to be of five-reel length. At the same time the information was given out by Mr. Sennett that he had engaged Richard Jones and Frank Powell to direct the making of film drama. Both Jones and Powell are now at the Sennett plant. Jones will be remembered for his directorial work of "Micky" and a release on Paramount coming out shortly which stars Dorothy Gish. Powell is one of the pioneer directors of the industry and has many successes to his credit. Miss Terry has been on the coast for the past year and has played feature roles in productions made by William S. Hart, the Goldwyn Company, and played opposite Hobart Bosworth in "One Chance in a Thousand."

"Black Beauty," which is being directed by David Smith is to be a seven-reel special.

President Albert E. Smith of the Vitagraph Company, arrived on the West Coast last week where he is to make his permanent home and give more of his personal attention to the production department. Living in Hollywood, it will be possible for him to be in constant touch with every producing unit and for him to personally supervise the making of all subjects, from the selection of the story and its preparation for the screen, to the editing of the final scenes and sub-titles.

With the coming of President Smith it is anticipated that a number of important matters that have been pending for a number of weeks will be settled definitely. It is stated that production of Vitagraph subjects on the West Coast is to be materially increased, and it is hinted at the studio that a number of prominent people and directors are to be engaged on long term contracts.

From the film colony of Los Angeles has come many reports of reduction of production, but this is not the case at the Vitagraph plants. At the present time there are four companies working at the Hollywood studios, four at the Eastern studios, and it is expected another special feature and an additional comedy company will be added to the number of coast units.

The fire scenes for the Vitagraph special, "Black Beauty," were filmed last week by Director David Smith, and now all that remains for completing this film are the small interior shots which will be made at the studio. More than 125,000 feet of negative have been exposed and it is anticipated that 50,000 more feet will be exposed before the final editing begins. Jean Page and Kimmie Morris are the leads.

A fight that was too realistic has resulted in delay in the filming of "Diamonds Adrift," starring Earle Williams." In this scene Williams caused a deep gash to be cut in the head of George Fields, playing the heavy role, and it will be a few days more before Fields can return to make-up. The fight scenes were aboard the Santa Barbara, a lumber schooner. Beatrice Burham is playing opposite the star and Chester Bennett is directing.

William Duncan and Edith Johnston co-starrs in "Fighting Fate," with other members of the chapter drama have returned from a week on location at Balboa, Calif., while the Joe Ryan company is preparing for a trip to San Francisco where scenes in Chinatown will be filmed for the "Purple Riders."

Antonio Moreno is shortly to begin work in his first feature production for Vitagraph which is to be an adaptation from the Perley Poore Sheehan novel "Three Sevens". The continuity for this screen version is now being written and production is to be started within a few days.

Announcement is made of the completion of the Larry Semon comedy "The Hunter" and it is very probable the subject will be released under the title of "The Sportsman". Semon in this subject takes the role of a lion hunter who is captured by the sultan's guards and has a "terrible" time in a Turkish harem.

UNIVERSAL

"Hidden Fires" will be Edith Roberts' next starring vehicle. The story was written by Norman Dawn, who will also direct the screen production. The locale is laid in South America. A huge volcano-crater is now being built for use in filming this story. The members of the cast are being selected.

A two-reel western, entitled "The Cowboy Conquest", is to be made into a five-reel feature. Hoot Gibson is to be starred in this production which will be directed by Edgar Laemmle.

J. P. McGowan has completed the filming of "The Tiger" in which Frank Mayo is starred.

Harry Carey has completed production work on his current vehicle, "Burning Embers."

More than two hundred members of the Von Stroheim Company left on Monday of this week for Monterey, California, to take part in the great scenes centering about the huge Monte Carlo set directed at this place. The party included S. M. Tompkins of the Laboratory Department, Harry Brown of the Electric Department, Ray Van Alytyn, scenics; D. F. Scheeley, art; and Lee Lawson of the Technical Department. This is the first time that superintendents of the various departments have left Universal City to cooperate in the staging of a big scene.

Julius Sterns, the head of the Century Comedy Company, has reached Los Angeles after several weeks in Europe.

METRO

"The Lure of Youth" has been selected as the final title for the original story written by Luther Reed which has been produced under the title of "White Ashes." The completed cast for this production includes Garreth Hughes, Cleo Madison, William Conklin, William Courtwright, Alta Allen, and Lydia Knott. Phil Rosen directed.

Georgie Widthrope, former stage star has been engaged for the role of a lodge-keeper's wife in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."

Dewitt C. Jennings, who has been on the New York stage for twenty years, has been cast for an important role in "Mother Love."

Tom Kennedy will play an important part in the supporting cast of Viola Dana's new production.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Crane celebrated their golden wedding on November 7th.

The fifth Buster Keaton comedy has been completed under the title of "The Haunted House." Virginia Fox played opposite the star-comedian in the production which was directed by Eddie Cline. Joe Roberts played the villain. The story centers around the adventures of a bank employee in rounding up counterfeiters to win the hand of the bank-president's daughter.

On Saturday night of last week a bolt of lightning struck the Metro stage. The electric equipment suffered the greatest, a loss of several thousand dollars being sustained. Viola Dana, who was engaged in a Venetian gondola scene when the lights went out, was rescued by men in the company.

FIRST NATIONAL

Joseph DeGrass who has just completed the editing of the Charles Ray subject, "The Old Swimmin' Hole", is to leave for New York within a few days to spend a part of his vacation in the East getting in touch with distribution and exhibiting angles and looking after personal business matters. He will be accompanied by Mrs. DeGrass, who is known professionally as Ida May Parks. Upon his return to the Coast he will assume direction of the Charles Van Loan story, "Scrap Iron", with Mr. Ray.

Sidney Franklin, who left for New York November 6th with the first print of "Parrot & Company", will remain East but a few days. Before his departure plans were made by Franklin and Al Kaufman for Franklin's next production which will be started about December 1st.

INCE

A new title, "Lying Lips," has been given to the Thomas H. Ince production being made under the title of "Magic Life." House Peters and Florence Vidor are co-starred in this production under the direction of John G. Wray. Joseph Kilgore and Margaret Livingston are other principals. The story is laid in England and the Canadian prairies.

The Ince organization, which is to produce "Pearls and Pain," has been delayed in its sea scenes work by the inability of the purchasing department to secure a man-eating shark. The Facific has been paged from North to South and an attempt is now being made to secure a sea monster from the Atlantic. Madge Bellamay plays leading role and other important actors are Tully Marshall and Niles Welch. Direction is by Rowland V. Lee.

The latest production to be released through Paramount by Ince was completed this week when the last scenes for the "Bronze Bell," by Louis Joseph Vance, were made. The cast has Courtnay Foote, and Dorris May heading the all-star cast, which has John Davidson, Otto Hoffman, Clare DuBrey, Larry Steers and Noble Johnson in leading parts. The film has a British East India atmosphere.

Thomas H. Ince has purchased an original story by Marc Edmond Jones, entitled "Lucky Damage," which is to be made with an all-star cast. Joseph Franklin Poland is writing the continuity.

P. A. Heath has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince to write continuity and is now engaged on preparing "The Inner Sight," a story by Martha Lord, for the screen. Heath is the author of a number of Broadway plays produced by Savage and Dillingham.

HERE AND THERE

Before the departure of General Manager Kirkpatrick, of Robertson-Cole, it was definitely decided that Doris Pawn who recently has been playing feature leads for Goldwyn is to be starred in the next L. J. Gisnier production, continuity for which is now being written.

The second producing unit is to be added by the Cyrus J. Williams company which is producing the two-reel Tom Santschi western subjects. The new unit is to make a series of one-reel boy stories to be known as "The Adventures of Bill and Bob." The eleven-year-old twin sons of Director Robert N. Bradbury will play the name parts in this series. The subjects will practically all be made in the open, showing the experiences of boys in fishing, hunting and exploring.

The Santschi company, directed by Robert N. Bradbury has returned from spending several weeks in Redrock Canyon of the Mojave desert. Principals of the cast are Louella Maxan and Tom Linghan. Interiors for the current subjects are now being made at the Brentwood studio.

Monroe Salisbury, who recently returned from New York where he disposed of his first picture, "The Barbarian," is preparing to make his second independent subject, "Practise What You Preach," from a magazine story of the same title. Continuity for this story was adapted from the magazine story which appeared under the title of "Ethen of the Mountains," by Reed Heustis and James Colwell.

The George B. West organization, making the Alice Howell comedies under the direction of Dick Smith, have leased the Fred J. Ballshoffer studio at 1329 Gordon street, Hollywood, and will continue production there. The company has completed two subjects titled, "The Boulevard Profiteers," and "Why Choose Your Wife." The subjects will be released under the brand name of "Sun-Kist." It is the plan of the company to make fifty-two one-reel releases during the year.

Picture Warmly Endorsed

Prominent Writers Impressed by First National's "Passion"

RARELY, if ever," states First National, "in the history of the industry has a motion picture production received such pre-release testimony as that given to "Passion," the super drama starring the continental emotional actress Poli Negri. Among prominent men, scholars, educationists, clergymen and others who have contributed their testimony are Dr. Frank Crane, associate editor of the New York Globe and probably one of the widest syndicated editorial writers in the world; Mrs. Alexander Fromhold, lecturer on French history; Miss Fay Cornell, of the faculty of Dwight Preparatory College; Winifred Herrick, the short story writer; Rev. Maxwell Gauter, rector emeritus, St. Ignatius Church; Miss Bertha Pearl, author of "Sarah and Her Daughter;" Mrs. Jessie Merrick-Smith, secretary of Poetry Society; Miss Martha Foote Crowe, Miss Louise V. Hackney, short story writer; Jesse Merrick-Smith, consul to Paris during the Commune; Kate Jordan, short story writer; D. H. R. Stark, president of the Inter-Church Film Company; Dr. Glenn Frank, editor; Miss E. I. Cheborg, concert singer; Miss J. C. Douglas, president Select Printing Company; Miss Nancy McGarry, teacher at Hunter School; Miss J. C. Chellborg, teacher at Hunter College for Women; Miss Gertrude Lynch, editor Fiction Publishing Co.; Miss Isabel Fisk-Conant; portrait painter; Mrs. H. W. Gilbert, prominent club woman; Miss Francis W. Hamill, Pen and Brush Club; Mrs. Eugene Davidson, writer of short stories, and Miss Daisy Reed, monologist."

Dr. Crane's whole criticism as forwarded to the offices of the distributors was:

"It is a most artistic and remarkable production and later I will take care to speak of it editorially. It fairly took my breath away."

Mrs. Fromhold, who was official translator of French documents for the U. S. Secret Service, during the war, said:

"Aside from the great dramatic appeal and artistic beauty, the film points a striking moral on the inevitable result of extravagances and excesses. The Milliner's assistant who plunged into the dissipations of the court, wasting money wrung from the very people from whom she had come, brings about her own ruin."

Herbert Rawlinson Speeds Westward

Immediately upon signing with Louis B. Mayer, Herbert Rawlinson, popular and among the best known men of the screen, left for the West Coast where he will become one of the all star cast of "The Tornado," under the direction of Edwin Carewe.

While most recently seen in "Passers By" and in "Man and His Woman," Mr. Rawlinson is favorably remembered for his clever work in the two-reel "Flynn" detective stories.

In accepting the engagement, for which he is under contract with Mr. Mayer, Herbert Rawlinson will gratify his pet ambition, that of being one of the first actual all-star cast ever assembled for a picture play. The contract binding Mr. Rawlinson's services to Louis B. Mayers' productions, was negotiated by his manager, Arthur H. Jacobs.

Alaskan Cameraman Has New Scenic Series

Captain F. E. Kleinschmidt, whose films of the frozen North have been shown in all the big theatres of the country has just returned to Seward, Alaska, after a most interesting bear hunt in the Cook's Inlet country. Writing to a friend in this city the captain says:

"Just as soon as I have caught my second wind, I am going on a moose hunt. Remembering how well the public everywhere liked the scene of the baby-bear rescued by its mother, I have striven to reproduce on the screen the intimacies of animal life rather than chases and killings. I found that the black and brown bear of Alaska are great comedians and that their antics will make the people laugh."

According to other parts of the captain's letter, he has secured motion picture records of both the comedy and the tragedy of animal life in the wilderness. He has so far over 12,000 feet of Alaska wild life—animals, birds, natives, volcanos, waterfalls, rapids, glaciers, fishing, sports, fights, etc. He says that in his latest efforts he has embodied his increased knowledge, both as a cameraman and a judge of the public taste. These new films he expects to bring to New York the latter part of November or the early part of December.

Charles Ray Brings Big Business in St. Paul

"Business, considering pre-election time, has been exceptionally good. We are pleased indeed," This is an extract from a letter received at the offices of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, in New York, the other day, from Lowell V. Calvert, managing director of the Capitol theatre, St. Paul, Minn.

Of Mr. Kane's presentation of Charles Ray in "Peaceful Valley," Mr. Calvert wrote: "The picture has pleased immensely and, I believe, is considered the best of the Ray releases."

Mr. Ray and "Peaceful Valley," released by First National, packed the large house with an enthusiastic audience at every showing and the newspapers praised the picture warmly.

Paramount reports that Thomas Meighan was given a royal welcome on the occasion of his personal appearance at the opening of the Lyric Theatre, Richmond, Va. Mr. Meighan was accompanied by a number of Famous Players-Lasky officials, and the entire party on their arrival, says Paramount, were escorted to the Hotel Jefferson in Richmond by 400 Boy Scouts. At luncheon the Paramount star was the guest of the Kiwanis Club at the Business Man's Clubhouse.

In the afternoon, a large crowd gathered at the Lyric to see the star and listen to his address. At the evening performance, the house was again packed, and when Mr. Meighan passed through the lobby he was obliged to give a liberal measure of handshakes all around. The picture attraction at the Lyric was Mr. Meighan's first starring vehicle "Civilian Clothes."

Universal announces title changes on several of its forth-coming releases. "Risky Business" is the name of the new Gladys Walton picture now being directed for Harry Harris. It originally was called "The Flip Flapper," and was written by Douglas Doty and John Colton of the Universal scenario department.

"Beautifully Trimmed" is the new name for the next Carmel Myers picture. It is from the pen of Marguerite C. Storrs and formerly bore the title "The Orchid." It is being directed by Marcel De Sano, a new comer in the directorial field.

The name of the new picture being directed by Stuart Paton with Eva Novak in the featured role "The Torrent." It formerly was known as "Out of the Sunset" following the title of the original story, by George Rix, newspaperman and war correspondent.

The foregoing three pictures are scheduled for release in the next six weeks, and are rapidly being completed at Universal City.

World Salesman Back From Record Trip

M. F. Tobias, the Eastern District Supervisor of the World Motion Picture Corporation, has just completed one of the most successful trips ever experienced by a motion picture representative.

During the eight weeks that Mr. Tobias spent in the Central West, he covered every key city and centre in the states of Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota South Dakota, Missouri, Kansas, Kentucky and Upper New York State. He secured over five hundred contracts for service in the eight weeks time.

Mr. Tobias will remain in New York a week or ten days, after which he will visit the offices under his special supervision in the East.

Pioneer Acquires Guy Empey Productions

An announcement made by the Pioneer Film Corporation from the office of President A. E. Lefcourt tells of the acquisition of a comedy-drama, "Liquid Gold," which has been taken over for the entire United States and Canada by the Pioneer from the Guy Empey Productions. George H. Callaghan closed the deal with Pioneer.

Arthur Guy Empey appears in the leading role in "Liquid Gold." He is supported by Florence Evelyn Martin. The great romance played on the oil fields of America today forms the basis of the story of "Liquid Gold."

WORLD'S LARGEST FILM BUILDING IS 100% SIMPLEX!!!

Harry Carey in a Typical Role

"West Is West" Said to Be Best Star Ever Produced

HARRY M. BERMAN, general manager of exchanges for Universal, has just announced the early release of "West is West," which he pronounces the best picture Harry Carey ever did.

The story is about a cowboy who uses his head as well as his horse, and who settles a miner's strike by shirt sleeve diplomacy, wins a fortune for himself and his friends and proves to the girl he loves that she is not too good for him.

Among the supporting cast are Charles LeMoyne, Joseph Harris, Ted Brooks, Edward Latell, Otto Nelson, Jack Dill, Sue Mason, Mignonne, William Millett and Adelaide Halleck.

Carey entertained Eugene Manlove Rhodes for a week at his ranch in the Francisquito Canyon and helped him whip his popular novel into scenario shape. The scenes of "West is West" are laid in the ranching and mining country of Arizona, and the actual locations were used in making the film. The mining scenes were taken at the United Verde and Daisy mines, the richest copper producers in the world. Eight days and several nights were spent under ground on the 500 foot and the 1700 foot levels of the United Verde, and the 1100 foot and 1300 foot levels of the Daisy. Actual operations were filmed and as many as sixty miners take part in one scene. By special permission a mimic mine explosion was staged at the 500 foot level with the use of smoke pots. To avoid danger of asphyxiation the fumes were driven out of the shaft by the compressed air used to operate the mining drills. In subsequent scenes the actual rescue paraphernalia on hand in case of disaster was brought into play.

The Universal company of 42 were on locations fifteen days in the country around Jereome, Arizona, and the managers of the two mines say that a quarter mile below the surface of the earth is the deepest that motion picture cameras and lights have ever been used. Carey and his company moved from level to level in "chasers" the incredibly swift little elevator cages which shoot 1900 feet down, stop and return in just 59 seconds.

Several scenes were also filmed in the mansion of J. S. Douglas, one of the copper kings, which is built directly over the mine.

Screen to Have Own Authors

Day of Special Screen Author at Hand, Says King Vidor

THAT the screen is fast approaching the position where it will soon be absolutely independent of books and plays for its themes, if it has not already attained this position, is the opinion of King Vidor, producer of "The Jack Knife Man," expressed last week when the subject of original scripts was made the basis of a discussion at the Alexandria Hotel, Los Angeles.

"The screen," says Mr. Vidor, "has already attained supremacy in the field of entertainment. Only this week the New York papers carried stories of the closing of many road attractions because of the inroads made by the screen into their financial returns. Having attained this supremacy it is now going beyond mere entertainment, and can truthfully be said to have created a new field of expression and education outrivaling the spoken play and even books.

"Having attained such a position the natural result is that the screen will turn to authors who write for the screen and for the screen alone. Just as it is true that the best plays are written by playrights, so it will be true that the best screen stories will be written by specialists on screen writing.

"The day has long since past when the producer feels he must have a well known book or play in order to make a successful picture; in fact, the best of our directors who are making their own independent productions feel that the real test of ability is made, when a picture that does not depend for its success upon previous stage advertising or book advertising, becomes in screen terms "a knock-out."

"In all other industries where advanced thinking and foresight are necessary for progress, it is always from those who have devoted their whole time and energy to a particular industry that the thinking and foresight is expected. Just so will the screen look to those who have specialized in screen writing for its new themes.

"This does not mean, however, that the door is shut to new writers, but it does mean that the writer who attempts to serve two masters must fail and that the successful writers are bound to be those who devote all their time and energy to screen writing."

Harry Coleman, who is creating the role of "Corp" in "Sentimental Tommy," the James Barrie novel, now being produced by Famous Players.

Prominent Editor in Studio

Burns Mantle Engaged by Schenck to Edit Twelve Talmadge Pictures

BY an arrangement entered into by Joseph M. Schenck and Burns Mantle, dramatic editor of the N. Y. Evening Mail, motion picture editor of the Photoplay Magazine, and a contributor on stage topics to other newspapers and magazines, Mr. Mantle has agreed to write the titles and assist in the editing of twelve Talmadge pictures. He has already titled "Yes Or No," "The Branded Woman" and "Good References." His next picture will be "Satan's Paradise," on which Norma Talmadge is now at work in the West Indies, and which will be a First National release. Mr. Mantle's contract does not include the John Emerson-Anita Loos productions.

Burne Mantle is a great believer in the simple, direct and what he describes as the "sane" titling of pictures.

"Under ideal conditions the only persons directly concerned with the production of a picture would be the author of the story, who should be able to write his own continuity; the director, who transfers the story to the screen, and the producer who puts up the money," he argues. "Every time a manuscript changes hands it loses something of its original value. But under present working conditions, while picture making is still in an experimental stage, with every person around a studio making suggestions during its screening, it becomes almost necessary for a fresh mind to assist in the final editing and assembling of the scenes and the fitting of the titles to the new angles developed in the process of the picture's making.

"I am also a firm believer in spoken titles. They help not only in the development of character, which is becoming more and more essential, but they stamp the several characters introduced more tellingly on the spectators' minds than any number of flowery descriptive titles can do. You never really know a person until he talks to you. And the character in a play or a picture who talks unnaturally, or who is permitted to get out of character in the titles, helps to destroy the illusion as surely as one who acts unnaturally."

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

OKLAHOMA CITY

Oklahoma City is to have one of the largest and finest motion picture shows in the Southwest on completion of the new Cooper theatre. According to A. C. Bennett, who is in charge of the construction of the theatre, it will be finished about the first of January, 1921; but the house will, if possible, be opened for the Christmas holidays.

The theatre is being built at a cost of more than $500,000. It is to be devoted exclusively to motion pictures and will have a seating capacity of 2,400 persons. Only the best pictures will be shown at the Cooper, and they will be exclusively first-run feature pictures.

The new Majestic theatre and new National theatre, both on Elm street, Dallas, Texas, will be completed about February 1, 1921 according to an announcement by the builders recently. The Majestic will be a five-story structure of steel and concrete. The building will be fireproof and cost approximately $850,000. The frontage on Elm street is 100 feet; on Pacific avenue 110 feet, and 220 feet deep. It will house the Interstate Amusement Company. The two upper stories will be rented.

The National theatre being erected by the Hulsey interests will be a moving picture house. The foundation work for the building has been completed, and the first shipment of steel received. This building also runs through to Pacific avenue from Elm street. Including the furnishings the building will represent an investment of about $800,000. Fred A. Jones is the contractor.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Reorganization of the Universal exchange took place recently when announcement was made of the resignation of C. W. Koerner and George Bourke, local and Northwest managers respectively.

David Brill is the present manager of the Portland office. Harry J. Quinn, formerly sales manager for Universal in the Denver office, will be assistant to Mr. Brill. Edward Armstrong, Western division manager and director of the Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake, Butte, San Francisco and Los Angeles exchanges arrived in Portland to personally install the new officers. In addition to these executives, a corps of new clerks, stenographers and inspectors has been added. Increased business and the handling of special productions, such as the Eric Von Stroheim features, was given as the reason for the reorganization in Portland.

Mr. Koerner has left Portland for Butte where he will be with the Pathe office, while Mr. Bourke will also locate in Butte, interesting himself in state right films.

Melvin G. Winstock, Portland branch manager of the Pathe exchange, appeared before the Rotary Club, Ad Club, Progressive Business Men's Club and the Civic League last week in the interests of the tenth anniversary of the "Pathe News" establishment.

Local cameramen have been engaged by Mr. Winstock, who has arranged for them to take local views twice a week during a two months' period. The pictures will be exhibited in connection with the regular weekly as shown in local theatres each week.

Motion pictures were used by the Oregonian to entertain the crowds election night while waiting for the returns to come in. Through the courtesy of the local Universal office a cartoon comedy, several animal pictures and extracts from previous editions of the International News which touch on either Harding or Cox were used by the newspaper. The pictures were flashed on the walls of a building on the opposite side of the street.

C. S. Jensen returned from Spokane recently where he met J. H. Rowe and Louis Dreibilvis, partners with Jensen and Von Herberg in the ownership of the Rialto theatre in Butte. Butte is the only Northwest city where sentiment seems to favor the unions which are fighting the twenty-seven Northwest Jensen and Von Herberg theatres. At the request of Rowe and Dreibilvis, remaining stock in the cinema will be sold at public auction in the near future.

The ukelele and the plaintive guitar were taken out of the moth balls in Portland when Ralph Winsor, manager of the Star theatre, announced a special jazz feature to be put on in connection with Will Rogers' "Water, Water, Everywhere." The jazz was furnished by the Royal Hawaiian company of four musicians and their pretty dancer.

Norman Peel arrived in Portland recently to take over for the local exchange exploitation of Famous Players-Lasky productions. Mr. Peel plans to lay special emphasis on playing up the trade-mark, "Paramount-Artcraft" in all coming publicity stunts. He comes to Portland from the New York exchange.

The Portland theatre men gave their unanimous support to the campaign for the Albertina Kerr nursery raising funds for a new dormitory. Four minute speakers appeared in each of the larger down town houses and all theatres in the city ran slides for the baby home.

Will Hudson, Pathe cameraman from Seattle, spent several days in this city shooting pictures of the city health department in its care for public school children. Special emphasis is being placed on dental work conducted in the city schools, and pictures of the plan in operation were taken.

The Castle, rebuilt from the Oregon theatre at the cost of $28,000, opened November 1 in Eugene, Ore. The theatre seats 650 and is said to be the prettiest theatre of its size in the state. Eugene is the seat of the State university and a town of some 10,000. A. H. MacDonald owns the Castle and also the Rex, which is now under reconstruction. The Castle opened with the First National production, "Go and Get It."

Election night was a busy one for many Oregon exhibitors. C. M. Hill, manager of the Globe theatre in Albany, and Manager K. L. Burk of the Orpheum theatre, Baker, kept their houses open all night long.

SAN FRANCISCO

E. R. Williams, manager of the All-Star Feature Exchange, closed four key accounts approximating $15.000, in one day last week. The five new Clara Kimball Young pictures and the new David Butler production is being taken rapidly, he reports. The Tiger Ben serial is being sold on first showing, he says.

Enlargement of the Frolic theatre on Market street to a 1,500 seating capacity is planned by the Universal exchange. C. A. Nathan, manager of the San Francisco Universal exchange has signed a lease for the theatre for 30 years at an aggregate rental of $1,400,000. William Cutts, general manager of the Universal theatres, is due in San Francisco this week on his inspection tour of the country.

The prologue for "What Women Love," at the Tivoli theatre, week of October 24, staged by Manager Frank Costello, is being accorded wide publicity in the daily papers, one reviewer going as far as to say that the feature takes second place on the bill. Prince Lei Lani, Hawaiian, sings with six other dancers, including four instrumentalists and a hula dancer. The setting is Hawaiian.

Harry Carney, assistant manager of the Universal exchange, San Francisco, is seriously ill with pneumonia. He was stricken suddenly.

"Pink Tights" was put over successfully on first run at the Frolic theatre, San Francisco, week of October 24, by a tie-up with song publishing representatives and the Kelly Springfield Truck Company, with very little expense to the theatre by R. F. Abrahams, manager, and Ben Westland, publicity director of the Universal exchange.

The truck, with driver, was loaned and singers were furnished free with a piano for the entire week. Crowds were attracted on downtown corners and led to the theatre, which was packed all week. A girl was hired to ride on the truck in pink tights.

Newt Levi, Western representative of Robertson-Cole, has been in San Francisco for a short visit. He will shortly supervise direction of an all-star cast on exteriors at Pleasanton on the new picture, "What Is a Wife Worth?"

CANADA

Garrick Theatres, Limited, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has started the construction of a brand new moving picture theatre at Garry Street and Ellice Avenue, Winnipeg, to cost $150,000, and to be opened in January. The new house will be the first of a chain of theatres in Canada, it has been announced, and already a theatre in Brandon, Manitoba, has been purchased. The company has been organized with a capital of $250,000. It is announced that a number of Winnipeg business men are interested in the venture.

The Garrick Theatre in Winnipeg will have a seating capacity of 1,500, with a frontage of 70 feet and a depth of 130 feet. The front elevation will have a marquee for the whole width. The lobby will be finished in marble.

Mr. William H. Stanley, formerly manager of Loew's Delancey Street Theatre, New York, has been appointed manager of the new Loew theatre, which was opened at Ottawa, the Canadian capital, on Monday, November 8, with a number of moving picture stars present for the first performance. Mr. Stanley started in the show business thirty-two years ago and he has been with Marcus Loew for many years.

The Canadian Government has issued a Federal charter to the Canadian Feature and Production Company, Limited, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, which has been formed to undertake the manufacture of moving picture releases. The company has been capitalized at $1,000,000. As yet no announcement has been made regarding the personnel of the directorate.

An indication of good business conditions in Canada is the record of amusement tax receipts in Winnipeg, Manitoba. The amusement tax collected at 34 moving picture theatres and five vaudeville and dramatic houses in Winnipeg during the last week in October exceeded the $10,000 mark, according to an official announcement by the Provincial authorities under whose auspices the levy is taken. This is the largest revenue from this source for any week since the tax has been in existence.

Stock musical comedy proved a financial failure at the Dominion theatre, one of Winnipeg's large and well-known houses, with the result that the house was closed for re-organization. The theatre is scheduled to be re-opened on Monday, November 15, with an all-picture policy, the opening attraction being "The Wonder Man," featuring Georges Carpentier.

The first of the exclusively British moving picture exchanges to be established in the Dominion of Canada is the Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Limited, with headquarters in Montreal and London, England. This company was organized more than a year ago but no attempt was made to arrange for direct distribution throughout Canada, the booking of the British releases having been placed in the hands of a Canadian distributor. Arrangements are now being made, it is stated, for the opening of several distributing offices by the Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays and direct contracts with exhibitors will be sought. It is understood that Basil Horsfall of Montreal, now proprietor of the Tivoli theatre of Montreal, is associated with the Anglo-Canadian company in establishing the new offices. Mr. Horsfall has had considerable experience as an exchange manager in Montreal and elsewhere. Capt. G. B. MacKay is the general manager of the Anglo-Canadian company and a number of prominent and wealthy Canadians are directors. The company controls the Canadian rights for the productions of a dozen or more English studios. It is probable that branches will be opened in Montreal, Toronto and St. John before the Canadian West is invaded.

Jack Kraker, until recently in California, has become sales representative in Ontario for the First National Pictures (Eastern Canada), Limited. Mr. Kraker is working out of the Toronto office of the company which is located at 91-93 Queen Street East.

Mr. Tom Dowbiggin has become sales representative for the Amalgamated Exhibitors' Circuit, Limited, for the Province of Ontario and is located at the Toronto office of the company.

A recent prominent visitor in Toronto, Ontario, was Mr. L. Ernest Ouimet, of Montreal, president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Canadian Pathe distributors. He inspected the new ground floor quarters in the new Hermant Annex which are to be occupied by his Toronto branch.

B. T. Hardcastle has arrived in Winnipeg, Manitoba, to open a Western Canadian distributing office for the Associated Producers, Inc., which is supported by Thomas H. Ince, Allan Dwan, George Loan Tucker, J. Parker Read, Mack Sennett, Marshall Neilan and Maurice Tourneur. Mr. Hardcastle will have charge of operations in the four Western Provinces, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Mr. Hardcastle announced that the first release from his new Winnipeg office would be "The Leopard Woman," by J. Parker Read. The new branch of the Associated Producers is the thirteenth film exchange for Winnipeg.

The Manitoba Board of Moving Picture Censors has been giving Winnipeg film exchange managers some cause for concern recently. Last winter the Manitoba censors made their presence felt by the banning of a considerable number of moving picture comedies but during the spring and summer the decisions of the censors were quite acceptable. The Manitoba board now seems to be paying considerable attention to serial releases.

Mr. W. S. Jones, the Winnipeg Fox manager, was recently notified that the censors had seen fit to condemn the new Fox serial, "The Tiger's Cub." The Pathe serial, "The Whirlwind," has also been condemned, while the Select serial, "The Branded Four," has been thrown out as well.

Two Pathe serials, "Pirate Gold" and "Hidden Dangers," have proved to be acceptable to the Manitoba censors, however, and will be shown throughout the Province.

It is understood that the Fox Film Corporation is appealing the decision of the Manitoba board to condemn "The Tiger's Cub."

The Northern Pictures Corporation of Calgary and Winnipeg has taken the exteriors for "Corporal Cameron," the Ralph Connor story, various locations at the Banff National Park in Alberta having been used for the purpose. The company is now arranging for the use of the horse-show building at Calgary, Alberta, as a moving picture studio in which to make the interior scenes during the coming winter.

The Oakwood theatre, Toronto, Ontario, one of the large independent moving picture theatres of the city, has been acquired by the Famous Players' Canadian Corporation. This makes the seventh theatre in the Ontario capitol to come under the direction of the corporation, the others being the Regent and Strand, two of the large downtown houses, Alhambra, Garden, Teck and Family. The manager of the house is Mr. James Crang.

The Allen theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, is the latest of a number of large moving picture houses in Canada to announce an adjustment of admission prices, the changes affecting the evening prices only. Until recently the general admissions for evening performances have been 30 and 40 cents, plus the tax of four cents. One price of 40 cents, plus the tax, has been established for all parts of the theatre with the exception of the loges, seats in which have been increased from 65 cents to 70 cents, plus five cents' tax. The evening price for children is 20 cents, plus two cents' tax. Matinee prices vary from 17 cents for children to 39 cents for loge seats.

The Province theatre, Winnipeg, has also advanced its prices, top charge for evening performances being 39 cents and that for matinees 27 cents, including the tax.

Other prominent theatres in Canada which have announced slight admission increases include the Regent, Allen and Strand theatres of Toronto.

Burglars removed the safe from the manager's office of the new Allen theatre at St. Catherines, Ontario, recently and, after carting it away on a truck, dumped it down a canal embankment where they forced it open with a sledge hammer and crowbars. They secured $428.28 in cash and $40 worth of amusement tax tickets. The burglars left the battered safe at the bottom of the hill where it was found the next morning.

The Ontario government decided on October 1 to stop the presentation of the health propaganda feature, "Open Your Eyes," after the picture had been screened in Windsor, Ontario. The feature had been approved by the Ontario Board of Censors, it is declared, but the picture was banned after the one public showing.

The Electra theatre, one of the best-known Montreal moving picture theatres, was re-opened on Sunday, October 3, as a remodelled and enlarged house under the continued management of Paul Guenette. One of the new structural features is a balcony by means of which the seating capacity has been increased to 1,100. The attraction for the re-opening was "One Hour Before Dawn," starring H. B. Warner.

Messrs. Jule and J. J. Allen of Toronto have secured a new theatre site in Victoria, B. C., on which to erect a $350,000 house which will have a seating capacity of between 1,500 and 2,000. The site is at Blanchard and Yates streets.

CLEVELAND

Feiber and Shea, booking agents, are going to present their well known Rainbow Revue at the leading first-run motion picture theatres throughout the territory, as an added attraction to the featured photoplay.

"The Rainbow Revue has a cast of twenty-five people," said Mr. Shea recently, "and although the show, as it stands now, takes about an hour to present, it is so constructed that it can be reduced to thirty-five minutes without losing any of its punch."

The Rainbow Revue, Mr. Shea explained, is a cross between a musical comedy and a style show. The music was specially written by A. Baldwin Sloan. The costumes are the latest creations in feminine fashions. So there's jazz for the men folks, and frills for the women folks; something for all.

Will D. Harris, of the Grand theatre, Columbus, is the first exhibitor to introduce this style of entertainment in connection with the motion picture, in Ohio. He opens with it the week of November 21st.

Mr. Shea states that, if the show is a success, he is going to put out a new one every eight weeks. They are all to be different.

C. C. Deardorff, exploitation manager for Goldwyn out of the Cleveland office, got a stock of favorable press notices as high as the sky line recently in Toledo on "The Branding Iron." "And there's a reason," says Deardorff. "I gave a special screening of 'The Branding Iron,' in the private screen room of the Pantheon theatre on Thursday evening, prior to the opening of the picture at the Pantheon the following Sunday. The Toledo News-Bee, The Blade and the Times were all represented." And after the screening, Mr. Deardorff gave a lovely little party in the dining room of the Secor Hotel, complimentary to the newspaper men.

Buster Keaton is going to monopolize the Stillman theatre screen in a manner never been tried here before, when he will be the featured star of the feature and the featured star of the comedy, too. "The Saphead," Keaton's new seven-reeler, and "The Scarecrow," his latest comedy, are both to be shown on the same program. The result is being watched with unusual interest. They're going to play the feature first and then follow with the comedy.

W. B. Frank, Pathe's special feature representative, arrived in Cleveland last week. Frank will stay here just long enough to install the new policy which gives the sales of features to a special department. Already he has named R. F. Flagler as manager of this newly created department, with R. A. Morrison, and W. S. Ainsworth, as chief aides in the selling field.

Fred McConnell, now in charge of the national exploitation of Pathe pictures, dropped into town the latter part of last week. McConnell was kept busy shaking hands all round. He knows everybody in the industry out here. He gained his wide movie acquaintance when he was editor of the motion picture department of the Cleveland Leader-News.

W. F. Seymour, division manager out of Chicago for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, paid local manager Herbert Ochs a short but sweet visit this week. Seymour came in in the morning, and after going over the local situation left that same night for the Windy City.

Al Lebensberger, manager of Robertson-Cole's Cleveland exchange, ought to get special railroad rates. He just got back from New York where he went to attend the special screening of "Kismet;" and right after his return, he left for Columbus.

"The County Fair" played its first Ohio engagement the week of October 31st at the Grand Opera House, Canton, and not only broke all previous house records but also set a new standard of business on whole week engagements at the Grand Opera House. This house, one of the Feiber-Shea chain of theatres, seldom plays a picture for an entire week. In fact, the only pictures that have played the Grand Opera House a full week are "The Miracle Man" and "Why Change Your Wife?" Representatives of Feiber and Shea have made this statement; so has Phil Selznick, who bought the picture for Ohio.

Selznick already has one print of "The County Fair" booked solid all through the winter. Two other prints are booking up fast.

Stephen Fuzy, organist at the Regent theatre, Buckeye Road and East 116th Street, has recently written a waltz that's fast making a hit. It's called "On the Lagoon." Fuzy has written several others best known among them being "Beautiful Stars." He lives at 10322 Crestwood Avenue.

DETROIT

The Redford Amusement company has been formed to take over some church property on Grand River avenue which will be transformed into a theatre. John Brennan and Hapham of the Cozy and Universal theatre, respectively, are backing the enterprise.

John H. Kunsky's home was robbed of furs, silverware and jewelry, valued at $5,000 last week. This is the sixth time within nine years that Mr. Kunsky's home has been entered by burglars.

A rose matinee at the Majestic, in which roses were given away, brought out the ladies, despite a rain storm, during the engagement of "The Restless Sex." Some 1,000 roses, secured from a local florist, were given away.

Will H. Elliott, managing director of the Majestic theatre, was again taken seriously ill last week and is now seriously ill with pneumonia. Last reports were that he was slowly gaining headway.

W. D. Ward has resigned as manager of the Universal exchange, which he has handled for more than three years, to handle Stoll pictures in Detroit. He is succeeded by Joe Friedman, office manager.

The Detroit Film company has taken over the business of the Hennessey-Moross company, handling state right pictures. Earl N. Hennessey, Phil J. Fetz and Frank E. Beecher, all former exhibitors, comprise the company.

George W. Trendle, general manager of the Kunsky chain of houses, has been re-elected president of the Detroit Theatre Managers' association, embracing all the big downtown houses and 80 per cent of the motion picture theatres in the city.

The greatest stage spectacle ever offered in Detroit is the hippodrome race effect achieved at the Madison where "Madonnas and Men" is now showing. Two chariots, each driven by two horses, on treadmills provide the effect. A special amphitheatre setting and lighting appliances add to the spectacle.

INDIANAPOLIS

Nelson G. Trowbridge, manager of the Murat, legitimate, went out and showed his brother-managers of the photoplay-houses how to get over a big production in a big way without much co-operation from anybody but the police department during the week of October 31.

Trowbridge put Fox's "While New York Sleeps" into the Murat for the week, intending to plug a hole caused by his inability to book a legitimate attraction and had the town by the ears in two days. The newspaper critics "panned" the picture as not being worth a third the price of admission, which Trowbridge cannily put at $1 top; and someone complained to the police that the film was too vulgar to be shown. The policewomen censors looked it over and passed it.

But despite this adverse criticism the people continued to flock in. One dollar as a price for a movie looked good to them, and they paid it in numbers so great that the film brought in gross receipts for the week said to be higher than those received during the week

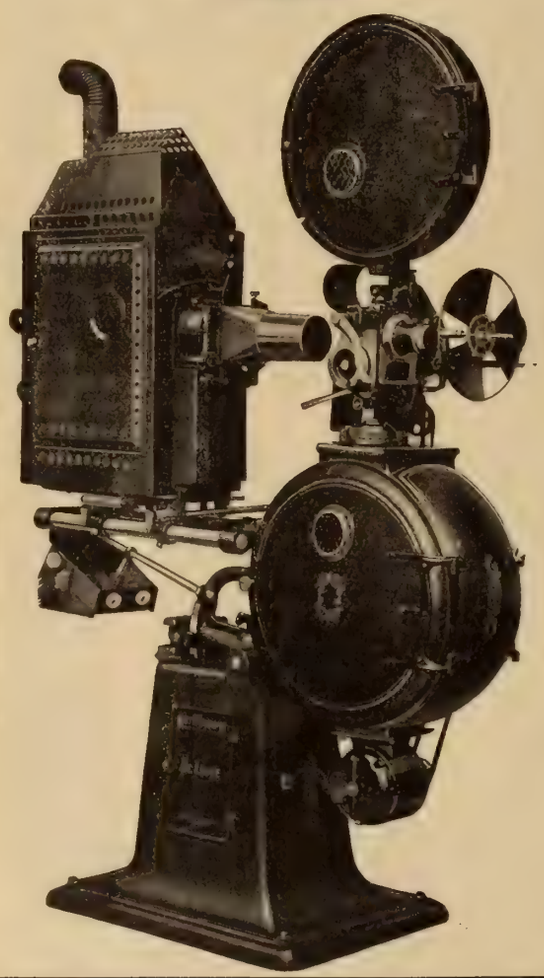
FITZPATRICK-McELROY THEATRE CIRCUIT TO BE 100% DE LUXE MOTIOGRAPH

FITZPATRICK-McELROY CO. INC.
....THEATRE OPERATORS....
202 SOUTH STATE STREET
CHICAGO, ILL.

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE COMPANY



October 27, 1920

Gentlemen:

After careful consideration and investigation, we herewith order twenty DeLuxe Motiograph Machines, No. 1002-E, to be installed in our different theatres on our circuit.

We ask that these machines be delivered as soon as possible.

It is our intention to replace all of our present moving picture machine equipment with the new DeLuxe outfit, and to make our circuit of Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois theatres 100% MOTIOGRAPH DE LUXE Equipment.

Again, we want to assure you that this is after very careful thought.

Very truly yours,

Allen in Akron Exhibits Novelty in "Lovers Boxes"

Double Seats in Center of House Just Right for Two

The Allen theatre, Akron, Ohio, costing close to six figures, is one of the finest as well as one of the most modernly equipped motion picture theatres to have opened this fall, as well as embodying several brand new features in theatre construction.

One of the most striking features of the Allen theatre is its size in proportion to its cost. Time was when a big expenditure in the construction of a theatre was justified by the number of seats in the house. However, Allen T. Simmons, manager of the Allen, and a prominent showman in the territory, carried his point by keeping the Allen down to 987 seats, while the price stayed up to its original estimate. The reason for this was because of the location of the house. It is right down town in the business section of Akron. It is right next door to a prominent high class hotel. And it runs an all-day show from 9 a. m until midnight. All these facts together brought home the conclusion to Simmons that big first-run pictures, shown continuously to a transient trade, was more profitable than a large number of seats. With this in mind, the Allen, which is a rather narrow house with a 150-foot throw, has generous aisles.

The Allen theatre is all on one floor. Adopting the amphitheatre style of architecture, it is built in three elevations, each one a slight rise over the former one, thus giving equal vision to the screen from all parts of the house.

Right in the center of the house Mr. Simmons has introduced a novelty that has been named "Lovers' Boxes." They consist of ten tiers of double seats. There's just room for two in each seat. In fact, it is two seats without the dividing partition. But these boxes are very popular with the young folks.

Nothing has been spared in the decorations of the Allen. The interior woodwork is all ivory, with fine gold outlining. The walls, instead of being painted, or papered, are covered with old rose satin. The effect is not only elegant, but restful as well.

One of the outstanding features of the Allen theatre is its automatic push-button equipment. Almost every activity connected with the showing of pictures is operated automatically. Push buttons operate the lights. Push buttons signify to the operator what films, and in what order, Mr. Simmons wants them displayed. Push buttons tell the musical director what to play, as well as to start the $10,000 Wurlitzer Vocalstyle, with which the house is furnished.

A word about the lights in the Allen theatre. They are like the small lights in Pullman trains. They are recessed in the walls. At the push of one of the myriad buttons, the port holes in the wall open, and out flash the side lights, all fixed with fancy shades. When they are

It is evident that the Allen was built with motion pictures in view. It is a well planned and finished house

Vancouver Flocks to Grand Opening of Allen Theatre

2,100 Seat House Boasts of Marquee 120 Feet Long

THE capital city of British Columbia, Vancouver, recently witnessed the opening of one of the finest motion picture houses in the entire Dominion of Canada. This new theatre, the Allen, situated at the corner of George and Seymour Streets, is one of the latest additions to the circuit of Allen houses stretching across the entire Dominion, and needless to say the new Allen, with a seating capacity of 2,100, is the last word in modern architecture, decoration and all that goes to make up the high standard implied by the name "Allen." The theatre was formally opened August 16th of this year.

This structure, designed by Mr. C. Howard Crane, the noted Detroit architect, is constructed throughout of reinforced concrete, steel, brick and tile, with art stone trimmings. The entire building has been waterproofed and made absolutely impervious against all atmospheric conditions by the application of a specially prepared coating. This is a new method of insuring buildings against the elements. The roof itself is constructed of concrete slab, which in turn is covered with roofing felt.

The imposing main entrance to the theatre is on the George Street front. Extending along the whole 120 feet frontage of this avenue is an ornamental marquee. This is entirely constructed of steel and is covered with ornamental sheet metal work. This extensive covering affords ample protection to the people who are waiting their turn at the box office.

Two box offices afford ample accommodation for the handling of the crowds which, on entering the lobby, are instantly struck with the beauty of the marble panels, with which the walls are faced.

It is, however, when one first enters the foyer of this new Allen that one gets a glimpse of the magnificence of the new house. After stepping into the foyer, the first room to the right is a check room for hats and coats, equipped with every facility for the handling of large crowds. At the extreme right of the foyer is the gentlemen's smoking room and wash room, the former luxuriously furnished and the whole a fitting accompaniment to the rest of the house.

The theatre office is conveniently situated on the left of the foyer. Adjoining this office and a little further to the left is the entrance to the handsomely furnished ladies' parlor, rest and wash rooms. To the extreme left of the foyer, through French doors, which one cannot resist the temptation to enter, is found a cozy tea room, the appointments and service of which are perfect. It is possible to drop in here for a cup of fragrant, delicious tea after a show and then walk but a few steps to the nearby Seymour street exit and enter one's motor.

Dividing the foyer from the auditorium is a handsomely finished mahogany facing screen, the artistry and finish of which cannot help but be admired. The upper half of this screen is surmounted by plate glass, cut in elaborate and fitting designs.

On entering the auditorium one is first taken up with its perfect proportions and at the first glance its seating capacity of 1,400 is not apparent. Four aisles lead to the front or stage end of the auditorium and connect with the emergency exits. The floor level of the auditorium is just of sufficient incline, so as to enable one to see perfectly from any seat in the house.

The orchestra pit is roomy and commodious, provision having been made for a large symphony orchestra, which is a feature of all performances at the Allen. The orchestra stand is raised one foot above the floor level of the auditorum.

The predominating tones in the decorations of the new Allen are mulberry and gold, this combination lending itself to a pleasing contrast with the white relief and panels of a rare pale tint of fawn. This delightful color scheme is further accentuated and heightened from many angles by the reflections in the big mirrors at each side of the auditorium.

Large decorative panels executed in ornamental plaster adorn the sides of the auditorium above the mezzanine floor level. These panels have a prevailing color scheme of cool, pale green centred with appropriate musical emblems and instruments. The whole effect achieved in this mavelous color scheme is far too pleasing a sight to be described on paper.

The lamp standards and lamp shades are finished in gold and polychrome to harmonize with the prevailing tones of the decorations.

The carpets on the main auditorium aisles, mezzanine floor, boxes and loges are a two-toned, smoke-gray, high grade Wilton. This same style of carpet, also in smoke-gray, is employed in the ladies' rest room on the lower floor, while the rest room on the mezzanine floor is of Axminster.

Back of the mezzanine floor and practically on the same level is a cozily equipped lounge to which is added a touch of homely cheer by the large fireplace in the centre. At the eastern side of the Georgia Street frontage on this floor is located the ladies' parlor and wash room and still further eastward the executive offces of the theatre. These are well lighted and appointed and would be the proud possession of any business man.

A private screening room is included in the equipment of this new theatre. It is a miniature projection room, complete in every detail, but the audiences are limited to the critical officials of the playhouse, who personally pass upon every motion picture production, great and small, before showing it to the public. By this method, the Allen is assured of absolutely nothing but the best in motion pictures.

The heart of the motion picture theatre —the projection room—has been made

GERMS cannot find a hiding place in upholstery of Fabrikoid; its surface is impervious. You can wash it with soap and water. But repeated washings will not affect its pliability nor injure its beautiful coloring.

Fabrikoid is always beautiful. It is scuff-proof and grease-proof; it will not fade; it is thoroughly comfortable. In addition, it is surprisingly economical.

Plan on Fabrikoid for your next upholstery. Samples, showing different styles and colors, will be sent upon request.

the object of special attention. It is absolutely fireproof throughout and is finished with careful regard to the comfort of the operators. Openings equipped with automatic fireproof drop shutters are provided in the front wall of the operating room, for no less than three of the very latest and most powerful type of projection machines. Fireproof magazines for the temporary storage of film are provided, thus eliminating all danger of fire in this quarter. As a whole, the operating booth in the new Allen is the last word in projection equipment.

The theatre is lighted by what is known as the Diffuser system of illumination. By means of this system, absolute control of the lighting effects in the entire house can be obtained at all times. The lights can be dimmed or brought out to a full powerful white illumination as the scenes being presented best call for. There are several different tones or colors of lights installed, so that, as the occasion demands, the house may be bathed in a bluish moonlight or glow with a soft, pulsating pink.

Patrons of the new Allen are absolutely assured of proper ventilation and heating and an even temperature is maintained at all times, by the use of modern devices. The theatre has been provided with plenty of exits, six to be exact, all of which are readily accessible.

Entrance to Allen theatre, Akron, Ohio

The Allen is an entirely fireproof construction. The floors are all of concrete, and the four tunnels that lead into the auditorium are all equipped with fire doors.

The Allen opened its doors to the picture patrons of Akron on September 7th, with "Under Northern Lights." However, there was an unofficial opening the preceding night, when two hundred prominent residents of Akron were the guests of Manager Simmons, when the house was displayed, as was also private screening of "The Devil's Passkey."

Both the private and official openings were under the direction of Palmer Slocum and his associates of Cleveland, who had entire charge of the arrangements on publicity as well as the social activities.

S. M. P. E. Establishes New Membership

FROM a charter membership of 18 to an assembly of over a hundred in five years' time is the life history of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The growth has been slow and substantial rather than rapid and hollow. The organization now contains on its roster the leading engineers and technical workers of the industry.

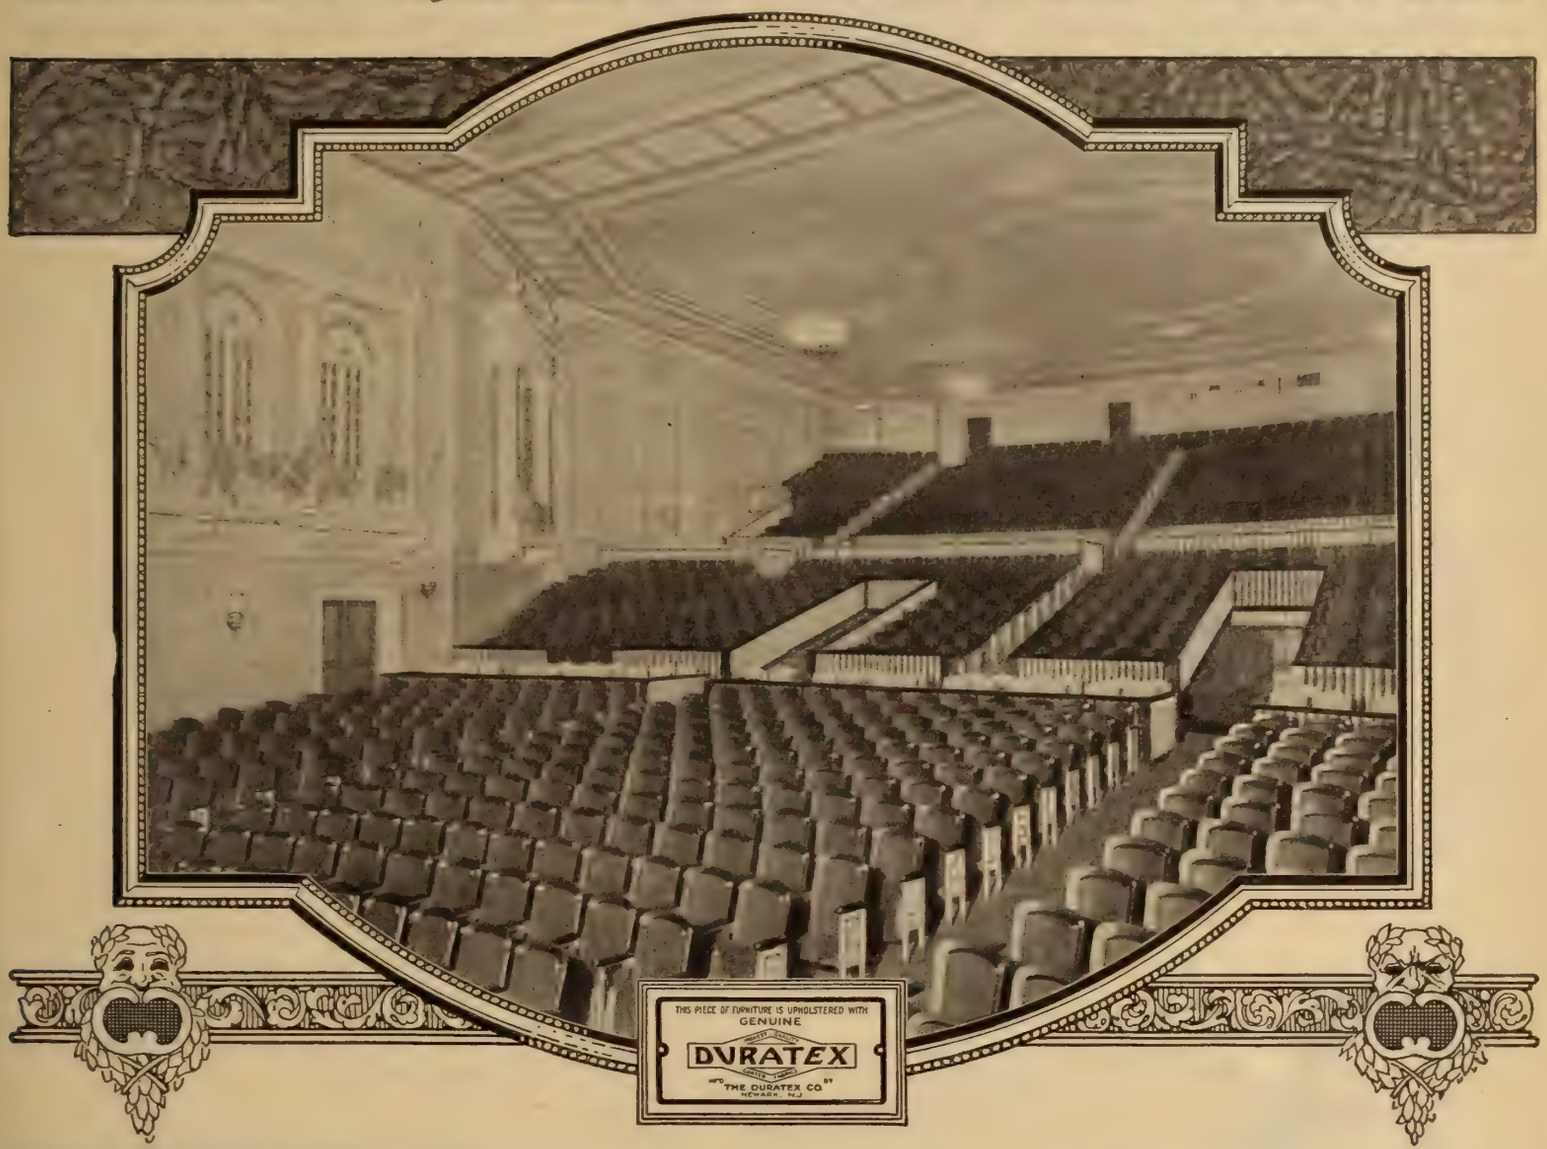
For some time—in fact, since the society's future became assured—it has been in the minds of its founders to establish a membership rating secondary to the "Active Membership," to be known as the "Associate Membership."

To qualify as an Associate Member the applicant "must be not less than 21 years of age" and must be "a person interested in or connected with the study of motion picture technical problems or the application of the same."

Obviously these qualifications allow a considerable latitude in the selection of members for this new division, and as the initiation is but $10 and the yearly dues $10 this membership should attract an added number of persons interested in the activities of this organization.

DURATEX

HIGHEST QUALITY · COATED FABRICS



More Beautiful—Wears Twice as Long

THE superiority of Duratex Better Upholstery is apparent to the most casual observer.

Duratex has a smoothness, a softness and a richness of beauty found in no other upholstery. It always looks fresh. It stays new.

And Duratex is vastly more durable.

The scuffing of children's feet, moisture and stain of sticky hands and continual day after day service are hardships which Duratex withstands without harm.

Tougher fabrics protected by the patented Duratex coating make Duratex wear-resisting and water-proof.

Duratex is washable, therefore sanitary. It cleans as easily as a piece of china.

Let us send you samples of this more beautiful and more durable upholstery. And let us estimate cost of equipping your theatre.

Duratex costs no more than other upholsteries. It wears twice as long.

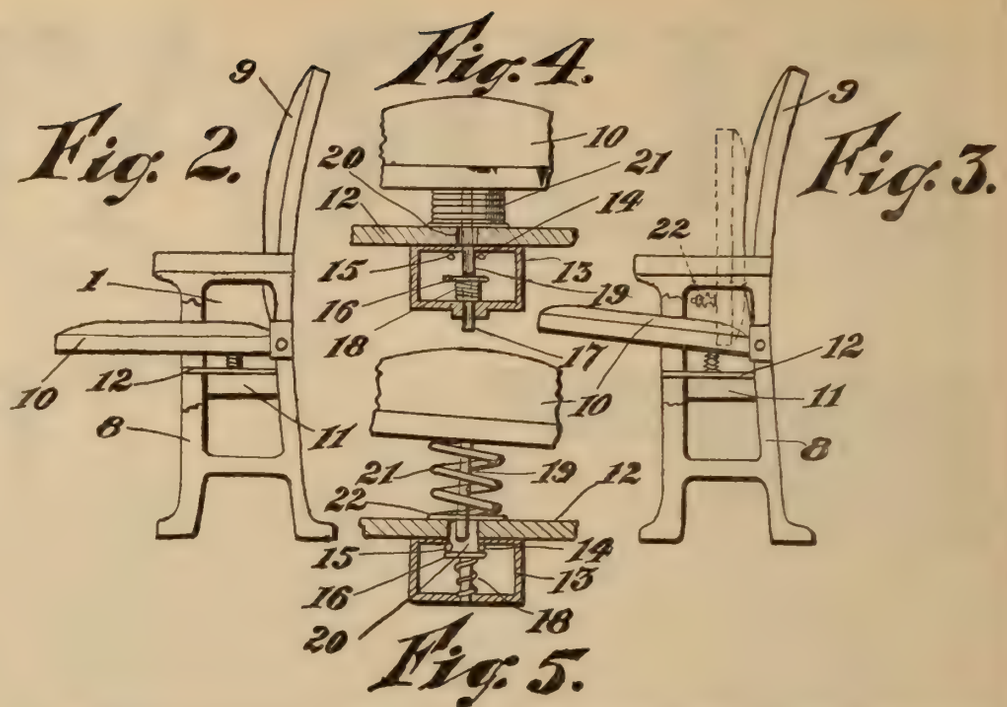
A Seat Indicating and Signalling System

An invention relating to a seat indicator and signalling system for theatres has been applied for by Carl A. Valles of Worcester, Mass. The object of his invention is to provide means for silently indicating the number and exact location of all seats in the theatre and also a signalling system for directing members of the audience to the vacant seats thus indicated without the assistance of the ushers.

The inventor believes that by the use of his devices the theatre manager will no longer have to stand the loss from unnoticed vacant seats but by relying on the signalling system may be sure that the waiting patrons may find their way to the desired seats.

It will be noticed from the drawings that the signalling is accomplished by an electrical contact beneath the seat. When the seat is occupied the contacts are thrown apart and the light on the signal board disappears but as soon as the occupant of the chair rises to leave the contact is made and the signal appears on the indicating board.



These illustrations show how the signals are sent to the indicating board. A simple contact under the seat makes and breaks an electric circuit

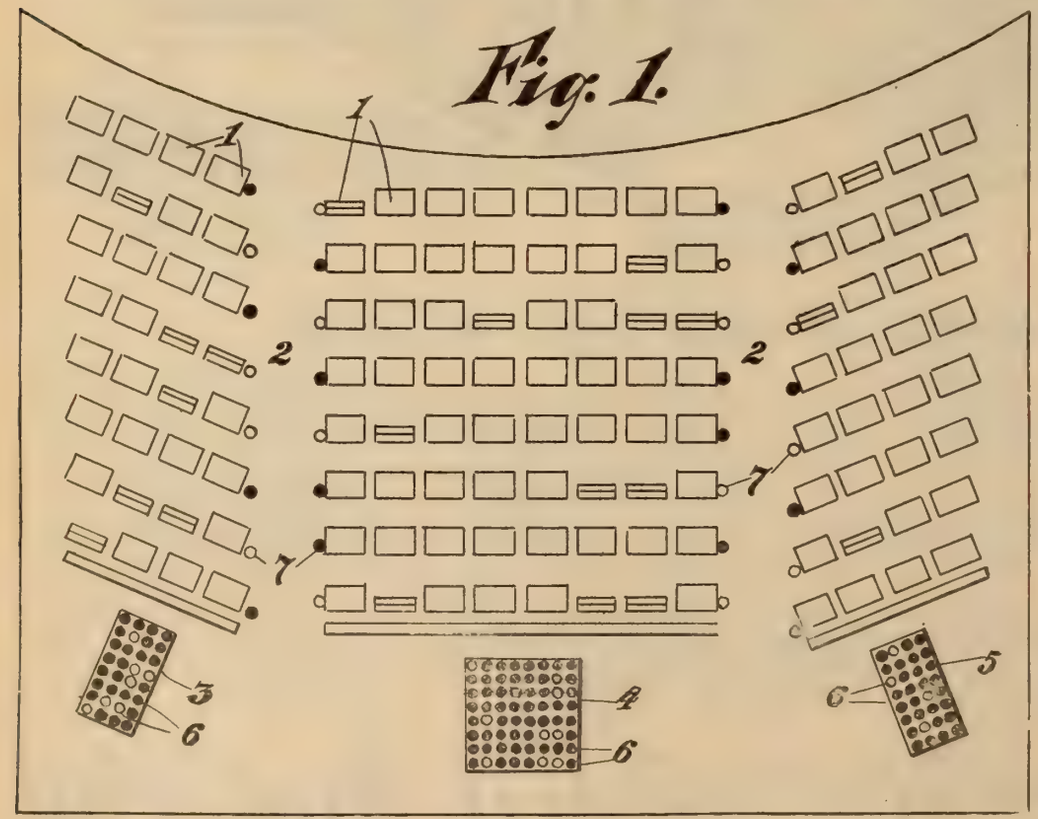
Another House Proposed by Saxe

Another downtown theatre will be built by Saxe Brothers in Milwaukee, according to an announceemnt just made. The new house will be named the Third-and-Grand, after the street intersection at which it will be located. The new site is regarded as one of the best in Milwaukee, as Third and Grand avenue is considered the heart of the business section.

The Third-and-Grand will be remodeled on the site now occupied by the Gargoyle restaurant.

According to E. C. Bostick, general manager of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, there will be no orchestra, music being furnished by a pipe organ. The house, which will be built on a lot 44 x 95, will seat approximately 870 persons, about 500 on the main floor and the balance in a balcony. An immense canopy will cover the 44 foot street frontage.

Plans for remodeling are now being drawn by Martin Tullgren & Sons, Milwaukee, architects, and it is expected that the theatre will open January 15.



When the seats are unoccupied the indicator sh ows "white." A glance at the indicating boards tells just how many seats are vacant

New Organ in Majestic Theatre, Utica, N. Y.

The Robbins Amusement Company have installed a Marr & Colton "New Era" organ in the above well known theatre. They do not plan to make any change in their orchestra, but will use the organ in conjunction with the orchestra and also during relief periods and on Sundays. The Majestic is one of the best known vaudeville houses in Central New York.

The "New Era" organ lends itself nicely to theatres in the class of the Majestic as the installation does not require any structural change in the theatre; neither is it necessary to interfere in any way with the regular daily performance during installation.

Dear Mr. O'Brien:

About two years ago you installed a motor-generator set for our photo-play lantern. Our lantern is a Powers 6A of the commercial type, and the set furnished was of 5.5 KW capacity. Since then the only care given the set has been the customary oiling, commutator cleaning, etc. As far as repair or trouble is concerned, we should not know we had the outfit. This is about my ideal of any set, and I can assure You we are entirely satisfied with the service it has given.

Very truly,

Many Changes in Sheas Criteriom

IT was almost like the day of Aladdin when the old Star theatre in Buffalo, rechristened Shea's Criterion, was opened recently for the extended presentation in the Queen City of the Lakes of the superproduction of the Famous Players-Lasky productions. In fact, there is not in all the stories of the famous character and his lamp an instance in which a more astounding change was wrought even by an exceptionally hard rubbing.

The tSar theatre, known to Buffffalonians for over a quarter century, was at one time "THE" theatre of the town, and in its day was considered quite au fait, whatever that means. But those days are far away, and for the past several years the house was anything but popular. Its design was old fashioned, its front anything but alluring and its appointments smacked of another day. And then the miracle happened. The house was purchased by the Shea Amusement Company in association with the Famous Players Corporation, and a small army began working night and day turning the theatre upside down and inside out. The army worked for about a month, and at the end of that period there was not much left of the old Star. In its place had arisen a modern temple of the motion picture art.

In the remodeling an outlay of over $125,000 was expended in carrying out the plans of the Russell B. Smith Company of New York, the architects. The entire stage was ripped out, as were all the boxes, and in their place was erected a handsome stage and a series of imposing arches hung with gorgeous curtains and lighted from behind the railings at the bottom by soft blue lights. The design is of Grecian classic and Colonial motifs giving striking effect. In the remodeling the old stage was cut about two-thirds, giving the Criterion about 280 more seats. The interior color scheme is almost entirely in ivory. Along the walls in the rear and sides of the first floor and balcony were placed panels of rich silk and new Grecian style fixtures were put in throughout.

The present capacity is close to 1,500. The seats are arranged in four aisles on the ground floor and in the balcony. Rich red carpets cover the floors. The lighting throughout is indirect, except at the approaches to the balcony, where beautiful Grecian type fixtures with candle tops are placed.

The lobby is one mass of gold leaf, giving a very brilliant effect. In the doors leading from the lobby to the theatre proper are artistically painted posters in gold frames. Around the edge of the lobby ceiling are rows of indirect lighting.

The booth in the Criterion is placed in front of the gallery, which has been closed. This room is 18 x 12 and latest type Simplex machines are used. The distance of throw is 180 feet, and the angle of projection about 35 degrees.

The size of the picture on the screen is 16 x 20 and the screen is of local manufacture. The booth is fully equipped with all the latest devices for perfect projection. Intercommunicating phones connect the booth with the manager's office and the stage. New type exit lights are seen in the new Criterion, the letters E X I T being illuminated from red lights below. Aisle lights are placed on the seats.

The American Radiator Company installed a new heating plant and a typhoon exhaust blower system provides ventilation. There are two box offices, one in front of the house midway between the entrances and the other in the lobby at the right. The latter office will be used in cold weather. Both booths are equipped with automatic ticket machines.

One of the big features of the new Criterion is the front. Here much money and time has been spent in getting a modern metropolitan effect and the result has been highly successful. The entire front of the house was repainted an attractive drab color. The entrance was changed from the Genessee street side to the corner. A marque was built over the new entrance, surmounting which are three large electric signs flashing forth the various programs in the new nitrogen bulbs. From the top of the marque to the roof extends the big "Shea's Criterion" sign in blue and white nitrogen bulbs. This sign is 58 feet in height and can be seen from no less than a dozen points in the downtown section. The result of this brilliant electric display is that what was formerly an uninviting corner is now a most welcome one and the capacity audiences which fill the house nightly are proof that this display was well worth while.

Shea's Criterion is under the managing directorship of Harold B. Franklin, who is also guiding the policies of Shea's Hippodrome. Jack Sawyer, former chief of projection at the Hippodrome, is house manager. The orchestra director is Harry Wallace, president of the Buffalo Musicians' Association. A Hope Jones Unit orchestral organ is one of the musical features of the Criterion.

Shea's Criterion is catering to a high class of patronage, and the house is becoming the Mecca of motorist fans. The theatre is playing the super-productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for extended presentations at advanced prices, and the policy has to date been a big success. "Humoresque" is the attraction at this writing. The theatre was opened with the first showing anywhere of Cecil B. DeMille's "Something to Think About."

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

A Study of Different Projection Screen Surfaces

Reprinted from the British Journal of Photography

To compare the efficiency of the chief surfaces a large frame was covered with fine white Bolton sheeting, and upon this was formed a composite screen consisting of strips six by one feet arranged as follows:

(a) Plain white Bolton sheeting;
(b) Finest white calico;
(c) Duresco, a white composition coated on Bolton sheeting;
(d) Aluminium paint direct on Bolton sheeting;
(e) Aluminium paint on a substratum of Duresco on Bolton sheeting;
(f) A typical proprietary screen of the white diffusive type;
(g) A proprietary screen consisting of a fabric with a fine "grained" surface with a finishing coating of aluminium paint.

This screen was then tested under strictly practical conditions, that is to say, films of different character were projected and the effects were judged by an audience who were acquainted with the practical requirements, but who were themselves unacquainted with the nature of the different surfaces. The walls of the theatre were very dark and all extraneous light was excluded. The throw was 35 feet, and the size of the experimental picture projected was 4 feet 6 inches, with a current of from 17-25 amperes flowing in the arc. The final judgment was that the white of the Duresco gave the most pleasing result, but that the picture fell below the aluminium paint on the Duresco, as might be expected. There was a distinct falling-off in brightness and in general quality in (a) and (b), but (b) was the better of the two. The tests, which were very carefully carried out, were after all only qualitative, but they were strictly comparative, and they dealt, moreover, with those materials which were in general use. Since it is not possible to secure and to maintain flatness by means of any form of rollable or stretched fabric, and, as flatness is essential for the desired result, the most efficient screen, judging from these experiments, would be a specially prepared flat wall with a perfectly smooth surface properly treated with white Duresco or similar material, which should, in addition, receive a final dressing of aluminium paint if the maximum luminosity be required. Actually this accords, in many instances, with the best practice. The drawback, however, to the use of aluminium, as with all highly reflective surfaces, is that it limits the angle of uniform brilliancy, so that observers seated at the margins of a wide theatre, if they were near to the screen, would be at a disadvantage as compared with those who were seated in or near the central line joining the screen and the projector. No surface painted screen, however, is permanent, particularly when exposed to the atmosphere of an ordinary theatre. Generally, the white assumes a yellow tinge, and there is formed, in addition, a film composed of particles of dust and of tarry matter from the plentiful tobacco smoke daily produced by portions of the audience. These changes reduce the reflective power of the screen, and in consequence the brilliancy of the projected picture, a small quantity of dust being very effective in this respect. On the other hand, the renewal is quickly effected, and at a relatively low cost, and the original cost not being high, the screens are altogether economical. While the reflective power of the metallic screen is high, the glare due to the lack of perfect diffusivity does cause to many considerable visual discomfort, and for this reason, as well as for the one given, viz., the restriction of angle of uniform illumination, they are open to real objection.

An interesting experiment was tried, in which there was deposited metallic silver on the matt surface of a thin sheet of ground glass which was used as a screen, the natural surface of the glass facing the projector. So far as the formation of the image was concerned, the screen was quite effective, but the brilliancy was low, far lower, indeed, than the surfaced aluminium screen.

In his paper Dr. Nutting points out that the ideal screen should reflect all the light uniformly thrown upon it within a given angle of, say, thirty degrees from the normal, and postulates that, as a measure of the "diffusive efficiency" of any screen, the ratio of the light which is reflected within this given angle to the total light which is reflected. If this be adopted, the total efficiency of some reflecting materials can be calculated from photometric data, and the results of some of these determinations are reproduced from Dr. Nutting's paper below, calculating the 30 degrees diffusion efficiency, total reflecting power, and 30 degrees total efficiency:

(Note—The "ideal" screen of Dr. Nutting is defined as follows: a mirror, the front face of which is composed of minute hexagonal facets, each of which is a concave mirror of just sufficient diameter to refract light at a maximum angle of 15 degrees with the axis.)

Screen	30° diffusion efficiency.	Reflecting power	Total efficiency.
Magnesium carbonate block	0.25	0.87	0.22
Aluminium paint mirroroid B.....	0.55	0.25	0.14
Becker compound...	0.54	0.63	0.34
Ground mirror	0.69	0.92	0.64
Ideal screen .....0.9 to 1.0		0.92	—

The reflecting power of a screen is the ratio of the light totally reflected to the light totally incident, and the total efficiency is the ratio of the light which is reflected within the angle of 30 degrees of the normal to that which is totally incident.

Amongst the materials which were photometrically tested by Dr. Nutting, some of the constants of which are given in the table above, is a glass mirror silvered on the back and then ground on the remaining or exterior surface. On reading the paper, the figures appeared to be so good that it was decided to experiment at once with the material. At angles greater than 30 degrees there is with this mirror a marked falling-off in the light reflected, but the efficient angle is large. For the purposes of a preliminary trial, a screen was made of ordinary 21-ounce sheet glass, silvered by deposition and fine sandblasted on the exterior face, and this proved itself to be entirely successful. On placing this screen temporarily in contact with the ordinary fine white matt projection screen then in use, the increase in brilliancy was startling.

Mechanical considerations required that if screens of this nature were to be employed of large size, that they must be

Is a 30° Intermittent Possible?

ONE of the most interesting patents issued during the last year has to do with the design and construction of a novel intermittent movement. The Inventor is R. P. Devault of Battle Creek, Michigan. The patent number is 1,347,326.

From the standpoint of the projectionist the principal feature is the method by which the inventor claims to arrive at what is popularly known as a 12-1 movement but which rightfully should be called a 30° movement. This department has not seen the device and knows nothing about it except what has appeared in the patent specifications, but because it is believed that the subject is of interest to others in the industry a short description will be supplied.

This intermittent movement which might be called an ultra-speed movement consists essentially of a double movement, one sprocket being placed above the aperture and one below, both acting at exactly the same instant. This means in effect that the driving member must have two pins diametrically opposite each other.

These pins actuate the two sprocket wheels through Geneva Star cams of an unusual shape as shown in the illustration. The cams instead of having slots of a uniform width are supplied with diverging openings leading into the narrower slots.

The inventor claims that the diverging slots allow the pins to travel a longer distance along their arc before engaging the star wheel. Then having engaged the star wheel the cycle is completed in a proportionate shorter interval. The period of actuation of the film with the design shown in the patent specification drawings is said to be about one-twelfth of a complete cycle or 30°.

Furthermore, the inventor goes on to say that with this ultra-speed movement he is able to utilize about 90% of the available illumination and to do away entirely with the compensating shutter blade. It should be noted, however, that he does not claim to have done away with the necessity for a cover blade which seems to indicate that even with a 30° intermittent travel ghost is found to be bothersome if a shutter is not employed.

One claim of the double set of intermittent sprocket is that their use eliminates the usual tension springs. Then, too, the double sprockets aid in reducing the strain on the film during the commencement of the cycle. The strain is present but it is distributed over several perforations instead of a few. Obviously some such scheme is necessary, since to overcome the inertia of a film at rest puts a severe strain on the celluloid base. But added to this is the fact that after the inertia has been partly overcome the film must be accelerated rapidly and then decelerated, all this occuring in the time interval of 1/192 of a second.

This department makes no claims for Mr. DeVault's device but states here only the facts that he has had included in his patent papers plus a few editorial reflections. Nevertheless, it is an interesting topic for discussion. Any thoughts on the subject by any of the readers will be welcomed and printed if permitted by the writers.

much thicker than is the case with 21-ounce glass. With 21-ounce glass, the reflecting and diffusing surfaces are only about 0.1 inch apart. It did not appear correct to make the assumption that, if this distance were increased, say, to ¼ inch, that the effect would be equally satisfactory, but the reasonable doubt in this respect was removed by a further trial with a screen of greater thickness. It was then decided to install a screen of reasonable dimensions for the small theatre, where the main demonstrations were given, and to this end one of 6 feet 6 inches by 4 feet 6 inches was made. This screen (which was mounted in a stout black wooden frame) was given a lengthy, practical trial, and proved itself to be, by a general consensus of opinion, entirely satisfactory. It was found that, with the same film, equal brilliancy resulted from the expenditure of from half to two-thirds the current consumption. There was shown to be one very striking difference in the appearance of pictures projected on the mirror screen as compared with the ordinary opaque screen, which is difficult to explain, as it is difficult to demonstrate, except to those who can actually see the comparison. The pictures certainly have more of that indefinable quality "life"—even the shadows have the quality.

An endeavor was then made to improve the effect by using a special form of obscured glass, prepared by a method of fluoric acid etching. In this glass the "surface" consists of a series of irregularly-shaped, very shallow cavities, the diffusivity being much less than that of ground glass. When silvered on the plane side and used as a screen, with the rough surface towards the projecting lens, the effect was extremely satisfactory so far as regards the brightness of image, but the angle of view for uniform illumination was very small.

An objection was raised by some who had witnessed the early trials that, whilst the screen would be good for exhibiting the images from films which showed normal or ordinary contrasts, it would be objectionable for those where the contrasts were considerable. The high lights, it was averred, would be too bright. This seemed to be a reasonable objection, for, since absolute brightness of high lights was concerned, and the pleasantness or the reverse of the visual experience would be the final test, it did not seem fair to argue that the ratio of brightness of tones, by which contrast is measured, would be the same as for an opaque screen. It is customary with some operators, under such conditions as I have stated, to lower the illumination by decreasing the current flowing through the arc, a plan which is not entirely satisfactory. It suggested itself to me after some consideration that the simplest way to overcome the difficulty would be to place in front of the projecting lens a neutral tinted glass screen of low optical "density" (density equals $\log_{10}$ opacity), and this on trial was found to be perfectly effective. The effect is to dim uniformly the picture—the relation of the tones remains the same, but the absolute brightness of the high lights is lessened, and this fact constitutes the effectiveness of the device. A very low density suffices, and it was not found necessary to use a screen with optically worked surfaces, although the quality of the screen used was about equal for flatness and in freedom from flaws to patent plate. This device—which appears to be of a useful character—is recommended to the attention of makers of projectors, who might supply such an attachment at a low cost.

A matter of some importance when considering the general efficiency of projection screens—and this applies to all forms of screen—is the nature of the surroundings. The screen should always have a border of appreciable width and of low luminosity, which condition is best secured by the use of a black fabric. This serves to isolate the projected picture from its surroundings—which is the function of any form of frame—and a device of this character is quite necessary to secure concentration of the attention of observers on the picture itself—and by its low brightness accentuates contrast between the picture and its frame. It is important also to see for these reasons (quite apart from the irritation which is caused by the reverse) that the picture fills the frame—it should not be less than the limit of the screen's size, nor should it overlap. In good cinematograph projection this occurs; the pictures are standard, and the dimensions of the screen are in this proportion. There are, of course, other optical and mechanical conditions which must be fulfilled in order that the projected picture may produce a pleasant sensation, such as constancy in the lamphouse and steadiness in the projector (the future projector will probably be more strongly built and mounted on a much better foundation than usually obtains now), absence of mechanical defects in the film, and uniformity in their photographic qualities. But, in the sum of the different factors which make for goodness, that concerned with the screen has a high figure of value, and, whether it be a still or a moving picture, the necessities are the same.

Whilst there are practical difficulties to be overcome in the supply of the new mirror screen formulated, of a sufficiently large size to fulfil the requirements of important picture theatres, this does not apply to many other places where projected pictures are used. This observation applies notably to colleges and schools where, as a rule, the methods and the conditions of the system of projection leave much to be desired, and it is hoped that this simple communication may serve the useful purpose of drawing attention to the subject.

CHARLES W. GAMBLE.

Theatre Inspectors of Canadian Provinces Form Association to Better Conditions

New Organization Will Act to Assist Exhibitors in Making Theatres Safer and More Satisfactory

THE Canadian Theatre Inspectors Association, consisting of the inspectors from the five provinces of British Columbia. Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario, met in Vancouver during the month of October. This was the second convention of the association.

According to reports from the secretary of the association, Mr. C. F. Spence, the association was formed for the primary purpose of meeting and countering many of the misleading reports regarding the examinations for projectionists in the various provinces. Also, it was felt that an organization of that sort could be of great help in making more uniform the regulations for the safety of patrons in theatres and other amusement places.

It has not been the intention of the association to dictate to any province what should be done in the way of examinations or licensing, nor to attempt to alter any of the by-laws already existing. However, it had been felt that by getting together at least once a year the inspectors interested could discuss and study the latest improvements in the line of safety devices, structural details, etc. In this way each province would learn from the other and finally the entire five provinces could, if they wished, incorporate the best points of each.

One of the most important results of this organization is the elimination of those rumors passed around from mouth to mouth by which the work of one inspector was harmed at the expense of another.

At present when theatre chains are being expanded so rapidly in Canadian cities it was necessary that the regulations be more or less standardized so that the same limitations insofar as possible be placed on construction throughout the country.

The meeting in Vancouver this year was called a complete success by all those attending it. Mr. W. A. Oswald, the first president of the association, was the host and according to reports gave each of the visitors a week of wonderful entertainment. The Vancouver projectionists also did themselves proud by the way by furnishing a delightful luncheon to the inspectors from the other provinces.

Papers were read along the lines followed by the members of the organization. Mr. O. Elliott, chief inspector for Ontario, read a paper on "Theatre Aisles and Exits"; Mr. A. M. Malley, of Alberta, one on "The Use and Abuse of Film"; Mr. Oswald read a paper written by Mr. John Griffiths of Ansonia, Conn., on "Optics as Applied to Motion Pictures"; and Mr. C. F. Spence, theatre inspector for Manitoba, concluded with a treatise on "Theatre Inspection."

The following officers were elected for the year:

Honorary President—Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer of Ontario.

Honorary Vice-Presidents—Hon. Edward Brown, Provincial Treasurer of Manitoba; Hon. W. E. Knowles, Provincial Treasurer of Saskatchewan; Hon. J. B. Cote, Provincial Secretary of Alberta; Hon. J. D. B. Farris, Attorney General and Minister of Labor of British Columbia.

President—Otter Elliott, Toronto, Ont.

Vice-President—W. H. Singleton, Winnipeg, Man.

Secretary-Treasurer—C. F. Spence, Winnipeg, Man.

It was voted to hold the next Convention in Toronto in September of next year.

The organization hopes during the coming year to make its work of even greater value to the exhibitor by cooperating with him in every way possible.

U. S. S. Shawmut Gets New Projector

ONE of the pleasant incidents attending the brief stay at her Hudson River moorings of the U. S. S. Shawmut, was the installation some days ago, of a complete motor driven type "S" Simplex Projector.

The Shawmut had previously been equipped with a type "B" Simplex which had been giving splendid service and which proved to be a well-seasoned sea dog, but the desire to use one of the larger type "S" motors, equipped with all of the latest Simplex devices, appealed very strongly to Lieut. J. R. Frawley of the Supply Corps, U. S. N., who arranged for the purchase of the projector in question.

The sale of the Simplex was effected by Mr. Joseph Hornstein, the well known General Manager of the Howells' Cine Equipment Company, who has personally sold more motion picture projectors throughout the United States Navy than any other individual supply man.

The U. S. S. Shawmut, besides being the flag ship of the Atlantic fleet, is one of the few ships of war equipped with aeroplane facilities, as a glance at the accompanying photograph shows the large plane acting as a back ground for the Simplex, which is the center of an admiring group of "gobs." The unusually low type of pedestal with which this machine is equipped was particularly specified in order to meet certain ship-board conditions. Mr. Oland L. Hawk, formerly of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, and a naval authority on projection, and now chief installation man for the Howells' Cine Equipment Company, supervised the installation.

An interested audience views the new Simplex

Projector Placed in Dry Goods Window

A picture on this page shows the Power's Projector in the window of the Emporium, one of the largest dry goods stores in San Francisco, and shows that "Tex" Combs, Manager of the Theatre Equipment Supply Co., knows how to take a leaf out of the book of advertising "stunts" used by producers and exhibitors.

It was found absolutely impossible for any machine representative to get a projector on the floor of the Convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America held in San Francisco on October 4. All attempts of Mr. Combs to connect up with the dance also failed as the Convention managers had taken a stand against any manufacturers being represented. Mr. Combs, while freely acknowledging the good judgment exercised in this decision, saw no reason why he should cease his efforts to get some special publicity in connection with this Convention so he took up the matter with the owners of the Emporium and secured the display which is seen in the photograph. If anything, this attracted more attention than having the machine displayed in connection with any of the Convention events, and the projector was seen by thousands of people in addition to the exhibitors attending the Convention.

Lobby Frames for Ohio Theatre

The Ohio theatre, Indianapolis, plans to use all available space in its lobby to display posters. The Newman Mfg. Co. has received the contract for the special frames required.

There will be two double-faced frames, finished in statuary bronze and equipped with special brackets for attaching to iron columns. There will also be four smaller metal frames to be used on the ticket booth.

In addition, the contract covers two velour-covered rope railings, complete with removable posts, floor sockets, wall plates and snap hooks.

Mechanigraph Said to Make Filming of Mechanical Subjects Simple

Minute Models of Devices Are Made of Fibre and Operated Exactly as Standard Size Mechanisms

THE Mechanigraph is a late invention in motion pictures, and has just been placed in use by the Harry Levey Service Corporation. This company, which specializes in the production of industrial-educational motion pictures, has added many innovations to this increasingly important branch of motion picture production, and it is expected that the invention of the Mechanigraph will be another tremendous step forward in transmitting to the screen big industrials and educational problems of the day.

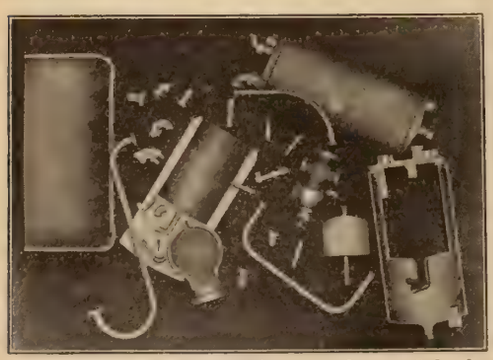
The purpose of the Mechanigraph is to show on the screen the working of bits of mechanism, of which it is impossible to secure motion picture close-ups while they are in action; to show transitional stages in the manufacture of a product; and to show, too, such important educational points as the progress of travel evolution, such as—as is now being done in a feature being prepared by this company—how the father of all wheels—the log from the forest—gradually came to be more and more perfected until it grew into the modern spoke wheel.

"The animated cartoon" has always been the medium heretofore for presenting upon the screen by means of moving line drawings such explanatory bits as cannot be shown adequately in any other way.

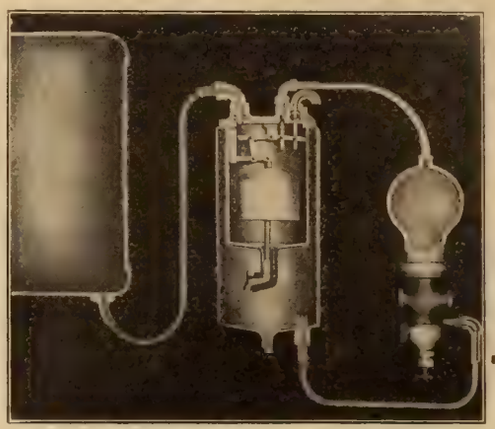
"The Mechanigraph" is much more elaborate than this and goes many steps further. It is an actual mechanical contrivance, an exact working replica of a machine or a bit of mechanism, moving just as the machine moves, and doing all the things the machine does when it is in operation. It is fashioned of a specially prepared fibre-board, and it has the added advantage of being moved and operated by its maker, so that the motion picture camera can be placed close to it, without the slightest danger, so that the most intricate bits of action may be shown clearly.

The article, or machine to be photographed, is studied from every angle—while it is dormant, and while in action. Then, from the fibre-board is fashioned an exact duplicate, greatly reduced, but made to proper proportion.

First, an exterior view is cut out, with all details complete—front, back, joints—just as though the actual model were being fashioned. Then another set of parts, this time of the interior, is made. For each little section, each piece of wire, each separate part of the original, there is a fibre-board duplicate. These are placed together with working joints of brass rivets. When an exact fibre-board interior is complete it is placed with the pieces representing the exterior, which are in turn hinged riveted, and jointed, just like the original.



The separate pieces making up the models for the Mechanigraph



How the models for the Mechanigraph appear

Artists who are specialists in making paper look like metal color the completed replica. The problem of the fashioner of the fibre-board replica is even harder than that of the builder of the original model. He has only two dimensions in which to work. His medium for expression is flat, and yet, when it is shown in working order under the eye of the camera, the result he obtains therewith must appear to have all the properties that are part of the actual machine.

The greatest care is necessary in the making of this Mechanigraph. The duplicate, when it is shown on the screen, is magnified hundreds of times. A tank that is made to measure ten inches in height in fibre-board, appears ten feet high when thrown upon the screen; and any error in its making that would be practically invisible to the naked eye, shows on the screen a glaring inaccuracy.

After the making of the Mechanigraph—into which often goes more than a hundred pieces, comes the animation. The Mechanigraph is fastened to a board under a specially focussed camera, and each movement that the actual machine makes in operating, is made by hand on the Mechanigraph—and for each movement a picture is made.

When there is not an actual piece of machinery to be photographed, as for instance, in the case of the transition of the Wheel—actual historical facts, technical books, and diagrams, are studied, and a Mechanigraph fashioned from material contained in these and animated before the camera.

For a big educational picture on the uses and adaptations of electricity, the Mechanigraph is being employed to show how electricity is helping to further the progress of the world.

News Notes

The Bass Camera Company at present has on display the most interesting collection of motion picture apparatus, in addition to a complete collection of cameras and accessories at their store, 109 North Dearborn Street, Chicago.

Among the devices shown is one for dissolving high speed lenses and a new type lightweight micrometer mount which is of interest to all cameramen. A sample of the Universal turret mount is also on display.

President Charles Bass issued an invitation through Motion Picture News to all cameramen passing through Chicago at any time to call around and view the particularly attractive display he has on view.

Artificial Light in the Studio*

By Max Mayer.

WHEN we turn back to the early pages of motion picture history, we come to the time when our pioneer producers began to look upon picture-making as an everyday and allday task, rather than an occasional diversion.

It was then that the pranks of old Sol began to be felt more keenly than when it was practical to wait for the clouds to roll by.

Confronted by a rapidly growing demand, the producer readily saw two alternatives; the land of eternal sunshine or artificial light, so he promptly reached out for both.

Artificial light was being extensively used, both for still photography and in the Graphic Arts, and fairly suitable units were therefore available for cinematography.

At the time the main aim was to get lamps enough to light the sets, and somehow they never seemed able to get quite enough, no matter how many were used.

This condition prevailed until the more recently developed tendency, to produce pleasing and natural light effects, superseded the earlier method of flooding the scenes with light from every available point.

Thus the lights were used virtually to produce shadows and contrasts, and far better results were attained with less light; in fact, many effects difficult and impracticable to obtain by sunlight are more readily achieved in a darkened studio with suitable electrical equipment.

This subject as a whole is wide in scope, and the writer dares herein to attempt nothing more than a superficial discussion thereof.

To this end three general classifications will

A specially designed auto truck complete with generator and Sun Light Arcs is now available for location work

Designs Special Truck for Locations

IN keeping with his policy of continually improving the Sun Light Arc and Sun Light Service, President Harmer has designed a portable lighting set to make possible the wider use of his high efficient arc in motion picture work. The new equipment, which consists of a complete power plant mounted on a 5-ton White truck, together with the necessary arc equipments and cable, was assembled for one purpose —to make the lot of the director easier when his script called for location work far distant from any dependable source of power.

This portable plant contains a generator driven from the motor of the truck and capable of delivering 450 amperes which is sufficient for three Sun Lights of 100,000 c. p. each. These three lamps may be burned indefinitely from this one generator but if necessary five arcs may be burned for a short time.

No matter how far from the truck the scene is laid the director is enabled to keep in close touch with the operator by a telephone set.

The Sun Light Arc has devised a rental system which will allow the use of the portable truck by any director in need of such a power plant. Experienced operators are sent out with each equipment which insures the best of results.

This innovation on the part of President Harmer and his associates was carried out only after a year's study of the field. They now have the intimate knowledge of the requirements of the field that to enable them to design and assemble this new portable lighting set.

The White Motor Truck Company who designed the truck for the special purpose have become interested in the motion picture industry and it is expected that these trucks will be found in many branches of the industry where transportation problems are to be solved.

aid in dealing with the topic:

(1) The nature of the light sources;

(2) The manner of their application;

(3) The manner of installation of equipment.

Under the first heading, consideration should be given to the color composition of the light, the degree of concentration of the light source itself, the nature and value of reflectors and auxiliary reflecting surfaces—and the nature and value of diffusing screens.

1. Color Composition of Light

The color sensitiveness of the photographic emulsion, of course, determines the usefulness of the spectrum range of the light source.

The modern film used in the motion picture camera is sensitive over a considerable portion of the sun spectrum and consequently sunlight will record on the film more speedily and correctly than a light source in which one or more colors to which the emulsion is sensitive are absent or weak.

Artificial light sources which do not cover the full sensitive range of the emulsion can not give maximum results, unless used in conjunction with other light sources which supply that deficiency.

The mercury vapor lamp, though completely lacking in some colors, is nevertheless a valuable unit for this work, owing to its wonderful light diffusion and is very extensively used in conjunction with powerful arc lamps employing "white flame" carbons.

There is a great deal of valuable information to be gathered on photographic color values, and it is to be hoped that the S. M. P. E. may be favored at an early date with a paper on this topic by some of the many brilliant men of the Eastman laboratories.

If a light source be considered as a point, the light would emanate therefrom equally in all directions, and the rays would all form diverging angles. Such a point of light would be the extreme concentrated light source. Consider now a plane surface, a square, for example, formed by minute light sources, whose collective intensity is equal to an assumed intensity of the aforementioned concentrated light source.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

How to Judge Music Cue Sheets

would know his own limitations and he would know his audience.

Some cue sheets offer music which is "over the heads" of certain audiences and cheap stuff to others. Do you suppose that the Rialto, New York, would dare to offer the claptrap numbers which can be gotten over in neighborhood houses appealing to a different class. Dr. Reisenfeld, I would say, knows best how to build his own cue sheets. But the cue sheets he made would be ridiculous in a little theatre. How would the little theatre get the effects which the big Rialto Orchestra with its complete library can use? I am told that John Barrymore in "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde" was Dr. Riesenfeld's biggest financial success and that he is going to bring it back for a two weeks' run again—a return engagement. I am told that the success in a large measure was due to Riesenfeld's extraordinary cue sheet. Out in the country, that cue sheet was as good as nothing.

What we are driving at is this: Don't just take the cue sheet for gospel—consider your audience, its taste and development, consider your library and consider your musicians.

After you have decided upon the accuracy of the cue sheet compiler's judgment, then you can begin to adapt his suggestions. If you haven't the umpty ump symphony which is mentioned but you have the blankety blank sonata on hand, and your judgment tells you that the situation will be well illuminated by the substitute bit, use it.

Now all along, I have spoken against cue sheets which are made to sell music.

But now I wish to talk in the other direction. The musical director or his manager would be absolutely short-sighted who would not buy the music which is essential to the success of the picture. If a musical library is not stocked up, don't be niggardly. Buy the music which is going to be useful always. Be sparing of the fly-by-night music purchases, the music which is dead by tomorrow, but be generous in the buying of music which will be as good ten years from now as today. You can always go back to the good music. You don't want, to be sure, to give your hearers the same old tunes night after night. Rotate—keep your musical scores for the picture always fresh. . . Yet I would not be misunderstood; there are certain songs of the moment which are just right for a situation, and which nothing else would replace. A situation where the dance hall or the vaudeville stage is depicted should have the last minute ragtime sensation.

In judging a cue sheet, these are some of the ideas which can be remembered. After the score has demonstrated its right character, its "aidability" to the picture, then you have the privilege of adapting, changing, fitting the numbers to suit your library, your instruments, your public. Buy whatever is needed, for today and for all time; don't just buy music which is suggested, because it is down on the cue sheet and is intended to make you a "sucker."

More on the Prologue

Two weeks ago I wrote some ideas on the prologue, its advantages and possible variations; many letters were received asking certain questions. The best way to answer the queries is to print the following additional thoughts. Particularly is the attention of the reader called to the last paragraph below, namely, "Only one suggestion further," and to the end o fthe squib.

It can be used to sketch influences which were at work before the start of the story. Thus in a picture of Katherine MacDonald's "The Notorious Mrs. Lisle" the prologue could have suggested a woman being flayed and thrust aside—possibly a reminiscent bit of the Magdalene, etc. In the case of Mary Pickford's "Suds" a prologue might have shown some poor man and woman (living figures), coming out with an infant, and leaving it a foundling before the door of a rich house—a policeman comes along, picks it up and takes it to the station house.

It can be used to create a bizarre effect or a state of curiosity or anxiety or restlessness—without any particular reference to the story proper. This in a mystery play; a prologue could be created with a series of figures moving across the stage for no apparent reason and doing something which the audience cannot understand. Curiosity only.

It can be used to tie up a current bit of news to the picture where there is a connection. A flash of the newsprint on the screen, or a bit out of a news reel—and then into the picture.

It can be used to show how the film was taken. Thus, in the case of certain different subjects, the hardships that the actors and directors or the author went through establish the mind of the audiences upon the wonder of the scenes which have been filmed.

It can be used to show how the author became famous, or what his great forte has been, or what his past successes have been, or anything of that sort. Thus in a picture of Rex Beach, the man is almost more interesting than his pictures—a scenic of him and a few title suggestions of his life, introduces his pictures well.

This is only a brief summary of some of the possibilities of the Prologue. Anything which will serve to start the feature picture with a Bang! And with a Running Start! And with the minds of the Audiences Focussed! And in the Proper Tune!—that anything is good prologue work.

Only one suggestion further—Rather no prologue at all than one which lags, or limps. If it doesn't excite and arouse, it's no good. A prologue must be packed full of stuff. It must be one thing or another, not a lot of things mixed up. If it's going to be northern atmosphere pack it full of that and nothing else—and use every known device you can lay your hands on to squeeze the few moments of the Prologue with that spirit. If it's to be tragedy and forlorn hopelessness, don't leave anything out of the Prologue which can be utilized to create that dejected state of feeling. Weep yourself and get all your ushers weeping if it'll help.

The Prologue must be fast, tight and Unified!

Savoy, Syracuse Opens with New Organ

The beautiful Savoy theatre of the T. G. Thompson Company, Syracuse, N. Y., was opened on Wednesday, October 20, after having been closed for several weeks.

Pauline Fredericks in "Madame X" was the attraction and was beautifully presented. The musical program was very effective and there were many words of praise for the new Marr and Colton organ. The instrument has a wonderful quality of tone and a carefully selected range of stops.

There was an overflow attendance at all performances, which indicates that this popular house has not lost any of its prestige during the weeks it has been closed.

Full of pep and progressiveness, always looking for novelties to break the ordinary routine of picture playing. Am adept in arranging prologues.

"We have been following with great interest the preliminary announcements for the Motion Picture Musical Convention, and we look forward with great pleasure to participate in this convention, as we know that it will make its impress for much good in the development of motion picture presentation.—Shea Amusement Company, Harold Franklin.

Music Editor:

"Relative to Motion Picture Musical Conference which will be held in New York in January, while a bit premature, I feel confident that this company will be represented at the meeting.

"If your movement entertains the wholehearted effort it deserves, instead of making the exhibitor carry an overloaded orchestra 'camouflaged' with the idea to educate the 'dear old public,' I know you will earn a vote of thanks from the entire industry, as well as the public themselves who will benefit by the saving, instead of a fruitless waste as at present in vogue.

"Thanking you for your invitation, and wishing your department much success."—Maurice F. Barr, Manager, New Orleans theatres.

Music Editor:

"While I do not consider myself an authority on things musical, and while I do not often take the occasion to air my views, I am going to inflict some of my ideas upon you.

"I happened to attend a concert about a week ago given by several operatic stars. The one and only deplorable thing about this concert was the house. I am satisfied that our local director did not make a cent, and, in fact it is very probable that the performance was a loss. It is also a shame that people such as these artists, of nation-wide prominence, should be asked to sing for such a small house.

"I think that the motion picture theatres in this country, aside from any selfish object are in a position to educate the people to an understanding of the better things in music. I also believe that it is to the interest of every one who cares for good music to actively assist in improving the music in the motion picture theatres and in elevating them to the highest standard possible.

"If the public, who go to picture shows, have their musical taste educated at these places, concerts such as the one I mentioned will have the very people who now would say that they do not care for 'High Brow' music. Personally, I would not go to a picture show that did not furnish the audience with good music as well as a good picture, and I feel that that is the attitude that is rapidly becoming popular.

"I am glad to note what you are doing in this direction and, if at any time I can help you in my small way, command me."—George Steinmetz.

Music Editor:

"Regarding this work, while I am not active in orchestra or picture work of any kind, I am much interested in an organization of which you speak, and it looks like a big step in the right direction, for by representing music in the right form to the masses, we cannot help but better the profession from every point of view.

"I am familiar with your work in New York and have often wished I might be enabled to see some such work put forth in the West.

"You might be interested in knowing that we have here in Boise, two splendid (small) orchestras in picture work, and I would suggest that you write to Mr. DeWitt DePue (who is really an artist), leader of the Strand orchestra, Box 1295. I showed him your letter this morning and he was eager to get some information from you.

"The other, George Jeffries, director of the Pinney theatre orchestra, who is also a splendid, live leader.

"THE SONG OF THE SOUL"

(Goldwyn)

Specially selected and compiled by M. Winkler

The timing is based on a speed limit of 14 minutes per reel (1,000 ft.)

Theme: "Roses That Die Bloom Again" (Sentimental Ballad), Levy

IMPORTANT NOTE

The most appropriate theme for this picture is the composition composed by Briel, entitled "The Climax" (Song of the Soul), published by Chappell & Co. This composition is, however, subject to the tax imposed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. I suggest that orchestras not having the license from the above Society, use the number suggested as the theme.

1—"Lovelette" (Allegretto Grazioso), by Levy (1 minute and 15 seconds), until—S: At Screening.
2—"Hurry" (for pursuit and races), by Minot (1 minute), until—T: "Come quick, our house is."
3—Theme (40 seconds), until—T: "The pity of it."
4—Continue to action (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "In after years."
5—"Twilight Fancies" (Moderato), by Fromel (4 minutes and 40 seconds), until—T: "When the only tie that."

7—Theme (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "The following summer brings."
8—"Dramatic Narrative," by Pement (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "Jinny has grown to worship."
9—Theme (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "At the cane mill."
10—"Queen of My Heart" (sentimental ballad), by Baron (2 minutes and 25 seconds), until—T: "In the shadow of death."
11—"Sinister Theme" (for scenes of impending danger), by Vely (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "In alligator swamps."
12—"Bleeding Hearts," by Levy (1 minute and 35 seconds), until—T: "I lost my way, I was."
13—Continue to action (55 seconds), until—T: "Into the life of the."
14—Theme (3 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Hope."
15—"Baby Dreams" (Little Reverie), by Boyanner (1 minute and 30 seconds), until—T: "With the coming of the."
16—Continue to action (1 minute and 50 seconds), until—T: "But his conscience."
17—Theme (1 minute and 20 seconds), until—T: "Jinny insanely jea'ous."

25—Theme (3 minutes and 20 seconds), until—T: "I'll never see you again."

THE END

"JUST OUT OF COLLEGE"

(Goldwyn)

Specially selected and compiled by M. Winkler

The timing is based on a speed limit of 14 minutes per reel (1,000 ft.)

Theme: "Lovelette" (Allegretto Grazioso), Levy

1—"Marriage Blues" (Fox Trot), by Berkin (1 minute), until—S: At screening.
2—Theme (3 minutes), until—T: "Some seniors prefer to sit."
3—"Scherzetto" (From Symphonette Suite), by Berge (2 minutes and 45 seconds), until—T: "Mrs. Luella Pickering."

14—Imitation of village band (direct cue) (2 minutes and 30 seconds), until—T: "Boys, the Star Spangled Banner."

IMPORTANT NOTE: Although the direct cue in this picture calls for the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" it is suggested that this be ignored and any bright composition be performed for the reason that if the direct cue is followed by musicians the audience in the theatre will stand up.

S: When audience sits down.
T: "They're just making fun of you."
15—"Valse Moderne" (Valse Lente), by Rosey (3 minutes), until—T: "Meanwhile the pickle king has."
16—"Moonlight Shadows" (Caprice Novelette), by Baron (1 minute and 45 seconds), until—T: "If the Bingo Pickle."

Such a luminous surface might be considered an ideal diffused light source. At a given distance, this diffused light source, as compared with the concentrated light source, would evenly illuminate a greater area at a proportionately lesser intensity.

In the language of the studio, the light from the luminous surface would not carry so far as the concentrated light, but would be more scattered or diffused, producing an effect often very much desired in photography.

If the light from a concentrated light source, such as a flame arc, for example, is passed through a piece of roughed glass or similar medium, a diffusing or scattering effect may be obtained, involving, of course, a loss proportionate to the absorption of the medium. Thus it is practicable to obtain almost any degree of diffusion from a concentrated light source; but the scattered light from a luminous surface cannot be concentrated.

Another form of concentrated light, now extensively used as an auxiliary, is the projected beam or spot light. This is usually in the form of a high-powered hand-feed arc (70 to 100 amp. and often more), with a single plano-convex condenser. The principal fault with this form of unit is its low efficiency, probably mostly due to the filtering effect of the thick condenser glass. However, the striking effects obtained by this means will easily offset this inefficiency.

It might be interesting and instructive to note the effect obtainable through a condenser lens of quartz as compared with the ordinary glass condenser.

REFLECTORS AND REFLECTING SURFACES

The uses of reflectors on various types of lamps are to re-direct the rays (which would otherwise go in useless directions) toward the object to be illuminated, and further to obtain by their use various degrees of concentration, according to the shape of the reflectors. While surface mirrors would probably represent the ideal reflecting surface, their use would hardly be practicable owing to the difficulty of keeping large numbers of them clean under the studio conditions.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"The Heart of a Woman"

(Peerless Pictures—State Rights)

THIS is a story of life in an industrial town, only mildly interesting. It has a cast of well known players. Jack Richardson is featured, and in the supporting cast are Mignon Anderson and Pat O'Malley.

One of the picture's drawbacks is the great lapse of years that is supposed to take place. The story opens with the man and wife already married for some years. Time flies and their daughter grows up, and the romance begins. There is a third party, Brown, an old friend of the family, played by George Fisher, who formerly loved the wife and who takes a great interest in the child. The husband accuses him of being the real father of the girl and a fight ensues. Here is realism with a vengeance, with a few touches that are far too gruesome. The climax is brought about by a highly suggestive sub-title, which is bound to offend some.

Mignon Anderson plays the wife and mother. A sub-title explains that right living and right thinking has kept for her her youthful appearance, but even at that she does not quite look the mother of an eighteen-year-old girl. Richardson is an excellent type, but Fisher appears a bit too benevolent for a mill worker. Pat O'Malley, Clara Horton and Francis Brainerd are all satisfactory. There are some good interior scenes of the mill.—Length, 5 reels.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Out of the Snows"

(Featuring Zena Keefe—Selznick)

"CANADIAN POLICE" pictures appear every now and then with their thrilling tales of the far north. These films vary as the wind, according to their entertaining value.

Exhibitors need not be afraid to book "Out of the Snows," for although it slows up a bit here and there, it is strong in incident and dramatic moments, with a pretty love story running throughout.

The theme switches from the general run and develops more incident and dramatic moments than love interest.

Hence it is that Zena Keefe, the star, does not appear until the second or third reel when the story is well on its way.

When she does appear, her character of the Indian girl gives her plenty to do and she does it well, following the trail behind a dog team in her efforts to escape the police, after killing a ruffian and then in a strong climax sacrifing her life for the man she loves.

One of the best fights ever witnessed upon the screen shows Ralph Ince who plays the lead in a death struggle with the heavy.

Ince gives a splendid portrayal of the young officer who puts duty above everything else, even though it means the arresting of one he likes.

It is the white girl whom he finally wins, the story reaching a happy ending.

The production has some wonderful snow scenes, especially those depicting the severe blizzards of the north.

In the cast are Gladys Coburn, William Hartigan, Jacques Susanne, Huntley Gordon, H. L. Atkins and Red Eagle.—FRANK LEONARD.

"The Sandman"

(Vanity Fair Maids' Comedy—Featuring Eddie Boland—One Reel)

EDDIE BOLAND and his Vanity Fair Maids do the best they can with this one-reeler, but their efforts are mostly in vain for the reason that the film lacks story and incident.

After the opening scenes where Eddie tells a tale, in order to introduce the "girls," the scenes shift to a boarding school in which the young ladies perform acrobatics in their endeavors to escape from a rat.

These scenes are rather humorous in spots, especially when Boland and another comedian pursue the rat and eventually capture it. But there is nothing amusing or funny in the film on the whole, either in the antics of the girls or the many situations in which the rat appears.

And then again the maidens do not appear to advantage in the costumes they wear or in the scenes in which they appear, horror being the principal attitude registered.

Boland hasn't much to do, either, but it is not his fault, for the comedian lacks humorous situations.—FRANK LEONARD.

Short Subject Reviews on the Following Page

"His Noisy Still"

(Sunshine Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

FOR unadulterated hokum with slapstick comedy furnishing the high spots, "His Noisy Still" takes the cake. There is very little ingenuity expended in creating a story—most of it has gone in establishing some sure-fire antics. For instance a steam roller is used to flatten Glen Cavendar and after he is lifted from the ground the imprint of his body in the asphalt is occasion to bring a good sized chuckle. Again he throws a mattress out of the window to light upon for non-payment of rent. But the landlady beats him to it and picks it up and Glen takes a terrific flop right on the hard pavement.

These are samples of the rough and ready action which punctuates the comedy throughout. A new trick in fishing shows the nimrod sweeping the surface of the water with a vacuum cleaner. And the faithful Ford is used again—this time as a boat. The idea suggested in the title expends itself early. In fact there is no continuity to the thing—it merely being a series of highfalutin episodes to bring out Cavendar's peculiar style of comedy. Some crazy concoction is being distilled or brewed but after a series of explosions the comedy takes up the cause of the vacuum cleaner, or the Ford, or the pavement fall, or the steam roller incident. Still it is rich in slapstick and contains a full assortment of laughs.—LAURENCE REID.

"Movie Fans"

(Mack Sennett Comedy—Paramount)

THE dyed-in-the-wool movie fan who is not content to look at pictures but must see how they are made in richly caricatured in Mack Sennett's latest comedy on the Paramount program. This type of fan is only seen or rather understood if he lives in close proximity to a studio. So Mack pokes a lot of fun at him in his customary style. Two of his comedians gather atmosphere around the studio tank—which is occasion to trot out the bathing girls who are introduced in an ensemble and as individuals. A fire scene is being staged after the "take-off" of a thriller. But the fans believe the flames are genuine. Consequently they take up the studio hose and destroy the set. There is considerable slapstick which is sure-fire and the offering is quite up to the Sennett standards of tomfoolery. —Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

(Kineto Review)

HERE are motion illustrations for newspaper articles, frequently printed in our daily newspapers, about doings in Mexico. The reel of information concerning the rejuvenation process, is edited to portray the progress this country is making toward civilization. To that end, a bird's-eye view of Pachuca is shown, and shots showing that the cowboy in Mexico still throws a wicked lasso and seldom ever misses a bull. Interesting views of valuable possession assembled in the Museum of Arts, are photographed, including what is said to be a rare piece of sculptorship, the subject being Michael Angelo. There are some general views of the walls surrounding the city of Vera Cruz, followed by long shots of the city within the walls, from the house tops. An interesting scene or two shows women selling vegetables grown in the flamous floating gardens. Of general interest to a mixed audience.—LILLIAN GALE.

Sea Planets — Apartments for Rent
(Educational)

IN this split reel, the half regarding the sea planets is of considerable more value, from a standpoint of information and entertainment than the half devoted to castles of semi-ancient history, which aside from their picturesque value, have no particular appeal. The sea-planets go to balance the deficit, however, and life below and upon them, which is centered around creatures of the deep, is picturized in a most compelling fashion. One is reminded that the star fish has an eye for each arm, and is seldom ever robbed of his keen sight. And that he is sensitive, is plainly understood, when one sees him under a microcope and finds that he is composed of millions of small feelers, which take in the stray shrimp to such an extent that he never gets out of the embrace. Photography of both parts, very good. A representative Chester Screenic.—LILLIAN GALE.

Urban Movie Chat

ONE of the thirty-fourth series of Movie Chats. It opens with a shot of the public watering trough usually found in the small English village, illustrating the many uses it is put to, during a day. Horses are watered from it, automobiles take on a needed supply, thirsty dogs trot along and stop for a drink. Boys find it convenient for playing splash.

In and about the same neighborhood, we see children on the hunt for cockle shells, and before we know it, we are visiting Havana in winter where a festival is taking place, much akin to the celebration in America usually identified with New Year's eve. Before the end of the reel, we are informed as to the technique of wild duck hunting, the way to bring home the most ducks, for the least amount of shot.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Art of Diving"

IMMEDIATELY, upon thinking of fancy dives, we think of Annette Kellerman. Evidently the Cinal process of slow motion photography also thought of her as the way to illustrate how much we miss in the rapid movement usually accompanying dives of noted swimmers. But with this new-fangled photography one doesn't miss a thing. It sort of analyzes the reason for every move made when the subject leaves the spring board for the water. The pictures reflected by this camera are apt to be more informative than entertaining, although the Blanchard Film Company, producing the subjects, found a beauteous location for the shots of Miss Kellerman's high dives. For illustrating to students the detail of any subject, especially that of surgery, we should judge this photography invaluable. It is less apt to be tiresome, too, if subjects about which there is little generally known, are used to illustrate the marvels of the slow motion camera.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Banana Special"

THIS may sound like some kind of fancy dish one usually partakes of at the soda fountain, but it is not. It is a special reel which should tend to increase one's respect for the seemingly plentiful fruit, the banana. But just because they come in bunches is no reason there is no considerable difficulty in getting them into countries where they sell at a price within reach.

The bananas described in the reel of motion pictures, are from Jamaica, in the West Indies, and we see them from the time the trees are planted and grown, to when the huge bunch of fruit almost weighs it down, and along comes a Hindu coolie with a sort of scythe, cuts it off and the process of removal begins. Jamaica railroads are likened to American subways, for they run, seemingly, mostly under ground, so the bananas, which are rudely removed from their birthplace while yet green and young, are not given a chance to ripen, with the assistance of light, until after spending fifteen days or so upon high seas, and finally brought to light by a dealer in West Indian fruits. This is a particularly good offering of its kind, and is one of many meritorious Bruce Scenics.—LILLIAN GALE.

Friends of Man
(Kineto Review)

ONE of the Urban family, and one of the most interesting reviews in the Urban repertoire. It is a subject which can be inserted most anywhere in the program, and will not irritate spectators, waiting for the feature. It relates about dogs, all kinds of dogs, but mostly war dogs, trained to register no fear when great guns explode in their midst, and trained to locate the wounded and bring back a piece of clothing or cap, for identification. A dog story, with an appeal to lovers of the animal which will be met with enthusiasm, and if, among those present, there are the stray two or three who are not fond of dogs, they will find a solution for the reason of their existence, as well as a reason why they are indisputably "Friends of Man."—LILLIAN GALE.

"ALWAYS AUDACIOUS"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Clever Twists Make Interesting Crook Story

WALLACE REID is certainly in luck with his photoplays. His latest entry, "Always Audacious," adapted by Tom Geraghty from Ben Ames Williams' Satevepost story, "Toujours de L'Audace," is just about the cleverest crook melodrama of the season and places the star away in the van of his fellow-players on the Lasky lots when it comes to getting consistently good screen material. This is a dual role story concerning two men who have identical personalities, one of whom is a crook who usurps the other's place in society.

Of course it is natural to ridicule the dual personality characterization by arguing that friends and relatives could not possibly be fooled since gestures and intonations of voice would be different regardless of the fact that the protagonists might resemble one another. But one is disarmed by a foreword which states that nature sometimes fools everybody but herself. The plot revolves around the efforts of the shanghaied hero to prove his identity in the face of overwhelming odds. The crook has stepped into his shoes, clothes, home, business and love affair and has gotten away with it. And the hero is up a tree to establish himself. Even the cop on the beat mistakes him for a "nut." A clever touch by the way. Then, inspired, the honest chap takes his troubles to a city editor who arranges a test. But the crook has covered his tracks well. The only profit that the victim has is when he knocks his opponent out. However, the masquerader failed to take into account that a dog remembers his friends. So at the final scene of a good climax the hero's identity is solved by the friendly attitude of the hound.

In detailing this story space forbids giving emphasis to the many clever twists and surprises which accompany the picture throughout. Mr. Geraghty's scenario is a compact piece of work which is marked by its clearly defined action and incident. His climaxes come where they should —at the end of a dramatic sequence. Having not read the original we cannot say how faithful the adaptation is, but it must be corking reading judging from the screen version. Some of the titles are mediocre while others are praiseworthy. One of them alludes to a certain mannerism of brushing the hair which is not made the most of in the subsequent development. But it is a first class picture any way you take it—a great audience picture because it is packed with good action, adventure, love interest, intrigue and mystery. Improbable? Yes. But so cleverly done that one doesn't hunt for truth but for entertainment. James Cruze has capably directed and the acting is first rate.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

In his latest motion picture, "Always Audacious," Wallace Reid portrays one of the most virile roles of his career. In fact he plays a dual role, appearing as the hero and heavy, the latter being a crook who causes his counterpart to be shanghaied while he assumes the place of the wealthy victim in society. A remarkable feature of the offering is the double exposure which shows the star actually battling with himself. The story, an adaptation by Tom Geraghty, of Ben Ames Williams' story, "Toujours de L'Audace," is truly gripping and affords the star excellent opportunity to display his talent.

The climax is genuinely amazing and offers a totally unexpected finale. Mr. Geraghty has taken the highlights of the tale and assembled them together so that every ounce of dramatic strength is given full emphasis. He has cleverly balanced the love interest with the melodramatic incident. The original story appeared in the pages of the Saturday Evening Post and is so rich in screen action that it makes an unusually entertaining picture. Prominent in Mr. Reid's support are Margaret Loomis, J. M. Dumont and Carmen Phillips. James Cruze has given the picture a first-rate production.

PROGRAM READER

Wallace Reid, the popular Paramount star, has again scored decisively as a screen artist, by his clever dual impersonation in his new picture, "Always Audaucios," which will be the feature attraction at the ———— next ————. In this picture the star portrays two entirely different types of men, one the hero and the other a scheming and villainous crook, and he puts them both over to perfection. The picture is an adaptation by Tom Geraghty of Ben Ames Williams' story, "Toujours de L'Audace," which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Geraghty has provided a scenario compact with moving incident and a delightful romance adds much to the interest of the story. James Cruze directed the feature.

CATCH LINES

One was a crook, the other a respected member of society. And they both looked exactly alike. What happened? See Wallace Reid in "Always Audacious."

He was shanghaied and a crook stepped in and assumed his identity. See the interesting picture, "Always Audacious," with Wallace Reid.

"CONRAD IN QUEST OF HIS YOUTH"

Delightful Story Is Enriched on the Screen

IT is a feather in William De Mille's cap that he has been able to enrich Leonard Merrick's delightful story, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," and visualize it to such an extent that the characters actually seem to live and the sentiment and humor colored with reality. The book is a charming, sentimental journey of a man approaching forty who would search for the happiness of his youth. William De Mille has kept it a narrative, emphasizing its salient points, and the result is that the Merrick readers will find in the screen edition a humanization of Conrad and the other characters.

It will never enter the mind of the spectator that the picture is episodic because the scenes build so evenly. There is no rush of action, nor climatic development. This picture gives the lie to those who maintain that the screen must needs be a medium of rugged conflict and vivid characterization. One becomes thoroughly engrossed in the man who would renew his youth because it brings back memories to those who would turn back the pages of yesterday. Merrick is artist enough to keep his tale from being unduly sentimental and De Mille has proven himself an artist by constructing his picture with the utmost sympathy for the charm of the author's style. It is a straightforward little story well adapted by Olga Printzlau, who has kept in mind that Conrad's youthful amours must provide the interest. Of course the development of these romances could not be incorporated for feature length.

The sponsors have presented them at their full blossoming period with just enough emphasis placed upon the pangs of disillusionment and pathos to touch the spectator. Conrad is disillusioned to discover that Time will not turn backward in its flight. His cousins lack his poetic nature; the first love, Mary Page, is a distinct shock with her constant cackling. But does Conrad brood over it all? His great sense of humor saves him according to Merrick and De Mille has painted him correctly. A delightful touch is the attempt to renew his first great passion. Conrad goes to Italy in search of her and finds her still good-looking but very absent-minded. Then, when he would keep an appointment identical with one of his youth he falls asleep which is another shock to his memories. Not until he actually falls in love with a charming widow of the present does he realize that he has found his youth. The picture is William De Mille's best without a doubt. His piloting of the players, his well arranged episodes set in scenes of charming atmosphere—these touches spell a picture which resembles a rare tapestry. Thomas Meighan and his company give well modulated performances and have seemingly stepped from the pages of the book.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A screen version of Leonard Merrick's delightful book, "Conrad In Quest of His Youth," will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with Thomas Meighan appearing in the title role. Picturegoers who remember the story as a sentimental journey in search of youth will be pleased to note that its theme and characterization are retained in the screen version. The star gives a compelling performance as Conrad who attempts to live over the pleasant memories of his boyhood and discovers that they belong hopelessly to the past—that there is no turning back.

So his youthful amours are found to be just memories—memories which might better have been left in the background of the past since renewing them brings disillusionment. Then into his life comes a young widow who belongs to the present. With the realization that his love is reciprocated Conrad discovers that his search of youth is rewarded. The picture is tender with pathos and heart interest and it carries a splendid vein of humor which Director De Mille has effectively emphasized. The atmosphere of the feature is rich in its suggestion. The interpretation is excellent.

PROGRAM READER

You people, who are past your youth, have you ever given a thought to the days of long ago, when the whole world was colored with romance and you were carefree? You youngsters, do you ever long to belong to the future so that you might look back upon your past? A day will come when you will wish you were children again or back in the first days of romance. Thomas Meighan tries with all his heart to renew his youth and doesn't succeed because there is no turning back of Time. It's a beautiful story this "Conrad In Quest of His Youth" which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. Patrons longing for youth will find the secret of it in the picture. The offering is an adaptation of Leonard Merrick's charming story of the same name.

SUGGESTIONS

Thomas Meighan is rapidly building up a following so it would be well to concentrate upon his name. But don't neglect the story. Perhaps many of your patrons have read the original story by Leonard Merrick which is an account of a sentimental man of forty who attempts to renew his youth and discovers it when he falls in love. Play up the pathos and heart interest. Tell that it is an excellent screen version of the book by Leonard Merrick. Play up the name of the director and the names of the supporting players. You can establish a good campaign by throwing out teasers written in the style of the Program Reader. Tell that it is a sentimental journey in search of youth—a picture which should appeal to both young and old alike.

"THE PLUNGER"
(Fox)

Story of Frenzied Finance Makes Ordinary Picture

THIS picture of frenzied finance and society started off like a whirlwind and for two reels furnished the spectator with a good line of action and incident which was entirely consistent. In fact it represented interesting melodrama, since the plot revolved around the conflict in Wall Street. But after a murder, the picture deteriorated in value and developed into a series of society high jinks with emphasis placed upon the romantic element. In fact it almost reached comedy proportions. The idea behind it is quite orthodox. There is the honest broker and his unscrupulous underling who through some motive not explained stages a murder so that his employer is blackmailed into believing himself guilty.

Logic jumps right out of the picture here because the honest broker is represented as a dunce. His word should be as good as that of the real murderer before a coroner's jury. Still he allows himself to be ruined financially by the accusations of the other. This bullet seemed to strike the victim in the back, still the affair is hushed up and marked as "suicide." From this point it is a fight between the unscrupulous villain and a self-made young broker for the love stakes. The latter has bought the ruined financier's manor and a minor conflict is developed between the proud daughter and the hero. She is determined to remain in the house because of the sentiment attached to it. And she feels that the plunger is attempting to humiliate her at every turn. It is not a consistent drawing.

So the two play their little game, while father sits upstairs and broods of his erstwhile success. The plunger had advised them to remain as long as they see fit, but daughter shows bad bringing up through her constant display of temper. The villain lurks about making his demands upon his former employer. Being rich by this time his blackmail takes the form of asking for the daughter's hand. So she consents, thinking him the lesser of two evils. George Walsh, who appears as the hero, has occasion to indulge in his athletic stuff and comes to the rescue just as she is in the villain's coils. It is rather a tame fight placed in comparison with other encounters which have featured the star. In all the picture doesn't present much entertainment because of the overdrawn characterization and loop-holes in the plot. A good deal of the action insults the intelligence. It should draw with Walsh's followers.—Length, 5 reels. —Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

George Walsh, the athletic Fox star, will make his appearance at the ———— theatre next ———— in "The Plunger," a vivid and romantic story of Wall Street by Thomas F. Fallon. The picture was made under the direction of Dell Henderson, who has provided a most capable supporting cast and has given it a production entirely in keeping with the story. In "The Plunger" "Take a Chance" Schuyler, a picturesque young broker on the "Street," buys the home of a fellow broker whose ruin has been brought about by an unscrupulous employee—the latter an unsuccessful suitor for the hand of the broker's daughter, Alice Houghton.

The girl resents young Schuyler's purchase of the home of her girlhood and regards him as an intruder. She finally consents to marry the villain, thinking him the lesser of two evils. Every kindness shown by "Chance" Schuyler is regarded by the girl as an effort to humiliate her. There is a mysterious murder, an attempt at kidnapping, and other unpleasant features to be disposed of in the story which is charged with lively incident, romantic conflict and sentiment. George Walsh gives his customary breezy performance as Schuyler and his support which includes Virginia Valli is entirely praiseworthy. The picture is appropriately staged.

PROGRAM READER

"The Plunger" is the interesting title of the George Walsh picture which will be the feature attraction at the ———— next ————. All advance information offers flattering evidence of an unusually entertaining production from the standpoint of both story and scenic effects. It is a story of big business in Wall Street and shows every interesting phase of hectic activity in the nation's financial district. The love element is very strong in the production and it is well balanced with the dramatic scenes. The settings are wellnigh perfect and the acting of Mr. Walsh and his company is on a par with the finished production. The story is by Thomas F. Fallon, the author of "While New York Sleeps."

SUGGESTIONS

George Walsh is a star who has a steady following. You might bring out that he makes his appearance after several weeks' absence from your theatre. Tell that the picture is an interesting account of big business in Wall Street and that it offers the feverish drama which is daily enacted in this financial artery of the country. Bring out also that the picture is well fortified in love interest. Mention that Walsh is a breezy star who plays with the utmost enthusiasm. Mention should be made of his leading woman, Virginia Valli, who has often been called the woman with the perfect profile. Play up the author's name. He is responsible for "While New York Sleeps." Your folks should remember this picture if you showed it. Tell that "The Plunger" is an interesting drama of Wall Street and is packed with good incident and romantic moments.

"WANDA'S AFFAIR"
(Chadwick-State Rights)

Badly Botched Picture Carries Little Interest

THE names of the author and director are not presented in "Wanda's Affair," a state right picture featuring Ruby De Remer, which is not to be wondered at considering the antiquated story and the very bad direction. There is a fair amount of interest attached to a tale of a self-sacrificing guardian who stoops to folly to save his adopted relative from shame, but it is developed in such an amateurish manner as to lose its appeal. The guardian is represented as an inventor of a valuable device to overcome submarine warfare. Which necessitates the introduction of the inevitable spy (Japanese this time) who must scheme and scheme and scheme for three reels before his plan is frustrated.

The picture doesn't get anywhere because of the terrible cutting which shows scene after scene without any continuity being visible. The director has indulged in close-ups which come with such monotonous regularity as to destrop any plot element. And these same close-ups discredit the players because they bring out their exaggerated acting. One has to guess at the denouement and the steady picturegoer cannot go wrong when he suspects the frustration of the spy's plan and the ultimate clinch between the romancers. The matured guardian steps aside for the sake of the young fellow and steps into the embrace when the latter turns to a girl who has snubbed him through four reels. And she accepts him without a protest.

This is but a sample of how things are glossed over here. The plot would be over in less time, but for the inevitable introduction of the cabaret scene and another which shows the grand reception and ball. The players simply walk around in circles waiting upon the director to shout his orders. A crude touch is offered when the girls walk into the guardian's home and appear in his bedroom out of curiosity. It is a daring scene which shows him staging a compromise in order to recover some damaging letters. It is so crudely executed and titled as to bring laughter. The picture needs a thorough re-editing. New titles and judicious pruning of irrelevant scenes would make it look better. The players are very "actory" throughout and suffer from harsh lighting. The director has cluttered up the backgrounds with enough furniture and effects to fill a small hotel.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Bruce Donaldson	Guy Coombs
Ethel Walling	Ruby De Remer
Hazel Nelson	Helen Arnold
Mark Hornbach	John Reinhard
Anthony	James Morrison
Countess Yura	Yuky Yanikura
Wanda Strong	Christine Mayo

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The chief attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week is "Wanda's Affair," a story of intrigue and romance and self-sacrifice. The action revolves around a prosperous inventor whose "blue prints" are desired by Japanese spies. Bruce Donaldson, the inventor in question, has perfected a device to destroy submarines and it is the object of the Japs to weave a net of intrigue around an American naval officer so that the prints may come into their possession. Bruce is the guardian of Anthony, a young man recently returned from college, who is carrying on a liaison with Wanda, a woman of shady reputation. When he comes home he immediately falls in love with Ethel Walling, thus arousing the jealousy of Wanda.

His guardian is also in love with Ethel, but gladly steps aside so that youth may be drawn to youth. In a spirit of self-sacrifice he saves the young man from disgrace, although it brings humiliation to him. But the youth shows his manliness by releasing himself thus permitting the guardian to find love's expression. As for the blue prints the inventor rescues them in the nick of time. The picture offers a line of interesting action which is punctuated with close-ups of the charming Ruby De Remer, who gives a splendid performance. Others in the cast are Guy Coombs, Christine Mayo, and James Morrison.

PROGRAM READER

He was a man who had considerable worry on his mind. Having just perfected a device to destroy submarines, it behooved him to protect his plans. He also discovered that his adopted heir was somewhat of a weakling. The youth was in love with a beautiful girl but a certain indiscretion cropped up which necessitated the guardian acting in a spirit of self-sacrifice. What did he do? Were his plans stolen? Did he find love himself? What became of the boy? These questions are answered in "Wanda's Affair," the feature picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast headed by Ruby De Remer, whose blonde loveliness stamps her as one of the real beauties of the screen. The offering is marked for its story of intrigue, adventure and romance.

SUGGESTIONS

About the best bet to play here is to concentrate upon the names of the players. If you have ever shown any pictures which featured Ruby De Remer, your crowd should remember her, since her beauty is compelling. So play her name up big and run stills of her if they are obtainable. Tell that she has won several beauty prizes and that she formerly appeared in the Ziegfeld Follies. Mention the other players. James Morrison, Guy Coombs and Christine Mayo are all well known to your steady patrons. Tell that the picture offers a fascinating hour of mystery, intrigue, romance and self-sacrifice.

CATCH LINES

He sacrificed his love for the girl out of respect for the youth although his heart was breaking. Then the supreme moment of happiness came. See "Wanda's Affair."

She was in love with two men—one, a mere youth, the other, a man of middle age. Did the three of them find happiness? See "Wanda's Affair."

Notes From Correspondents

Theda Bara appeared at the theatre in person in "The Blue Flame." The film was held over for the first half of the following week and was still going strong when a legitimate attraction crowded it out.

NEW ORLEANS

Nearly a hundred movie fans stampeded for exits in Pearce's Newcomb theatre on Canal street recently when the projection room caught fire. Quick action of an automatic sprinkler kept the blaze from spreading. The operator, N. Breaux, escaped uninjured. Damage was estimated by Manager E. Fassman at about $500. The comedy film, "Sultan of Djazz," was destroyed. The house reopened next day.

Motion pictures of the Jefferson Parish fair of last year were shown three evenings on an open-air screen on Canal street in New Orleans as a publicity stunt to attract visitors to this year's fair. The picture has been shown at a number of the smaller houses in New Orleans.

NORTHERN NEW YORK

Howard Brink has been appointed manager of the local Robertson-Cole exchange in place of P. H. Smith, who recently resigned. Mr. Brink has been manager at the Dooley office. Mr. Brink is one veterans of the film business in Buffalo, having started with Moe Mark and R. Wagner at the old Penny Arcade in lower Main street a dozen years ago. He was manager of the Hippodrome in lower Main street, the Comique next to Hengerer's store and the Fillmore on Fillmore avenue. He has been associated as salesman with Famous Players, Universal, Independent Sales company and W. L. Sherry. He assumed the duties of his new office Monday, November 8.

Shea's North Park theatre will open Sunday, November 21, with Wallace Reid in "What's Your Hurry," and Buster Keaton in "One Week." Art Ames, formerly of the Circle, will be manager. The house, which is in the heart of the growing North Park section, has a seating capacity of 1,400 on one floor. Harold B. Franklin will be managing director.

The Ward Film Distributing company, J. Ward manager, has opened a temporary office at 13 Milnor street. The company has purchased the state rights on "The Great White Trail," starring Doris Kenyon. Mr. Ward, who is known to the boys as "Mose," has been with Pathe, Select, Mutual, Republic and Famous Pictures Sales.

Harry E. Lotz, manager of the Buffalo Realart exchange, is drawing near the 100 mark in this territory. Almost that number of exhibitors have now signed up for the franchise. Among recent signees are the Majestic, Cohoes; Rex, Saint Johnsville; Varsity, Syracuse; Hippodrome, National and Elite, Niagara Falls and Regent, Lyons. Mr. Lotz has been in Pittsburg for several days. The Palace theatre, Howard P. Smith, manager, has signed up for the Realart franchise in Buffalo.

F. M. Messiter and N. R. Hurley, have come to Buffalo from the Famous Players-Lasky sales school in New York to join the local exchange sales staff. They will succeed J. Walter Bengough and D. W. Fish, both of whom have resigned. F. C. Cresswell, head of the school, was in Buffalo, November 5-7. Allan S. Moritz, manager, reports the Crescent, Syracuse, signing up for 100 per cent Paramount. The Eckel and Strand in the same city have booked a large number of productions.

E. O. Weinberg, acompanied by Mrs. Weinberg, attended the opening of the new Mark-Strand in Albany, Monday evening, November 8. Mr. Weinberg is manager of the local Strand. Mr. and Mrs. Weinberg also visited New York city.

M. A. Chase of Universal and Henry W. Kahn of Metro are members of a committee arranging for the shipment of films through western New York by parcel post. The local express companies have been giving such poor service that the exchanges have been forced to make other arrangements for getting their products to exhibitors on time.

C. A. Taylor, general manager of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., was the guest of honor at a birthday party put on in the Lafayette hotel by T. R. Gardiner, president, Thursday evening, November 4. "Buck" was presented with a pair of diamond cuff links by T. R. The members of the Gardiner staff were in attendance. "Buck" is said to be between 30 and 50 years ago. Howard Brink claims he is younger than "Buck" which, if true, makes C. A. about 85.

Herman Lawrence has succeeded Arthur Ames as manager of the Circle, one of the General Theatres Corporation houses. Lawrence has been working in the office of the company. Ames goes to Shea's new North Park.

T. R. Gardiner, president of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., has been in Philadelphia for a conference with one of the big producers in connection with the taking over of the world rights on a big production now in the making and for the closing of the final details of which Mr. Gardiner will leave for Los Angeles December 1, where he will remain two months. Business is brisk on "The County Fair," which this company is distributing in New York, north of Westchester county.

P. Shaver has left the Pathe office where he was a salesman. He has been succeeded by Fenton Lawlor, who will cover the Rochester district. Mr. Lawlor has been representing Pathe in the Southern tier.

George A. Hickey, manager of the Goldwyn exchange, was in Syracuse over the week-end, November 5 to 7, when he screened "Earthbound," for ministers and city officials in the Savoy theatre. Mr. Hickey plans to screen the production in all the key cities of the territory and it is probable that the subject will have an extended presentation in Buffalo at one of the legitimate houses.

Bruce Fowler, manager of the Elmwood theatre, in presenting "Humoresque," for a three day run, offered Anna Jossefer, violiniste, in a masterful rendition of Dvorak's "Humoresque," and a prominent local Cantor who sang, "Eli, Eli" during the overture period. The production broke all records at the Elmwood.

Bob Murphy, Pioneer Pilot, was in Rochester the week of November 1 screening "The Son of Tarzan." He closed first-run on this subject with the Strand theatre and second at the Empire, Rose Garden, Lincoln, Empress and Murray. Byron Interbitzen has returned from a trip through northern New York where he reports business in excellent shape. J. L. Cook, who is in the Rochester territory for Pioneer, is signing up "Son of Tarzan," contracts right and left.

N. I. Filkins, manager of the Merit exchange in the Palace theatre building, reports that his company will release this month Maude Fealy in "Love's Triumph" and Mignon Anderson in "When a Woman Sins." "The Hawk's Trail," a new Merit serial, is going big.

Harold B. Franklin, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome, celebrated Armistice Week with a special patriotic program that evoked great enthusiasm at each performance.

"THE VICE OF FOOLS"
(Vitagraph)

A Well Produced Society Picture Weakening in the End

THIS Alice Joyce feature starts off at a fine clip. At the half way mark it is going strong, but at the finish the interests slowly dies down. In the first place there is not the climax that there should be. The ending is always obvious. This of course, is not unusual, but one expects a more novel solution of the difficulties that confront the main characters. It is simply a story of a man who marries the wrong girl, goes through to the end of the picture before discovering his mistake and then obtains a divorce to marry the right girl. An audience cannot be held breathless by the business of the star "saving the honor" of the man she loves, by preventing his wife to elope with another.

There is a mighty capable cast in "The Vice of Fools." Alice Joyce wears many beautiful gowns, impresses with her whimsical personality, and leaves the suggestion of a woman's hidden love in a capable manner. Robert Gordon is again her leading man, very well cast as an irresponsible, exuberant young man who sees only the flashy beauty of a debutante and is blind to the truer devotion of the affectionate star. Ellen Cassity, William Tooker, and Raymond Bloomer are also in the cast.

There is good direction behind the feature and the high society atmosphere carries a distinct audience appeal. There is not merely one ballroom scene, but a continued suggestion of richness and social niceties. In fact the sub-titles are overburdened with clever repartees in the beginning.

The story revolves around the hidden love of a wealthy girl for her father's partner. The two have been brought up together since childhood. Cameron (Robert Gordon) is infatuated with a debutante and she, in a fit of jealousy, announces their engagement. After the marriage she wearies of him and is about to run off with another man when Marion (Alice Joyce) intervenes—being even willing to risk her own honor for the sake of the man she loves. She carries her self-sacrifice so far that it becomes a bit trying on an audience.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alice Joyce, the popular Vitagraph star, appears in an excellent society picture at the ———— theatre on ————. "The Vice of Fools" is the title of this interesting photoplay. It revolves about Marion Rogers, played by Miss Joyce, and Cameron West, a part enacted by Robert Gordon, who has won for himself a host of followers by his work in support of the star. These two have been brought up together since childhood, and the sisterly affection of Marion has gradually changed to a womanly love. Cameron, however, becomes infatuated with society and society's debutantes. Marion sees him being won from her by the unscrupulous methods of the society butterflies whose only occupation in life is playing the love game. So it is a case of an honest woman fighting against competitors who stop at no means to accomplish their ends.

Robert Gordon, who is fast becoming one of the screen's most popular leading men, will be starred in pictures himself. Another well known player in the cast is William Tooker. "The Vice of Fools" will be shown at the ———— theatre for ———— days. For a picture devotee who likes to see a good society picture, no feature will suit him better.

PROGRAM READER

Alice Joyce in a new society picture will sound like pretty good news to all followers of the screen and the screen's stars. "The Vice of Fools," this star's latest Vitagraph production, will be the attraction at the — ———— theatre on ————. It is a charming, clean, entertaining drama liberally interspersed with comedy, which offers the star every opportunity to impress with her delightful personality. Four parties figure in the romance, and all four are in love—but no two with each other. Surely an interesting problem. Things straighten out in the end. They always do in the movies, of course, but its how they straighten out that makes "The Vice of Fools" so interesting. Playing opposite the star is Robert Gordon and others in the cast are William Tooker, Ellen Cassity and Raymond Bloomer. "The Vice of Fools" will be shown for ———— days.

SUGGESTIONS

It would be well to tell the nature of this picture in your advertising. That is, state that is a dramatic, four-cornered love story, of wealthy New York. Then go on boosting the star, recalling "The Prey," "The Sporting Duchess," and "Dollars and the Woman." There is an attractive special one sheet in the form of a photograph of the star which we think will be more attractive than a scene from the picture. Mention also Robert Gordon, for we think that this young man has gained attention by his work opposite Alice Joyce. William Tooker may be recalled if you have shown him in "The Stealers." You can run a teaser campaign based on the title, or dress a doorman in a fool's costume with cap and bells.

CATCH LINES

A story of a four-cornered love affair, with no two of the four in love with each other. A charming story of New York society.

Alice Joyce is more appealing than ever in her latest drama of wealthy New York. The most attractive romance that the ———— theatre has shown in many a day.

Dead Men Tell No Tales

"THE U. P. TRAIL"
(Benj. B. Hampton-Hodkinson)

First Class Melodramatic Western With Fine Cast

VERY reminiscent of the old Triangle—Kay Bee's is this melodrama of the early days of the Union Pacific with its prairie schooners, Indians, border town saloons, actors carrying shooting irons to be used with or without provocation and actresses in the dress of the period playing the dance hall girls, etc.

It is rather an episodic picture that has been made from Mr. Grey's novel, with a familiar story, but for those who are partial to western drama it ought to prove interesting and thrilling. No Kay-Bee was ever turned out which boasted of better detail, more careful selection of types, better handling of big scenes, more consistent bits of incident or better acting.

The cast is also quite "Kay-Beeish," for we have Robert McKim as the bad-bad man, Kathlyn Williams as a good-bad woman, Joe Dowling as a professional gambler and a score of lesser lights who have made western picture history, all in real parts. The somewhat obvious plot is counter balanced by unusually good development of incident and there is plenty of action in every sequence. True it is that most everybody gets shot up considerable before the end of the last reel and the heroine, Marguerite De La Motte, very pretty and appealing, has a terrible time before she is finally permitted to "live happy ever after" with Roy Stewart, but all these things are expected in a picture of this class.

The best acting role goes to Kathlyn Williams as "Beauty," the dance hall favorite. Mr. McKim has a traditional part, while Walter Perry, Charles B. Murphy and Mr. Dowling give excellent characterizations. Mr. Stewart's part doesn't give him much to do.

The scenic locations are excellent, photography above the average and the direction competent. Without doubt this is the best production to be made from one of Mr. Grey's books. It ought to go over in any house where western's are not taboo, if there are any such.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Beauty Stanton ..... Kathlyn Williams
Jose Durade ..... Robert McKim
Allie Lee ..... Marguerite De La Motte
Warren Neale ..... Roy Stewart
Place Hough ..... Jos. J. Dowling
Fresno ..... Frederick Starr
Larry "Red" King ..... Charles B. Murphy
Ruby Cortez ..... Virginia Caldwell
Casey ..... Walter Perry
Slingerland ..... George Berrell

Continuity by William H. Clifford.
Directed by Jack Conway.
Photography by Harry Vallejo.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A love story of surpassing sweetness built on the old tried and true triangle combination between two women and a man, is the foundation of Benjamin B. Hampton's great photoplay, "The U. P. Trail," released through W. W. Hodkinson, which began a week's run at the ———— theatre yesterday.

The man in the case is young "Warren Neale," handsome and gallant, dashing and accomplished, played in a thoroughly fitting manner by Roy Stewart.

Kathlyn Williams is seen in the most powerful role of her screen career as a brilliant, beautiful heartbreaker, proprietress of a huge palace of joy, whose heart and soul fall victim to Cupid at last.

Beautiful little Marguerite De La Motte gives another of her charming ingenue characterizations in the role of the innocent heroine, "Allie Lee."

"The U. P. Trail," taken from the famous novel of the same name by Zane Grey, is one of the sweetest love stories ever told. The pure, innocent love of the little girl for the young engineer, the vivid soul passion of the woman of the world for him, and his own great and tender love for the girl with another sort of love that is half of friendship, half of attraction for "Beauty," gives a sentimental interest to "The U. P. Trail," that has proven universally pleasing.

PROGRAM READER

A mighty sweeping romance of love, high adventure, and human emotion comes to the ———— theatre ———— in "The U. P. Trail," Benjamin B. Hampton's powerful production of Zane Grey's famous novel.

An extraordinarily large cast of well-known artists interpret the roles, including Robert McKim, Kathlyn Williams, Marguerite De La Motte, Joseph J. Dowling. It is a stirring story about the West in the days when the Union Pacific R. R. was pushing its steel rails toward the Pacific that Mr. Grey has written and a faithful and vivid translation of the work has been made for the screen. Indians, prairie schooners, the border town saloons and all the other traditional things that go with the history of the frontier days are reproduced. The story is one carrying universal appeal while the acting of the superior cast has never been excelled. This is the sort of melodrama that will never become passe and lovers of pictures that have action and incident must certainly see it. The direction is by Jack Conway, who knows his historical West and is able to reproduce it.

SUGGESTIONS

The methods used to put over other of Zane Grey's pictures will be found equally effective with this offering. Western lobby displays, the use of a lot of stills, the headlining of the big cast of favorite actors and also the author of the novel is advised. A prologue number that ties up with the songs of the period among which are "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "Sweet Alice Ben Bolt," will add to your presentation.

CATCH LINES

The greatest picture ever made from a Zane Grey book.

A vivid screen story of the days when the U. P. was an engineering dream, enacted by an all star cast, among which is Kathlyn Williams, Robert McKim, and famous "Old Joe Dowling," hero of "The Miracle Man" and a hundred other great pictures. A romance of the days when men and women, coming from God knows where, fought and died, lived and loved, laughed and cursed, in the golden West, told by a master hand, Zane Grey.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete listof all feature pictures for the last twenty weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompassed in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to July 17, 1920.

CROOKED STREETS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....AUG. 7
"Melodrama is long on atmosphere, short on plot and suspense."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good for a return date." "Played this picture one week to average business six days and big business one day." "Rather good melodrama; pretty good business." "A great picture. Exciting from start to finish. Had the house spellbound on opening night and did tremendous business all the following performances. Seldom is a picture so universally liked." "Packed 'em on this. Ethel Clayton most popular woman star on Paramount program in this territory. The picture was great, and they liked it from the very start. Fine business throughout."

CUMBERLAND ROMANCE, A (REALART PICTURES) MARY MILES MINTER.....AUG. 21
"M. M. Minter's best—a real picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture which pleased and did good business for one week." "Played it two days to average business." "Did well with this, though Mary Miles Minter's popularity has dropped a bit because of her persistently saccharine roles. This is as good as her best and pleased."

CUPID—THE COWPUNCHER (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....AUG. 7
"Great entertainment with star in ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good Will Rogers picture which drew more than average audiences for seven days with exceptionally good Saturday and Sunday business."

CURTAIN (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....OCT. 16
"Lifelike story suffers from mechanical development."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to exceptional business. Katherine McDonald appears to be growing more popular." "Katherine MacDonald gave entire satisfaction. Picture well produced. Splendid supporting cast. Business very good." "It's by far the best acting Katherine MacDonald has ever done. People liked it well enough to fill two houses for a week simultaneously. Good entertainment."

CYNTHIA-OF-THE-MINUTE (GIBRALTA-HODKINSON) LEAH BAIRD.....JULY 24
"Novel crook story suffers from development."—M. P. News.

DARK LANTERN (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....AUG. 14
"Draggy picture develops to an evident conclusion."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just an average production. Played it four days to average business." "A good picture to big business for one week." 'Patrons did not like this one. Just an average feature to average business for three days." "Very poor production but brought fair business." "Fair picture. The star is the drawing card." "Very poor picture, box-office receipts are terrible." "Alice Brady's performance semed rather disappointing. Picture ordinary. Poor business one day."

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST....NOV. 13
"Vivid, 'punchy' story; production excellent."—M. P. News.

DEMOCRACY (DEMOCRACY PHOTOPLAY COMPANY) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Cost a lot of money but is doubtful as entertainment."—M. P. News.

"Picture is heavy and morbid, though well acted."—M. P. News.

EYES OF THE HEART (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER ..... NOV. 13
"Mary Miles Minter scores in story of pathos and sentiment."—M. P. News.

FACE AT YOUR WINDOW, THE (WILLIAM FOX) SPECIAL CAST ..... NOV. 13
"Propaganda picture developed along orthodox lines."—M. P. News.

FATAL HOUR, THE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST ..... NOV. 13
"Crude melodrama makes mediocre picture."—M. P. News.

FELIX O'DAY (HAMPTON-HODKINSON) H. B. WARNER ..... SEPT. 18
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.

FIGHTING CHANCE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST ..... JULY 31
"Robert W. Chambers' best-seller provides fair entertainment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture which pleased my patrons. Played it two days to big and average business." "Played this picture one week to big business; a good production." "Opened strong. Good picture of popular brand." "Very good film. The public agrees, for business has been very good." "This picture was very well liked and had a successful run."

FICKLE WOMEN (DAVID BUTLER PRODUCTION-STATE RIGHTS) DAVID BUTLER ..... AUG. 21
"David Butler has real state rights attraction."—M. P. News.

FIREBRAND TREVISON (FOX) BUCK JONES ..... JULY 31
"Buck Jones practically duplicates his last picture."—M. P. News.

45 MINUTES FROM BROADWAY (KANE-FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY ..... SEPT. 11
"Picture is entertaining, though Ray appears to be miscast."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Charles Ray well liked by our audiences and feature played to better than average business." "Very fine picture. Played to capacity for four days and was close to breaking house records." "The entertaining qualities of this picture make it well worth seeing and my house was well filled at each performance. Fact that it played on the stage drew many people." "Charles Ray always entertaining and patrons welcomed him in a role far removed from his seemed to like. Box-office receipts larger than usual." "Great as an enlently produced."

FIXED BY GEORGE (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN ..... NOV. 6
"Lyons and Moran produce successful farce."—M. P. News.

FOOD FOR SCANDAL (REALART) WANDA HAWLEY ..... NOV. 13
"Very obvious, but fairly interesting."—M. P. News.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY (BLACKTON-PATHE) MAY MCAVOY-BRUCE GORDON ..... OCT. 16
"An exciting story concerning a Kentucky feud."—M. P. News.

FOURTEENTH MAN, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ROBERT WARWICK ..... SEPT. 11
"Some entertaining moments in Warwick's comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture, splendid theme and well done. Went very big all week." "Exceptionally good for Warwick picture; well directed, well produced." "Robert Warwick is a star who does not draw big here. Featured Bebe Daniels with him in advertising and it helped some. Personally think Warwick is fine, but can't sell him to my audiences. Picture did only fair business."

FROM NOW ON (FOX) GEORGE WALSH ..... OCT. 2
"Entertaining crook story, with George Walsh, well directed."—M. P. News.

FULL HOUSE, A (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ..... SEPT. 18
"Stage farce loses its punch on the screen."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very entertaining story which went over big." "Below average business, as all Washburns are in these parts. A very amusing farce comedy and with most any other star would do much better business. No faults with photography, direction or cast. 'Skinner's Dress Suit' is the only Washburn that we have been able to do big business with." "Played it two days to average business. A good picture."

GAUNTLET, THE (VITAGRAPH) HARRY T. MOREY ..... AUG. 21
"Poor treatment puts this one in the mediocre class."—M. P. News.

GILDED DREAM, THE (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MYERS ..... OCT. 23
"Commonplace story developed along traditional lines."—M. P. News.

GIRL IN THE WEB, THE (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET ..... JULY 31
"A splendid production from all angles."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"A good story. It drew well. Two days to average business."

GO AND GET IT (NEILAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... JULY 31
"Fast-moving melodrama furnishes thrills and excitement."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Splendid, snappy picture and a first-class box office attraction. Packed house and lobby every night it was shown." "Strong melodrama. Its sensationalism draws big crowds." "A real thriller which was boosted by all the critics and which drew the crowds." "Splendid picture full of action Played to big audiences." "A picture with life and interest. It is a true representation of real life and takes well with the audiences. A feature that will be an asset to any theatre."

GOING SOME (REX BEACH-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... JULY 31
"Very good entertainment but not much like the original."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played it five days to big business." "Just an average feature to average business three days." "Played it one week to good business." "Picture fairly good; business so-so." "Good action in this picture made it draw well and we had more than usual business."

GOOD-BAD WIFE, THE (VERA McCORD PRODS.-FILM BOOKING OFFICE) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 30
"Good production given rather illogical story."—M. P. News.

GOOD REFERENCES (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE ..... OCT. 16
"Stars popularity may get it by."—M. P. News.

GREAT REDEEMER, THE (TOURNEUR-METRO) SPECIAL CAST SEPT. 4
"Van Loan contributes another winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture but not the kind the public will pay money to see. It's too religious. Screen is for entertainment, not for preachment. Fair business, but not enough to justify longer than one week run." "The picture was well received for the entire week. The patrons say there is "just enough" religion in the picture." "Religious picture. Fair business."

GREEN FLAME, THE (BRUNTON-HODKINSON) J. WARREN KERRIGAN ..... JULY 24
"Kerrigan has interesting detective story here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"J. Warren Kerrigan well liked here, and the picture played to good business."

GUILTY OF LOVE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOROTHY DALTON ..... OCT. 9
"Star gives splendid portrayal of mis-led girl."—M. P. News.

HAIRPINS (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ENID BENNETT ... AUG. 14
"Sullivan has taken a familiar idea and made it throb with lifelike touches."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasing production to average business for one day." "Seemed to please. Week's audiences were about the average. Picture was fair." "Fine picture that is being thoroughly appreciated. It opened to nice business which grew daily, indicating that the public likes this type of entertainment." "Good picture. Business about usual." "Good picture but business about as usual."

HALF A CHANCE (JESSE D. HAMPTON-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST) . OCT. 30
"Well acted and directed, but development suffers."—M. P. News.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER (MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) ANITA STEWART ..... OCT. 30
"Favorite formula given rich production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Regarded this as just a fair picture and drew average houses." "The entertaining value of this picture is good, and drew more than usual business."

HEADIN' HOME (YANKEE-KESSEL & BAUMAN-STATE RIGHTS) BABE RUTH ..... OCT. 2
"Babe Ruth makes debut and scores a hit."—M. P. News.

HEART OF A FOOL, THE (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 23
"Very good entertainment in this complicated story."—M. P. News.

HEART OF TWENTY, THE (BRENTWOOD-ROBERTSON-COLE) ZASU PITTS ..... AUG. 28
"Zasu Pitts gives good performance."—M. P. News.

HELD BY THE ENEMY (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 9
"Civil war romance looks good as a picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture. Fair business."

HELD IN TRUST (LOEW-METRO SPECIAL) MAY ALLISON ..... AUG. 21
"Incongruity and sadness mars entertainment value.—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The best picture May Allison has ever appeared in, is the opinion of a manager and of his patrons." "Action well sustained throughout. Fine picture. Doing well." "May Allison getting more popular here. Picture pleased all classes." "Picture has plenty of action and a very remarkable dog in it. Business average." "We found this to be a good picture as regards box office receipts and an entertaining production."

HELP WANTED—MALE (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET ..... OCT. 2
"Too light and vapid for a five-reeler."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture to average business for one week." "This is an average production which brought usual business." "A good picture to poor business one day."

HER HONOR THE MAYOR (FOX) EILEEN PERCY ..... SEPT. 4
"Impossible story overacted and hardly entertaining."—M. P. News.

HERITAGE (W. L. ROUBERT PRODUCTION-STATE RIGHTS) MATTY ROUBERT ..... AUG. 28
"Worth a trial on strength of title."—M. P. News.

HIDDEN CODE, THE (SULMAC-PIONEER) GRACE DAVISON ... JULY 31
"Frankly a thriller and nothing more."—M. P. News.

HITCHIN' POSTS (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO ..... SEPT. 4
"Colorful story and splendid cooperation make praiseworthy picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A picture that would appeal to any audience. The people in this city like the Mayo productions."

HOMESPUN FOLKS (INCE-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"Rural drama is interesting despite a theatrical touch."—M. P. News.

HONEST HUTCH (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS ..... SEPT. 25
"Rogers scores again in human, likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderfully entertaining picture which the audience seemed to like. Box-office receipts larger than usual." "Great as an entertaining feature and brought a well filled house at each performance."

HONEYMOON RANCH (BERT LUBIN-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 23
"Old time western full of real cowboys and has action galore."—M. P. News.

HONOR BOUND (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO..... NOV. 13
"Frank Mayo has good material in this one."

HOPE, THE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST..... SEPT. 4
"Antiquated plot is given impressive production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—The plot of the picture is good. Good receipts."

HOUSE OF THE TOLLING BELL (J. STUART BLACKTON-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"A weird story with plenty of action and excitement."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Corking ghost story that pleased them all. Played to excellent business throughout week to universally satisfied audiences."

HOUSE OF WHISPERS, THE (BRUNTON-HODKINSON) J. WARREN KERRIGAN ..... OCT. 2
"Kerrigan has another interesting mystery story."—M. P. News.

HUSBAND HUNTER, THE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY..... SEPT. 25
"Farcial development of Fitzgerald's comedy drama."—M. P. News.

IN FOLLY'S TRAIL (UNIVERSAL) CARMEL MEYERS..... AUG. 28
"Carmel Meyers attractive in mild, interesting story."—M. P. News.

IN THE HEART OF A FOOL (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 23
"Very good entertainment in this complicated story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good audience picture. Its many leading love themes are apt to be confusing but it opened very big." "Good productions, which brought the crowds."

IT'S A GREAT LIFE (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"Best ever if you went to boarding school."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine production which played to good business." "Fine production. Played to good business." "Clever picture which appealed strongly to our patrons. Turned thousand people away Sunday night and did big business for the entire week." "Only liked by those who etnjoy Mary Roberts Rinehart's humor. Business far below normal."

JACK-KNIFE MAN, THE (VIDOR-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... AUG. 14
"Human interest story rich in characterization, humor and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture. Exhibitors say so. Critics say so, but the public is slow to appreciate it. So unusual, so different from what is generally seen on the screen. A picture that is ahead of the times. Did only fair both downtown and in neighborhood section."

JAILBIRD, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN..... OCT. 9
"Rather obvious, but fairly diverting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played last week and drew about average crowds. Consensus of opinion was that picture was fair." "Not so good as the McLean-May predecessors. Falls down on story, but acting of this popular pair keeps the interest going until the finish. Did fair business." "They all came—but they were disappointed. In point of business, it did very well. But I don't like to disappoint my people. They expected something as fine and peppy as 'What's Your Husband Doing?' and "Mary's Anklee." MacLean does good work in a typical Charles Ray part—but it was not his sort of role, at all. May very good, also."

KENTUCKY COLONEL, THE (NATIONAL-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 25
"Old time favorite makes mass covered picture."—M. P. News.

KISMET (ROBERTSON-COLE) OTIS SKINNER..... NOV. 6
"Otis Skinner gives superb performance in lavish production."—M. P. News.

LADY ROSE'S DAUGHTER (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ELSIE FERGUSON ..... SEPT. 11
"Mediocre picture made from best seller."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Story criticized by newspapers. Audiences appeared to like it. Large attendance." "Elsie Ferguson draws certain class, but class is limited. Each of her pictures does just about the same." "Fair business. Story not much, but star carried it over." "Star attracted many, as she has not been out for some time. Picture not one of her best. Fair amount of business." "A good picture to extra big and big business for two days." "A very entertaining picture and brought big crowds to my house."

LAHOMA (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST..... SEPT. 4
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.

LA LA LUCILLE (UNIVERSAL) LYONS AND MORAN..... JULY 24
"Lyons and Moran produce a good comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best comedies we have ever had."
Exhibitor Comment—"This is excellent in spots—but there were only a few spots. Played it on the same program with the Pathe release 'Sherry' to big business for two days."

LAW OF THE YUKON, THE (REALART) SPECIAL CAST..... OCT. 2
"This picture proves a disappointment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which drew the usual business."

LEOPARD WOMAN, THE (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS)..... OCT. 16
"Melodramatic romance adapted from adventure story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Terrible picture. Awful business. Was not liked at all." "An excellent picture and a good box office attraction." "Louise Glaum is one of the favorites here. Her acting pleased the audience and the details of the picture were well carried out. Drew big houses entire week." "Star fairly well liked, and picture did fair business. Was somewhat disappointed in the production, for while lavish the story did not carry." "Good production. Business was about usual."

LIFE'S TWIST (ROBERTSON-COLE) BESSIE BARRISCALE..... JULY 31
"Has entertaining values which should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good. Played it three days to big business."

LIGHT WOMAN, THE (AMERICAN) HELEN JEROME EDDY ..... OCT. 9
"Not above the average."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Helen Jerome Eddy is fair in this picture. Business as usual."

LI TING LANG (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA ..... JULY 24
"Hayakawa at his best as Americanized Chinaman."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair picture to extra big business for one day."

LITTLE GREY MOUSE, THE (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY..... NOV. 13
"Netw star's first picture mildly interesting."—M. P. News.

LITTLE MISS REBELLION (NEW ART-PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH ..... OCT. 2
"Dorothy Gish scores in story filled with hokum."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture affords real entertainment for most any audience and brings hearty laughs from everybody, even from those who claim the situations weren't funny. The photography and cast are very good, direction acceptable. Average business." "Star at her best. Picture only fair. Business no better."

LITTLE WANDERER, THE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON..... AUG. 28
"Heavier-than-usual story does not suit Shirley Mason."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which played my house three days to big business."

LOVE FLOWER, THE (GRIFFITH-UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 4
"Not Griffith's best, but has audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Beautiful picture. Up to Griffith's high standard and appealed very strongly to audiences. Played two weeks to capacity houses and on account of big business was held over for third week." "Usual Griffith type. Business picked up every day." "A pleasing picture which brought more than normal business." "Eight-day engagement. Very good business. Griffith name still very valuable."

LOVE, HONOR AND OBEY (METRO) SPECIAL CAST..... SEPT. 11
"Too-familiar story causes interest to lag."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture. Better houses last two days than when picture opened."

LOVE MADNESS (J. PARKER READ-HODKINSON) LOUISE GLAUM ..... AUG. 21
"Excellent crook story; finely acted and produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew good-sized audiences for seven day run. More sex stuff which appeals to some, but is 'passed by' by most patrons." "A pretty good picture but a poor box-office attraction." 'Name of photoplay drew rather large audiences. Star at her best in her emotional role. Business not bad." "The essence of mellow melodrama. No good as an attraction for those who look for plausibility in a photoplay. Glaum displays her usual intenseness. Not a great picture, but one that will make money wherever patrons like thrills. Played to fair business." "Louise Glaum well liked here and picture presented her in ideal role. Did very good business with it throughout week."

LOVE'S FLAME (FIDELITY PICTURES CO.) THOS. J. CARRIGAN-VIVIENNE OSBORNE ..... OCT. 16
"Story has distinctive appeal."—M. P. News.

MAD LOVE (VICTOR KREMER PRODUCTION) LINA CAVALIERI ..... NOV. 6
"Average production stars Cavalieri."—M. P. News.

MADAME PEACOCK (NAZIMOVA-METRO) NAZIMOVA..... OCT. 16
"Picture looks artificial through poor direction and acting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew big houses each day. This city has large number of Nazimova 'fans' and these liked the film. The women were exceptionally pleased with it." "Nazimova popular here. House did a normal business only. Lack of punch in previous Nazimova picturets has affected the box office." "The crowds came to see this picture because they are enthusiastic about the star, Nazimova. Drew well for entire week. "Worst Nazimova picture ever produced and shows plainly lack of direction and lack of judgment in picking story. Another picture like this and Nazimova is finished."

MADAM X (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK..... OCT. 9
"Tremendous drama faultlessly acted and skillfully produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is a fair picture. its only value being the fact that it was made before." "Medium business." "Pauline Frederick's greatest picture and one of the best productions ever offered by Goldwin. Broke house records for box office receipts Sunday and did big business during entire week. Held over for second week's run." "Wonderful production. Pauline Frederick is at her best. This picture went over extra big, making the biggest week in months." "Great picture. Audiences seemed to like this one very much. Big business during run." "The best work Pauline Frederick has ever done. Picture built for acting more than action." "Opened tdo very poor business: competition to circus and Fair as well. But has built steadily up etver since. Business, total, very good. A fine picture—a classic."

MAN AND HIS WOMAN (BLACKTON-PATHE) HERBERT RAWLINSON ..... JULY 24
"Resembles an old-time melodrama with all the favorite hokum intact."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"While this seems to be a big picture, its drawing power was very poor."

MAN WHO DARED, THE (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL..... AUG. 14
"Probably Russell's best work to date."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture is fair and brought the usual audiences."

MARRIAGE PIT, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO..... OCT. 16
"Interesting story of big business and feminine pride."—M. P .News.

MASTER MIND, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) LIONEL BARRYMORE ..... OCT. 9
"Melodrama of interesting quality."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An artistic picture which played to only average houses." "Barrymore is a great favorite. The picture pleased." "Large audiences. Very good attraction." "Powerful and very high grade picture which did better than average business."

MID-CHANNEL (CARSON-EQUITY) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG..SEPT 25
"Drama lost amidst family squabbles and omnipresent dream ending."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big picture which drew more than usual business." "A good picture which drew well." "Filled two houses during a simultaneous first run. Young has a steady following, who are enthusiastic supporters. This picture is different from those which have preceded. Star not so much in evidence as in 'Eyes of Youth.' Good support helps to make the picture interesting." "Picture is O. K. but we had poor business."

"Katherine MacDonald in drama of divorce scandal."—M. P. News.

OCCASIONALLY YOURS (GASNIER-ROBERTSON-COLE) LEW CODY.....OCT. 2
"Male vampire in a mere succession of society scenes."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Entertaining picture. Business about as usual."

PASSION (FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 23
"German picture is spectacular; wonderfully acted."—M. P. News.

PASSION'S PLAYGROUND (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....OCT. 16
"An artificial story holds it back."—M. P. News.

PEACEFUL VALLEY (KANE-FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY..OCT. 23
"Humorous incident, rustic settings and Charles Ray—enough."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Registered a big hit. A real Ray triumph. Audiences applaud etnthusiastically." "Very good week. Ray always sure of big business. This considered much better than "45 Minutes from Broadway."

PEDDLER OF LIES, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO (MAR. 1).....JAN. 31
"Good production of mechanical and unreal plot."—M. P. News.

PERFECT WOMAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE.....AUG. 7
"Constance Talmadge has had better ones than this naive and single-track story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture. Played to average business for two days. Pleased the admirers of Constance Talmadge." "Fine picture. Drew average crowds." "This is a good picture and well liked. Drew more than average crowds." "Good business. Usual Talmadge type. Rather clever." "Picture went very big. Drew well every day and was well done in the opinion of many patrons of the theatre." "Held up good for week run. Audiences liked it. Constance always a surefire attraction at this house." "Consider this the star's best. She is popular here and I played to capacity throughout week. A decided improvement on her late pictures." "It is hard to understand the story and the cold beauty of the star does not help it much. Fair business." "Great picture. Star well liked. Played two days to big business."

PREY, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....OCT. 9
"Alice Joyce has highly involved story here."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"Patrons did not like this one. Two days to average and poor business." "One of the best Alice Joyce subjects this year. Did unusually well at the box office."

PINK TIGHTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....SEPT. 25
"Slight story, but entertaining incident, in circus picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibit Comment—"Great picture. Turned them away at night."

PRICE OF REDEMPTION, THE (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....OCT. 2
"Lytell has hectic melodrama and acting opportunity here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big houses first two days. Rest of week fair." "Fine picture which brought good box-office receipts." "A splendid picture. Thrilling. Fine acting. By far the best work Bert Lytell has done." "Had a big opening and average crowds during the rest of week. Fair as a picture." "Good both as to entertaining value and box office retsults."

RED LANE, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....JULY 17
"A pleasing picture which should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture to big business for one day."

RIGHT TO LOVE, THE (FITZMAURICE PRODUCTION-PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY-DAVID POWELL.....SEPT. 4
"Worthy successor to "On With the Dance."—M. P. News
"Played it two days to big and average business." "Very fine picture. Did big business. Playing second week." "Did not do as well in its first week as 'On With the Dance.' Will probably only run two weeks." "Second week's business complete flop. Attractions failed to please." "Ordinary story, but drew good houses. Picture well produced."

ROSE OF NOME (FOX) GLADYS BROCKWELL.....AUG. 7
"Alaskan picture holds the interest, but is not big."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing picture. Box office returns fair."

ROUND UP, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Colorful western with Fatty Arbuckle as feature star."—M. N. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very disappointing and tame. Just like hundreds of other Westerns. Those who liked Westerns didn't mind it very much—but they certainly didn't like it. Box-office receipts good, because they wanted to see Fatty in a five-reeler." Fairly good picture, but business not exceptionally good, due largely to the fact that the star has yet to make his reputation as the principal in a feature picture, His fame rests only upon his work in comedy." "This is an average picture but seemed to please the audience."

SECRET GIFT, THE (UNIVERSAL) KOHLMAR-CHRISTIANS....SEPT. 18
"A pretty story with appealing value."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Unusual picture, which brought more than usual business."

SERVANT IN THE HOUSE, THE (FILM BOOKING OFFICE, INC.) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"Picture offers rich entertainment in every department."—M. P. News.

SILENT BARRIER, THE (TRACY-GIBRALTAR-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 7
"Obvious story has a good climax and scenic backgrounds."—M. P. News.

SINS OF ROSANNE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....OCT. 23
"Very little appeal in this wildly fantastic story."—M. P. News.

SISTER TO SALOME, A (FOX) GLADYS BROCKWELL.....JULY 31
"Dream ending does not save it from being hopelessly tragic."—M. P. News.

SKYWAYMAN, THE (FOX) LIEUT. LOCKLEAR.....SEPT. 11
"Slight story is excuse for average 'plane stunts."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Box office returns big on opening days. Too early to get entertainment angle." "Business fell down after the opening and on State Fair is believed to have affected business."
Saturday Tom Mix in "The Untamed" replaced it. Killing of aviator at

SLAVE OF VANITY, A (ROBERTSON-COLE) PAULINE FREDERICK.....OCT. 30

SO LONG LETTY (CHRISTIE-ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 30
"Famous stage success intelligently adapted to screen."—M. P. News.

SOMEONE IN THE HOUSE (METRO) SPECIAL CAST.....NOV. 13
"Interesting crook story, wetll directed and acted."—M. P. News.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT (DE MILLE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 30
"Impressive moments in this artistic production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Didn't do quite so well here the second week as it did the first. It started off big on Monday, but during the remainder of the week drew about average audiences." "Did not do as well opening week as other Paramount specials. Titlet keeps public away, says box office."
"Excellent production in every way." "Begins its second week with no sign of abating on the part of the great crowds. The crowds rush with anticipation to see it and come away satisfied." "Did not break any records here, but it brought out the S. R. O. sign at each night performance. The picture appealed largely to the women. It was considered a success and booked for a second week." Certainly a great picture and booked for a second week." "Certainly a great picture and it took well here. Crowds jammed the theatre at each performance." "Very intereting picture, which seemed to please my audience." "A great picture and drew like a house afire."

SONG OF THE SOUL, THE (MESSMORE KENDALL-GOLDWYN) VIVIAN MARTIN.....OCT. 23
"Fine basic plot but lacks action and incident."—M. P. News.

SOUL OF YOUTH, THE (REALART) LEWIS SARGENT.....AUG. 28
"Lewis Sargent duplicates success of 'Huckleberry Finn'"—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine production. Business better than usual during run." "Plot of picture good. Good houses entire week." "Given a bit of exploitation, this will go over big. Gave special free showing for school children and 'mopped up' on regular showing. Broke all house attendance records for Saturday show."

SPIRIT OF GOOD, THE (FOX) MADLAINE TRAVERSE.....JULY 24
"Wishy-washy, trite story, with star miscast."—M. P. News.

SPLENDID HAZARD, A (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) HENRY B. WALTHALL .....OCT. 2
"Good production and acting save this one."—M. P. News.

SQUARE SHOOTER, THE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....AUG 14
"A familiar story in average western."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair Western picture; not much shoot-em-'up-up stuff. Average business one day."

STEALERS, THE (ROBERTSON-COLE) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 2
"Exceptional from both directional and technical angles."—M. P. News.

STOP THIEF (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....AUG. 28
"Faithful and intelligent adaptation of famous stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Nothing extra either in business or quality of picture." "This is an entertaining feature and seemed to please the audiences. Business was good during run." "Pleased the majority of my patrons. Average business four days; big business three." "Moore was good in this picture. Business about as usual." "My house plays particularly to the young people and they all like Tom Moore. So business was good and they liked the picture."

SWEET LAVENDER (REALART) MARY MILES MINTER.....OCT. 16
"Ideal vehicle for star, though it lacks substance."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor's Comment—"Drew well all week. Audiences like the plot."

SUDS (UNITED ARTISTS) MARY PICKFORD.....JULY 10
"Unique characterization and artistic lightings lift slender and commonplace story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pickford's latest appears to be a rather poor production. Played it one week to poor business." "Pretty good but not a knockout by any means." "Did not go well at all. They did not like it." "Played it one week." "Poor picture. Played to average ences." "Excellent picture. Holding it for second week."

SUNDOWN SLIM (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....OCT. 2
"Carey in unattractive role in complex story."—M. P. News.

SUNSET SPRAGUE (FOX) BUCK JONES.....OCT. 9
"Having enough thrills, it makes a good western."—M. P. News.

39 EAST (REALART) CONSTANCE BINNEY.....SEPT. 25
"Entertaining picture made from stage success."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture. Brought good business." "Great picture. A sure fire money getter. Drew large crowds with large box-office results." "Not very well liked. No box-office value." "By far the best thing this star has done. She always draws well for me but never so well as in this. Would like as many more like it as I can get." "Great stuff." "An average picture, which fair business." "Fine! Acting splendid. Subtitles are a scream. People who had seen the play said the picture was better. Picture brings out the comedy to better advantage. Good cast all the way through."

TIGER'S CUB (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....OCT. 16
"Pearl White makes thoroughly interesting Alaskan picture."—M. P. News.

TRUANT HUSBAND, THE (ROCKETT FILM CORP.) SPECIAL CAST .....OCT. 23
"Simple and human is this contribution."—M. P. News.

TRUMPET ISLAND (VITAGRAPH) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 16
"Spectacular melodrama is rich in action and thrills."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture, pleasing and entertaining. Drew more than usual business." "Very fine picture. Spectacular and exciting. Did exceptional business first week of showing with indications for a big second week. Broke house records second Sunday."

"Theme has pulling power, but it drags towards the end."—M. P. News.

UNTAMED, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....SEPT. 4
"First class western melodrama with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well during week, but picture replaced Saturday by Pearl White in 'The White Moll.'" "Best Mix picture to date. Orchestra accompaniment helped a lot in making it entertaining. Good box office attraction." "The picture did not bring the usual numbers to the theatre. It is regarded by many as too commonplace." "This is a good feature and we had fine business while it was showing."

VILLAGE SLEUTH, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) CHARLES RAY .....SEPT. 25
"Ray scores again as country yokel."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best pictures Ray has played in. This is a regular picture and is playing to big business right along." "Played it one week to big business one day and average six." "Audiences thought Charles Ray just made for this 'Rube's' part. Business only fair." "Went over big first day but average the rest of the week. Ray always in pleasing pictures." "One of Ray's best productions and its box-office value was quite up to the usual Ray standard, which is saying a good deal."

VOICES (VICTOR KREMER-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST....OCT. 16
"Crude production of familiar story."—M. P. News.

WANTED AT HEADQUARTERS (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....OCT. 16
"Clever night scenes provide the interest here."—M. P. News.

WEEK-END, THE (AMERICAN-PATHE) MARGARITA FISHER...AUG. 21
"Typical Hamilton story well produced."—M. P. News.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) BRYANT WASHBURN .....AUG. 21
"Good Hookum and farce comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid picture. Played it two days to average business." An enjoyable farce comedy that seemed to please. Big business one day." "Rather good comedy. Can't kick about the business." "Average picture with usual audiences." "My patrons enjoyed this picture. Played it one week to average business."

WHAT WOMEN LOVE (SOL LESSER-FIRST NATIONAL) ANNETTE KELLERMAN .....AUG. 21
"Kellerman in thrilling water feats—good comedy—unusual under-sea stuff."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Annette Kellerman great favorite here. Picture drew well." "A very entertaining and interesting picture which brought more than usual business." "Interesting picture which brought good business." "From a box-office angle this is a very poor picture. Did not draw at all. Just barely enough to keep on through the week."

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....AUG. 28
"Wally Reid and motor truck shine in this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good production to extra big and big business for two days." "The best picture Reid has turned out this year. Just packed them in. Looks like some fine advertising was slipped over in this one for a certain brand of truck. Local dealers capitalized on it by putting one of the trucks on the street with mammoth signs on it informing the public that we would show them what the brutes could do." "Up to the usual Wallace Reid standard and drew big crowds."

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 7
"New York's night life graphically depicted in three separate stories."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Better than average business." "Broke house records in ten days' run. Great entertainment." "Broke all the house records at advanced prices—30, 50, 75c."

WHITE CIRCLE, THE (TOURNEUR PRODUCTION-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"A Stevenson novel, vividly portrayed by Tourneur."—M. P. News.

WHISPER MARKET, THE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH..SEPT. 4
"Despite bad cutting, this picture is thoroughly interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Liked by the women—plenty of styles in this production."

WHISPERING DEVILS (GARSON-EQUITY) CONWAY TEARLE-ROSEMARY THEBY.....SEPT. 4
"A strong, well-acted drama for a high class audience."—M. P. News.

WHITE MOLL, THE (FOX) PEARL WHITE.....JULY 24
"Pearl White makes debut in her first Fox feature."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pearl White makes hit on her entry into feature field and picture did excellent business." "Not as good business as usual. Many people appeared to think it a serial."

WHITE RIDER, THE (FOUNDATION FILM CORP.) JOE MOORE-EILEEN SEDGWICK.....AUG. 28
"A good western with many thrills and exciting moments."—M. P. News.

WOMAN IN HIS HOUSE, THE (MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) MILDRED HARRIS CHAPLIN.....AUG. 28
"Good audience picture with great child role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture, well acted, which did big business partly aided by the presence of Mildred Harris Chaplin."

WOMAN'S BUSINESS, A (B. A. ROLFE-JANS) OLIVE TELL.....AUG. 7
"Only average interest here, despite attractive theme."—M. P. News.

WOMAN'S MAN (ARROW FILM CORP.) ROMAINE FIELDING..JULY 31
"An exciting story full of incident."—M. P. News.

WORLD AND HIS WIFE, THE (COSMOPOLITAN-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST.....JULY 31
"Rich production and good acting save this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good production to big and average business for one week." "They liked this one and it went over big." "Played this feature two days to big and average business. It went well and is a good feature." "One of the most beautiful productions I have played in a long time. Did fair business and all seemed delighted with the picture."

YOU NEVER CAN TELL (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....OCT. 16
"A real success from every angle."—M. P. News.

Marcus Loew ran it in all his theatres in the late summer and it broke several big records that were thought to be unbreakable.

Mr. Loew also selected it to open his new theatre in Toronto, and again selected it to open another new Loew house in Ottawa.

It's the picture that every exhibitor who has run it will swear by, and say "It won the race at my theatre."

FOR a moment—only for a moment—they had forgotten the world of reality, they had let fall the obligations of life, and they had become as nymph and faun in an old-world forest.

And now the world had crashed about them, breaking four hearts, ruining four lives!

What could save them from tragedy?

Their story is one of the biggest and profoundest human dramas ever filmed.

October 27, 1920

Dear Mr. Hart:-

As your attorneys, we are pleased to advise you that in both the actions which we recently instituted in your behalf against the Peerless Film Service and against L. F. O'Donnell, to restrain the exhibition of your old pictures under false and misleading titles, the Superior Court of this County has this day granted a permanent injunction in accordance with the prayer of your complaint.

The decrees specifically prohibit the exhibition of your old pictures under any of the following false titles:

Dakota Dan, Double Crossed, The Last Card, A Square Deal, Horns and Hoofs, The Bad Man, The Gentleman from Blue Gulch, The Silent Stranger, The Marked Deck, The Haters, Taming the Fourflushers, Mr. Nobody, The Convert, Over the Great Divide, A Reformed Outlaw, The Two Gun Man in the Bargain, The Bandit and the Preacher, The Hell Hound of Alaska, Staking His Life, The Lion of the Hills.

Nor can these pictures be exhibited under any titles, except the ones under which they were originally released, for the decree contains this additional provision:

"And it is further ordered, adjudged and decreed that the said defendants and each of them, their agents, servants and employees, cease and desist from leasing, distributing, advertising or exhibiting, or causing to be leased, distributed, advertised or exhibited, any of the old motion picture films made or acted in by the plaintiff, William S. Hart, under any titles other than the original and true titles.''

We feel confident that the issuance of these injunctions will put an end to this nefarious practice, but if any distributor or exhibitor no matter who he may be, or where located, should commit or attempt to commit a similarly unlawful act, we shall proceed immediately, in accordance with your instructions to file suit, and shall demand both an injunction and damages.

Yours very truly,

Wetherhorn, Hoyt & Jones

An American Drama Eternal
by James Fenimore Cooper
Directed by Maurice Tourneur and Clarence L. Brown

Maurice Tourneur, famous for his comprehension of artistic detail, has conceived nothing in all his career to approach the picturesque magnificence of the majestically big scenes in "The Last of the Mohicans."

Here is a motion picture that needs no far-fetched exploitation to make it profitable to the exhibitor. The title, the author and the magic of the name Tourneur spell dollars at the box office.

Gentlemen:-

"The Forbidden Thing" has lived up to its remarkable Sunday opening, when, in the face of the rainy weather, it did within $15.25 of the year's record. An unusual opening does not always guarantee an unusual week, but "The Forbidden Thing" has done such a steady business that we are holding it over for a second week. While exhibitors can get specials of such quality, they need not fear control of their programs by any interests at any time.

Very truly yours,

PINNACLE SETS A NEW MARK!

Hart and White Give the Public Some Real Stuff

Ad Cut No. 143

One of the snappy ad cuts in the new Skyfire Press Book. Cuts such as this will be found throughout this Exhibitors' Guide.

The more of these cuts you use, the more money you'll make with Skyfire.

"NATION'S DREAM" TO TELL WORLD WHY IT'S SO WILD

Leo White, Pinnacle star, has hit upon an idea that is bound to win over the widely-known public, and the equally prominent exchangemen and exhibitors.

It is an old idea, as far as that's concerned, but it's turned around, and bound to get results.

Variety is the spice of life, and Leo figures that it's more than that, viz.:

Leo White will deliver, in his series of a dozen (to start) Pinnacle Comedies: First, an extremely high-class, refined comedy; then a jazz product that will satisfy the most fastidiously jazzy critics, and then another high-voltage, ultra refined product. And so on, varying on each release.

In plain words, Leo White is going to give EVERBODY what they want, and Leo White can do it, because he has that peculiar and particular ability to "give the public what they want."

The third comedy is absolutely different from anything that has ever been offered the public. It is a "psychological comedy." It is built around the general public state of mind RIGHT NOW.

"The Nation's Dream" is personified in Leo White. In the character of a man who has been driven to distraction by high rents, high cost of living, high cost of clothes, high cost of everything, Leo fades into a beautiful island of happiness and contentment, where everything is free, even love.

The subsequent happenings in this sphere of "everything" offer some unprecedented laughs and a real, up-to-date rip-roaring comedy.

The author of "The Nation's Dream" is Kenneth L. Eagon. Harry Hagenow, late of Sennett's staff, will direct.

"The Nation's Dream" will be released to the exchange men and exhibitors alike January 1st, 1921.

"DANGER VALLEY" IS SOMETHING NEW IN CAMERA THRILLS

While preparations are being made for the third Neal Hart super outdoor picture, "Danger Valley," Neal Hart himself, after outlining all details with his corps of assistants to arrange complete camping outfits for his big desert story, is taking advantage of the time required to get such a complete outfit together, and has left for the north on a location trip, to investigate conditions for his fourth production, which will be made in the northern country, in the land of snow, ice and hidden adventure.

Neal Hart, unlike any other outdoor star, instead of taking a much-needed rest, went north to arrange for dog teams, locations and many other things pertaining to the success of his fourth big spectacle production—scenes and things that have never before been photographed.

In the meantime, Mr. Hart's assistants, a thoroughly capable staff of trained men, will arrange everything for the big desert picture, upon which they are about ready to start shooting. They will cut off the locations from civilization and have an empty camp ready for the famous desert water hole.

Mr. Hart had a hard time selecting the cast for the desert story, as there were very few actors who cared to face the many dangers, trials and tribulations that they will have to undergo in this mammoth picture, shooting many of the hazardous scenes outlined in the big desert story.

Neal Hart said that in "Danger Valley" he had a psychological picture that would give the public the once-in-a-lifetime-thrill, a picture different from anything ever conceived of. Neal says it will be better than "Skyfire," which, thus far, is the find of the season in thrills and oddities in camera and acting.

NEAL HART RECOVERS FROM SLIGHT INJURY

Neal Hart is recovering from a painful injury to his right ankle, received as the last shot on "Skyfire" was being taken. Heal knew that a leap from a cliff through a tree he was forced to make was hazardous. So he put off the leap until the last thing in "Skyfire." It was a good thing he did, for he caught in the tree and dislocated some tendons in his leg, forcing him to use a cane for more than a week. Had he taken this shot earlier in the picture, there would have been a tedious delay.

ALL WAY FROM CUBA COMES HART BOOM

The increasing popularity of Neal Hart, outdoor star phenomenon, has spread to Cuba. Neal Hart now receives an average of a dozen letters a day from fans in the vicinity of Havana, all clamoring for autographed photographs and other bits of information about himself.

Last week, one of the letters from Cuba was from the "La Cinema," one of the leading Cuban publications, asking Mr. Hart for a huge photograph of himself and a story of his life and subsequent stories of himself.

FRANK MAYO

in

"HONOR BOUND"

Written and directed by Jacques Jaccard

M. P. NEWS Says:

"'HONOR BOUND' is one of the best productions Frank Mayo has ever produced for Universal. The story has romance, heart interest and dramatic moments. Attention to detail is another important factor in this feature. In the latter scenes Frank Mayo does some of the best acting of his career. The star is supported by a strong cast."

WID Says:

"Working with a capable cast and original story, Jacques Jaccard has turned out a production that is excellent in atmosphere and holds attention in fine style. You can promise your patrons a meritorious production. Frank Mayo should be played up, this being one of his best vehicles in quite some time."

WHY SOLVE EVERY PROBLEM ON YOUR OWN BLACKBOARD

In every field of endeavor there is always a certain number of men who have achieved success.

Because of this success their judgment is respected by associates and competitors.

They have blazed the trail.

They have weighed and analyzed.

They have met and solved the bigger problems of their individual industries.

Hence, when any new problem arises the men in their respective lines are inclined to accept as authoritative any solution these leaders may evolve.

The great fortunes of America have not been made by the pioneers.

They have been amassed by the men of vision who saw even beyond the end of the trail blazed by these pioneers.

The trail these men blazed became a boulevard under the development of the shrewd business men eagerly waiting to pull the latchstring at the faintest scratching of opportunity on their door.

The judgment of many has always been regarded as superior to the judgment of one.

A single dry cell may give out a vital spark, but many linked in battery formation can light up a city street or send a locomotive up the steepest mountain grade.

There would be no Congress, no State Legislature, no Parliament if the judgment of one man equalled that of massed brains.

Why grow old and weary trying to solve every problem on your own blackboard?

Deposit part of the other fellow's brains in your bank account.

Is Marriage a Success?

Husband Mistreats Her, Another Man Wants to Marry Her, and She Is Puzzled on Account of the Children.

HER HUSBAND IS KIND AND LOVING, BUT HAS AFFAIRS WITH MANY OTHER WOMEN

What Should She Do?

To the Marriage Editor:

I wish you could tell me the right kind of advice to help me do what is right.

When quite young, my parents died leaving four small children and three married ones. My parents not being able to support us were all separated, my sister taking care of me. I was old enough to [illegible] myself. My sister was very good to me, but her husband was a very unkind, exceptionally narrow-minded. I could not go to parties or dances as my other friends did, as he told me no decent girl staid out until 10 p. m., even escorted.

This went on until I was seventeen years old when I met a young man six years my senior, in my place of business. After going out with him three months we were married. I often met his sister's brother before our marriage. I found them to be pleasant and refined people, telling fortunes to amuse my husband. I was then a [illegible].

When I told my parents they saw that I was married to put me out and told me that I could not have married at the age of eighteen and hoped that my husband would give me more beatings than kisses, which really did come true.

I am the mother of two beautiful children and feel quite disheartened as my husband abuses me shamefully, calling me names in front of my children. Two years ago my husband took a notion to go out to work to support him and my children. [illegible] young man who had recently married his wife. One day while talking to her she told him how discouraged and disheartened she was and he sympathized with her. He has since proposed marriage, saying that I should get a divorce (as I have grounds for one). He said that he would gladly marry me and take care of the children.

Now, I am kind reader, [illegible] some advice what I should do, as I know I am not satisfied with my husband, it would only break my kiddies' hearts if they are very young of their daddy and one of them.

I have tried to be a good and loyal wife, but have been [illegible]. Every time my husband goes outside the door comes home and ill-treats me as though I were at fault, and a half hour later he comes to me and apologizes, telling me that he did not mean it.

After Heartbreak She Met the "Real" Man.

To the Marriage Editor:

I certainly [illegible] agree with Friend [illegible] who wrote the letter advising Friend Charlie to study well the disposition of the girl he is about to marry. I may study a disposition for a long time before marriage—and then not know it. I was engaged to be married to a man whom I knew for twelve years. I was fifteen years old when I met him and I thought I knew him well. He was to me all that and more wonderful than ever. And every day I thank God that He kept me for the only man in the world for me.

I wonder how many young women have in after years confessed that they did not follow their first inclination of the heart but waited for their real [illegible] companion."

I. U.

He Is a Hard Worker.

To the Marriage Editor:

The majority of your contributions are from readers who do not take the necessary steps to make themselves happy. I will tell you my secret of a happy home and married life.

I have been practically in every corner of this country, including the Rocky Mountain regions, to the Canadian Rockies down to the sun-baked deserts of Arizona, and found as much success and failure in marriage as in the East.

Both my wife and I have found happiness in true love, and the fact that one loves a helpmate.

It is the ambition that pays my salary and to support the average family of five comfortably, but all my life insists on going to work and that she does not want me to have all the burden of paying for our home. She begged her to stay home, telling her that it is my duty to furnish the necessary money, but she is set in her idea.

Besides the fact that she goes to work, she does all the housework, etc., and [illegible] to do the washing. The latter I do not want her to do.

Now, I will ask my readers and defy me to state that I am doing wrong when I wash dishes and clean house for this wonderful little wife of mine.

Hoping that this will be of some help to those who cannot find happiness and also those who are always finding fault with me never to leave him, as I have tried in every way to attract him with a little affection. But again and again will cross his path on the street a time he has left to complete this new conquest. He is attractive to women.

His kindness and love toward me in every other way tell me that he loves me, that these women [illegible] from him [illegible] my visiting [illegible] more desirable. [illegible] help me.

E. A. S.

Wants and Prefers, Glad Of

To the Marriage Editor:

A girl [illegible] powder and paint with discretion—and the result will be pretty and refined [illegible] clear complexion. Of course there are a number of girls that overdo it and [illegible] selves up to look like [illegible]

The average girl of [illegible] C. F. [illegible] powder and paint to her advantage, and not to offer a few dissipated [illegible] dust to [illegible] a little [illegible] weeks that would otherwise [illegible], but never haggard.

I am a girl of twenty, and am considered [illegible] beautiful [illegible] am employed as a bookkeeper, and a great lover of books. I am considered to be a very [illegible] and well dresser and [illegible] how [illegible] and [illegible], but always [illegible] I have a few [illegible] friends [illegible] I pal with and [illegible] dress accordingly. I have never [illegible] anyone even [illegible] the fact that I use paint, because it is [illegible] the way that paint is supposed to be used, and the result is a very charming one, not detracting and greatly to my advantage. You may term me hypocrite in trying to evade detection, but that is not true.

I have a number of men friends [illegible] have seen me with and without the "make up" as often [illegible], and the result has never been the loss of a single friend.

A girl should always try to look her best, and she is to be [illegible] if she succeeds. Flattery [illegible] she resorts to paint and powder at times.

The average man of to-day wants to be seen with a chic and pretty girl and wants to [illegible] occasionally [illegible] and outdoor exercise [illegible] the cares [illegible]

MY HEART AND MY HUSBAND

By ADELE GARRISON

WHY MR. GORDON SAID TO DICKY: "I CANNOT TELL YOU WHAT THIS MEANS TO ME."

"Do not be alarmed—I am all right—only a momentary faintness, I assure you."

I knew that Dicky was as much relieved as I at our guests' return to command. The latter was respectful as well as surprised at the irregular behavior of Mr. Gordon. I also gleaned that his darkened face [illegible] a slightly glint in his eyes.

"I hope you will forgive me," Mr. Gordon went on, and his rich voice so filled [illegible] and [illegible] that I felt my heart often toward him.

"I trust you have not gained the impression that my momentary faintness [illegible] anything to do with your name," he said. "My [illegible] was merely [illegible] subject [illegible] spells of faintness. I [illegible] did not harm you."

He looked [illegible] directly as if expecting [illegible] answer.

"[illegible] easily [illegible]." I responded, [illegible] hard to keep out of my voice anything save the indifferent courtesy which one would show upon a slight [illegible] for the atmosphere of my [illegible] seemed pleasantly [illegible] about the stranger and me. Yet I sat [illegible] tense, in anticipation [illegible] explanations to follow.

Mr. Gordon's voice [illegible] a peculiar little thrill [illegible] through it when I caught as he [illegible] again. "[illegible] not your mother's name Margaret Bickett [illegible] your father's name Spencer?" he asked.

"You are quite correct." I forced the words through lips stiffened by excitement.

I saw him look at me curiously, [illegible] evidently, but I had no eyes [illegible] for the mysterious stranger who was [illegible] me by my parents.

[illegible] Mr. Gordon's words was [illegible] the [illegible] was sitting next [illegible] said what no one else did—[illegible] slender, sensitive [illegible] pressed themselves deeply [illegible] into the palm at my [illegible] question. But for that momentary grip [illegible] no evidence of excitement [illegible] demeanor as he turned to me.

"[illegible] though so," he said quietly. "I have found the daughter of the dearest friends I ever had. Your resemblance to your mother is marvelous. I remember that you looked much [illegible] when you were a tiny girl."

"You were not at home in my childhood, then?" I asked, wondering if this might be the explanation of my unconscious notion that I had some time in my life seen this man bending over his demi-tasse as he had done a few minutes before.

"Oh, yes," he said, "your mother, as I have told you, was the dearest friend I ever had. And your father was my other self—then."

His emphasis upon the word "then" gave [illegible] quiver of pain, for [illegible] with which [illegible] had [illegible] my childhood to [illegible] they story of [illegible] I, myself, had no memories of my father. Four Big Points In Its Favor!

Some pictures have a great star, some a great story; Others the pulling power of a well-known director's name; while others depend for their appeal upon the strength of an All-Star cast.

Sometimes you find two of those points combined; it is the exceptional picture that can boast of three of them; the extraordinary picture offers all four.

"The Broken Gate" is an extraordinary picture.

Bessie Barriscale is a star of international repute; Emerson Hough is among the greatest of present-day novelists; Paul Scardon, the director, has been responsible for many successful productions including "Milestones" and "Partners Of The Night". And in the cast of the picture is included Joseph Kilgour, Sam De Grasse, Marguerite De La Motte, Lloyd Bacon and many others.

LARRY SEMON IN "THE SUITOR"

Larry was sure that Lothario and Romeo had the wrong idea. He didn't even think that Beatrice Bareflax could give him any advice. He decided to "say it with flowers." His answer came back and it left him more dashed than dashing. He had heard that "all the world loves a lover"—but he found her dad the exception.

He had heard that Lothario came out of the West. He decided to enter from the North and left suddenly by the window on the South. But, like a good faithful glue pot, he stuck to it.

This comedy is another half-hour of delicious and exhilarating foolery by Vitagraph's comedy king, with a number of hair-raising and melodramatic thrills spicing the background.

It made a tremendous hit during its full week's run at New York's Capitol Theatre, the largest playhouse in the world.

HERE'S A MODERN IDEA TO MAKE YOUR THEATRE MORE COMFORTABLE, ATTRACTIVE—AND PROFITABLE

The Chair Swings to let others pass you

PATENTED

The ARGUS MOV-EZY Swivel-seat CHAIR

NO INTERRUPTIONS
NO LAPSES IN PICTURES
NO ANNOYANCE
NO INJURED FEET OR FEELINGS
NO HATS OR WRAPS DROPPED
NO CROWDED AISLES
LESS TIME TO FILL AND EMPTY THE THEATRE

PLEASED PATRONS— BIGGER BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS

THE Argus MovEzy chair has been developed to accomplish a long felt need and its two main advantages are ease of operation and comfort. Simply revolving noiselessly a quarter turn or less to one side when anyone passes sums up the operation. The chair has an easy tendency to face straight forward and all chairs will line themselves when unoccupied. The comfort of the chair combines all good features and developments in chair manufacture. One of the chief comforts being that the Argus MovEzy chair is an individual chair with two arm rests of your own.

There is a feeling of ease, luxuriousness and roominess when seated in this chair. Lots of elbow and foot room!

This new invention removes the greatest cause for complaint. It means less time required to fill and empty the theater, no crowded aisles, greater comfort to everyone concerned, pleased patrons and bigger box office receipts.

Theatre Owners and Dealers can both profit by the big possibilities in this new idea

What Every Woman Wants to See!

A SMASHING story of a woman tempted with wealth—luxury—ease—with all the jewels and beautiful gowns dear to a woman's heart, as the price of her soul—a woman trembling on the brink of a decision between poverty with self respect and wealth with degradation.

A GORGEOUS fashion show, with scores of beautiful women in the latest Paris gowns and millinery creations—a display so enticing as to fascinate every woman with a love of the beautiful.

A PICTURE with thrills and action, romance, intrigue, love interest and dramatic force, produced with all the lavishness of a Mayer-made picture.

THE kind of a picture that has an especial attraction for women, while it carries the punch that appeals strongly to men.

The Reason

There are many artists in America,—and great ones, too,—but surprisingly few of them are great poster artists, for the poster artist requires much additional and highly specialized training. Of such men, practically all who have attained a national reputation are in the RITCHEY organization. Because of that fact the RITCHEY poster is bound to be the one superior motion picture poster produced! When it is further considered that the RITCHEY organization embraces a complete staff of experts whose efforts cover the entire field of poster advertising and production,—and that this entire and complex group work under a perfectly co-ordinating leadership, the reasons for the greatness of the RITCHEY poster become plainly manifest. To the exhibitor these facts are important solely because they are so closely identified with efficient ticket-selling. For the RITCHEY poster is, in its last analysis, merely a ticket-selling mechanism, and every effort put forth by the RITCHEY organization is definitely designed to achieve a box-office result.

Motion Picture News

VOL. XXII NOVEMBER 27, 1920 No. XXIII

Short Subjects and Short Prices

THERE is no question at all as to the public interest in short subjects. We refer particularly to those of news, scenic and scientific nature, etc.—the so-called educational reels.

A considerable portion of the public—more pronounced in the large cities, perhaps, but to some degree everywhere—even prefer this part of the program to the dramatic feature.

This particular portion of the public—it comprises those of more discriminating tastes—is one to be reckoned with from a commercial standpoint. The motion picture wants this class of patronage.

Furthermore, and in a larger way, we believe that the motion picture wants this very large development offered to this particular class of subject. The motion picture needs this additional power and scope of expression. Perhaps, it is a much larger field for development, a much truer field for the picture, than that of the drama.

SINCE the introduction of the dramatic feature we have geared everything—production, distribution, exhibition—up to this particular kind of motion picture. Concentration in distribution has brought about, naturally, concentration in production and in exhibition. And so public interest has been fostered.

Yet we know to-day that the public also wants short subjects—know it definitely; and we have never, in the past, catered to this demand as we should have.

The trouble has laid, primarily, with distribution.

Distribution, for several years, has put the dramatic feature to the forefront and looked upon the short subject as an incidental matter.

The history of this, from a commercial angle, is interesting.

This business started as a short subject business; originally all exchanges were short subject exchanges. Then came the five reel feature.

One concern from the outset devoted itself to the production and sale of features only—and succeeded. When the short subject exchanges took up features, however, and tried to sell them there was trouble. Some found it necessary to establish separate distribution to take care of features.

One of the first things the writer learned in this business, and this from a then prominent distributor, was that you could not sell features and short subjects successfully with the same hand.

And yet, when the exchanges became, largely, feature exchanges they immediately attempted to sell short subjects as the short subject exchanges had previously tried to sell feature pictures.

Whatever the results, the fact stands out that the short subject has never, since the introduction of the feature, had that concentration in selling effort which it deserves.

The sales psychology of the matter has been given us convincingly by a sales manager. "When," said he, "you sell a feature to an exhibitor and get every last dollar for it you can get—and generally have to get—your work is finished. You can't, then, dive down in your grip, bring out a short subject and get any due consideration for it. The buyer will expect it to be thrown in. But he'll go around the corner, to another shop, and pay real money for it."

We are putting the facts baldly because they should be clearly explained.

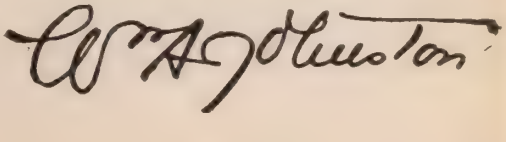
IF the public wants short subjects, the exhibitor wants them, and it will pay him to advertise them—even feature them—to the public; but the exhibitor won't get short subjects unless the production of them is encouraged. And production won't be encouraged—as it is today with respect to features—unless the distributor gets and the exhibitors pay a fair price.

We understand that some of the prominent producer-distributors have recently decided that the selling of their short subjects demands a new kind of concentration. And already we have a national exchange system devoted wholly to short subjects. A number of territorial exchanges have already specialized successfully in these pictures.

At any rate, we predict the commercial success from now on—and therefore, the rapid and broad development of this very important branch of production, the one which the motion picture may call exclusively its own.



Personalities

Off-Hand Introductions by Robert E. Welsh

Happy Golucky is still on the job—but more on probation than on the job. In that he is somewhat akin to many magnates of the moment. However——

LISTEN, boys, don't let that italic advance notice freeze my opening. Rats, I've been holding that Probation job all my life. You know how it is. When the guy says, "Well, you can take the job on probation. If you make good ——."

Shucks, I can hold enough Probations in fifty-two weeks to almost equal the "Kismet" line-up at the Strand this week.

At that, I'm not much worse than some of the guys who glue fast to the one Probation for three and four years.

When I "make good" I cancel one Probation and take on another.

JOE DANNENBERG started the trouble when he wised the "Personality" guy up to the fact that last week's page was rotten. That wasn't half as much "news" as most of the stuff Joe prints. And it didn't rock the industry of space-filling one sprocket-hole.

Then that "Personal Representative" stuff I carried last week almost finished the act.

Zowie, but the boys are sore. Seemed to think that I insinuated as how they don't never do no work. And all I said was that they ain't a darned bit busier than a one-armed operator showing a ninety-day print.

Which ain't no more work than trying to count the spilled trays in the Astor grill without a adding machine.

That ain't the only mis-out I had last week. Seems as how this here old friend of mine, Jimmie Grainger, ain't a Personal Representative at all. He's a Sales Manager or something or other.

And Paul Mooney, he's got a art title what reads "General Manager." Oh, boy, he must be sore on me.

And Bert Adler threatens to write me a letter.

Wotta woild!

IF I can ever get away from these here personal rumpuses I'm going to mention the fact that Ralph Proctor is back in the festive burg that provides an excuse for having home offices. Ralph swung around the circuit as fast as Harry Schwalbe getting to the meat of a contract.

That's faster than the bill which comes last Saturday for next week's film service.

Ralph's smiling countenance and basso profundo voice is welcome in our midst again, as I would say if I were an editor, which I ain't. But Ralph ain't all the news in the Stoll outfit this week. Some one tells me as how this here Big Boss King gets word by cable this week of the arrival of a prince in the household back on the tight little isle. So I must hasten, prithee, to extend a royal congratulation.

Right there with the full dress finesse—that's me, Happy Golucky.

Then I got to tell you something I forgot last week. About Harry Palmer—the brunette one—being annexed to the Stoll cast of characters. Harry's usual efficient capacity. Sorta right hand boy to the main works. The "slip it to you gently" guy.

You know how it goes:

"Listen to this guy's proposition, Palmer, but break the news to him that I think it's all bunk, besides he's a boob, and I'm a busy man, and anyhow the wind musta blown the door open to let him in—but break it to him gently."

HAVE you reserved your Christmas edition space yet? I gotta squeeze that in here somewhere or my Probation may terminal itself suddenly. And unsuccessfully. Like the tail-end of a week run in a two day town.

With the attraction an all-star picture boasting a hundred and fifty dollar leading man.

Scale it down.

FOR one day of this week I skirted around the edge of real classy society. Not that I'm insinuating as how I had the price myself, but Earl Hudson he takes me over to the Chatham for lunch. Eating with a Assistant to the President is some deluxe special itself, ain't it?

But that ain't all. That's just the five hundred feet of introductory titles.

Right at the next table to me sat the beauteous Katherine MacDonald. And J. D. Williams, and Harry Schwalbe. Yep, right at the next table.

And listen, privately invited guests, I always has heard how this MacDonald dame is the prettiest girl on the screen—but let me amend it right here and now to say she's THERE with and without the Sunlight Arcs. She don't need no camera as long as my eyes hold out.

I always did say as how I should have taken up the production end of this business. Them studios is the place. Whoever gets any inspiration looking at the Astor mob—Earl Gulick, Arvid Gillstrom, and such faces?

WISH I could only think of something real clever to say before the continuity gets too close to the fade-out. This week is my chance to shine what with William A. Johnston riding the rattlers out Chicago and St. Louis way. That puts "Snapshots" on the shelf for a week and makes me the only salesman in a wide open town.

W. A. J. gave a once over and a second look to the First National convention in Chi and then spoke a Pullman to St. Louis to find out what Federated thinks about the world. I don't suppose I'll have a chance the next few weeks; the big boss'll be so loaded up with "Snapshots" when he gets back.

First National held a week's busy sessions and hasn't made an "Official Statement" yet. Which is the way it goes. Some fellows say as how they captured "The Kid," but First National won't even admit they ever met the youngster.

Nevertheless, Chaplin is starting west to begin work on his next picture. And I never see Hiram Abrams smile the way he is these days. Looks as though the silent member of the "Big Four" is ready to start making a speech at last.

FRED BEECROFT and me had a awful bad Wednesday. When we saw our Famous Players stock touch the forty-seven neighborhood and Loew flirt with fifteen we fired three chauffeurs apiece and put the cars up for the winter.

Don't mind this conversation. It can't be helped. Part of the Astor atmosphere. Why there was more guys worrying about the smash in the market on Wednesday than there are shares in a dollar par oil company.

And, shucks, if any one of us ever looked a stock certificate in the face we'd think it was a press book.

JUST after I tell some guy with a knowing air that Felix Feist is the white-haired boy over at Goldwyn, in blows a hazy rumor of resignation. Keep your lamps on Felix. There must be something brewing because there's a lotta guys touting him strong and frequent.

Just after I tell a guy as how there's plenty cash in the state rights field for good stuff Charlie Shwerin drifts back to town and tells me conditions is rotten.

Just after I think up a lotta clever ideas that would make this page worth while this week the "Personalities" guy breaks it to me that the space is used up.

It's tough to be a "Just After" guy all your life.

DID you see the line-up at the Strand this week? Not only Sunday, but Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and every day. Have you seen Joe Plunkett's smiling face? "Kismet" is proving to New York what real live wire exploitation will do to upset the traditions of the "consistent policy" houses. And Robertson-Cole's confidence in the drawing power of the Otis Skinner-"Kismet" combination of names is being borne out.

Exhibitors Endorse Editorial Stand On Film Rental Question

Theatre-Owners Compliment News Editor for Treatment of Problem

FOLLOWING the editorial by William Johnston on the question of film rentals, published in THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS of November 6, many letters from exhibitors throughout the country have been received, praising Mr. Johnston's stand and protesting against exorbitant rentals. Everywhere the cry of the small town exhibitor is the same, as judged by communications received by THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The following endorsement for Mr. Johnston's editorial of November 6 comes from F. H. Smith, manager of the Grand theatre of Thomasville, Ga. Mr. Johnston writes the NEWS editor as follows:

"I want to compliment you on your editorial in your issue of November 6. You have sounded a key-note. You have placarded a warning that sounds the deathknell to the profiteers on the backbone of the industry—the small town exhibitor. Everything is planned—prices, exploitation, advertising—for the city exhibitor. The whole idea seems to be that the small town exhibitor is lucky to get anything. He is limited as to capacity, attendance and admission price. The public do not pay fifty cents every time they are asked to. They don't pay twenty-five cents willingly. They shop. They go less often. This film rental revision you refer to and the elimination of rental and admission tax, which the trade papers seem to have lost sight of entirely and which the public do not pay, is our only salvation. Tell 'em so."

Henry Goldman of the Grand-Colonial theatre, Green Bay, Mich., writes as follows:

"In your editorial of 'Sales Manager Opportunity,' in which you ask for opinions, I wish to state that the films rentals are, as you say, very unsettled. Green Bay is considered to be in size from 25,000 to 30,000 and the quota, when it comes to film rentals, as laid down by New York, would be about 200 per cent of my receipts. My town, not happening to be one of the best picture towns in the country, I naturally do not pay the prices asked, and have a hard time to buy films at what the film agents term 'reasonable prices.' I finally buy pictures at the price that is very nearly equal to fifty per cent of my receipts and after paying my overhead, you can see what chance I have.

"I know for a fact of one case where a certain company sold the Alhambra theatre at Milwaukee a picture for a ridiculous price that would equal about fifty per cent of one day's receipts and yet they were allowed to run the picture for a full week. This was done with the understanding that they give it publicity in the Milwaukee papers, which are read more or less throughout the state. Afterwards the same picture was offered to me, but I did not buy it. If I had bought it at the price they offered it to me for three days, I would have paid more than my receipts.

"This is only one of the instances that I happen to know of. There are 100 such cases where the companies are giving pictures away to big theatres for two reasons.

"First: That they figure that they are saving advertising to up-state exhibitors because that theatre advertises in the large city papers, which helps the manufacturers advertise to the exhibitors.

"Second: They want the prestige of that picture being run in the large theatres, for invariably, every time a salesman comes here to sell one of those pictures which was run in the larger theatres, his main talk is bound together with the fact that if that picture wasn't good such a large theatre would not run it.

"So you see when the 11 per cent film rental comes in. We pay about 50 per cent, and the large theatres pay about 2 per cent."

Another protest against high rentals, demanded by distributors, comes from the manager of the Bannister theatre, located in Bannister, Texas. He writes:

"If pictures do not go down we will be forced to close our theatre in the near future. It is getting to be something awful. Every time I get something special I cut my head off."

William R. Pattie of the Grand theatre, Frankfort, Ky., asks what he can do with a house "of 288 seats, in a town having a population of 9,763, and Paramount wants $40 a day for second-run on program pictures and the other companies refuse to serve second-run houses, as Metro has already done. Do you people know that the price for film rentals, with the exception of Universal for the tall grass towns, is a crime? The trade papers should wage a campaign against this."

Careless methods in distribution are taken severely to task by Charles H. Cowles, manager of the Lyric theatre of Port Austin, Mich. Mr. Cowles writes:

"Just a word of appreciation for your efforts for a square deal for the small town," he writes. "Last spring I took over this theatre and signed a contract with a Goldwyn man with the understanding that I was to have short, snappy features for July 3 and 5. They sent me, after writing them five times to emphasize the importance of a short show on these dates, an eight-reel drama, a two-reel comedy and a Ford Educational for July 3. The July 5 shipment arrived at three o'clock, when I had advertised the show for two o'clock. Nearly every one had gone to the ball game.

"I sent them a registered letter instructing them that they had damaged me and declaring that I wanted no more films from them. I am still asking for the return of the money I had to pay C. O. D. for the second show, although I had sent a check for same a week before."

C. A. Lick, manager of the New theatre at Fort Smith, Ark., tells how he provides for increase in admission prices consequent on the booking of a special attraction. He follows the "reserve seat" arrangement. Mr. Lick writes:

"Three years ago we adopted a policy of never changing our prices for what we term 'grind' pictures. Whenever we do change prices, we have only two shows a day—a matinee at 3:00 o'clock and a night performance at 8:15, selling reserved seats for the night show, the advance sale opening three days ahead. We go in on the principle that if a picture is worth a raise in price at all, it is worth doubling or trebling. Our regular prices are 10 cents, 18 cents and 25 cents. If we change from this scale at all, we charge 50 cents or 75 cents high.

"Almost all of us are acquainted with 'Broken Blossoms.' I know that in many cases it has not pleased audiences. We put this on week before last for only two days at 75 cents high, and played to $1,095.87 in a town of 25,000, and, above all, gave excellent satisfaction. Getting them there at the start of the picture is in many cases the whole secret of satisfying your patrons, and I know of no other way of getting them to see the first of the picture first, except with reserved seats."

St. Louis, Nov. 16: An important convention of the members of the Federated Film Exchanges was held at the Hotel Statler, November 14th to 17th. The following were in attendance: W. E. Shallenberger, New York; J. L. Friedman, Chicago; D. J. Chatkin, San Francisco; Eugene Pearce, New Orleans; Arthur Whyte, New York; S. M. Grant, Boston; Sam Werner, St. Louis; H. A. Kyler, Denver; W. G. Underwood, Dallas; M. J. Frisch, Des Moines; Harry Charnas, Cleveland; Al. Kahn, Kansas City.

The following were expected also before the close of the convention: B. Amsterdam, Philadelphia; Harry Lande, Pittsburgh; Peter Oletsky, Baltimore; F. W. Thayer, Minneapolis; and Ralph Wettstein, Milwaukee. Walter Green of New York was present, and also Eddy Eckels of Chicago; A. Warner, New York; Capt. George Baynes and Colvin Brown of Kinograms.

Meeting was strictly a closed one, and no news was given out either to the trade or local press. It is stated, however, that important announcements along the lines of enlarged business will be given out shortly. It is quite probable that the Walter Green Productions of twelve a year, will go through Federated.

Big Milwaukee Theatre Changes Hands

The Alhambra theatre, of Milwaukee, has been leased by Leo Landau, present manager of the Butterfly theatre of that city. The Alhambra has been controlled by the Saxe Amusement Enterprises for the past nine years and a renewal of the lease was planned for February 1 when the present lease expires.

The Saxes lost the lease, however, when nearly $100,000, or almost triple the present rental was offered the Schlitz Brewery interests, who own the house.

Although denial is made by Landau that he represents any film company or theatrical interests the rumor persists in motion picture circles in Milwaukee that he has secured the house for the Famous Players corporation. This move would give the Famous organization showings in two of Milwaukee's four large downtown houses. The Famous program is now shown at the Butterfly.

The Alhambra was secured by the Saxes from the Shubert interests in 1911, and up to the past three months was managed by George Fischer. Edward J. Weisfeldt is the present manager. The house now seats 2,016 and will be completely remodeled and increased to nearly 2,500 capacity.

Leo Laudau will leave the Butterfly shortly to take a trip across the continent visiting the prominent film theatres of America. He will be succeeded at the Butterfly by John R. Freuler, former president of the Mutual Film Corporation, who, with the Newman interests of Kansas City, controls the Butterfly. According to Freuler, there will be no change in policy at his house.

So. Californian Exhibs to Convene December 7th

A convention will be held at the Walker Auditorium, Los Angeles, December 7th and 8th for every exhibitor in Southern California and Arizona.

Its purpose will be to obtain members for the state organization, which is affiliated with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America; also to discuss any and all problems confronting the exhibitors in their effort to maintain an independent position.

The convention committee consists of the following members: F. A. Miller, Michael Gore, T. L. Tally, J. S. Lustig, J. M. Young and Glenn Harper.

S. S. Cassard Congratulated on Election

S. S. Cassard, whose election to the Vice-Presidency of the Nicholas Power Company was recently announced in the Motion Picture News, is said to be a busy man just at present replying to messages of congratulation and taking over the duties of his new position. Mr. Cassard is very optimistic regarding the outlook in the motion picture field.

Two Cities Abandon Sunday Fight Temporarily

Neither Binghamton nor Watervliet, N. Y., submitted the question of Sunday movies to their voting population at the recent general election, although there was an agitation along that line in both cities. After several false starts in Binghamton, the proposition failed to materialize even after an offer had been made to the common council to defray the added cost of a referendum on this question. The offer, however, was withdrawn before the council finally had an opportunity to vote on it. The whole thing was then dropped.

In Watervliet, two of the three members of the common council are against Sunday motion picture shows and managers of houses in that city, realizing that their chances are slim towards securign Sunday shows, have decided to let the matter rest for the time being. This means, however, that many cross the river to Troy every Sunday night and enjoy the pictures there.

Sol and Irving Lesser, of Los Angeles, to Split

Sol and Irving Lesser have come to the parting of the ways. When Sol Lesser returns to Los Angeles after he settles distribution matters for George Beban's "One Man in a Million," he will confine his efforts in the exhibiting field and Irving Lesser will make his debut into the production end, the "Peck's Bad Boy" unit being his first foundation.

Tampa Strike Declared Off

The theatre managers of Tampa., Fla., have reached an agreement with their striking operators, and the strike was declared off, with the men going back to work Sunday, November 14th.

New Incorporations Have Small Capitalization

The past week brought but a comparatively few companies filing incorporation papers in the secretary of state's office in Albany, N. Y., for the purpose of embarking in the motion picture business. With one exception these companies represent a low capitalization. The official state records show that the following companies incorporated during the week of November 8 to 13:

Clear Stream Film Corporation, New York, $5,000, Anita T. Lawrence, Warren G. Belew, William E. Young; the Arch Theatre Co., New York, $4,000, Apostle Anagnost, Angelis Yankou, Alex Pavlis; Calderone Corporation, Hempstead, $20,000, Salvator Calderone; Ralph Forman, Walter R. Jones, all of Hempstead; Herald Productions, New York, $5,000, Walter J. Porges, Samuel Marks, William L. Berk; Throm and Harloff Company, Brooklyn, $25,000, Charles Throm, Bernard C. Harloff, George R. Holahan, Jr.; Rufus LeMaire Productions, Inc., New York, $100,000, Rufus LeMaire, Helen Hutchins, S. W. Tannenbaum; Traub Amusement Co., Brooklyn, $10,000, Harry and Lena Traub, Anna Kestenbaum; Eve Unsell Photoplay Staff, New York, $10,000, Eve and Lester Blankfield, Brooklyn, Jacob Brickman, New York; Better Picture Circuit, New York, $207,500, Thomas F. Woods, James T. Schwoerer, Charles M. Stuart, Jr., Albany, Frank Bacon, of "Lightnin'" fame; Bluebell Film Corporation, New York, $10,000, Irving and Jennie Meisel, Martin R. Zelenko, New York; Ben Fitzer Productions, Syracuse, Ben Fitzer, William A. J. Helmstetter, Syracuse; Richard P. Byrne, DeWitt.

Curwood Issues Warning to Trade on Business

There has been so much controversy of late regarding reissues of old pictures and filming of the earlier stories of now prominent authors that James Oliver Curwood has given a warning to the trade, advising that only four of his pictures are guaranteed by him and have his hearty endorsement as to their merit and standing.

These four pictures are "Back to God's Country," "The River's End," "Nomads of the North," and (now in the making) "The Golden Snare." All of these stories are from Mr. Curwood's original novels of the same name, and all are being exploited by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

New Production Manager for Mary Pickford

Bennie Ziedman assumed the position of manager of productions for Mary Pickford this week.

For a number of years Mr. Ziedman was the publicity director and personal representative for Douglas Fairbanks, and he recently entered the producing field.

Talmadge Sisters First National Stars For 4 More Years

Jos. M. Schenck Renews Contract, Expiring Next Year, for Three More

WHAT is claimed to be the largest individual transaction in motion picture history is revealed in an announcement this week by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., that Joseph M. Schenck, producer of Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge attractions, has renewed his contract with the exhibitor organization for a period of three more years.

The company's official statement described the transaction as "Mr. Schenck's pledge of special feature productions to the amount of $20,000,000, in support of his belief that exhibitors can work together in harmony and successful co-operation."

The present contracts which Mr. Schenck has with Associated First National Pictures for productions starring the Talmadge sisters each has approximately one year more of operation. Combined with the new agreements the two stars will be identified solely with the exhibitor organization for a total of four more years.

Exhibitor officials of Associated First National Pictures regard the renewal of the contract as an endorsement by one of the industry's foremost producers of the co-operative principles of its franchise plan and as an unequaled evidence by Mr. Schenck of the confidence leading independent producers have in a method which places theatre owners in direct contact with their sources of film supply.

"When the present contracts for Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge productions expire in 1921," reads the company's statement, "Associated First National Pictures will have released twenty productions by these two stars. Mr. Schenck's production activities have found a market through this organization for almost two years, and in that time he has had many chances to study closely every detail of our co-operative plan both for the present and for the future, and we are confident that it will be sensational news of an agreeable nature to every one of our more than 3,500 independent exhibitor members to learn that Mr. Schenck has pledged special feature productions to the amount of $20,000,000 to prove his belief that exhibitors can work together in harmony and successful co-operation. It marks an epoch of producer faith in the exhibitor as an organized body for developing and advancing the motion picture."

As a single transaction, the deal is said to be without equal in the amount of money involved and in its prophecy as the forerunner of a series of important changes in the relationship between producers, stars and independent exhibitors.

Joseph M. Schenck

It is the first big contract held by Associated First National Pictures at the start of its co-operative plan which is renewed after the sub-franchise method had been established and put into operation nationally. This, according to exhibitor officials of the organization, is significant in revealing the opinion of a producer as prominent as Mr. Schenck about future methods of producing and marketing special feature attractions.

Despite the many chances offered Mr. Schenck at remarkable terms for releasing arrangements with others he decided, it is said, as the result of his past experience with the exhibitor company to continue his association with it and for a length of time which is almost unprecedented in contrast with the usual terms of releasing contracts for big important stars, which rarely extend for more than a year or for a maximum series of six or eight productions.

With its contracts which give the exhibitor members the exhibition rights to the productions of the two famous stars, one of the first of its important affiliations scheduled for early conclusion, the company's official statement explains that its exhibitor executives took a poll of member opinions during the early summer with the result that Mr. Schenck was approached to renew the agreements as the unanimous wish of all sub-franchise holders.

At that time, the announcement states, the Associated First National sub-franchise plan was comparatively new, and no definite action was taken by Mr. Schenck looking toward a realization of the expressed wish of the organization's Executive Committee. Meantime, Mr. Schenck decided to give both Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge a deserved vacation in a trip abroad, which combined business with pleasure and permitted Mr. Schenck to make a minute and detailed investigation of every condition in the foreign market. It was not until after the producer and his party had returned to New York that negotiations for a renewal were resumed.

Fresh from his European investigations, and with ample evidences of the far-reaching growth and influence of the Associated First National franchise plan made available by its activities for eight months, Mr. Schenck agreed to accompany Mr. H. O. Schwalbe and Mr. J. D. Williams, secretary-treasurer and manager, respectively, of the co-operative company, to Chicago to conclude the renewal of the contracts with the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors. This joint session was called for the consideration of that and "several other important" matters, which, the official announcement declares, will be made public soon.

At the first session in the Hotel Congress, Mr. Schenck explained what he had discovered in Europe of the relative attitude of foreign agencies and exhibitors toward all of the leading American concerns, and concluded with a resume of the plans and intentions on which he had determined for the future production activity of the famous dramatic star and her equally famous sister and comedienne.

Morrie Ryskind to Leave Famous Players

Morrie Ryskind, who has been connected with the publicity department of Famous Players-Lasky for the past two years in charge of magazine publicity, has resigned his position to devote his time chiefly to magazine work. He also confesses to ambitions in the musical comedy field and it is not unlikely that Broadway before long will be revelling in the humor of a book and lyrics on which he is now collaborating.

Paul Gray Joins Fabian as Publicity Director

Jacob Fabian, owner of the First National franchise for New Jersey, announced this week that he had appointed Paul Gray as director of publicity and advertising for his new million dollar Branford theatre in Newark.

With Exhibitor Organizations

Plans for Grand Ball Progressing Rapidly

Plans for the grand ball which will be given at the Hotel Astor on the evening of January 5 by the Chamber of Commerce of the M. P. T. A. are rapidly assuming concrete form. This will be the first big affair given by any branch of the film industry since the last ball conducted several years ago by the Screen Club.

One of the features of the ball will be the decision of judges as to who is the most popular motion picture star. Harry Reichenbach, director of exploitation and publicity, has made arrangements with two big New York newspapers to cooperate in the popularity contest, and coupons will be printed in these papers on which the public will have the opportunity of expressing themselves as to their favorite star. The contest will include all stars in the industry, whether male or female.

The votes in this contest will be assembled by the various theatre owners belonging to the association, and on the night of the ball the winner will be announced. The members of the organization have agreed to place a ballot box in the lobby of his theatre, into which the public may deposit their ballots.

B. S. Moss, who is chairman of the vaudeville entertainment committee, reports that he has already arranged for several big headliners to appear. Invitations are being sent to a number prominent city, state and national figures, and acceptances have been received from several. It is planned to have one of the biggest personages of Washington attend. Acceptances have already been received from two stars now in California.

Rhode Island Exhibitors Plan State League

The managers of moving picture theatres in Providence, R. I., are now discussing a plan to form an organization to be affiliated with the National Motion Picture Theatre Owners Association, a representative of which was here last week to explain the details of the organization. It is said that Rhode Island is one of the very few states not having such an organization, and managers here are anxious to get in.

Offices of the Katherine MacDonald Co. Moved

The executive offices of the Attractions Distributing Corporation and the Katherine MacDonald Pictures Corporation have removed from the Longacre Building to 576 Fifth Avenue, where larger quarters, intended to accommodate the expansion of these corporations during the year, have been secured.

William Fox warns motion picture exhibitors and the public not to confuse announcements of other companies who may advertise or offer for sale a serial entitled "Fantomas" with his own. Mr. Fox declares that he considers it his duty to protect both himself and the exhibitors of the country by issing this warning. He points out that the Fox serial which he has been advertising for several weeks is an entirely new production made in the Fox Studios in New York City and now nearing completion, and that this is the only modern American Fantomas serial on the market, for the reason that Fox Film Corporation owns the exclusive rights to twenty-six volumes stories of Fantomas stories—these having been published at one time or another.

In an advertisement Fox Film Corporation calls particular attention to the fact that aside from their own twenty-episode serial of "Fantomas," the only Fantomas material being offered or which can be offered is taken from an old production which was made in France about seven years ago..

Rembusch Removed from National Committee

A communication was received on October 26 at the national headquarters of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of America from G. G. Schmidt, president of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of Indiana, in which it was stated that the organized exhibitors of Indiana wished for the immediate removal of Frank R. Rembusch from the national executive committee as a result of charges of disloyalty and misrepresentation made against Mr. Rembusch at a recent convention of the Indiana exhibitors, which charges, it is stated, remained unrefuted by Mr. Rembusch.

The executive committee of the Indiana organization, following these charges, addressed itself to the national executive committee, it is stated, requesting the removal of Frank Rembusch from the national executive committee and the appointment of E. H. Bingham of Indianapolis to the vacancy.

The officers and executive-committee members of the Motion-Picture Theatre Owners of America have considered the request of the Indiana body, it is declared, and sustaining the charges made against Mr. Rembusch, they have voted his removal from the national executive committee and the appointment of Mr. Bingham in his place.

Leeds L. Baxter, Business Manager for Neilan

Marshall Neilan announces the engagement of Leeds L. Baxter, well known organization expert in motion picture producing circles, as business manager of the Neilan home office and studios in Hollywood.

Mr. Baxter has already taken over his new duties.

Unofficial Censorship is Urged in Maryland

An unofficial censorship of moving pictures in Maryland is now in the making by the various mothers and school teachers clubs of Baltimore. The aim of these ladies is to keep adolescent children from viewing many so-called "licentious" films which are alleged to get by the vigilance of the Maryland Board of Moving Picture Censors.

The ball was started rolling when Mrs. Howard T. Bennett headed a committee which visited the moving picture theatres of Baltimore and then reported details of a "deplorable" condition which existed in such theatres all over the city. In the Parents' Club of Forest Park there immediately followed resolutions demanding legislation making it an offense to show any films which had a harmful influence.

It remained for the Women's Civic League of Baltimore to take a more intelligent view of the situation. Briefly the League would establish an unofficial censorship in the various sections of the city and allow mothers to abide by their own judgment in dispensing money to their children for movie shows, thus retaining a measure of freedom for adults who believe that motion pictures are really an adult's amusement.

Stoll's Branch Managers Are Announced

Ralph Proctor, general manager of the Stoll Film Corporation, returned to New York November 15 from his trip to the West. Mr. Proctor's journey was for the purpose of selecting branch managers.

Mr. Proctor named twenty-two of the thirty-three exchange managers who will, beginning December 6, take up their headquarters in Pathe exchanges, through which the Stoll product will be distributed to exhibitors. These managers and their jurisdictions are as follows:

New York, Jack Von Tilzer; Boston, George De Carlton; Buffalo, George Webster; Cleveland, E. C. Leeves; Cincinnati, Gorge Landis; Detroit, W. D. Ward; Indianapolis, Earnest Dawson; Chicago, Ben W. Beadell; Milwaukee, Frank M. De Lorenzo; Minneapolis, C. A. Gordon; Spokane, R. C. Montgomery; Seattle, J. L. Cathro; Portland, S. S. Schubach; Kansas City, J. E. Foland; St. Louis, W. A. Dietz; Salt Lake City, J. C. Cassidy; Denver, Earl P. Briggs; Omaha, Charles Taylor; New Orleans, C. Torkelson; Charlotte, Edward L. McShane; Washington, Herbert C. Wales; Atlanta, Arthur Dickinson.

The following denial of various rumors concerning his future activities is made by Charles Chaplin:

"The recent rumors that have been spread broadcast in this city and abroad regarding my retirement from my business, and never hereafter to produce pictures, are grossly unfounded. Any such statements, written or spoken, are without authenticity and without authority from me.

"The fact of the matter is that I am leaving New York on Monday, November 22nd, for California, and immediately upon my arrival there will begin work on a new picture.

"CHARLIE CHAPLIN."

William Fox Starts Suit Against Showmen

Production of Stage Plays Alleged to Be Based on "Over the Hill" Cause of Action

TWO suits were instituted last week by William Fox—one in the United States District Court, Southern District, against Joseph Klein and Harry Myer, lessees of the Fourteenth Street theatre, New York, and the other in the United States District Court, Eastern District, against Corse Payton, lessee of the Amphion theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., on the charge that these parties have been infringing on the rights to the poems of Will Carleton, "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" and "Over the Hill from the Poorhouse," by producing plays based upon them.

William Fox owns the exclusive dramatic and motion picture rights to these two poems, and he evidently intends to prosecute to the fullest anybody who encroaches on these rights.

Apparently figuring on the popularity of the Fox special film production "Over the Hill"—now playing at the Lyric theatre, New York—Messrs. Klein and Myer in their Fourteenth Street theatre, and Corse Payton in his Amphion theatre, produced, according to Fox, a play entitled "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse," which play, with a few minor changes, was taken directly from Will Carleton's two poems, Fox claims. In fact, in order to remove any vestige of doubt on the subject, they stated on their programs that the play was "adapted from Will Carleton's celebrated poem."

According to Fox, their astuteness as managers was vindicated so far as getting the people into their theatres was concerned; the crowds were there all right; but where they made a mistake was in disregarding whose property they made use of to attain the results.

"Over the Hill from the Poorhouse" and "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse," on which the William Fox picture is based, were originally contained in a collection of verses known as "Farm Ballads." The first copyright on these verses was taken out in 1873 by Harper Bros., who at that time were the owners of the literary works of Will Carleton. This copyright expired in 1901; but prior to its expiration, and in accordance with the copyright law, Will Carleton ,then alive, renewed it for a period of 15 years, carrying it to 1915. Carleton died in 1912, leaving as his sole executor and legatee Norman E. Goodrich. Mr. Goodrich again duly renewed the copyright, prior to its expiration, for another 14 years' period, carrying it over to 1929. It is under this copyright that Mr. Fox holds the dramatic and motion picture rights to the poems in question.

Lady Diana Manners to Star for Blackton

Famous Beauty Has Long Been Prominent in England's Society Life

CHESTER A. CLEGG, London representative of J. Stuart Blackton, announced upon his arrival in the United States recently that Lady Diana Manners had signed a contract with Mr. Blackton to appear as an American motion picture star in future Blackton-produced photoplays. Lady Diana is the daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Rutland, a famous English beauty and prominent society woman. How Lady Diana was persuaded by Mr. Blackton to appear in motion pictures is explained by Mr. Clegg as follows:

"Lady Diana has heretofore refused to appear professionally on stage or screen, in spite of magnificently alluring offers made her," he said. "She has, however, as an actress of much natural talent and experience in non-professional acting and dancing felt a great desire to do professional work. Lady Diana and her family would never have consented but for two reasons. One was that they had met Mr. Blackton personally and he knew some of their friends. The other was that from this acquaintance and his reputation they knew him to be an artist and a gentleman of high attainments and intellectual qualifications. Mr. Blackton passed the acid test, and won out, where many others had failed."

The contract made by Mr. Blackton with Lady Diana calls for her appearance in a number of photoplays under Mr. Blackton's personal direction. These plays will be made in England. It has been rumored for some time that Mr. Blackton would produce in England, but up to this time these reports have been denied.

A lengthy statement has been issued from the Blackton offices concerning Lady Diana's qualifications for the screen and the prominent place that she has occupied in the social life of England. The Blackton statement is submitted in part as follows:

"Lady Diana Manners is without doubt the most widely celebrated and photographed society woman of today. E. O. Hoppe, the noted London painter and photographer, who recently came to this country to select the five most beautiful American women after making a similar choosing in England, picked Lady Diana to head the list of English beauties, which was, of course, expected, as she had been the reigning beauty of London since her debut. Not only is Lady Diana beautiful but she has social grace and talents that have made her internationally distinguished. She is recognized as the leader of London society and since her debut has held an enviable position. She is noted for her gowns and jewels. Her capriciousness has kept London society discussing her and her admirers for years. She is a blonde of the pure English type with a delicate lily-like beauty that artists and photographers the world over have declared to be superior to any other beauty of today, and to rank with the greatest recorded beauties of all history.

"Aside from her beauty of face, Lady Diana has a magnetism of personality that is said to captivate those who come in contact with her. Her radiant charm, superb beauty and fascination have made her a law unto herself. All London society danced at her bidding.

"Lady Diana became the bride of Captain Duff Cooper of the Grenadier Guards several months after the signing of the armistice. The wedding at St. Margaret's Church, London, aroused as much public interest as the coronation of a new sovereign."

Mr. Blackton, the producer who has engaged Lady Diana for the screen, was formerly commodore of the Atlantic Yacht Club and president of the Motor Boat Club of America. He is an intimate friend of Sir Thomas Lipton, through whom he is reported to have met Lady Diana, and for years has been as prominent as a sportsman as he has been as a photoplay producer. He is a painter of reputation also, and is a member of the Salmagundi Club and many other clubs of the arts and of social and public life.

"THE KID" BADLY INJURED

REPORTS from Los Angeles indicate that Jackie Coogan, Charlie Chaplin's six-year-old wonder star, was seriously injured in an automobile accident several days ago.

The boy was riding with his father when another machine struck their car. Young Coogan is said to have sustained a fracture of the skull, and while on the road to recovery, will be absent from the studio at least a month.

Jackie Coogan is "The Kid" in Chaplin's much-discussed feature of that title.

Fabian's Newest Theatre Will Open Soon

THAT Newark, N. J., is to have a new, beautiful and up-to-date motion picture theatre is the gist of an announcement made by Jacob Fabian, owner of the First National franchise for New Jersey and who also controls a circuit of theatres in that state. The Regent and Garden theatres in Paterson and the Montauk and Playhouse theatres in Passaic are owned by Mr. Fabian, whose activities have become enormous in the last few years.

The New Branford theatre, Newark, N. J., which Mr. Fabian will open on or around Thanksgiving Day of this year, is his latest enterprise. His faith in the motion picture industry has been expressed in the erection of a mammoth theatre with a seating capacity of 4,000 and which will cost, according to the latest estimates, over one million dollars. The Branford theatre is less than a half block from Broad and Market streets. This spot is known to be one of the busiest corners in America.

The new Branford theatre will be operated along the same lines as the Broadway cinema palaces and all previous attempts in the presentation of pictures will be outdone if the present plans of Mr. Fabian materialize. Several distinct and novel surprises have been promised by the Jersey showman after the opening of the New Branford.

Although the art of exploitation will be used in the advertising of the New Branford, Mr. Fabian states that only dignified advertising methods will be employed. "The class of people who will patronize the New Branford will not respond to questionable publicity," said Mr. Fabian. "We expect to appeal to all of the people, of course, but we want to build up a reputation of being able to back up our promises so that we may instil confidence in the minds of our patrons. This confidence I will consider the greatest asset that we will be able to accumulate."

Carl Laemmle Goes West with Abe Stern

Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, who recently returned to this country after four months in Europe, has left New York for Universal City, California, where he will remain several weeks supervising work on the two big Universal-Jewel productions now in process of completion—"Foolish Wives," a new Von Stroheim picture, and "Outside the Law," the new Priscilla Dean picture directed by Tod Browning.

Mr. Laemmle was accompanied to the coast by Mr. Abe Stern, treasurer of Universal.

Misouts Make Him "Sore"

Jay Allen Glenn, manager of the Gay Theatre, Inc., of Newport, Tenn., sends in the statement, submitted below, with the request that the same be published "for the good that it may do all of us exhibitors. The big theatres are not bothered in this manner; it's the 75% of theatres, two to four-hundred seat houses in towns up to eight thousand people that have this trouble," continues Mr. Glenn, " and it's just about as hard to get an adjustment when a film misses as to be elected president on a League of Nations' platform."

Mr. Glenn's statement reads as follows:

"To all companies from whom I have pictures booked: Please take notice.

"Since October 1st I have had eight misouts as follows:

"October 2, Fox Film Co., Atlanta, Ga., October 14th, Consolidated Film & Supply Co., Atlanta; October 18, First National, Louisville, Ky., Big Feature Rights Co.; October 19, Select, Atlanta; October 22, Pathe, Charlotte, N. C.; October 30, Pathe, Charlotte, N. C.; November 5, Pathe, Charlotte, N. C.; and November 8th, First National, Louisville, Ky., Big Feature Rights Co.

"I am tired of this misout business, and can see no reason why it happens. All service is paid for and I know that's not the reason. If I have any service booked from YOU. Please allow THREE days for transit.

"I don't see how some companies can have the gall to send a man to me now and try to get business from me. A Misout always costs me two or three times as much as I can possible get from the company whose picture misses me, and it takes months and fifty letters to get anything then.

"It's no wonder that exhibitors think you are crooks, and the sooner that a fairer method of treatment from the exchange to the exhibitor takes place, the sooner you will find out that MOST of the exhibitors try to do the right thing.

If after reading this you think that it applies to you, then take it. If not, forget it; but at any rate all who have anything to do with sending pictures to me will certainly receive my appreciation if they will get films to me in time for me to use them the day I have them booked for.

(Signed) "Jay Allen Glenn, Mgr.
"Gay Theatre, Inc."

Another Misout "Kick"

In a letter received from C. B. Greever of the Gem Theatre, Frederick, Okla., the Dallas office of United Artists is taken to task for the alleged failure to deliver picture contracted for in time for showing. Mr. Greever explains as follows:

"On the 16th of October I mailed check and signed contract for their 'Mollycoddle,' booked for my use November 3rd. I received the advertising matter ordered and spent around $25.00 advertising the picture for this date.

"November 3rd—and no picture—or word of any kind. After all trains were in and it was too late to get a picture to keep from being dark, I wired them as per attached copy of telegram, and at about 4.30 o'clock received their answer, which I also attach."

The telegram to the United Artists' Dallas office, as submitted by Mr. Greever, reads as follows:

"Mollycoddle not in—Did you ship and when?"

The reply from the Dallas office, as quoted by Mr. Greever, was sent as follows:

"Your print not in from West Texas. When can you use—Sorry."

Mr. Greever's letter to the News concludes:

"Will you express your opinion and a remedy for this kind of treatment for my benefit as well as other exhibitors, that they may know what to expect when they buy pictures from Mr. Luckett of United Artists at Dallas, Texas.

"Respectfully,
(Signed) "C. B. Greever."

Wm. Fox Wins Appeal in Jewel Carmen Suit

A decision has just been handed down by the Unitel States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit which reverses the findings of the lower court in the important action brought two years ago by Jewel Carmen, motion picture actress, against Fox Film Corporation and the William Fox Vaudev.lle Company, reads a statement from the Fox Film headquarters. The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in which the case was originally tried, awarded Jewel Carmen damages in the sum of $43,500 and costs. From this decision Fox appealed to the higher court, and in the opinion just handed down this award is set aside and the decree reversed, it is stated.

The appeal was tried before Circuit Judges Ward, Rogers and Hough, and the opinion, which was written by Judge Rogers, was unanimous, according to the Fox statement.

The litigation grew out of contracts entered into between Jewel Carmen and the two Fox concerns named, by which the actress bound her services for a number of years. While this contract had several years to run, it is stated, Miss Carmen entered into a contract with the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation binding her services to them for a period of five years through a contract which is declared to have given the Keeney Corporation the option of re-employing her at stated periods at an increased salary. Miss Carmen was still in her minority.

Suit was brought by Miss Carmen against Fox in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, in which she asked a perpetual injunction restraining Fox from interfering with her contract rights, and in which she also asked damages. The finding of this lower court was in favor of the actress, and it issued the injunction and awarded her a large amount of damage, as above stated.

Through his lawyers Fox appealed to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. Mr. Nathan Burkan appeared for Jewel Carmen as plaintiff-appellee, and Saul E. Rogers appeared for the two Fox organizations as defendant-appellants.

Louis B. Mayer Engage Anthony Paul Kelly

Anthony Paul Kelly, well-known playwright and scenario man, has been engaged by Louis B. Mayer to prepare the screen adaptation of "The Tornado," Anita Stewart's next starring vehicle for First National Release. "The Tornado" is an original story by Jane Murfin, author of "Lilac Time" and other stage successes. It will be directed by Edwin Carewe.

Mr. Kelly wrote "Three Faces East," the mystery play which ran on Broadway for over fifteen consecutive months. His latest scenario achievement is "Way Down East."

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Held by the Enemy—

Business exceptionally good. Surprisingly large crowds. Good picture, well liked, surrounded by attractive program. (East.)

A beautiful picture but not a box office puller. Got through a week run by the skin of the teeth. (East.)

One of the best Civil War stories I've ever played. Crowded houses for the entire run, and everybody liked it. From a box office standpoint, it was a splendid attraction and business was great. (East.)

The Right to Love—

Second big week. Good business, full houses. Audiences like it. (East.)

An average picture and played to usual business. (Middle West.)

A Romantic Adventuress—

Dorothy is slipping. Good production but story was only fair and box office reflected this condition. (Middle West.)

Behold My Wife—

Opened to splendid business and held up so well it was continued for a second week. (Middle West.)

Unusually entertaining, and box office testified to the fact that it was well liked. (West.)

THE MASTERPIECE OF 1920

One of Edward L. Hyman's hand drawn displays for "Twin Beds" playing this week at the Brooklyn Strand theatre

An Old Fashioned Boy—

Although many persons—among them the dramatic critic of a metropolitan newspaper — considered this an excellent farce and an excellent picture, it made no big hit with the "fans" here. The houses were but average, although the cold weather may have had some bearing on this. Many of Ray's followers did not like the kind of part he played. (East.)

Good—but last two Ray pictures not up to Ray standard. (West.)

Ray is always good and does not fall down on this. Had more than usual business. (West.)

Civilian Clothes—

Held up good first seven days. Have booked it for another week. (West.)

Always Audacious—

Story little impossible but business was big. Some fine double exposures in this and picture one of his best. (East.)

An entertaining feature which drew well. (West.)

Great in story and in production. Wally Reid always has good following and great stories. Went over big. (West.)

The Cradle of Courage—

Out of Hart's line, should be kept in the Western type. (East.)

Carried picture seven days. My custom is two changes weekly. (Middle West.)

Something to Think About—

Played two weeks engagement to large crowds. This is a good picture which is spoiled by the sensational ending, which is being overworked since the days of "The Miracle Man." (Middle West.)

Jailbirds—

A usual Doug. MacLean and Doris May production which did the business. Both of these actors have been very popular in this city since appearing in "23½ Hours Leave."

Her Husband's Friend—

Played to big houses all week and might be considered a box office "puller." Was generally liked by the public. (East.)

The Restless Sex—

Played to big houses the first week of its stay here but like all pictures that are not high above the ordinary or extensively advertised its popularity began to peter out towards the end of the second week. (East.)

Half Hour—

Picture played to average business all week. Fair business. (West.)

The Round Up—

A poor feature for my house. Box office receipts not up to standard. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Twin Beds—

Audiences laughed long and heartily. Seemed to give entire satisfaction. (East.)

Good References—

Constance Talmadge is the only excuse for this production. She kept patrons coming all week. Business very good. (East.)

Good production which seemed to please and brought fair business. (West.)

Picture doing average business despite extremely bad weather. (East.)

Better than "The Love Expert" but did only fair business. (East.)

The Master Mind—

Unusual story well acted but did not draw extra well. (East.)

What Women Love—

Very poor picture. Played to big business, mostly men. A supplementary feature "The Race of the Age" helped draw the crowds. Kellermann didn't please. (East.)

The Notorious Miss Lisle—

A poor production which drew only average business. (Middle West.)

Nomads of the North—

A fairly entertaining picture but we had poor business during run. (West.)

The Love Expert—

Drew very well all week. Good comedy. Audiences well pleased. (East.)

The Branded Woman—

A slow-moving affair which failed to create any excitement, although Norma Talmadge performs in her usual excellent manner. A cut-back showing a Roman slave market was unnecessary and was plainly lugged in for its sensual appeal. (Middle West.)

Fair picture which brought but average business. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Earthbound—

Falling down in its second week. Too highbrow for the average movie patron. (Middle West.)

The Branding Iron—

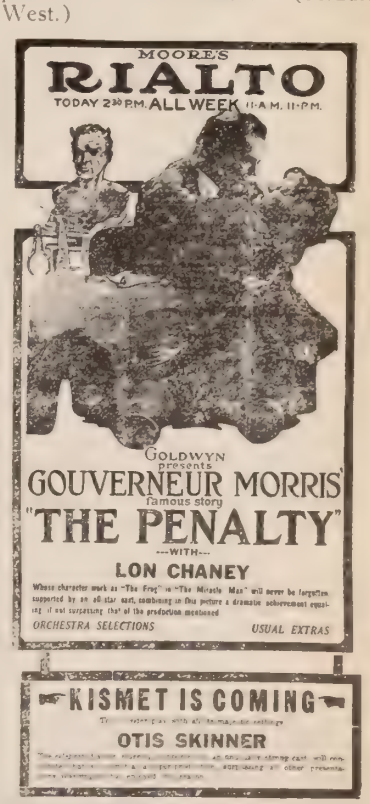
Did better than average business at two first-run houses simultaneously. Just melodramatic enough to attract, and not too emotional, so as to offend. (Middle West.)

The Slim Princess—

This type of story don't go over. (East.)

Honest Hutch—

Lauded by the critics as the best picture of the week. (Middle West.)



This is a reproduction of Tom Moore's (Washington) display for "The Penalty" the bill at Moore's Rialto this week

Small hand-drawn display for "Kismet" booked for the Strand theatre, Brooklyn, next week

Officer 666—
This feature brought more than usual business and seemed to please my patrons. (West.)

The Great Lover—

Stop Thief—
Did not go over very well. An average picture. (Middle West.)

REALART

Her Beloved Villain—
A fair picture and box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Food for Scandal—
Light, pleasing little comedy. They came because they liked Wanda—and they did not register a kick. Box office, just fair. (East.)

39 East—
Fairly interesting picture. Usual patronage. (West.)

A Dark Lantern—
This is a fair picture but the box office receipts were awful. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

The Prey—
Average production, nothing out of ordinary. Business fair. (West.)

Trumpet Island—
A nice picture that generally satisfied. Fairly good houses all week. (East.)

Pleased big audiences. (Middle West.)

Trumpet Island—
Splendid picture full of thrills and big box office attraction. Broke house records during two week's run. (Middle West.)

SELZNICK

The Sin That Was His—
Wonderful picture. A classic. Full of action, but with a deep moral lesson. Would be a cheap melodrama if Faversham did not act so superbly. Opened to enormous business. Had to rope off both outer and inner lobbies. Audiences lavish in praise. Held up just as strong all week rather gaining in prestige with each day. (Middle West.)

Everybody's Sweetheart—
Very pleasing little entertainment. Not a great picture, but attractive and rather restful, not offering any problems for the tired business man to solve. Unusual interest attached to the picture as it was the last one made by Olive Thomas. (Middle West.)

The Saphead—
This picture took well for the most of the week. There is nothing unusually attractive about it. Fair. (East.)

Darling Mine—
The best Olive Thomas picture I've played yet. Went over in great shape. Do not think though the star's tragic death affected audiences' enjoyment of picture, in either way. Sane and normal enjoyment registered. (East.)

Everybody's Sweetheart—
Olive Thomas seems more popular now than before her death. Good business. (Middle West.)

FOX

Drag Harlan—
William Farnum has a good box office value. Picture liked and box office returns fine. (Middle West.)

Merely Mary Ann—
Production average. Star good. Patrons well pleased. (Middle West.)

One of A. C. Raleigh's artistic ads for "Madame Peacock" when this picture played the Columbia theatre, Portland, Ore.

The White Moll—
The idea of this picture being a serial was overcome by newspaper advertising. Had big business. (Middle West.)

Three Gold Coins—
Opened big and continued so during entire run. As to entertaining value, let the above speak for itself. (West.)

METRO

The Hope—
That was the trouble—there wasn't any. Impossible—tedious, hackneyed situations, moth-eaten development. I felt like apologizing to my patrons for making them sit through it. If the other "Metro Specials" are like this, excuse me!

A Chorus Girl's Romance—
A fine picture and one which pleased my audiences, bringing good business. (West.)

The Best of Luck—
Fair business. Fairly good picture. (East.)

Madame Peacock—
One of the best money-getters I've had in a long time. Personally, did not care for the picture, so why worry? (East.)

ROBERTSON-COLE

The Stealers—
Although this was a fair box-office attraction, I was disappointed. Did not go over as big as I expected, nor was it as big a picture as I expected. (East.)

An Arabian Knight—
One of the best light comedies I've played in a long time. Pleased everybody. Production an excellent one throughout. Good box-office attraction. (East.)

EQUITY

Midchannel—
Mediocre picture not up to Clara Kimball Young's standard as to either drawing qualities or picture. Fair business. They came, but expected something better. (East.)

PATHE

The Riddle: Woman—
Overdrawn story, which just got by. Farrar is a wonderful singer. Business fair. (East.)

Half a Chance—
Great. Think Hamilton superb—but where did they get the idea that Lillian Rich is adequate material to co-star? She's pretty bad—but the rest of the picture was so good you could afford to forget her. Box-office, great! (East.)

One of the displays run in the Baltimore Sunday American for the showing of "The Vice of Fools" at the Picture Garden theatre

JANS

Madonnas and Men—
Did not hold up for second week. Only fair business. (Middle West.)

ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS

The Heart of a Fool—
Very interesting and entertaining picture which played to good business. (East.)

The Forbidden Thing—
Good picture to fair business. (East.)

A fine production. People stood in line all week to see this picture. Big business. (East.)

EQUITY

Midchannel—
Business was good. Picture only fair. Audiences not well pleased. (East.)

The box office showed that the public likes this production. Clara Kimball Young is well liked in this city and her name appeared frequently in the daily papers while the picture was running. (East.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Suds—
This picture was a disappointment and even failed to hold the regular Pickford following. Some attribute their dislike to the film to the fact that Mary played a character part throughout and in no way was her beauty set off as usual. Others averred it was the poorest picture they have ever seen her play. Box office receipts seem to strengthen the last-named contention. (East.)

The Love Flower—
Held up very well second week and was considered a fine production by patrons.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

"She Played and Paid," which had its Chicago premiere at the Band Box theatre in Chicago's downtown district, broke all records at this house during the week of November 1-6, according to the manager of the popular Madison Street theatre.

Aaron Gollos, president of the Gollos Enterprises, controlling the Equity Productions in the Central West, has returned from New York after attending a meeting of the Equity managers there. He announces that his company will release "Whispering Devils," one of the new Equity productions in a short time in this territory.

Celebrated Players' Film Corporation has acquired the rights of to the Canyon Pictures Corporation's big serial, "Vanishing Trails," starring Franklin Farnum and Mary Anderson for Illinois and Indiana. Farnum is noted for his horsemanship, and is given excellent opportunity in this serial to exhibit his prowess along these lines. Miss Anderson has long been a favorite of motion picture patrons and appeared in Vitagraph's features for a number of years winning much praise.

It is rumored that Celebrated Players is about to open a branch exchange in Indianapolis, of which Louis G. Goulden, now special representative for Celebrated, will be manager.

The College Inn was the scene of a meeting of the entire staff of Celebrated last week. President Friedman addressed the sales men on the coming season's products and new sales angles were discussed by those present. Among the men who attended were: J. L. Friedman, M. J. Mintz, Louis B. Goulden, J. S. Mednikow, Dave Dubin, Joe Posner, H. Larsen, V. F. de Lerenzo and George Hueth.

"Kismet," the great Robertson-Cole picture, featuring Otis Skinner, America's leading actor, has been booked into the Ziegfeld for an indefinite run immediately after the first of the year, according to Manager Lucas, of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office, who states that an aggressive advertising and exploitation campaign is being planned by Manager McKinzie, of the Ziegfeld, to put the merits of this splendid picture before the public.

Abe Balaban, of Balaban & Katz, is visiting New York this week, looking over the presentations at the Capitol, Rivoli, and others of the leading Eastern theatres to find new ideas in presentation which he can apply at the Riviera.

Pathe's Chicago Exchange is making a good showing in the race for divisional prizes to be awarded for the biggest increase in business during November, and expect to pull down the pennant for the Central West division. Manager Aschmann and his salesmen are so confident of winning out that they are already planning how to spend the $500 he will receive and the $100 each for salesmen. Particularly heavy advance bookings are being reported on "The Riddle: Woman," which will open at the Ziegfeld late in December.

Milton M. Stern, who has had charge of the booking in the southern division of Pathe for some time, has joined the Chicago staff as chief booker. Mr. Stern is widely known to film men of the Central West, having been connected with the George Kleine organization in the St. Louis office some time ago and various other important exchanges.

E. F. Tarbell has assumed his duties as manager of Vitagraph's Chicago Exchange as successor to Fred Aiken. Mr. Tarbell has been division manager of Pathe for the past year, and was given the Chicago post at his own request, as it will enable him to dispense with a large amount of traveling necessary when he was division manager. He needs no introduction to Chicago Exchange men and theatre owners as he has worked in Chicago before and is one of the most widely and favorably known men connected with the industry in the Central West.

Lee Herz was a New York visitor this week, visiting the film metropolis to look over new pictures which he contemplates buying for Illinois and Indiana.

Harry Berman, who accompanied Carl Laemmle to Chicago when the latter stopped off in the Windy City on his way to the West Coast, has returned to New York, but will be at Universal's Chicago office again in a few days.

Watterson R. Rothacker has left for two weeks on the Coast. Workmen are making progress on construction of the Coast Rothacker laboratory at Melrose and Gower streets, Hollywood. While in the West Mr. Rothacker will visit First National studios and plan for a big opening of the new laboratory which will be ready for operation early in 1921.

Messrs. Linick and Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, returned to Chicago after seeing Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones safely aboard ship for Europe. Mr. Linick has closed his country home at Flossmore and moved into the city for the winter and will reside at the Sisson Hotel.

Ralph T. Kettering, general representative of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, is convalescing after a severe illness, during which he underwent two operations at the American Hospital, and left this week for St. Augustine, Fla., where he hopes to recuperate his health. Ralph's host of friends are hoping to see him back on the job soon, full of the old pep and ginger.

"Always Audacious," featuring Wallace Reid, which has proved a big box office attraction for two successful weeks at the Randolph theatre, has been moved to the Or-Orpheum.

Anita Stewart and her husband, Rudy Cameron, stopped over in Chicago on their way to the Coast long enough to visit the Rothacker laboratories. Other Rothacker laboratory visitors this week were Charles Christy and Reginald Warde. Mr. Warde plans to sail for Europe on the Imperator on November 14.

The Netherlands East Indian Government plans to enter educational film production on a large scale. G. J. van Eijbergen, a government official, is now in the United States with a view to establishing an East Indian laboratory.

A. M. Gallos, president of Gallos Enterprises, Inc., of Chicago, who is releasing Equity Pictures in Illinois and Indiana

The educational pictures which the Government will produce in the East Indies will be used among the people of the East Indies.

Traveling movie theatres, consisting of an auto truck, generator, projector and portable screen, will be sent to the rural districts. Health films probably will be the first film produced.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron J. Jones have left on the Steamship Aquitania for a visit to England, Scotland and Paris to be gone about six weeks. They will go by aeroplane from London to Paris. On Monday November 1st, the night before they sailed, Mr. and Mrs. Jones were entertained at a farewell dinner given at the Biltmore Hotel, which was given by Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Linick and Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. Schaefer, who were in New York so that they might accompany them to the docks to bid them farewell. Mr. and Mrs. Jones were presented with many handsome gifts when they left. Mr. Linick and Mr. Schaefer returned to Chicago on Thursday to resume the business activities during Mr. Jones' absence of a few weeks.

The increasing importance being given to the "short subject" by exhibitors in the Chicago territory is indicated in the recent establishment by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of special "short subject departments" in their Chicago and other exchanges. E. Louis Goldberg is the short subject specialist at the Chicago Paramount exchange. "Exhibitors are choosing their small features with as much care now as they used to give only to their main features," says Goldberg. "They are trying more seriously to create well-balanced programs for their theatres. The Mack Sennett comedies are in greater demand than ever before and the Paramount Magazine has become a most popular little feature. The entire Lubliner & Trinz circuit has booked the complete short subject output of Paramount, from Sennett comedies to Holmes Travelogues, including the Magazine, the Carter De Havens and the Arbuckles. The Rialto, McVickers,

A telegram received from B. D. Russell, production manager for the Capital Film Company, and Russell, Greiver & Russell, at the Doubleday Studio, states that Fritzi Ridgeway has completed work on her ninth two-reel Western.

The title of this new red-blooded two-reeler is "The Trail of Buzzards." The telegram states that the picture is a knockout. It seems that considerable good-natured rivalry is being shown between Miss Ridgeway and Mr. Cuneo. Each is trying to outdo the other in the making of their Westerns.

How the Madison, Detroit Put Over "Madonnas and Men"

On this page is shown some of the exploitation which the John H. Kunsky forces of Detroit put over in the interests of "Madonnas and Men" when this picture played the Madison theatre of that city recently.

Special paintings that transformed the lobby of the theatre into a scenic race track are shown in the several cuts and also the race horses brought from New York for a prologue number as described in the story appearing on the opposite page.

Breaking Detroit's Exploitation Records

How the Kunsky Forces Put Over "Madonnas and Men"

THAT the proper sort of exploitation pays, is strikingly demonstrated in the termination this past week of a fortnight's presentation of the spectacular production, "Madonnas and Men," at John H. Kunsky's Madison theatre, Detroit. Without a doubt the most spectacular in the manner of presentation of any screen feature ever offered in Detroit, "Madonnas and Men," was put over with a bang at the careful planning and direction of Mr. Kunsky, it being his orders that no expense be spared to make the stay of "Madonnas and Men" at his theatre, the most talked of of any picture ever given presentation in Detroit.

Arrangements were made in New York for the shipment of four pure white Arabian horses together with four massive treadmills, horse trainers, costumes and the numerous properties necessary for the proper presentation of a special prologue arranged to be shown in conjunction with the picture itself. A special prologue was mapped out in which seven actors appeared in a consistently told story with a dramatic plot and dialogue, all bearing upon the theme of the screen story itself, all ending in a smashing climax of the actual race itself in which the four white horses appeared. As the curtain rose upon the second section of the prologue the audience was presented with the scene of the horses plunging at break-neck speed across the stage drawing behind them two chariots with all wheels spinning and containing between them five people. Through a cleverly arranged piece of stage work, the second chariot slowly drew up upon the first vehicle and as it passed abreast a girl was snatched bodily from the first chariot into that of the second, all being performed in the most dramatic manner, while with the effect of a moving panorama as a background the proper swift action was given to the whole scene, which evoked thunderous applause at each performance, thus giving a punchy introduction to the beginning of the feature itself and working smoothly into the telling of the screen story, all being accompanied by a special musical score as arranged for the large Madison orchestra.

A special lobby display was built along elaborate lines carrying out the general idea of the entrance to the Roman Circus, and giving mental impression to those entering the theatre which would assist in the general atmosphere of the Roman prelude to the main story itself, as offered in the film. Two weeks before the showing of the film an extensive advertising campaign was instituted by the Kunsky offices which daily grew in magnitude, building up public interest to the highest pitch and topping off the display space purchased in all newspapers with a great flash upon the opening day, and with the following days of presentation a well-balanced program of space purchase was carried out to just the proper effect and with striking results, while under the direction of General Manager Trendle a wide publicity campaign was instituted in other directions among which was general street car advertising and a daily parade of the horses decked out in gay red blankets, all bearing the name of the attraction and the theatre at which it was playing.

John H. Kunsky, already nationally known in the screen world for the manner in which he presents the features played in his various fine theatres in Detroit, has but added another and spectacularly prominent leaf to his laurels.

Essay Stunt Gets Attention

Manager Miller of the T. and D. Theatre, San Jose, Puts Over "What Women Love"

A NEW significance has been brought to bear on the idea of cooperative advertising between an exhibitor and the local merchants serving the district in which he is located. It is a novel prize contest which not only adds to the efficacy of the merchant's advertising, but also increases the drawing power even above that given by the full page display which is gained through the original idea, of distributing the cost of such large space among ten or eleven advertisers.

A. M. Miller, manager of the T. and D. theatre, San Jose, Cal., is the originator of the prize contest angle of this method of advertising. He put it over in effective style in connection with his theatre's showing of "What Women Love."

He got ten merchants interested in cooperation with him in taking a full page in local newspapers with advertisements based on the title of the picture. The merchants all made it known that they sold the particular thing that women love, in conjunction with the theatre advertising of a four days' showing of the feature picture.

In addition, however, each of the merchants offered a prize for the best essay not exceeding 150 words in length and setting forth what article in their stock women love and why. The theatre offered a $5 merchandise prize good at any of the ten stores to each of the winners of the individual prizes.

The contest attracted wide attention due to the value of the prizes offered by some of the merchants. A jeweler signed to give a $30 wrist watch to the person who gave the best reason in 150 words why women love any particular article in his store. A millinery store offered a high priced hat; a household goods store offered a $20 merchandise bond; a ladies tailor offered a $20 reduction on a suit; a beauty parlor offered $15 in merchandise or service; a photographer offered $20 worth of any style of photographs; a drug store a $20 toilet set; a shoe store the best pair of shoes in the place and a dry goods store offered $20 worth of merchandise.

Naturally, the advertising of the motion picture predominated the entire page, but the efficiency of it as far as the theatre was concerned was greatly enhanced by the fact that all essays were to be turned into the theatre before it closed on the second day's showing of "What Women Love," and the announcement of the prize winners was made at the theatre between showings on the last night the First National feature was the attraction.

The multiplicity of the prizes offered, as well as their value, drew the widest sort of interest in the contest. Each of the stores, having a vital interest in the affair, cooperated with Mr. Miller in arranging a window display based upon the production in which the prize contest was announced and the individual prize offered by the store displayed.

"A great effect of the contest which may not appear on the surface," said Mr. Miller, "was the great curiosity aroused as to what the picture would disclose as the producers' idea of what women love. Nearly every person in San Jose was working for one of the prizes, or had been drafted as a member of an advisory committee to aid some contestant in deciding what women love, so the natural consequence was that nearly everybody wanted to see the picture and learn what women love. It is one of the greatest runs we have ever experienced."

Man o' War Picture Taken to Newspapers

Probably for the first time in the history of motion pictures, a production has been literally taken to the newspapers—exhibited right in the working rooms before the editorial staffs and resulting in a column of publicity that would never materialize from "invitation showings" or special presentations.

This striking piece of exploitation was accomplished by Manager Joseph Goldberg, of the Louisville exchanges of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., in connection with "The Race of the Age." The city editor of the Louisville Herald arranged to have all of the employees of the editorial department and the composing room present for the screening. The staffs of the Courier-Journal and its afternoon edition, "The Times," saw the picture screened in the sporting editor's office.

"The Race of the Age" was booked for simultaneous showings at Keith's Mary Anderson theatre and the Strand. At former it was featured above the vaudeville bill and at the Strand it was given sixty per cent prominence over the five-reel picture. There was a wealth of notices written by the sporting editors of the various papers that preceded the advertising announcements and which brought many people outside of regular fans to the two houses.

The big race meeting being in progress at Churchill Downs, there was special exploitation used at the track. Some thirty thousand circulars similar to those used in New York were distributed, and it was arranged to have reading notices appear on the same pages with the list of entries and charts for each day's races.

During the engagement the Strand used a special front, largely made up of paintings and scenes from the pictures which attracted a great amount of attention.

Real Wedding Exploitation Stunt at Omaha

The climax of "In the Heart of a Fool," a Mayflower success, inspired the management of the Rialto theatre, Omaha, to stage a fitting and appealing prologue in the performance of a bona fide wedding on the stage of the show house.

Unlimited publicity was given to the event in open announcements that merchants in the city would contribute presents to the bride and groom.

The Rev. Charles W. Savage, known throughout the Middle West as the "marrying parson," consented to perform the ceremony. This alone was an appealing medium of publicity.

A real wedding in public! Strange!

The public talked about it, joked about it and dreamed about it—until—it actually occurred. Loquacious advertising on the event took the city by storm.

Standing room was sold and crowds of curious movie fans, maids and widows thronged about the lobby of the Rialto theatre awaiting even a glimpse of the ceremony.

The wedding served as a prologue to the picture. The first ten rows in the theatre, it was announced, were reserved for widows and maids. Thus, more comment in public.

As the ceremony was concluded and a male quartette finished singing "Oh, Promise Me," the newlywed bride flung the wedding bouquet into the audience, a replica of the climax of the picture. This action was a revival of an ancient bridal adage that whosoever catches the bouquet will wed within the year.

Then there was flashed on the screen, the wedding scene in the picture which ran into the beginning of the play.

Here Is Another Short Subject Thriller

PATHE'S current events issue for the present week is presenting a strip at both the Capitol and Rivoli theatres, New York, which is good for some exploitation attention in that it is productive of real thrills in the aeroplane stunt line, which suggests a new adage, "Fools and their lives soon part."

Released under a title of "A special presentation in honor of the Pathe News tenth anniversary," the strip shows one Morton St. Clair mounting to the top wing of an aeroplane, standing erect as it "hops off," and as the machine circles over New York and the bay, performing daredevil stunts alone and with an assistant who takes as many chances as does St. Clair.

The strip is long enough to hold the screen for about ten minutes, and properly exploited will be considerable of a box office attraction.

Publishes Music Score as Exploitation

Using the music score arranged for a motion picture as an exploitation aid is something new. The Tribune of Great Falls, Mont., published the complete music synchronization for the showing of "Scratch My Back" at the Alcazar as a matter of news that would interest patrons of the theatre who were also readers of the Tribune.

Three-fourths of a column of space under a two-column head was devoted to the music score for "Scratch My Back," together with an explanation of the method of arranging and scoring feature pictures. The fact that the motion picture editor of a newspaper would go out of his way to obtain the score for a screen story for publication proves the increasing importance of the musical setting for pictures and that the fans are accepting a good musical arrangement as a necessary part of a feature attraction. The increasing importance of the musical setting is just beginning to open up a new avenue for publicity which may in the future expand beyond any limits at present ever dreamed of.

Appeal to Children, Says Niebes

Appealing to children is generally a sure-fire way of arousing interest in a motion picture production and interest that will cash in at the box office.

John E. Niebes, manager of the Dawn theatre, Detroit, has just completed a stunt that should prove valuable to any exhibitor.

In connection with "The Jack-Knife Man," he conducted a contest in which jack-knives and free tickets were given for the best specimens of wood-carving submitted. It was put over almost entirely by a window display at the hardware store where the prizes were purchased, and by one unique display in a lobby frame at the Dawn theatre.

The window display at the hardware store announced the contest and carried two cards attractively worded and with advertising that appealed to prospective patrons of adult age. The main part of the display, however, was directed at the youths of the city. The five knives that were to be given as prizes were displayed in connection with a poster and the window also displayed several samples of wood carving art. The display at the theatre was made up entirely of specimens of wood carvings with a small card announcing the contest.

Mr. Niebes frankly admits that the number of amateur wood carvers in Detroit surpassed his most ambitious estimate. The number who sent in carvings was so great that he saw the possibility of having a night house crowded with half-price admissions to the exclusion of any adults, so instead of awarding the prizes at an evening performance, as he had planned, he ran a special matinee at four o'clock, after school, at which the prize winners were announced and the jack-knives and tickets given out.

"The Horn" Vocal Solo at the Capitol

"THE HORN," famous bass solo number, is presented at the Capitol theatre, New York, this week, by Herbert Waterous.

The singer is attired in costume suggestive of the character of the story, wide hat, doublet and knickers, and cape. He renders the number from a pedestal that portends to be a rock among many of a mountain top exterior provided by Artist Wenger. A rugged and irregular sky line is shown in perspective and the set pieces and bottom portion of the back drop present proper atmosphere for the number.

"Seer" Engaged for "Fortune Teller" Run

Do people—sane, intelligent people—believe in fortune telling, mind reading and the like? The management of the Forsyth theatre of Atlanta had a hunch that they do and so backed the belief with exploitation for "The Fortune Teller" that among other things led to the engagement of a "seer" to give out the usual sort of information on love, business, locating lost articles, missing friends and relatives. This man appeared immediately after each showing of "The Fortune Teller," and his success was really amazing.

Enormous crowds of people greeted the picture and the "seer" at each performance, and the answers he gave were so correct that a little buzz went over the house at each fresh indication of his powers.

The lobby was most effective, and added no little to the sum-total of the week's results. The lobby is square in shape, and of good size, flanked on one side by the box-office and manager's office, on the other by a soda fountain. Decks of playing cards were strung diagonally across the lobby, from the four corners of the ceiling, in festoons. in the center of the lobby, an enormous cut-out of Miss Rambeau, telling fortunes with cards, caught the eye of every passer-by.

Perhaps one of the most effective parts of the arrangement with Webster, the "seer," was that, through an agreement with a local newspaper, he also answered questions through the columns of the paper.

The policy of the Forsyth is three-day runs, but so enormously successful was this picture, with its interesting exploitation, that it was held over for a week.

Kinema Offers New Suggestion in Presentation

Have you solved the problem of eliminating useless noise from your theatre?

Or are you one of those lucky exhibitors whose patrons never read the titles out loud, never visit while a picture is being run, or stage a ten-round smashing, no-decision bout with a package of gum or sticky candy?

If you aren't in the latter class, here is a system devised by the management of the Kinema theatre, which is working out successfully in eliminating the minor noises and nuisances which are so annoying to the majority of the picture theatre patrons. The kinema has had printed with luminous ink, reading:

"We sincerely hope not to offend by calling your attention to your present demonstration, which is embarrassing to those sitting near you.

"Respectfully,

"The Management."

These cards are in possession of the ushers who merely hand them to persons who are reading titles, talking, or otherwise making noise.

Back of the cards is some deep thought and analytical study. The management of the Kienma has stood the minor noises without protest rather than have an usher speak to the offenders because of the argument which is so apt to follow.

The decision was reached that a considerable part of the patron's indignation at being requested to keep silent was due to the public nature of the reprimand. The fact that even after an altercation, the patron usually maintained quiet led to the conclusion that most patrons unconsciously start talking without realizing that they are disturbing the people sitting near them.

Hence the cards, and the instructions to ushers not to linger after delivering them.

How They Do It In Detroit

"What's Your Hurry?" Exploitation Captures Entire Automobile City

THAT proper exploitation of a picture pays, is well illustrated in the recent exploitation of "What's Your Hurry?" by the Adams theatre, Detroit.

The Adams is a first-run down town house, handling exclusive initial presentations along with its twin sister, the Madison.

Wallace Reid has always proven an especially good drawing card in Detroit, but, like everything else, the more effort that is put into the selling, the greater the sales. So, in the exploitation of Reid in his latest play nothing was left undone to make it the biggest Reid week in the history of the house. Seizing upon the unusually catchy titled as a "Safety First" slogan, Howard O. Pierce, publicity and exploitation manager for the Kunsky interests, and Manager Tom Moule of the Madison and Adams, aided ably by Leslie T. Whelan, exploitation manager for the Detroit and Michigan Paramount office, immediately took the matter of a "Safety First" campaign up with the Police Commissioner, with the result that the department agreed to employ the slogan, "What's Your Hurry?" in a general educational plan in safety first ideas. As a result a "What's Your Hurry?" Day was selected by the police department and announcement made through the daily press along with special eight-column strips and editorials carried by the newspapers. The police department was officially instructed to aid and abet through the carrying of attractive "What's Your Hurry?" 12 x 12 cards, printed on both sides and carrying in block type in red ink the slogan "What's Your Hurry?" Nothing was said of Wallace Reid, but the public was left to connect up the name of Reid with the slogan, which it did almost instantaneously. Every traffic "crowsnest" on Woodward avenue and other main thoroughfares were plastered with the "What's Your Hurry?" cards, while every traffic cop was instructed that his semaphore was to carry at least two cards as described, so that it could be seen from all directions. Arrangements were made with all taxi lines in the city to carry a "What's Your Hurry?" sign hanging in the rear window of the closed body of the car so that it might be seen by all, while the Detroit Trucking Association agreed to have all trucks also carry the slogan well displayed. In addition to this the slogan "caught on" with the motorists in general, with the result that more than ten thousand of these cards were given away and displayed by motorists throughout the city, the demand being even greater than the supply. The police also allowed, for the first time in Detroit history, the name of a theatrical attraction to be painted in large twenty-inch letters upon the cross walks and sidewalks of the downtown section, so that the pedestrian stared down upon the great white glaring letters wherever he went, reading, "What's Your Hurry?"

But arrangements for publicity were not left there. Messrs. Pierce, Moule and Whelan got busy on the telephone, called the Mack Motor Truck Company, telling them that if they wanted to see something worth while they had better toddle down to a special screening for them of "What's Your Hurry?" in which the Mack truck showed a few individual stunts of its own. And the Mack people came, saw, and went away, all full of pep after having promised they would furnish three brand new Mack trucks all properly decorated with banners advertising "What's Your in "What's Your Hurry?' 'at the Adams.

Circus "Tie-up" for Tarzan Pictures

Manager George M. Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2, Atlanta, is to be congratulated on his acumen in booking the Tarzan pictures so that the second—and last—of his run should fall on circus day. On Monday preceding "Circus Day," the following Monday, he played "Tarzan of the Apes," doing just his usual amount of publicity, and with a lobby of animals, cut-out from "paper." Two lions at the left, a beautiful leopard and a tiger at the right, with an elephant at the back on whose back was mounted the girl and Tarzan, was very effective. Over this, and forming a sort of carpet, Spanish moss had been plentifully distributed.

The advertising for this picture stated that the sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes" would follow, so that any one who objected to seeing only half a story could be assured of the whole thing at his theatre. "Tarzan of the Apes" played a two-day engagement to splendid houses—and this in spite of the fact that it was a second-run picture.

On the following Monday, the same lobby front was used, but with additions. To begin with, Mr. Schmidt, failing in an effort to get a live lion, in a cage, borrowed the big stuffed one which is used by the Lion Collar Company occasionally in their window displays. The head of this lion is hinged so it can be wound up, and the head will nod menacingly, by the hour. It is in a crouched position, as if ready to spring. A live ape, weighing sixty-five pounds, was borrowed from the circus, with some other properties that added immeasurably to the interest in the front. A trainer, clad as Tarzan was—in the skins of animals—put the ape through its paces whenever a crowd formed—and the business of those two days more than doubled the previous run.

And in relating the borrowing of the lion, Mr. Schmidt remembered that the lion was an old friend of his, as he had used him several months ago, in connection with a lobby for "The Lion and the Mouse," when the lion was mounted on a platform, on which a small mechanical mouse did all sorts of amusing tricks.

Criterion Theatre Solves Orchestra Problem

Ever since Manager Willard Patterson, of the Criterion theatre, Atlanta, installed the orchestra for which the theatre is now famous, it has been a most enjoyable feature of the program. Special musical settings are arranged for every feature, and the time of the feature has been so arranged that the orchestra plays the full length of the feature, while the organ plays incidental music—comedies, news weeklies, etc.

But the orchestra has presented something of a problem, in that it has grown in strength and excellence—and the quarters originally allotted for the orchestra has remained stationary. With the addition of a harp and two French horns, something had to be done.

It was accomplished by cutting away the stage, raising the orchestra "pit" to a foot above the floor-level of the theatre, building a railing at the back, and covering the opening at the front with soft, dull-blue velvet curtains. By this arrangement, the orchestra is brought into the view of the audience, which is a most satisfactory thing, particularly when a solo, or other featured number, is being given.

The really amazing fact about it is that this remarkable change was effected between closing Saturday night, and opening Monday morning. There are some minor details still to be arranged, but these are so small as to be of no consequence.

In celebration of his new arrangement, Mr. Patterson's ad in the local papers on Sunday was a hand-drawn one, calling attention to the new "setting" for his orchestra—which is the apple of his eye, by the way, and one of, if not the, finest organizations in the South.

Tooker Puts Over Big Newspaper Smash

After a considerable period of "looking on" the exhibitors of Elmira, N. Y., have joined the exploitation ranks, or at least George H. Tooker, manager of the Regent theatre of that city, has become a convert if inspection of a recent issue of the Elmira Star-Gazette containing a two-page co-operative display ad for "Something to Think About" is to be taken as a criterion.

Some half dozen of Elmira's prominent mercantile concerns clubbed in with Manager Tooker with ads that began with "Something to Think About" and extolled the merits of their wares. Mr. Tooker used a third of a page with text matter and cuts about the picture.

The Regent usually plays a feature three days, but Manager Tooker booked "Something to Think About" a full week, wisely figuring that his exploitation and the fame of the picture would increase business to such an extent that the double-time engagement would be profitable.

Newspaper and Theatre Cooperate on "Leopard Woman"

The management of the Superba theatre, incident to the week's presentation of "The Leopard Woman," used very successfully in arousing public interest in the plan of running a guessing contest in connection with the San Diego Sun, an evening paper, with six tickets to the house to each of the first six correct answers. The first day the contest was on a single column strip showing a part of a woman's head presented, with the query underneath, "Do you know her?" The guesses began to pour in immediately. The second day the paper carried a two-column cut showing the remainder of the woman's head, and then the number of contestants grew rapidly, for, by placing the portions of the two papers together, the whole portrait was shown. The third day the complete picture was given, with the announcement that it was that of Louise Glaum. "The Leopard Woman."

Ellison's Campaign for Suds

Teaser Ads and Lobby Display Win at Saenger's Meridan Theatre

WHEN "Suds" played Saenger's Meridan theatre of Meridan, Miss., recently, Manager Frank C. Ellison put over an exploitation campaign which informed everyone fully about the attraction.

The campaign began with teaser newspaper ads with just the word "Suds" carried in all the papers for several days. Mr. Ellison then broke into the evening sheet with a full page display the issue previous to the opening.

Following the page announcement Mr. Ellison handed some "Suds" mats, press notices, etc., over to the advertising solicitor for the Star and the result was a big bunch of cooperative ads all boosting the picture and making a big splash that Meridan people take notice. It so happens that the two Meridan papers are in a fight for supremacy, so the rival of the Star, the Dispatch, not to be outdone, was also prevailed upon to go the limit in advertising "Suds."

For three days both papers carried so much "Suds" publicity that they looked like press sheets for the feature. Special articles, pictures of Mary, press blurbs and all manner of reading and display matter were carried, each publication trying to outdo the other in the matter of advertising and publicity. Mr. Ellison did not spend anything beyond his usual appropriation in advertising the picture, most of the exploitation he received coming from the merchants and the newspapers.

In speaking of other exploitation put over for the picture, Mr. Ellison says:

"We used the clothesline stunt in the lobby of the theatre—that is, we had a line of baby clothes stretched across the lobby and on each garment was a painted letter, which spelled out, gave "Mary Pickford, in 'Suds'." In addition, we secured two

Public Library Lends Shusterman Its Aid

Public libraries have been added to the possible adjuncts for motion pictures. Aaron Shustermann, manager of the Empire theatre, New Brunswick, N. J., is authority for the statement that he did a better business at a smaller cost than that which accompanied a tie-up he arranged for by means of a double advertising between himself and the library. The opportunity occurred to him because he was wide-awake enough to want to seek novel information about a picture he had booked and went to the public library to find it. The picture on which he was looking for exploitation material was "Heart o' the Hills." Mr. Shusterman thought that there might be some facts connected with customs in the Kentucky Hills where the scenes of the story are laid that could aid him in devising a novel exploitation campaign. His inquiry at the library for books on the subject brought the answer which gave him his idea for the whole special exploitation. He found that the library made a weekly specialty of certain subjects and had a special set of shelves on which books relating to that subject were placed for study work by the library patrons during that week. His inquiry in regard to the hills of Kentucky brought a query from the librarian as to why he was interested in it, with the explanation that it would be a good subject for a specialty for some week. Then Mr. Shustermann's idea came to him. He found by discussing the proposition with the librarian that there was far less interest in the weekly specialties than their preparations deserved and the library desired. The exhibitor volunteered to see that the Kentucky hills week was advertised widely if they could arrange to hold it the week before "Heart o' the Hills" was the attraction at the Empire. The librarian enthusiastically agreed, especially when Mr. Shustermann offered to have small circulars prepared and mailed to every one holding a card in the library, in addition to the mailing list of the theatre. That was Mr. Shustermann's sole exploitation outside his regular newspaper advertisement.

washing machines and a dainty girl to act as laundress and kept the machines "Making Suds for Mary." This display attracted a great deal of interest. Every laundry wagon in town carried banners tying up the picture with the laundry and the big Studebaker Auto Agency carried banners on every available Studebaker in town. The local dry-cleaning works got in on it, too, and two drug stores made special window displays using the picture to boost toilet soap sales, whilst a department store put on a sale of wash fabrics.

Kinema Uses Plunkett's Prologue Idea

What has been termed one of the most picturesque as well as timely prologues ever introducing a special feature was that staged by W. E. Newberry, manager of the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, in connection with "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." The little act included a setting of two scenes which were taken from the picture itself, while the action was left to Marie Rich and George Banta, Jr., two song favorites of the West Coast. It consisted of a little farewell scene and the singing of two of the songs taken from George Cohan's play, "Mary Is a Grand Old Name," and "So Long, Mary." At the parting of the curtain, the station scene was revealed to the audience just as it appeared in the picture, with the ticket booth and front of the stage standing out quite strong. On this scene there hurried a man with a grip. The man bought his ticket and walked over beneath the light to read it over. And as he did so, a girl entered. She bought her ticket. Then they saw each other and sat together on their grips, where they sang "Mary Is a Grand Old Name." This finished, as she walked off the stage he watched her and started out in the words of "So Long, Mary." And then came the second part of the prologue. In the center of the Kinema stage there was created a platform made to resemble the rear end of a railroad train. The train was complete in every detail, with the red and green lights shining up in the darkness of the stage. All about this train had been erected a temporary screen. During the previous week, the Kinema management had taken a scene from the front end of a train through some beautifully picturesque parts of California. And now this scenic was thrown on the screen with the rear end of the constructed train just covering the space that would be held by a train on the tracks of the scenic. The result was as desired. The orchestra gave such imitations of a rushing train as made the scene even more realistic. Through deep canyons and over trestles and bridges the train raced onward. And on the rear platform stood "Mary," waving her hand, while on the stage to the side stood "The Kid," waving farewell and singing "So Long, Mary." The scene finally faded on the last words of the song, by the train diving into a tunnel.

And still the visual examples of good exploitation for "Down on the Farm" continue to arrive. On this page are stage settings used by various theatres for this king of exploitation pictures.

At the right is another stage setting and prologue creation originated by our good friend, W. S. McLaren, manager of the Majestic theatre of Jackson, Mich.

Below will be seen a view of the creation which Loew's Valentine theatre of Toledo, Ohio, used for its recent engagement of "Down on the Farm."

How Sid Grauman Featured the Man o' War Picture

Sid Grauman last week demonstrated how a short subject can be made the dominant portion of a program and that it lends itself just as well to special stunts as does the longer feature. The showing of "The Race of the Age" was the occasion for this.

Preceding the showing of the picture the curtains parted, showing a typical racing stable, familiar to the people of Los Angeles before the sport of the kings was put under the ban. Trainers, stable boys, jockeys and all the accoutrements of the race track were in evidence. There was a carefully prepared dialogue, including the language of the race track and several songs that fitted into the atmosphere.

The real punch was supplied with the introduction of "Headlight," a trained horse who was put through a series of stunts that evoked great enthusiasm.

The whole effect of the prologue was to center attention on equine intelligence, as was to be demonstrated a little later in the picture by the victory of the world's super horse.

The picture herewith shows "Sid" in the act of whipping the prologue act into shape. "Headlight" is the white horse standing on the block, while the animal representing the famous winner is seen in the background.

Sid Grauman is everywhere during the directing of such acts and his prologues. First he gets it as he thinks it ought to be on the stage.

Then he views it from the back of the house and various parts of the theatre.

His prologues and big acts have gained him national reputation as a showman and his program always includes a large number of special acts. Generally the prologue is closely identified with the feature picture, but this is not always the case.

But regardless of what is the motive, a Grauman specialty number is entertainment in itself and does more than provide atmosphere for an attraction.

Brown's "Call Pico 881" Arouses Curiosity

An example of what can be accomplished by special exploitation work was most satisfactorily shown at Clune's Broadway theatre the week ending October 30, when receipts made new history for this box office. Manager F. L. Browne issued ten thousand cards the week preceding the showing on which was printed, "You Never Can Tell, phone Pico 881." This brought hundreds of inquiries every day. This was followed up by newspaper and billboard advertising. In the advertising the only test matter in addition to a very terse announcement of the Realart Bebe Daniels picture, titled "You Never Can Tell," was a thirty-word quotation from the review of the picture printed in Motion Picture News; to make the quotation more emphatic Mr. Browne gave the date of the issue, page number following the quotation.

During the showing Manager Browne secured considerable space in the newspapers by getting up a program for the weekly meeting of the Los Angeles Advertising Club, serving at this meeting as chairman of the day. Bebe Daniels, who starred in "You Never Can Tell," was guest of honor and numbers of the program were given by members of Clune's theatre.

MacSwiney Funeral Strip in New Weekly

A SPECIAL release of the International News showing intimate scenes in connection with the funeral of Lord Mayor MacSwiney is being shown at the Broadway houses this week.

This strip shows views well out of the ordinary and possesses particular exploitation possibilities where Catholics reside. The picture will run about ten minutes and shows scenes of the crowds that threatened to start trouble with the English police, the funeral march and parade, a remarkable demonstration and religious services conducted. The photography in comparison with most scenes shot in England is remarkably good, and the camera angles obtained unusual.

The "Madame X" stunt in which the Ringling Bros. and Bailey circus figured as told in the accompanying story relative to exploitation on "Madame X," by the Granby theatre, Norfolk, Va.

About Fourton's "Madame X" Stunts

Cranby Theatre, Norfolk, Stages Fine Exploitation Campaign

AN intensive publicity campaign carried on by a headquarters exploitation representative put "Madame X" over to a week of extraordinary business in a three-day house in Norfolk, Va., despite the opposition of the Ringling-Barnum & Bailey circus, a one-day appearance of Billy Sunday and strong opposition in the picture theatres. H. C. Fourton, manager of the Granby theatre, and Otto Wells of the Wells circuit of theatres, gave the Goldwyn man the most helpful co-operation.

A unique lobby display was originated and built by W. R. Ferguson of Goldwyn's headquarters office. It consisted of a gigantic letter X ten feet high, painted a deep red, set on a pivot so that it revolved like a windmill. It was mounted in the entrance arch above the heads of persons entering the theatre or passing along the sidewalk. Where the two strokes of the X cross was painted a portrait of Miss Frederick. The mechanism was so arranged that the big X stopped at a certain time.

The circus itself was utilized in two ways to help boom the showing of "Madame X." Eight boys were engaged to march 100 yards ahead of the circus parade bearing full sheet white cards on which were printed in black (except the X, which was red) the letters forming "Madame X," with the name of the theatre. Every person watching the parade could not help learning that "Madame X" was showing at the Granby. In the evening Mr. Ferguson bought circus tickets for the eight boys, who smuggled the white cards into the arena with them. There they formed in line, single file, and marched around the arena with the words "Madame X" and "Granby" facing the great audience. The stunt created such a stir that the Norfolk Tribune the next day printed a three-column picture of the boys parading with the "Madame X" sign under the caption, "Madame X Attends the Circus."

An imitation police court summons was served on drivers of standing motor cars, each "summons" filled in with the number of the automobile in which it was left.

The red-lining of a daily newspaper, the Virginian-Pilot, was worked for the first time in Norfolk and aroused widespread interest. Door-knob tags proved effective and the newspaper advertising helped. The combined result of all this exploitation was that the lobby of the Granby was jammed at twelve o'clock of the first day's showing and business was enormous for the week —in a three-day house.

How Burkhart Does Things For and In Crestline

Crestline, Ohio, is more noted as a railroad junction than as a theatre town, but that doesn't prevent Manager Leo Burkhart, of the Hippodrome, from pushing his house right up in the limelight, and getting it talked about fully as much by the railroad men as by the 3,700 residents of Crestline.

Being very much of a live wire, Manager Burkhart has linked up his house with the life of the town. In other words, he has joined up with the railroad employes, and whenever he has what he considers a regular show, he runs a special midnight performance for the benefit of the men who are off duty at that time. "The Toll Gate" did a tremendous midnight business. So did "Why Change Your Wife."

Burkhart isn't specializing in railroad employes to the exclusion of the Crestline residents. Far be it from so! He's going after the regular Crestline business strong and he's getting it, too. He uses a big teaser mailing list. He says he has met with great success sending out telegrams to the representative citizens of his town. They have responded generously with their quarters. Window cards and more generous newspaper advertising are all contributing their share to the success of the present Hippodrome policy, and its success is now so assured that Manager Burkhart is able to get city prices for his shows—35 cents regularly, with a boost of from five to fifteen cents for the specials. Burkhart gives his recipe as follows: Cater to the public. Give 'em what they want, not what you want. And always be on the level with your patron. Don't abuse their confidence. Don't tell 'em you've got a good show when you haven't. Then they'll gladly shell out when you say that you've got a big picture and have to get more money from 'em."

Novel and effective lobby display for "Wanted at Headquarters" used by the Superba theatre, Los Angeles

Jones Originates Nobby Lobby Display

The local press and the public are congratulating Manager W. E. Jones for the very artistic and unique lobby display that he is using to exploit "Wanted at Headquarters." The lobby is decorated to represent one of the little railroad ticket and telegraph offices that can be found along any railroad. Due to the fact that the railroad scenes in this production were filmed along the Southern Pacific tracks, this railroad company lent its support by co-operating to the extent of furnishing switches, switch lights, lanterns, flags, rear end lights, etc. In furnishing this equipment they derived therefrom quite a bit of publicity for themselves, as the station was made from two scenic flats and painted to represent one of the stations on their line. The Western Union Company furnished the telegraph instruments that can be plainly heard out into the streets, as well as all wiring insulators and other telegraphic material. For the use of this equipment there was tacked to the wall of the depot and causing this scenery to look even more realistic an enamel sign such as found on the exterior of all depots advertising cablegrams and telegrams. A cut-out of an engine with white paper headlights and front lights was placed in the center of the lobby, and across the sidewalk to the curb was drawn white lines to represent ties and rails. On each side of this was placed miniature crossing signs, making the entire layout fairly exude the atmosphere of a wayside station.

Phil. Theatre Gives Single Reel Extra Attention

At the Stanton (formerly the Stanley) theatre, Philadelphia, during the week of November 6, a special feature of the program was Prizma's "Where Poppies Bloom." During the time that this picture was being shown, Mrs. Emily Stokes Hager, a singer who has at various times rendered solos in the musical numbers, recited "In Flanders Field." It was very impressive and the audience seemed to be keenly moved.

"Flivvers" Advertise Lloyd Comedy at Dayton

Dayton, Ohio, gets a new thrill nearly every week. Dayton is the home of Ascher's Auditorium and the Auditorium boasts as live a crowd of exploitation men as ever rigged a ballyhoo.

Novelty is their long suit. It is infrequent that they employ the same stunt twice in succession. This takes thought and close application to the changing whims of the public, but somehow the Auditorium bunch is always there and consistently draw the crowd to their house.

Typical of the unusual methods of this theatre is the comedy flivver parade recently staged in connection with "Get Out and Get Under." You'll have to write to the Auditorium to find out how they dug up all the flivvers, but on the first day of the show, Dayton saw the strangest collection of cars ever assembled. New and shiny flivvers, flivvers that had long since seen better days, flivvers the vintage of 1910 and cars that one never would suspect were flivvers, groaned and chugged and wheezed down the leading streets of the town—each and every machine bearing a sign announcing the showing of "Get Out and Get Under" at the Auditorium. Oh, yes, there were also miniature models of flivvers which attracted much attention.

Before the show opened the various cars lined up in front of the Auditorium and attracted big crowds.

This is a good live stunt, adaptable in many ways to the use of any showman.

Reisenfeld's Prologue for "Idols of Clay"

THE atmosphere of the first part of "Idols of Clay," that of a typical tropical locale, is very nicely presented in a prologue being given with this picture at the Criterion theatre, New York.

The drapes part showing a drop that represents a South Sea Island exterior with palm trees in the distance and a sky line scarlet with the rays of a setting tropical sun. In front of this drop is a palm tree cut out and banked on each side of the stage gray drapes decorated with potted palms extend down to the tormentors. Lying on the stage with its grass mats is the cast of characters who take part in the prologue. The number opens with the lights dimmed, by the singing of a Hawaiian song to the accompaniment of Hawaiian string instruments off stage. This selection is followed by a rendition of an Hawaiian dance with Thalia Zanou as the soloist. Miss Zanou rises from her reclining position up stage and dances to the front and back again at the finish of her steps, when more Hawaiian songs are sung, among which are solos with chorus accompaniment, by Charles Garden, tenor, and Jean Booth, contralto. The other singers, all from Dr. Reisenfeld's "New School of Opera and Ensemble," are Mariam Lax, soprano; Eva Soble, soprano; Inga Wank, mezzosoprano, and Maurice Kostrow, baritone. All the artists are attired in Hawaiian costumes. The number is staged under the title of "South Sea Idyl."

Shea Ties Up With Local Project With Great Results

J. Frank Shea, manager of the Queen's theatre, Houston, Texas, who has been in the exploitation limelight before, because of his keen exploitation intuition, again demonstrated his capacity for taking advantage of local conditions and benefitting by every break of the game when his theatre played "Something to Think About."

The city of Houston at the time was waging a strenuous campaign on the question of new dock facilities to meet the growing demand for shipping facilities. The big problem was whether or not the city should build them. John Stewart, artist and advertising man of Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Dallas, upon Mr. Shea's suggestion drew a cartoon covering the situation. A fair lady, supposed to represent the city of Houston, but looking remarkably like Gloria Swanson, gazes out upon the harbor of Houston facilities question. Before her is the issue: A $2,500,000 bond issue for improving Houston's waterway facilities. The cartoon was titled "Something to Think About." It took some persuasion to induce the Houston papers to see the advantage to themselves in running such a cartoon, but with the issue paramount in the public mind, they were eventually persuaded to use it on the first page.

In addition "Something to Think About" was tied up with local stores in a two-page advertising spread in the local papers. Indorsements from church members also furthered Manager Shea's exploitation putting the picture across for a gigantic opening. At present reports it is still going strong.

Editor Uses "What's Your Hurry?" In "Motor-orial"

The old editorial policy of propaganda having fallen by the wayside with the installation of automobile sections throughout the country as far as motor news is concerned, it remained for the Grand Rapids Sunday Herald to carry a "motor-orial" on "What's Your Hurry," in its Sunday automobile section prior to the opening of the picture by that title at a local theatre.

The "motor-orial," signed by the editor of the section, called attention to the "What's Your Hurry" campaign initiated by the Chicago, Detroit and Albany Motor clubs in their anti-speeding campaigns and urged the motorists of Grand Rapids to follow suit. It pointed out some very disastrous results of the "What's Your Hurry" speed mania and urged greater care in driving. The slogan "What's Your Hurry" occurred 12 times in the editorial of less than 500 words. It helped fix the title in the public mind and furnished excellent material for the motion picture, having been inspired by Leslie Whelan, exploitation representative for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at the Detroit Exchange.

Omaha "Go to Movies Week" a Big Hit

Real Idea Planned and Carried Out by Omaha Exhibitors and Exchangemen

OMAHA'S "Go to the Movies Week," announced recently in the NEWS, is now history and all Omaha exhibitors are shaking hands with each other and themselves at its success.

Here is the way it was put over.

The city was placarded with signs: "Go to the Movies," November 7-14.

Special productions were booked.

Artistic programs in the way of prologues and entertainment were provided.

The city was "bally-hooed" by a band on a truck from which thousands of toy balloons, each carrying a pass to some theatre, were let loose.

Special "movie" sections of the newspapers were printed.

Special stories on various phases of the motion picture industry and what it means to Omaha were run in the local papers to stimulate a concentrated interest on "Go to Movie" week.

The chief purposes of "Go to Movie" week, as expressed by Mr. Frudenfelter, was to "bring the movies closer to the family circle, that the presentation of pictures is an art in itself, that movies tend toward a moral atmosphere over the public and that the movies are America's GREATEST entertainment."

The public listened to the bally-hoo of the movie men and flocked to the theatres day after day and night after night in throngs.

"The Penalty" played at the Sun theatre. Special lighting effects and a timely prologue made up the balance of entertainment. Various types of temperament being the theme of the picture, Mr. Frudenfelter conceived the idea of symbolizing them by appropriate lighting, as when hate was manifest, the stage was flooded with red lighting, pink for love, blue for pathos. The result was highly lauded.

John Loveridge, manager of the Rialto theatre, presented "Peaceful Valley." A small town rube and his pet dog being outstanding figures in the play, the prologue was of effective similarity. A singer dressed in the habilament of a rube and carrying his pet that was "all dog," sang the musical score, "Peaceful Valley." The result was unanimous praise.

A beautiful frigid stage setting of the Northland was the background of the prologue of "Nomads of the North," which played at the Strand theatre. A baritone singer, dressed in the garb of a North woods trapper, sang "At Dawning," as the changing light effected a portrayal of Aurora Borealis rays.

R. S. Ballantyne, manager of the Moon theatre, arranged a neat prologue for the showing of "The Great Redeemer." The figures were a girl and a man, the former in a role of saving her sweetheart from taking the crooked path.

Wide publicity was given "Go to Movie" week. Bill boards, newspapers, street cars, automobiles and trucks all carried publicity on the event. The managers of the downtown theatres each placed $250 in a pool for general advertising of "Go to Movie" week.

"Each event was a thorough success," John Loveridge declared.

"'Go to Movie' week offered theatre managers a splendid opportunity of co-operating in the movies a notch ahead of other amusements," said Harry Goldberg, manager of the Sun theatre.

"'Go to Movie' week should be nation-wide," declared Harry Watts.

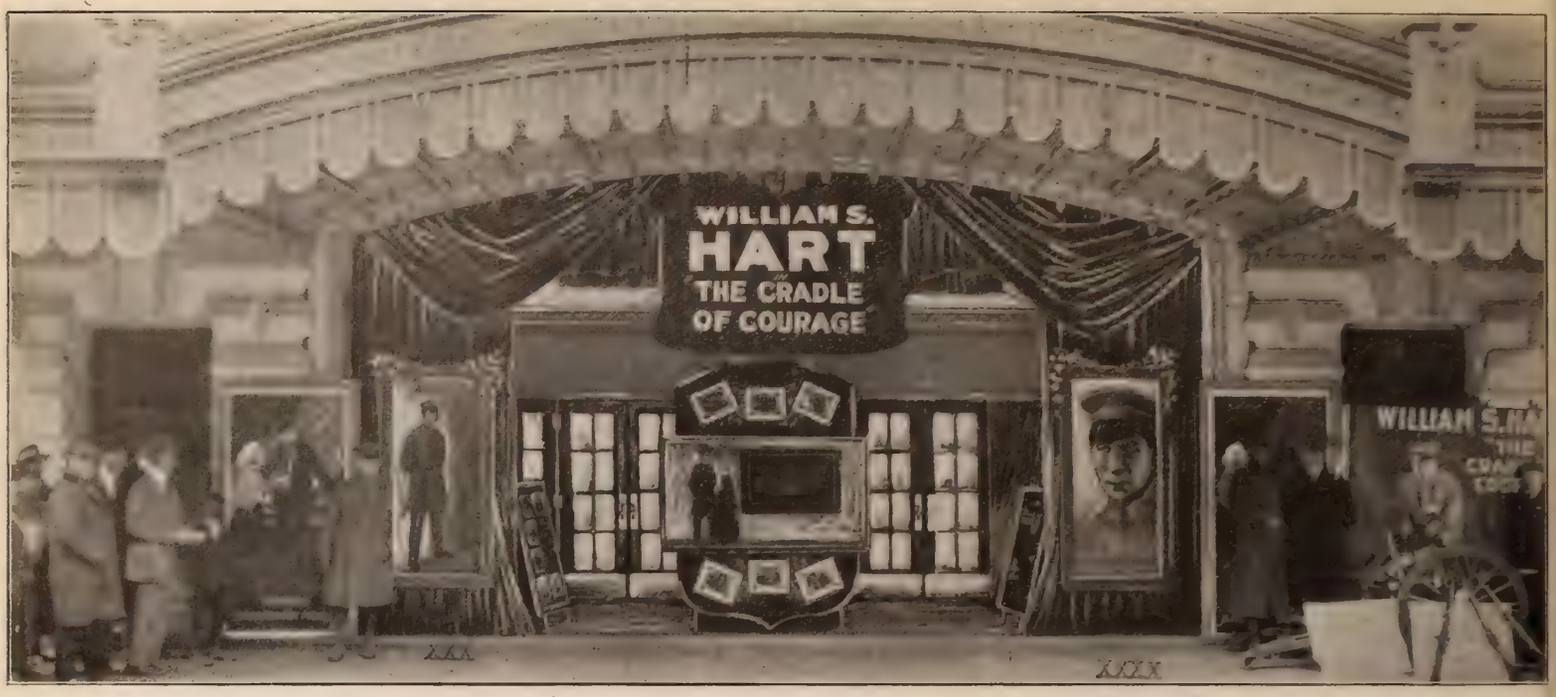
"It was put across successfully and was a means of bringing the movies closer to the family circle," said R. S. Ballantyne.

Promoters of "Go to Movie" week in Omaha have stated they will make the event state-wide next year.

Concerning the Capitol's Ballet Number

SCHUMANN'S "Ballet Carnival," with its famous characters, "Columbine" (Mlle. Gambarelli), "Harlequin" (Alexander Oumansky, and "Pantelon" (M. Leonidow) is the dancing number at the Capitol theatre this week. Five of the "impersonations" of the twenty dances of which "Carnival" is composed are used. The number is about equally divided between pantomime and dancing in which the three characters impersonate the personal friends of the composer at a carnival.

The artists are attired in the regulation costumes of the characters. A stage setting in which a futurist design cut out in two with a sky drop on which various colored floods are blended backing it, is provided by Scenic Artist John Wenger.



This is the lobby display which Jess Day, manager of the Palace theatre of Des Moines, originated for his showing of "The Cradle of Courage"

Des Moines Rialto Builds Nifty Lobby Display

"The niftiest lobby ever seen in Des Moines," was the popular expression, as reported by Norman L. Dixon, exploitation representative at the local exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in regard to the presentation of "The Cradle of Courage," by Manager Day at the Palace theatre. The artistic effect of the front of the house coupled with an exploitation tie-up with the Army Recruiting Service, helped put the picture over for a run that was a remarkable success.

Dixon put over the Army tie-up. Recruiting officers placarded the stations around the city with posters advertising "The Cradle of Courage" and the moral it carried for the prospective recruit. Posters of the tie-up were posted on all the telegraph posts and public squares in the city. Army recruiting officers and noncommissioned officers were stationed outside the Palace theatre throughout the picture's run and helped swell the attendance. At intervals in the performance one of the rcruiting officers appeared on the stage to give a brief talk on the advantages of an Army training.

The effective lobby display was Manager Day's own design. By the skilful use of art work and cut-outs he created a curtain effect above the lobby, suggestive of the stage itself. On the left and right, shadow boxes sustained the illusion with oil paintings of William S. Hart on a heavy red background, featuring for the front of the boxes. The Army gave substantial aid to the display by lending the use of its personnel and one of the cannons used in the Recruiting Service.

How beneficial the tie-up was for the recruiting service was evidenced by the fact that more than 50 enlistments were obtained. According to the recruiting office, the cost of obtaining one enlistment is estimated at $1,100, so the Army benefitted substantially.

Vocal Number at the Rivoli Pleasing

THE vocal number on the Rivoli program this week is "The Last Rose of Summer," sung by Betty Anderson, accompanied by a harpist, Anna Maria Melita.

A stage setting of simple design but effective from an artistic standpoint, is provided.

A secondary stage is erected well up stage and velvet drapes mask the back walls of the theatre except for an opening about the size of the picture curtain. Through this opening a small interior with a colonial mantelpiece and fireplace backing is disclosed. The small stage is set with a table and chairs and some small props.

The artists are attired in the costumes of the period of the song and render the selection ffrom the small stage. Artistic lightings that silhouette the soloists and make indefinite the backings used add to the beauty of the number.

"Prince Chap" Gets Army Aid at Syracuse

That an exploitation representative often has to be a diplomat as well as a pusher was illustrateed in the case of Albert S. Nathan, exploitation representative for the Buffalo territory of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, when he was exploiting the run of "The Prince Chap" at the Crescent theatre, Syracuse. The Army Recruiting Service in that city had 5c choice locations for its posters and Nathan wanted to get in on it, so he suggested the copy for a tie-up between Uncle Sam and the picture. The recruiting sergeant was of the old school and had his own ideas on what constituted good copy, but Nathan and the sergeant finally got together on something that tbrought a lot of free publicity for the theatre and top notch business for the run of "The Prince Chap" at the Crescent.

How "Nezzy" Used Vacant Windows

Small Town Exhibitor Works With His Head

AMONG the real live-wire small town exhibitors who are doing something more than the orthodox advertising is Earle S. Nesbitt, manager of the Linwood theatre of Tarkio, Mo.

A number of Mr. Nesbitt's exploitation stunts for various pictures have been recorded in various issues of the News.

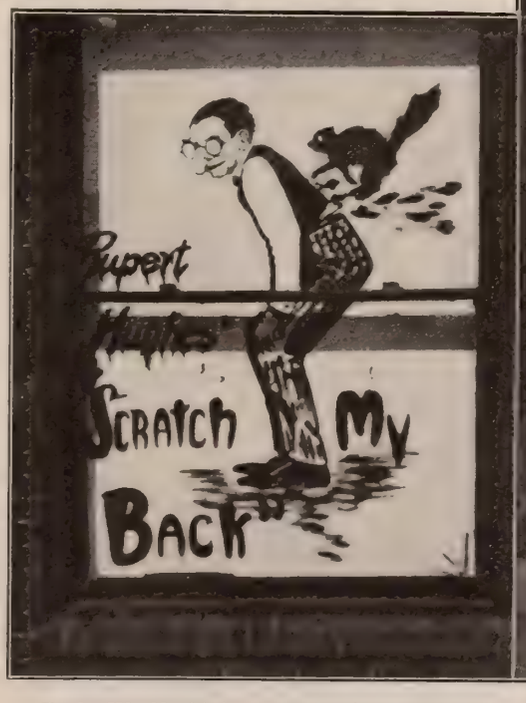
Recently we wrote Mr. Nesbitt that it was time for him to come through with another article, and being one of the chaps who can be depended upon to deliver, he sends in this account of how he has made two windows that were formerly idle, useless and undecorative, work to beat the band. This is Mr. Nesbitt's story as he told it to us:

"When we took over this theatre, two front windows sported dull green and cracked window shades. Frames covered on both sides with wall board have replaced these lazy curtains. Alabastine was used for ground. Oils and crayons, with occasional cuto-uts from the commercial paper, put upon this ground some very fetching and efficient advertising. People have now acquired the habit of looking to the two windows to notify them of our very best programs. Something like sixty different programs have been advertised without a change of wall-board. A broom and some water. Presto, and that sign has vanished. More alabastine and they are ready for a new sign. Consequently, economical as well as efficient.

"Herewith out latest on 'Scratch My Back.' One is a still drawing. The other is truly a moving picture as the gentleman's arm at the bottom, from the elbow on, was made on a separate piece of wall-board and cut-out. This being backed with a wire which continues through the frame and is hooked up with a drive shaft of a wheel that is connected by belt to a motor. The peacock feather is wired at the bottom to the fingers of this hand and fastened to the top of the window with an elastic. In action, the gentleman is surely giving her back some scratching. Needless to say, it received slews of attention, provided almost as much advance laughter as the feature itself, added materially to box office receipts and made people point for one solid week toward our house with surprised exclamations."

These windows are lighted in shadow box effect at night and they work just as long as there is any one about to work to. Cuts illustrating Mr. Nesbitt's "Scratch My Back" stunt are shown on this page.

Mr. Nesbit has promised to keep us posted from week to week relative to his exploitation stunts. It is the small town showman "who works with his head" that we especially want to hear from.



Earle W. Nesbitt's novelty window display as described in the above story concerning the Linwood theatre, Tarkio, Mo.

Simple But Artistic Stage Setting at the Rivoli

FOR the usual ballet offering on the Rivoli program, Dr. Reisenfeld is presenting Vera Myers and Paul Oscard in "Columbine and Harlequin," with a special stage setting.

Through a gauze screen, the spectator looks out on what appears to be a porch with balustrade. A decorative but dimly lighted arch breaks an indefinitely outlined sky expanse.

The setting depends on its lightings for its beauty. Floods from behind the screen begin in deep blues and are gradually blended in to a warm violet and then to a thin scarlet.

The dancers are attired in the traditional costumes of the characters presented.

Some of Manager Plunkett's Exploitation for "Kismet"

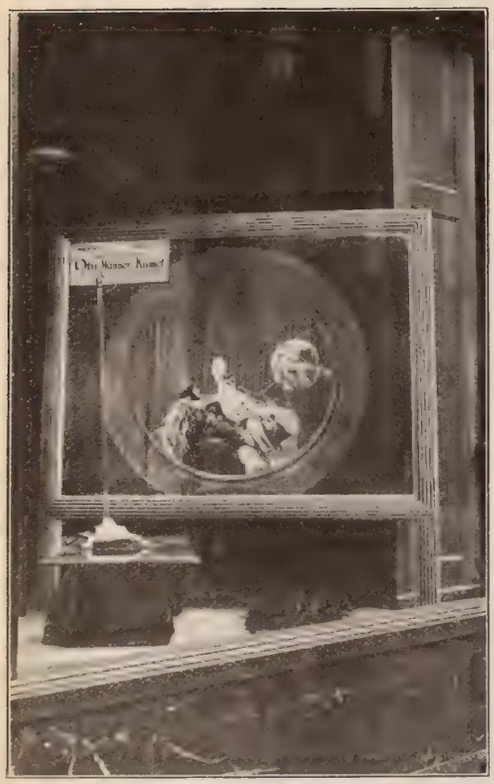
Below is a cut showing the Strand program boards with special announcement cards prepared for the engagement.



Above is one of the many window displays arranged in prominently located retail stores in New York for the "Kismet" showing at the Strand. Many of the mercantile establishments were in the Times Square district and without doubt did much to attract the attention of transients. The co-operation of the Broadway merchant in putting over a picture is not secured as easily as in smaller cities but the showing that has been made for "Kismet" demonstrates that the idea can be put over, especially on a big picture.

"Kismet" Playing Public Premiere at New York Strand

Exploitation Campaign and Fame of Star Responsible for Big Business

DRAWING crowds that blocked Broadway and filled the theatre to capacity again "Kismet" is playing its premiere this week at the New York Strand.

The New York metropolitan opening of the picture was attended by a most extensive newspaper and general publicity campaign, by an extraordinary prologue number put on by the house and by special decorations and features of presentation. It drew from the New York dailies reviews and notices of unprecedented praise.

When the Strand decided to make the "Kismet" campaign of the broadest possible proportions, it determined at once that all the New York dailies should be used with distinctive and exclusive ads. These were prepared one by one in an art department specializing in motion picture work. There were, all told, 75 of them which were sent out to fourteen daily newspapers covering comprehensively the whole of New York City.

The city was covered with 24-sheets containing a large picture of Mr. Skinner, and a large date sheet on the Strand showing. Besides this, there were placed in a score of locations along Broadway, throughout the theatrical section, oil paintings showing some of the beautiful scenes in the picture. These were supplemented by lobby display pictures, which were placed in dozens of windows in various parts of the Greater City.

Striking in another direction, tie-ups were arranged with the phonographs and music stores on the song "Kismet," a very popular Arabian song and fox-trot.

The Kresge Stores, of New York City, arranged window displays on this song into which were worked some of the oil paintings, and phonograph stores made displays on the resords of "Kismet" in different parts of New York.

Manager Plunkett, of the Strand theatre, began work as soon as he had booked "Kismet," on the most elaborate prologue ever put on by this theatre.

All the colorful atmosphere of old Bagdad is in the splendid setting which the Strand built for its opening of "Kismet." The stately "ship of the desert," the camel, was there in the flesh, and there also were all the varied rich tints and beautiful architectural lines of the famous old city of "The Arabian Nights."

The number begins with the orchestra's rendition of "Scheherazada" to be synchronized with the first part of the actual prologue before its final strains when the drapes are parted on a scene showing a street in Bagdad and presenting a large company of players attired in the picturesque robes of the Moslem on the stage.

The stage setting by Gates and Morange is a most realistic representation. In perspective are the walls of typical Bagdad buildings. A court circles the proscenium opening masked on one side by a set piece which represents a Mohammedan mosque with practical steps and on the other by the drapes.

As the scene is unveiled the Moslems are seen parading about the mosque door and gayly conversing. Two of the number lead a goat and a donkey respectively. After a moment of "ad. libing" by the players, Misses Sheila O'Day, Cecile Rivlin and Lucita Corvera, attired in typical Mohammedan feminine attire, enter and give appropriate dances while the company keeps time by hand clapping and tapping of the feet. The dancing number was arranged by Alexis Kosloff.

At the finish of the ballet, all the company except Joseph Martel, baritone vocalist, who is attired and made up to represent Mr. Skinner in the role of "Hadji, the Beggar," exit.

Mr. Martel then renders "Far Across Desert Sands" as a solo, accompanied by the orchestra. During the song the lightings are changed from the bright sunlight of a tropical clime to the green and purple shades of twilight.

A bit of pantomime accompanies the vocal selection and at the close of the number the singer reclines on the step of the mosque in emulation of "Hadjj" in the picture.

The camels used in the prologue were also pressed into service as an exploitation medium.

Obtaining permission from the police of New York, the Strand daily paraded two of the picturesque animals, adorned with Oriental signs, advertising the production. Hundreds of thousands saw these peculiar beasts make their way, with their swinging stride, among the automobiles, street cars and pedestrian traffic of Middle Broadway every day while the showing was on.

Inside the Strand were placed twenty-five large Oriental rugs obtained from a New York dealer. They gave the theatre's interior the rich Levantine aspect which was a feature of the showing of "Kismet" at the Hotel Astor. During the week previous to the showing an Arab had distributed inside the Strand a gold and black booklet, advertising "Kismet," which drew thousands in the week following. Also in the business section another Arab had put out thousands of "Kismet" blotters.

Handsome oil paintings showing scenes from the picture and enlargements from photographs of the star, also in oil, are arranged about the Strand lobby.

Music and The Picture

The Approaching Conference of the Motion Picture and Musical Men January 24-25-26

BY CHARLES D. ISAACSON

YOU have been watching the announcements of the First Motion Picture Musical Conference. Perhaps you have seen it in your local newspaper, or heard it discussed in your association or received a letter from your foremost music patron—or come in contact with it in anyone of a score of ways.

Or what is most likely, you have doubtless seen the Stories in the Music department of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which is the originator, sponsor and promotor of the plan.

Although the publicity concerning the meeting so far, has been very modest, it is really amazing that the idea has taken a mighty hold on both the picture and musical industries.

This would indicate even to the casual observer that the project is right in principle, theory and practice.

Over five hundred letters of commendation have been received from every part of the United States. Most of these are from directors, musical authorities and composers, who welcome the Entente Cordial of the Picture and Music Fields. Perhaps to the readers of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the musical interest, while of value, may not seem quite as significant as the strong support which has been promised by picture men.

Scores of prominent theatre managers and owners have written in unqualified terms that the conference is a necessity, and have said, "We will be there—and consider it a privilege to be there." Also some of the best producers sensing the growing importance of the Music-Score for the Big Feature have asked for the privilege of being admitted. They thought the producers were going to be excluded! Not so, they were informed—and it is safe to say that probably every important producer will have a representative on the ground.

In addition to the main elements in the picture—the Theatre Managers, the Producers, and the Musicians of all kinds—there will be on hand the originators, devisers and inventors of the best ideas for the Machinery of the Idea. That is to say, that the foremost composers, music publishers, instrument makers and others will bring forward their proposals and suggestions.

Now is the time to register for the FIRST NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE MUSICAL CONFERENCE New York City—January 24-25-26, 1921 Under the call of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS MUSIC DEPARTMENT Charles D. Isaacson Editor

What will be done with this assemblage of thinkers? The old saying of "Birds of a Feather flock together" will hold particularly in the case of the Motion Picture Musical Conference. Hence there will be at once a unanimity of desire and intent.

Only those who have certain views and ambitions in common will attend—necessarily.

Here are some of the views and ambitions which will be in the mind of every person attending the conference:

Music and Pictures Belong Together—the music illuminating the picture and making it more intelligible to the beholder as well as more interesting—breathing a voice into the silent frame and uttering the spirit of the emotions rather than the words.

It is necessary that Music be better understood by the theatre manager, because until he realizes that there is a definite science of music, a language of the notes which can be indexed according to moods, emotions, descriptions, the whole matter will not be as intelligible as he desires. Also when the manager knows the general principles (in which by the way, a technical knowledge of music is absolutely unnecessary) then he can pick his musicians, supervise their programs and understand the good and bad in scoring, cue-sheeting; he will be able to judge his instruments and sense the publicity and advertising possibilities of all that is to be done in the use of music.

It is necessary that the Showmanship ideas as related to music be definitely co-related and illuminated. It is necessary that the Musicians be made to realize that the Theatre Field is utterly different from the concert world, the operatic world and in a greater degree the Vaudeville World!

The age of Camouflage in Motion Picture Music by musicians and would-be musicians must end, right now at the very start of the real movement of picture music.

Cue-sheets must be made for the theatre and not for the publisher or composer.

The little theatre must be taken into consideration in the making of special music scores.

The Music Tax question must be settled by the two industries in a body, and not allowed to become a moot question between individual theatres and the Composers' Association.

There must be a standardization of instruments; an understanding of accoustics; a means of procuring musicians which is easiest for the theatre manager—a channel through which specially trained picture musicians can be obtained; there must be made sheet music particularly and specifically adapted to picture needs; there must be some training school for picture musicians, so that they can learn in their own time and not at the expense of the theatre manager and his patrons.

There must be a new group of distributing organizations whose duty must be to forward musical specialties to fill in the program—so routed that they can easily be engaged at a nominal cost—and so routed that they can be used where they fit into the needs of the program.

Mr. Isaacson's article on "The First Step in Musical Understanding" will appear next week, instead of this as previously announced.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

Fritzi Ridgeway, Capitol Film star

Bert Lubin Preparing Second Feature

Bert Lubin, who is now on a tour of the country, closing contracts on the remaining open territory of "Honeymoon Ranch," the five-reel Western, starring Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin, the production which marked his entry into the state right field, announces that he has a second feature in course of preparation, and that it will soon be ready for distribution.

Lubin's next picture will be a Western of five-reel length, and is tentatively entitled "Crossed Trails." Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin are also co-starred in this picture. Tex O'Reilly wrote the story and Robin Townley adapted it for the screen and directed the production.

Presentation Trailers Add Personal Touch

The Cinema Corporation, of New York, producers of feature art creations for the screen, point out the difference between the days of a few years ago when all theatres announced their present and coming attractions by the same mounted paper plastered over and around the entrance doors, and to-day, when the large theatres endeavor to add some distinctive personality to their entertainment. This company is making the presentation trailers for the Rivoli, Rialto and the Criterion theatres in New York.

Sunrise Pictures Organize

New Independent Company Headed by Max Carnot Opens Its Offices

WITH the opening of a suite of offices on the tenth floor of the Candler Building, No. 220 West Forty-second street, the Sunrise Pictures Corporation enters the motion picture field this week as state right distributors. The company is comprised of men experienced in the industry and who know the independent market. Negatives are now being bought up for American distribution and it is expected that an announcement regarding the first release will be forthcoming within a week. It is understood that the company has in view a well known story that has been printed in serial form in more than one hundred newspapers throughout the country.

Max Carnot is president. While this is his first entry actively in the film industry, he has been long identified with pictures as a heavy investor. Associated with him are Nat Dorfman, director of advertising and publicity, and Winfield F. Kelley, formerly president of the Kelwin Film Company, who assumes the office of sales manager with the new company.

President Carnot is for better and cleaner films and the forthcoming releases of the company, he hopes, will cut a new path for the independent state right buyer.

All the pictures released under the Sunrise Banner, which has adopted the slogan of "Sunrise Pictures Spread Rays of Happiness," will be backed by a well formulated exploitation campaign, and a complete plan and press book will be issued with every film in order to help the exhibitor put the production over.

Trade Showing of "Isobel"

George Davis to Screen Curwood Picture to Trade at Hotel Astor

THE premiere presentation of "Isobel; or, the Trail's End," from the novel by James Oliver Curwood, directed by Edwin Carewe, with a cast headed by House Peters and Jane Novak, will be given in the Grand Ball Room of the Hotel Astor next Tuesday night, November 23.

George H. Davis, who is presenting this picture to the open market, is said to be setting a precedent in this showing, since this Curwood feature is the first production released to the open market which has been the object of so elaborate a plan. "Isobel; or, the Trail's End" is proving one of the most interesting and surprising events of the year, inasmuch that, although it is a production which has aroused bidding by established program houses, is proving a great success in the general field, according to Mr. Davis.

The premiere at the Astor Hotel was arranged by Mr. Davis for the benefit of the trade in general. He has received many wires and letters of inquiry, and has already disposed of considerable territory. However, he has said that state rights buyers were to have first look at the picture, and arranged the Astor showing accordingly.

Admission to the showing will be only by invitation and card. Those who are interested can arrange for seats by communicating with Mr. Davis at his office at 1600 Broadway.

In presenting "Isobel; or, the Trail's End" to the open market Mr. Davis has had the assistance of Joe Brandt, in whose offices he makes his headquarters.

Exploit Equity Production

"Keep to the Right" to Be Given Circus Exploitation in the South

NEWS arriving from exchanges of the South and West to Equity headquarters this week confirms the report that "Keep to the Right," Equity's state-right feature starring Edith Taliaferro, is to be given circus exploitation in those territories, particularly in the smaller towns. The exchanges heard from thus far are Salley Films of Atlanta, who bought the feature for North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida and Tennessee; William Underwood, who operates in the states of Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas; and A. M. Gollos of Illinois and Indiana.

National Magazine to Run Lubin Story

Formal announcement of the winners of the Fame and Fortune contest conducted by Motion Picture Magazine, Classic and Shadowland, with Allene Ray at the top of the list, evoked a good deal of interest in "Honeymoon Ranch," her first starring vehicle, which Bert Lubin is state righting, it is said. Lubin stated that state right buyers are greatly interested in the great amount of publicity she will get under the terms of the contest.

Additional national publicity will be given "Honeymoon Ranch," states Lubin, when the Pictorial Review runs the story and pictures of Miss Ray in an early issue.

C. H. Rosenfeld Launches Tri-Art Film

C. H. Rosenfeld, formerly an officer and executive of the Climax Film Corporation and previously in the exchange of Robertson-Cole Co. as sales manager, has launched his own enterprise, known as Tri-Art Film Company, at 729 Seventh avenue. Mr. Rosenfelt will conduct an exchange for New York territory and will also handle features productions on the state right plan, disposing of them on the franchise basis.

Capital Film's New Star

Chicago Company to Sign Stage Favorite for Comedy Dramas

THE CAPITAL FILM COMPANY, through Russell, Greiver & Russell, is about to sign up a contract to star Byrdine Annette Zuber, who is starring in Al Wood's comedy drama, "Breakfast in Bed." Miss Zuber is a titian-haired beauty of great ability and versatility as an actress.

Being a Chicago girl, she made her first appearance on the stage in that city at the age of three. It was the beginning of a career that has carried her through many years with the best actors and producers, both on the stage and before the camera.

Her stage career covers association with Mabel Barrison, Edward Arnold, in the "Red Mill," with Montgomery and Stone and many others. Her picture career covers playing the heavy for Famous Players-Lasky in Cecil B. De Mille's stock company, lead with Franklin Farnum in "The Candy Shop," Edmond Breese in "The Master Mind," and "Brewster's Millions."

Miss Zuber is of the clever, vicacious comedienne type. Capital announces that it has bought two of the biggest comedy-drama hits of recent years in which to star her. The announcement of the titles will be made later. D. W. Russell, general manager, states, "We feel that we have made a big find in Miss Zuber. She has that personality and appeal that will make her instantly popular with the movie fans of the country.'

Burr in Claremont Studio

"Torchy" Comedies to Have New Home, Announces President Burr

NEGOTIATIONS were completed this week for the taking over of the Claremont Studio by C. C. Burr president of the Master Films, Inc., producing "Torchy" comedies, featuring Johnny Hines.

During the summer months the Burr organization has been working at the Hal Benedict studio at College Point, which furnished unusual facilities for the taking of the country life exteriors, and splendid facilities for comedy interiors, but the next three stories all call for metropolitan locations and therefore it is necessary to get a studio within striking distance of all picturesque points in the city.

The next production will, it is said, be on even a more lavish scale than "Torchy In High," which created so much comment in Brooklyn last week, at the Brooklyn Strand, and contributed in no small proportion to the tremendous business which Manager Edward L. Hyman recorded with the Mark Strand Theatre Company for election week.

Williamson Cuts and Edits Play: "Fathoms Deep" Working Title

"AGAIN something new," is to be the advertising slogan that J. E. Williamson will use in making known his newest product, "Fathoms Deep." This undersea drama is nearing its final state and is now being cut and titled. "Fathoms Deep" is announced as the working title.

Romance on sea and land, announce the Williamson office, are seen in this new picture, as well as mystery ashore and under the waves. It is reported by those who have seen the production that it has all the elements of a thrilling drama.

Concretely, the story is of a riff-raff crew running amuck in and about the tropics with a stolen submarine. Cast-off from many countries, the band have turned privateers—pirates—and are waylaying and looting all passing craft worth while and hiding their loot. A shipwrecked castaway is picked up by the group and his life spared because of dangerous hazards to which the band desire from time to time to assign him. The cast-away escapes, but not until the sea bandits have forced their prisoner to sign their compact of blood-guilt. A girl and a young naval officer are among those who encounter the refugee when he is eventually washed ashore. The strange story he tells, together with the interest a certain picturesque intruder takes in the girl, consummate here in a hurried expedition to the supposed treasure zone of the bandits. In a swift though extended series of conflicts on the surface of the sea as well as along its bottom between the two factions, many startling novelties in dramatic surprises are achieved.

Ernest Williamson (right) and Ralph Ince congratulate each other on the successful completion of the under-water drama, titled temporarily, "Fathoms Deep." Mr. Williamson is the producer and Mr. Ince played an important part in the production as well as directing.

Nathan Hirsh Leaves on Business Trip

Nathan Hirsh, president of the Aywon Film Corporation, is leaving for a business trip this week. He will visit Western and Middle West cities in the interests of his firm's pictures, including "The Woman Above Reproach," "The Evolution of Man," "The Woman of Mystery," "When Dr. Quackel Did Hide," "Thirty Years Between," and E. K. Lincoln in "The Man of Courage."

Merit Film of Denver Buys Out Mid-West

The Merit Film Co., of Denver, Col., announces that it has bought out the entire interests of the Mid-West Greater Features Company of the same city and has moved from the Guardian Trust Building to 1820 California street, which is the Mid-West former office. Both firms are being operated under the name of the Merit Film Company, with Max M. Kravetz as general manager.

Lark Bronlee Replies to Harris Denial

Following a denial by the William Harris, Jr.'s offices of the statement that Lark Bronlee, featured player of "Beyond the Great Wall," served as understudy to Fay Bainter in "East Is West," comes the following explanation from Miss Bronlee: Miss Helene Sinnott was first understudy. Miss Sinnott, however, was taken ill during the staging of the play at the Astor theatre, and as Miss Bainter's mother was also seriously ill at the time, Mr. Maxwell, who was Mr. Harris's stage director, thought it advisable to prepare for any eventuality that might require Miss Bainter's sudden absence. Accordingly, Mr. Maxwell, Miss Bronlee declares, came to her and asked her to assume the duties of understudy to Fay Bainter during Miss Sinnott's absence. Mr. Maxwell, Miss Bronlee asserts further, actually rehearsed her in Miss Bainter's part as understudy.

At the time of the Astor presentation of "East Is West", Miss Bronlee was known under the stage name of Minette Buddecke and was so recorded in the cast personnel.

Friedman Gets Rights to Howell Comedies

J. L. Friedman, president of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, has just closed with George B. West, general manager of the Sunkist Comedy Company, for the entire United States rights to the new series of one-reel Alice Howell comedies. These comedies were directed by Dick Smith and present the comedienne in unadulterated slapstick.

The Sunkist Company is making a series of 52 single-reel comedies. The Celebrated Players is preparing to put forth every effort to place these short subjects in every theatre in the market for this material. The first to be released with Miss Howell starring will be "Boulevard Profiteers." This will be followed by "Who Chose Your Wife?"

Equity Buyers Meet in New York City

The home offices of Equity Pictures were the scene of an important meeting last week of six buyers of the Equity special production, "Whispering Devils," featuring Conway Tearle and Rosemary Theby. The buyers were all of the Eastern states, with the exception of Aaron M. Gollos of Chicago. They were: Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia, Peter Oletzky of Baltimore, Sam Grand of Boston, Joe Skirboll of Pittsburgh, Sam Zierler of New York and Aaron M. Gollos of Chicago.

The purpose of the gathering was said to be the comparing of notes on the progress of "Whispering Devils" in the respective territories of each.

S. B. Lust Ties Up with Richmond Merchants

A special souvenir program was issued by Sidney B. Lust, of Super Film Attractions, Inc., of Washington, when "The Confession" was run at the Isis theatre in Richmond, Va. Fifteen merchants mentioned "The Confession" in their regular advertisements, and in return they shared the special souvenir program. Mr. Lust states that he considers it a very good stunt and recommends it to State Right exchanges.

Arrow Closes Big Poster Deal

Some of the spectators watching the taking of a scene in "The Way Women Love," an Arrow picture featuring Rubye DeRemer

A CONTRACT said to be heretofore unequaled in the independent motion picture industry was concluded this week between J. V. Ritchey, president of the Ritchey Lithograph Co., and W. Ray Johnston, vice-president, and J. C. Davis, 2nd, of the advertising department of the Arrow Film Corporation, whereby the Ritchey Lithograph Co. are to make the lithographs on a long series of Arrow releases.

The contract is said to be slightly in excess of seventy-five thousand dollars and is a record breaker in its line.

The pictures covered by this poster contract are: "Thunderbolt Jack" a fifteen episode serial starring Jack Hoxie, the Arrow-Muriel Ostriche Comedies a series of twelve two-reel pictures, eighteen Spotlight Comedies, a series of four Jack Hoxie five-reel western features, a series of two Rubye De Remer special features and the following independent features: "Bitter Fruit," "The Deceiver," "The Tame Cat," "The Man Who Trifled" and "The Daughter of the Don."

It is claimed that this is the largest contract for lithographs ever closed with an independent distributing organization and it is looked upon as further proof of the rapid advance the independents are making in the motion picture industry. The growth during the past year of the independent producer, distributor, and exhibitor has been remarkable and it is predicted that even more marked advancement may be looked for during the coming year.

Officials at the Arrow Film Corporation, while unwilling at this time to give out any statement regarding their plans for the coming year, admitted that they anticipated 1921 being by far the biggest year in their history and said that in the near future Arrow will issue an anouncement which will prove of great interest to those who are following the fortunes of the independent.

J. V. Ritchey, president of the Ritchey Lithograph Co., when interviewed regarding this contract admitted the closing of the deal and stated that while he had done a great deal of business with independent producers and distributors in the past so far as he knew this was the largest single contract ever closed with an individual organization. Mr. Ritchey stated that in selecting the posters for these productions he had viewed such of them as were completed in Arrow's projection rooms and that he could unhesitatingly say the ones he saw were especially high class productions and proved conclusively that better features were being placed on the independent market than ever before.

Chinese Picture to Be State Righted Soon

"Beyond the Great Wall," the six-reel Chinese melodrama recently completed by Eastern Film Corporation for distribution by Photo Products Export Company, under the direction of A. B. Heath, is scheduled for release on the state rights market sometime in December, according to the announcement of Photo Products.

Liberty Film's Activities

SAM FLAX, of the Liberty Film Exchange, of 916 G. Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., announces that "The Son of Tarzan", the David P. Howells jungle serial, is receiving bookings in the first big run houses of his territory and in theatres that have never before played a serial. The Liberty Film Exchange controls the rights for this serial in the states of Washington, Delaware, and Virginia, and in the District of Columbia.

Both Sam and Jake Flax, who head this live exchange, have both had interesting careers in the film world. Sam Flax began his career as a booker for the Washington Branch of the General Film Company in 1913 and resigned at the end of the year to accept a similar position with the Pathe Exchange, then the Eclectic Film Corporation. He remained with Pathe for about three years, leaving that position to accept the managership of the local Metro office, where he remained until March of 1919, when he entered the independent field, opening the Liberty Film Exchange.

Jake Flax holds a position, which, it is said, is unique in film circles in the Washington territory, if not in the entire country. He began his career as office boy for the General Film Company, Washington Branch, immediately upon graduating from High School and remained with that concern until the day they closed their doors. He was the Branch Manager for the last two years and at that time was said to be the youngest man who had ever held a managerial position anywhere in the country. It is believed that no man can point to a record of seven years continuous service in the old General Film Company.

In addition to "The Son of Tarzan", The Liberty Film Exchange has secured for distribution in their territory a number of features among which are William S. Hart in "Hell Hound of Alaska", and "The Bandit and the Preacher", "Woman", "Husbands and Wives", "Hearts of Men", "The Perfect Model", "The Grain of Dust', and others.

They believe that "The Son of Tarzan" is going to be one, if not the most successful serials of recent years. They point to its thrills and action and its high standard of production as a whole, which won for it a place in high class theatres, whose policy it was never to run a serial.

Boston Trade Will See "The Victim"

"The Victim," which is being offered State Rights Buyers by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York will be given a special trade showing in Boston, by Sam Grant of the Boston Federated Exchange who has secured the New England rights for this feature.

Warns of Mutual Re-Issue

The Motion Picture News is in receipt of a communication from M. Thomas, of the Klein Distributing Corporation, in which he states that the Signet Film Corp., located at 130 West 46th street, New York, is selling on the State Right market a picture entitled "The Faithless Sex," which, it is claimed by the Boston exchangemen, is a re-issue of "The Decoy." Signet Film, it is claimed, is selling the picture as new. A Mutual picture, made several years ago, and featuring Gertrude McCoy, was entitled "The Decoy."

David Soloman, president of Signet Film, denies that "The Faithless Sex" has ever before been placed on the market. He states that "The Country Girl" was its former name, but that it is not a re-issue.

Efforts have been made by the Motion Picture News to secure a showing of this picture. A screening has been arranged for the near future. Should the picture prove to be new, the Motion Picture News will be glad to state the fact in its columns.

The World Motion Picture Corporation announces that its offer of five weeks free service on its news reel, known as the World's News Pictures, will be withdrawn on November 25.

This offer by the World is declared to have aroused no end of comment and interest among exhibitors and producers alike. The World reports that thousands of exhibitors have already taken advantage of the offer.

Bradley to Handle All Gaumont Features

W. H. Bradley, of the Peerless Pictures, of Boston, was a recent visitor in New York. While in the Metropolis, Mr. Bradley bought for his exchange the entire output of the Gaumont Company. This includes the series of features beginning with "The Fall of a Saint" and the serial "In the Clutches of the Hindu." Peerless Pictures will release these pictures in the New England states.

Abramson 25 Years in Theatrical World

Mr. Abramson's silver anniversary in the theatrical world was celebrated last week by a series of visits to a number of theatres who were playing his last production, "The Wrong Woman." He was well pleased with the results and satisfied that he had chosen two versatile and popular stars, Olive Tell and Montagu Love for his production.

"Son of Tarzan" Booked in Big Circuit

Selected Films, Inc., of Chicago, who are handling "The Son of Tarzan," the David P. H. Howells serial, for the State of Illinois, announce that they have booked the entire Ascher Bros. Circuit and the Lubliner and Trinz Circuit for that picture.

Everywhere, according to the Howells office the promise of Harry Revier, director of the "Son of Tarzan" is being made good.

Arrow Reports Record Sales

J. S. JOSSEY, Arrow's special representative who has been on the road for Arrow for the past two months, has advised W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow, of closing a contract with H. A. Kyler of the Supreme Photoplays Corporation, 1446 Welton St., Denver, Colo., for the exhibition rights of the following features:

"Woman's Man," starring Romaine Fielding, "The Golden Trail" starring Jane Novak and Jack Livingston, "Bachelor Apartment" starring Georgia Hopkins, "A Man from Nowhere" starring Jack Hoxie, and three other productions featuring the same star, which will be made during the coming year.

The contract with Arrow calls for the rights to exhibit these productions in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, California, Arizona, Nevada, Hawaiian Islands, Idaho, and Montana and is said to be one of the largest, if not the largest and independent state rights sales ever made by any independent organization. This sale slightly exceeds $40,000 and is pointed to by Arrow as a refutation of the claim made by many motion picture people that business is not good at the present time. Arrow records show a healthy growth in the sales department from all over the United States and in the foreign field.

W. Ray Johnston, vice-president and general manager, states that the Arrow anticipates that 1921 will be one of the best years in the history of the independents and that they have arranged for a large number of new productions to meet the demand they feel certain will exist. Mr. Johnston said: "Independent productions during the coming year will set a new record for independent exchanges throughout the entire country. Everywhere the exhibitors are turning toward the independent distributors and at present the independent exchange, who has the quality productions, is enjoying splendid prosperity.

"The coming year will, without doubt, be the greatest in the history of the motion picture business and the sale just concluded between our special representative, J. S. Jossey, and the Supreme Photoplays Corporation is only the forerunner of many others. Everywhere the independent distributor is buying where he can get really high class productions. The business has reached a point where it is the survival of the fittest. The good production has nothing to fear. It is the poor or average feature that will fall by the wayside. There will always be a good market for the feature that has the merit of being a real entertainment.

"The time has passed when a star or producer can get by with a reputation for past performances. Today the exhibitor is looking for the story and production that will cause his patrons to leave the theatre satisfied that they have gotten their money's worth and not simply sat through five reels designed to show off the star's new gowns and automobile. They want a good story interpreted by capable actors and intelligently directed and produced. That is the type of attraction we intend supplying and we are confident the coming year will be one of prosperity for both the producer who makes and the exchange who releases this type of production."

"Fair Profits," Says Sherman

His Plan to Give Universal Satisfaction, is the Claim

"GIVE the exchange a definite supply of attractions of fairly consistent box office value and charge it only a pro rata share of the production cost according to territory, taking the producer's profit out of the distributor's rentals, and everybody—the producer, the exchange and the exhibitor—is going to make money."

Thus briefly, does Harry A. Sherman, president of the Sherman Productions Corporation, himself a successful showman and a distributor and marketer of big motion picture attractions, summarize the so-called Sherman plan under which he is operating his new company, which marked his entrance into the producing field.

The Sherman plan, in effect, is simply a co-operative method by which the producer does business with a group of exchanges, under a guarantee, which, it is claimed, practically secures them against loss and which requires no advance payment prior to the release of a given picture.

The exchange's only obligation is the payment of its share of the actual production cost upon the delivery of the completed positive prints, with the privilege of rejection if the picture is not up to standard.

"I do not pretend to say that in all cases the producer will make as much money as he otherwise might on a given picture," Mr. Sherman went on. "But I do say and say it strongly, that he's sure to make a profit on the year that should satisfy him.

"And he can be sure that he's building for the future all the time—which is something that perhaps the average producer hasn't thought too much about previously.

"A lot of people—old timers, too—have asked me how I figured that Sherman Productions Corporation could get a profit, without advances, and with a money-back guarantee to each exchange that each picture must be satisfactory, especially as only the actual production cost was paid in and all profits depended upon participation with the exchanges in their rentals.

"I told them, just as I state now, it's simply this: Even if a picture is not of the best box office quality if the exchange can get it at a reasonable figure, the exhibitor can also, and this will enable both to make a fair profit, where neither could have done so if the producer had annexed it all in the beginning."

"And so, everyone will be satisfied, that is provided, that the producer, in this case the Sherman Productions Corporation, is content to take a portion of the exchange's rentals as his share, and not seek to put a false valuation on the picture.

"It follows that both the exchange and the exhibitor will be willing also to handle an occasional picture, which is not right up to top-notch standard, for the sake of the 'clean-up' they will make on the good ones.

"So much for this phase of the question. Personally, I believe that this method of doing business is going to do much to standardize picture values and that within a year there will be many producers who adopt either this or a similar plan in doing business with their exchanges.

"The Sherman plan is not the product of a day or week's thought. I worked it out carefully and in every detail before I announced it.

"It is based on the knowledge I gathered during many years as an exhibitor and an exchangeman and it is right basically.

"It is right because it gives the exchange a fair deal, who in turn will give the exhibitor the same, and on the success of these two must always be based such lasting success as the producer can hope to secure and hold."

Ernest Lambert Signed for Ziegfeld Picture

Major Ernest Lambert, another well known legitimate actor, has been signed by W. K. Ziegfeld for a part in "The Black Panther's Cub," the initial Ziegfeld film production which Emile Chautard is now directing with Florence Reed in the stellar role.

Special Showing for "Pagan Love"

On the evening of Sunday, November 21, there will be held at the Selwyn theatre a special showing of "Pagan Love,' the first Hugo Ballin independent release which will be published on the Hodkinson program.

"Pagan Love" is the screen version of "The Honorable Gentleman," by Achmed Abdullah. The cast of players includes Mabel Ballin, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Togo Yamamato, Charlie Fang and Nellie Filmore.

"The Faith Healer" Is Ready for Release

The photographic work on "The Faith Healer," George Melford's production of the play of William Vaughn Moody, has come to a close after a good many weeks' work. Mr. Melford and his company have just returned to the Lasky studio after filming the final scenes of the picture on one of the large sheep ranches near Fresno, California.

Milton Sills plays the role of the faith healer.

Jack Pegler Represents Walsh in New York

Jack Pegler, former field exploitation man with the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, has been engaged as special representative by R. A. Walsh. Pegler's office will be in the Capitol Theatre Building, New York City, where Walsh maintains his executive headquarters.

It is announced that Elmer Harris, author, editor and scenarist, will shortly assume the position of supervising director of Realart's West Coast studios. He will succeed Will M. Ritchey, who is retiring because of ill-health.

Mr. Harris is a graduate of the University of California. He began dramatic work in one of the original "Soldiers of Fortune" stage companies. He studied drama and acted in England, France, Italy and Germany, returning in 1907 to become the dramatic editor of the New York Globe.

In collaboration with Oliver Morosco he wrote "Pretty Mrs. Smith," "So Long Letty" and "Canary Cottage." Mr. Harris wrote the scenario for the Realart production, "Miss Hobbs," and "All Souls' Eve," and is the author of "Ducks and Drakes," which is now being produced for Realart, featuring Bebe Daniels.

Christie to Change Policy

Featured Players Are Classified for One and Two-Reel Comedies

WITH the continuance of production of one-reel comedies to be known as Vanity Comedies and Gayety Comedies for distribution through Educational Film exchanges, Al Christie, head of the big comedy organization, has announced a long list of comedy players to be presented in each series.

The large stock list of Christie featured players is being arranged so that entirely different people may be seen in the one-reel series from those who are featured in two-reel Christie Comedies. A rather new policy is being inaugurated for comedy in that Al Christie with his other four directors, Wm. Beaudine, Frederic Sullivan, Scott Sidney and James Clemens, with their two scenario editors, W. Scott Darling and Frank R. Conklin, are building comedy stories and fitting the various players into the stories as they are adaptable rather than employing the policy of building comedies around featured players.

"Our organization can do this," says Christie, "for we have to draw from for two-reel comedies such girls as Dorothy Devore, Fay Tincher, Helen Darling, Vera Steadman; and such leading men as Eddie Barry, Bobby Vernon, Earl Rodney and Neal Burns and others. Such supporting characters as Margaret Cullington, Ward Caulfield, George French, Marion Mackay, William Sloan, Al Haynes, Lilie Leslie, George Burton, Gus Leonard and many others are available for parts which are many times as important as those of the two or more leads. Then in addition we are drawing in for single pictures such well-known dramatic actors as Eugenie Forde, Ogden Crane, Lydia Yeamans Titus and others.

"In the one-reel comedies we have Irene Dalton, Laura La Plante, Mary Wynn, Francis Feeney, Henry Murdock, Ray Gallagher, Fay Lemporte and others who can be used exclusively in the one-reel series. Such players as Billy Bletcher and Charlotte Merriam have already appeared in some of these which are to be released."

Patricia Palmer is another leading lady who will soon be seen in Christie's.

First Sterling Comedy Released December 12

December 12 has been set as the release date for the first Ford Sterling comedy to be made by the former Sennett comedian under his new contract with the Special Pictures Corporation. This was announced on the West Coast this last week by H. J. Roberts, general sales manager of Special.

According to Roberts, it will be a Comiclassic special starring Sterling, 1,500 feet of fast comedy, with a 500-foot scenic, in conformance with the general structure of Comiclassics. "Of Sterling Value" is the working title, and it is possible this may be used as a release title. Reggie Morris, production chief of Comiclassics, is personally directing Sterling. Charlotte Merriam heads the supporting cast.

Press Book Ready for "Thoughtless Women"

Pioneer announces that a press and campaign book of an elaborate character and one in the preparation of which special pains have been exercised is now ready for distribution in connection with Daniel Carson Goodman's "Thoughtless Women," starring Alma Rubens. The picture is said to lend itself to unusual possibilities for exploitation purposes.

"Thoughtless Women" is the next important release under the Pioneer banner and heads the list of "Pioneer Master Specials."

"Big Happiness" Opens Glendale Theatre

The new Glendale theatre, Glendale, California, showed "Big Happiness," Robertson-Cole superspecial starring Dustin Farnum, as its opening bill, late in October. The Glendale is a new house seating 1200 people all on the first floor.

Mr. Howe, manager, has bought all the Robertson-Cole pictures which have not been shown in Glendale and will exhibit them from time to time in the near future.

New Educational Manager for Dallas

Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., announced that N. H. Wolff has been appointed manager of its Dallas exchange succeeding J. H. Toner and that he is actively in charge of the branch with offices at 1922 Elm street. Mr. Wolff is a man of long experience in the film world, having most recently been associated with Associated Producers, Inc., in the Chicago territory.

Before taking up his new work Mr. Wolff had a series of conferences with the New York office and his arrival in Dallas has been marked by an intensive selling campaign.

Edward Jose has been engaged by Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, to direct Alice Joyce in her next picture, which is announced as "Her Lord and Master." Mr. Jose already has entered on his new duties. Active work on the new production will be begun within a few days, as soon as the supporting cast has been selected and engaged.

Although much of the action of "Her Lord and Master" takes place in England and several of the important characters, including the leading male role, are British, the play is said to be typically American. ... ...

Hodkinson Opens Big Drive

Pathe will include in a group of releases for the week of December 26th the new Harold Lloyd comedy, the title of which has been changed from "Wrong Number" to "Number, Please?" Following "Number, Please?" Lloyd's appearances will be made under his new contract with Associated Exhibitors, Inc., who will distribute the pictures through Pathe.

In his latest piece, Lloyd has Mildred Davis as his leading woman again. Miss Davis has been the main stay of his support since "From Hand to Mouth," released early in 1920.

Word from the Coast, where "Number, Please?" was screened publicly in accordance with the "test plan" employed by Lloyd and producer Hal Roach, states that the comedian follows the method that has weighed mightily in his favor of developing his comic situation with clean and wholesome material.

J. Parker Read Forces Aid in Drive for Glaum Vehicles

J. PARKER READ, JR.'S three Louise Glaum specials, "Sex," "Sahara," and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," are to be benefited by an extensive advertising and exploitation campaign, already launched by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in co-operation with the promotion department of the J. Parker Read, Jr., Productions.

Tieing up with theatres everywhere throughout the United States a $5,000 Scenario Contest, sponsored by J. Parker Read, Jr., is in operation, declares W. W. Hodkinson. The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation exchange managers are in direct touch with the management of every newspaper in their respective territories running the contest and, in turn, represent the exhibitor publicity interests throughout the contest, it is stated.

Harry Owens, of the J. Parker Read, Jr., Company has just arrived in New York on his tour of exchanges, and members of the clientele served by the Newspaper Enterprise Association, which has taken hold of the proposition and which is distributing the contest material contracted for by 400 newspapers in its service.

Immediately upon his arrival, Mr. Owens went into conference with George B. Gallup, Jr., manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation advertising department, and Richard Weil, publicity chief of the distributing organization, and an extensive propaganda was mapped out that promises to blanket the country with effective advertising and publicity, emphasizing the trade angle.

The "J. Parker Read, Jr., $5,000 Scenario Contest" offers a first prize of $2,500 for a suitable scenario for Louise Glaum, star in "Sex," "Sahara" and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter;" $1,500 for second award, and $1,000 for third prize, with the producer's option of purchasing additional stories at $1000 each and in unlimited number.

The Los Angeles Express, Seattle Times, and the San Francisco Daily News, and many other newspapers already have launched their respective contests with effective theatre tieups and, as a result, Louise Glaum Repetoire Weeks have been booked in scores of towns and cities. The exhibitor takes advantage of the eight-weeks' contest campaign by playing the three Louise Glaum-W. W. Hodkinson distributed productions as a "repertoire week," or books them in a series to play within the month.

Sixteen thousand registered contestants have entered the contest in the brief time it has been operating, evidencing an enormous public interest which the editorial management of the newspapers interested has been quick to note and, which, in turn, has communicated itself definitely to the exhibitor mind.

The scenario contest, originally launched by Sig. Schlager, J. Parker Read, Jr.'s personal representative and conceived by the producer himself, promises to extend itself over the face of the globe. Filmen, the Swedish motion picture publication, and the London Daily Mail, as well as Cine Pour Tous, of Paris, having cabled to Mr. Read for permission to operate the contest in their respective countries, according to W. W. Hodkinson.

Harry Owens, of the Read staff, already has visited nearly a score of important exchange points, and has met with enthusiastic co-operation from the W. W. Hodkinson representatives and the exhibitors. The machinery of a huge promotion campaign boosting the sales on "Sahara," "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" and "Sex" is being well oiled during the stay in New York of Messrs. Schlager and Owens, and 150 columns of publicity matter on these pictures, destined for use in the next forty days by each member of the Newspaper Enterprise clientele, is in type at the Pacific Coast Bureau of this powerful journalistic service, of which Jack Jungmeyer is the sectional chief, in charge of the scenario plan.

The J. Parker Read, Jr., contest will open on November 20, and will close on January 20. In case of a tie for first, second or third places, the respective winners will each be awarded with the full amount designated as the prizes for these places.

Views of Shintoism in Pathe Review No. 79

The colorful and fantastic customs and costumes of the Shinto religious observance in Japan, "A Fantasy of Facts," is the outstanding feature of Pathe Review No. 79, released by Pathe November 28. Weird and imposing are the paraphernalia exhibited in these solemn processions before the awed populace, states Pathe. The soldiers of the guard, the envy of the slant-eyed youngsters, clothe themselves in heavy armor which dates far back into antiquity, and the high priests on their huge steeds form the most impressive part of the ceremony.

Fox Issues Americanism Film

Menace of Extremists Shown in "Face at Your Window"

WILLIAM FOX announces that "The Face at Your Window," which has just been released, is a production indorsed by the Committee on Americanism of the Motion Picture Industry, and released under the committee's auspices.

Col. Arthur Woods, formerly New York City Police Commissioner, and present representative of the American Legion on this committee, is now acting chairman in place of Mr. Lane, who is incapacitated on account of illness. He has seen and indorsed this production, declares William Fox, and urges that it be exhibited in every city, town and hamlet in the United States, on account of its great appeal to all classes of people for the promulgation of the principles on which this country was founded.

Many other men prominent in all walks of life have seen "The Face at Your Window," and were more than sanguine in their expressions concerning the manner in which Mr. Fox has unfolded this mighty interesting subject. Among them are Frank A. Vanderlip, widely known for his social welfare and educational works; Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; William G. Lee, grand chief, Brotherhood of Locomotive Trainmen; Warren S. Stone, grand chief, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Judge Elbert H. Gary and Frank Farrell, respectively, chairman of Board of Directors and president of the United States Steel Corporation. These men and many others of equal distinction, it is stated, have viewed with satisfaction the earnest effort of Mr. Fox to bring home to both foreign-born and American native citizens the fruitlessness and peril of listening to the pratings of alien radical agitators on American soil. Endorsements have been received from men most prominent in the land, and these will be available for the exhibitors' use.

"The Face at Your Window" tells a powerful dramatic story of a gigantic conspiracy — such a conspiracy as may at any time menace our homes, our women, our industries, and which, should it gain the ascendant would mean, calamity. It not only sounds a timely warning, but it is also entertainment of the best sort, with a beautiful romance threading its powerful lesson. In addition, Mr. Fox is declared to have given "The Face at Your Window" a production remarkable in every way, making it one of the most stupendous presentations ever offered on the screen.

That the proper atmosphere might be had, the Secretary of the Interior at Washington tendered the influence of the Federal government to obtain the use of the manufacturing town of Boonton, N. J., for the filming of the exterior scenes.

Miss Eldridge to Attend Exposition

Frances Eldridge, the young motion picture star recently engaged by Superior Pictures Corporation to play stellar roles in feature and comedy productions has accepted an invitation to attend the Motion Picture Exposition to be held in Atlanta, Ga., from December 6 to December 11.

The demonstration, which is being staged by the exhibitors of the Southeastern states, will be one of the most important motion picture events ever held below the Mason-Dixon Line.

Miss Eldridge will be entertained in Atlanta by the Chamber of Commerce, and will have a day set aside during exposition week in her honor. It will be called "Frances Eldridge Day," and an attempt will be made on the part of the hosts to give the popular actress a welcome she will long remember. In the evening of "Frances Eldridge Day" it is planned to hold an elaborate ball.

Prior to signing with the Superior Pictures Corporation Miss Eldridge was one of the all-star cast in "The Foreigner," picturization of the celebrated Ralph Connor story, by the Dominion Film Company.

Kineto Review Shows Boy Scout Scenes

In the Kineto Review, issued by the Kineto Company of America, four reels, it is announced, are devoted to the Boy Scouts. Kineto Review No. 29 is entitled, "Boyhood;" No. 42 is "Hiking the Alps with the Swiss Boy Scouts;" No. 43 is "How the Swiss Boy Scout Spends His Vacation," and No. 56 is "Boy Scouts of America" which describes the trip of the American scouts to the International Convention, held in England last summer.

S. & E. to Have Novelties

Many Unique Features to Be Seen With "It Might Happen to You"

ARRANGEMENTS are now under way by Messrs. Shenfield & Ennis, of S. & E. Enterprises to present their initial state right release, "It Might Happen to You," in one of Broadway's leading theatres, according to their announcements. Because of the various novel elements contained in this production, it is said to lend itself to unusual features in the matter of stage presentation, and the picture will be shown in New York in conjunction with several distinct novelties.

The six Reese monkeys who figure prominently in many scenes in "It Might Happen to You" as an animal jazz band, will be used on the stage during the showing. Several instruments, including the violin, cymbals, xylophone and clarinet are played upon by the monkey performers of the S-E picture, and the stage presentation will include this unusual orchestra.

In addition to this novelty, Jimmie, the remarkable lion, who also plays a leading role in "It Might Happen to You," will be put through several of his stunts under the direction of Walter Beckwith, well known animal trainer.

Due to the presence of the various jungle inhabitants in "It Might Happen to You," many opportunities are also afforded for a unique musical setting, and a score is now in course of preparation containing many new orchestral effects which will be used in conjunction with the Broadway run. S & E Enterprises stated this week that they would place at the disposal of all state right buyers the various novelties enumerated above for use in connection with the first run showings of "It Might Happen to You" in the various key cities throughout the United States.

Harry Levey Studios Visited by Inventor of Photo Transmission

FOLLOWING a visit of M. Edouard Belin to the studios of the Harry Levey Service Corporation on Tuesday of this week, it is announced by Harry Levey that Mr. Belin, who is responsible for the invention of the remarkable apparatus that transmits photographs by wire, will devote his attention to the task of adapting his invention to cinematography. The statement from the Levey offices expresses the opinion that "motion pictures are to be projected by telegraph."

Mr. Belin, who was brought to America at the special invitation of the New York World, is well known as one of the leading electrical experts of France. Last Sunday, in the World Biulding, under the auspices of the New York World, he gave a demonstration of his invention, proving that photographs can be sent and received over a thin thread of copper wire.

At the invitation of Harry Levey, Mr. Belin visited the Levey studios with a view to seeing whether or not this idea could be applied to transmitting motion pictures by telegraph, so that a news event occurring in one city could be immediately flashed to another city by this apparatus, where it would be developed and shown on the screen almost simultaneously with its making.

Mr. Belin declared that such an apparatus could be made similar to that by which he transmits regular photographs. Mr. Belin declared that since a film is only a succession of still photographs all that would be necessary when the size of the frame had been regulated, would be to shoot a succession of pictures over the apparatus.

According to the statement from the Levey offices, Mr. Belin will arrange to go into the matter further in the near future with a view to adapting the principle of telephotography to cinemaphotography.

Buck Jones Appears in New Kind of Role

Buck Jones, who, since becoming a Fox star, has created a big following for himself as a daredevil horseman in straight western roles, makes a decided departure from the cowboy type in his portrayal of a character described as a "golden hearted ne'er-do-well," the star role in "Just Pals." This is an emotional part such as he never before has attempted, and in which he acquits himself with signal honor.

Boston Exchange Will Enlarge Offices

The Eastern Feature Film Co., of Boston, announces that they have just signed a lease, whereby an addition is to be erected next to the present office of the exchange at 57-59 Church street. The addition will be partitioned off into a shipping room vault, and exhibition room. It will be completed in about five months.

Exhibitors Speak Well of Keaton Comedies

Exhibitors whose theatres are showing the Buster Keaton two-reel comedies continues to express praise for the laugh-provoking qualities now associated with them, state Metro officials. The home offices of Metro, which distributes the Keaton comedies, are weekly receiving many letters that testify to the satisfaction registered both in results at the box offices and in the enthusiasm of film audiences according to a statement just received from the Metro home-office.

Harold B. Franklin, managing director of Shea's Hippodrome of Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"When we played Buster Keaton in 'One Week,' we concluded that Buster was designed to become one of the screen's best comedians. When we played Buster Keaton in 'Convict 13' we knew that our opinion was confirmed. After screening 'The Scarecrow' we know that Buster Keaton is one of the screen's best comedians."

Another tribute comes from Charles Thall, of the California Theatre, Turlock, Cal.:

"For the first time since the California Theatre was opened, I am compelled to break one of my set rules, never to repeat a picture. Last week I showed Buster Keaton in his first comedy, 'One Week.' I have never shown any picture, big or litle, that created quite so much comment, and in response to repeated requests from my patrons I would ask you for a return booking for the first available date."

Billie Burke Film Is in Cutting Room

The first picture made from start to finish in the new Long Island City studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been completed and is now in the cutting room. This is "The Education of Elizabeth," starring Billie Burke.

"Broken Promises" New Title of C.B.C. Film

"Broken Promises' is the new title of the super-western feature previously called "A Good Bad Man" and offered state rights buyers by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York.

This picture, made by Yellowstone Productions, Inc., was titled and advertised as "A Good Bad Man" after a report was received that no copyright had been previously granted for the title, but as soon as "A Good Bad Man" was advertised it was found that Douglas Fairbanks and Bessie Love had appeared in a picture with a similar title about five years ago.

Four big French features are also announced for early offering to the state rights market by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation of New York.

"The Nightingale of Paris" is the title of the first of these features, all of which are said to be unusually well acted and elaborately staged productions.

"Scattergood Stories Shown on Coast

The first two productions of the Edna Schley Productions, Inc., have been given public showing in Pasadena, Calif., theatres during the past week and reports from there indicate success for the "Scattergood series," as these films will be known. They are from the Clarence Budding Kelland stories which appeared in national magazines. The first release will be titled "Scattergood Makes A Match," the second "Soothing Syrup," and the third now in production will be "Down the Line." William H. Brown, who has appeared in a number of West Coast made productions, will be featured in this series in the role of Scattergood, a small-town character.

Not to Hold-Out on Specials

"Kismet" in Neighborhood Houses, Says Robertson-Cole

AN article published in the New York Times, in which the practice of keeping certain big productions from the neighborhood houses, was condemned, elicited a protesting answer from Mr. Kirkpatrick, vice president and general manager of Robertson-Cole.

The Times article read as follows: "Shrewd and patient theatregoers have had a way of beating the admission prices charged for special productions shown on Broadway. They have simply waited until the pictures have come to their low-priced neighborhood theatres. Thus while some saw 'Hearts of the World' at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre and paid $2 for the privilege others saw it nearer to their homes for much less, if also much later.

"Apparently, however, the makers of such films intend to play the game against those who are content to lie in wait watchfully, for D. W. Griffith has announced that "Way Down East,' now at the Forty-fourth Street theatre, will 'never' be shown at neighborhood theatres, and William Fox follows suit with the declaration that 'Over the Hill' at the Central, will not be sent to the outlying houses 'during 1920, 1921 and 1922.'

"So it looks like a long wait for the patient."

Mr. Kirkpatrick's letter read as follows:

"Replying to your article of November 7, in which you speak of the plight of picturegoers who heretofore have waited until certain special screen productions, shown at regular Broadway theatres at advanced prices, appeared in their neighborhood picture theatres at ordinary prices, and who are now at the mercy of producers who tell them that henceforth such special pictures are to be shown only at regular Broadway theatres, at advanced prices, and will appear in neighborhood picture houses 'never' or 'not during 1920 to 1922,' we would like a word.

"One company at least, Robertson-Cole, recognizes special attractions of such calibre as easily to fill a regular Broadway theatre for many months, as essentially the property of the regular motion picture exhibitor. If the exhibitor is to be allowed the profits of the ordinary attraction, why is he to be denied the greater profits of the special production. In turn, if the public is good enough to support the ordinary picture, why should it be forced to pay from twice to four times as much for the extraordinary screen attraction, and forced to desert the convenient neighborhood threatre to see it?

"Every company has its extraordinary attractions such as you mention. In such class is our 'Kismet,' starring Otis Skinner. We do not have the right, we feel to deny this attraction to the regular exhibitor, who has invested his money in a theatre, trusting that the producer will rent him his best product, and who finds himself betrayed and sorely discriminated against when the producer denies him the very best pictures.

"Viewing the matter this way, we have refused to 'road show' 'Kismet,' or place it for an unlimited run on Broadway. It will be shown at the Strand theatre, a regular picture house, next week, and thereafter in regular motion picture houses all over the country. Our obligation to the public, and to the man who makes his living from the picture theatres, is such that we cannot resort to discrimination. 'Kismet' and all our special attractions will be distributed through the usual channels.

"Only in a case where we should be denied representation in a manner and at a theatre worthy of our special attractions would we deviate from this rule. In such case, and in such case only, we would be forced to properly present the production ourselves. Otherwise presentation is the business of the exhibitor, and his determination of price the right of the public."

Metro Release Going Well

Reports from Coast and Mid-West, Especially Laudatory of Special

FAVORABLE reports on the powerful appeal and box-office drawing qualities of "The Great Redeemer," the Maurice Tourneur special production which Metro is distributing, are being received from all sections of the country but especially from the Pacific Coast and the Middle West, according to officials of the Metro Pictures Corporation. "The Great Redeemer" has its premier showing in New York City two weeks ago at the Rivoli Theatre.

S. MacIntyre, Metro branch manager in Omaha, Neb., has forwarded to the home offices of the company in the Longacre Building, a brief but expressive telegram from the Liberty Theatre, of Davenport, Iowa. It follows:

"The Great Redeemer" is a real picture; by far one of the best that Metro has yet released."

Universal Comedienne Scoring Successes

Universal has introduced a new figure in the screen comedy field in the person of Dorothea Wolbert. Miss Wolbert first appeared on the Universal screen as Fanny, the comic janitress and co-respondent with Lyons and Moran in "La La Lucille," a screen adaptation of the Fred Jackson's rip-roaring musical comedy. Her ludicrous appearance and her humorous grimaces had much to do with the success of the picture. She also had an amusing role in "Pink Tights" with Gladys Walton. Since then she has appeared in a series of one-reelers, directed by Vin Moore.

Miss Wolbert is a recruit from the stage. Her first legitimate role was an ingenue part in "Charlie's Aunt." She was with Charles Frohman for six years, playing in such successes as "The Masqueraders," "The Little Minister," and "The Butterflies." She also appeared with the noted English actor, A. S. Willard, in his repertoire of dramas.

Lubin to Screen Film for Western Buyers

Bert Lubin, who is state righting the western feature, "Honeymoon Ranch," in which Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin are featured, left recently for a swing around the country to close pending contracts for territorial rights of the picture-play.

Lubin will visit all the principal exchanges of the country before returning to New York. His first stop will be at Washington. From there he will proceed to Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago and Minneapolis and thence westward. He expects to be on the road six weeks.

"The Tiger's Coat" Is Booked by Loew

The Loew offices has booked "The Tiger's Coat" for all of their picture houses for a total of 21 days. "The Tiger's Coat" is the screen version of Elizabeth De Jeans story, a novel which also appeared serially in the Pictorial Review. Tina Modotti, Myrtle Stedman and Lawson Butt are the featured players.

Jans Special for Toronto

"Madonnas and Men" to Be Screened in Canada; Had Big Detroit Showing

FOLLOWING its elaborate presentation at the Madison theatre in Detroit, Mich., the Jans special production, "Madonnas and Men," is to be screened at the Strand theatre in Toronto, Canada. This engagement for the big special is in accordance with the announced policy of the Jans Film Corporation to present this spectacular screen production in all the principal cities of the United States and Canada. Bill Rudolph who had charge of the staging of the picture in the Madison theatre in Detroit has again been assigned the task of presenting the picture in the Toronto house. "Madonnas and Men" is scheduled to open at the Strand in Toronto on November 21st.

The Detroit presentation aroused considerable interest in state-right circles throughout the country, it is stated, especially in view of the fact that all records were smashed during its showing at that house. Since the opening of the Detroit engagement, the New York headquarters of the Jans organization has received a great number of inquiries regarding this picture, it is stated, and at the present time many territorial sales are being negotiated.

The following sales are reported for "Madonnas and Men" in a communication recently received from Bill Rudolph: John Kunsky for Michigan; Columbia Film Company for Western Pennsylvania; Jans Film Service for Greater New York and Northern New Jersey; Ben Fitzer for upper New York state; Masterpiece Film Attractions for Ohio; and foreign rights to the Export and Import Film Company.

Mr. Rudolph states that it is the intention of the Jans organization to put on the picture on a lavish scale on all big cities, selling the state rights. It is explained by Mr. Rudolph, however, that first-runs are not to be withheld by Jans in the event that the state-right buyers want the same.

This week marks the appearance of a new states rights organization known as Herald Pictures, Incorporated, of which Walter J. Porges is president. The first product of Herald Pictures will be twelve two-reelers starring Mack Swain, called Perry Comedies. Feature productions will also be handled by Herald Pictures, Inc.; in fact, this organization has already arranged to distribute a six-reel picture recently completed on the West Coast.

Walter J. Porges, although young in years, is no newcomer in the motion picture industry. He will be recalled by exhibitors everywhere through his close association with Charles R. Rogers in the Sales Department of Selznick Pictures Corporation. Subsequently, Porges was affiliated with Realart and recently with D. N. Schwab Productions.

The company has taken offices at the Selwyn Theatre Building in New York.

New Arrow Production Nears Completion

An announcement is made by the Arrow Film Corporation that "The Man Who Trifled," a feature production, is practically ready for release.

Finish Universal Features

Harry Carey and Frank Mayo Take Last Scenes on Current Vehicles

TWO important Universal features were finished this week and are now being assembled for the screen, it is learned. Harry Carey completed "Burning Embers," while Frank Mayo finished the last scene in "Tiger."

"Burning Embers" was written by Harry Carey and is said by Universal to be one of the most dramatic Western photodramas ever filmed. The cast includes Arthur Millett, Charles LeMoyne, Frank Braidwood and Mignonne. Val Paul directed.

"Tiger" gave Frank Mayo one of the greatest opportunities of his screen career for the kind of dramatic work in which the public best likes him, declares Universal. The story was written by Max Brand and concerns a rich young man who, to satisfy a craving for adventure, projects himself into the maelstrom of the underworld. The production was directed by J. P. McGowan.

On the right is Antonio Moreno, who will star in a Vitagraph feature production, "Three Sevens." Chester Bennett, on the left, will direct him in his first feature picture

Associated First National of New England Roster Announced

List Includes Prominent Exhibitors of Section; N. H. Thompson, President

IN a statement just issued Associated First National Pictures submit a roster of the recently incorporated New England branch of this national exhibitors' co-operative distributing organization. The New England unit is to be known as the Associated First National Pictures of New England. The headquarters of the organization have been established in Boston and New Haven. The officers are: George Hammond, president; Mrs. M. S. Ayer, James Donovan and W. A. True, vice-presidents; and L. I. Altman, secretary. The Board of Directors includes, with the president and vice-presidents, Nathan H. Gordon, N. J. Laler, Thomas B. Spry, John C. Bills, William B. Gray, A. R. Lawton, Henry Steinberg, M. L. Demara, Irwin Wheeler, M. A. Hoffman, Julius Meyer, Wm. E. C. Warr, Herbert Gilman, Walter Hardford, Walter Murphy and Samuel Weiss. The Executive Committee consists of Messrs. Donovan, Hardford, Gordon, Steinberg and Wheeler.

The statement emanating from the New York headquarters of the Associated First National Pictures follows:

"Mrs. Ayer, as vice-president, and notable as the only woman members executive in the New England corporation owns and manages the Exeter Street theatre, Boston, which house is regarded as one of the most successful and best managed community theatres in New England. N. J. Lawler owns the Lawler theatre, Greenfield, Mass., and is a partner in the firm of Lawler Bros., who have built up a wide reputation for successful theatre management during the past ten years. John C. Bills is president of the company, operating the Empire, Rialto, Academy of Music and Bijou, and Fall River, Mass.; the Central Square in Waltham; Strand and Bijou in Newport, R. I.; Strand, Amesbury, Mass.; and the beautiful Strand in Portland, Me., constituted a chain of theatres which under general managership of Louis B. Boas, is held to have achieved a notable plane of operating success.

"Another important chain of theatres which through the recent incorporation is added to the roster of the New England Associated First National is that owned and operated by Wm. P. Gray—namely, the Empire and Strand theatres, Lewiston, Me.; the Princess and the Albert, Behlin, N. H.; Colonial and Olympia theatres, Portsmouth, N. H.; Majestic, Burlington, Vt.; Majestic, Rumford, Me.; Cumberland and Pastime theatres, Brunswick, Me.; Dreamland, Livermore Falls, Me.; Rex, Norway, Me.; Bijou, Wilton, Me.; Savoy Square, Paris, Me.; Town Hall, Winthrop, Me.; Opera House and the Colonial, Augusta; Coliseum, Strand, Gardiner, Me., and the Gorham Opera House, Gorham, N. H.

"Julius Meyers, member of the Board of Directors of the New England Associated First National, is owner and general manager of a successful string of houses, including the Marlboro theatre, Marlboro, the Elm in Hudson, the theatre of the same name in Milford, Orpheum in Canton; Magnet, Dorchester, Elm, Waverly; Elm, North Attleboro; and Elm, Danvers. The fact that Mr. Meyers entered the motion picture business only a year ago serves to make his well-recognized success the more remarkable.

"Already operating, as owner and manager of the Crown and Lyceum theatres, New London, Conn. Walter Murphy, another member of the New England Associated Board of Directors is building a new theatre which is to cost in the neighborhood of $400,000. The Fitchburg, district of Massachusetts, is represented on the directorial board by Napoleon L. Demara, of Toomey and Demara, operating Shea's, the Lyric and Cummings theatres in Fitchburg.

"George Hammond, regarded as, perhaps, the most successful exhibitor in Western Massachusetts, is general manager and part owner of the Suffolk theatre, Holyoke, and the Bijou theatre, Springfield. Calvin A. Martin is manager and owner of the Princess, Waterbury, and Wm. A. True is general manager and owner of the Strand, Hartford, Conn. Irwin Wheeler, owner and manager of the Garden, New Haven, adds to his capacity as an exhibitor and a member of the Associated First National New England Executive Board, a knowledge of law acquired in his practice as an attorney. James Donovan, owner of the Park and Casino theatres, Taunton, Mass.; M. A. Hoffman, owning and controlling the Sterling, Derby, Conn., and the Pastime, Ansonia, Conn.; Herbert Gillman, owner of and manager of the Dorchester theatre, Dorchester, Mass.; E. C. Warr, owner of the Warr theatre, Wareham, and the Colonial, Onset, Mass.; Walter Murphy, owner and general manager of the Crown and the Lyceum, New London; Walter Hartford, owner and manager of the Imperial, Pawtucket, R. I., and Samuel Weiss, of Weiss Brothers, owning and managing the Alhambra, Stamford, Conn., and others of prominence in the roster of Associated First National Pictures of New England, Inc., 120 theatres of whose franchise holders have been published to date in advance of the shortly forthcoming complete final list."

State Special Pictures' Plans

Extensive Production Plans Set Forth by L. W. Thompson

DETAILS concerning production plans and release schedules for 1921 were given out this week in Los Angeles by President Louis W. Thompson, of Special Pictures Corporation, just before that executive left for New York for a conference with Max Roth, Eastern division manager, and a general survey of the territory east of the Mississippi.

The plans of the organization, which is specializing in the short subject field exclusively, include the making of comedies featuring Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, Louise Fazenda, Neely Edwards, Charlotte Merriam, Milburn Morante, Gale Henry, and an English music hall star, who is to be brought to the Hollywood studios of Special Pictures early in 1921.

Two types of scenics will be released, the Sunset-Burrud scenics and the Artcolor scenics, the latter colored by the famous Handschiegl process.

Art Acord, former Universal serial star, is now at the Special Pictures studio, making a series of two-reel Westerns, and it is probable another two-reel Western company will start work there soon, so that a two-reel thriller can be released every two weeks.

Ford Sterling's first Special Pictures comedy is scheduled for release on December 12, according to President Thompson. It is to be a Comiclassic Special, a 1,500-foot comedy with 500 feet of Artcolor scenic.

Sterling is to make two more Comiclassics, and then start on his personal appearance tour of the country, having so far only covered the Pacific Coast.

Chester Conklin has already finished two comedies for the Special Pictures Corporation, and is now working on the third. During 1921 Special plans to adhere to their schedule of one Conklin comedy a month. Frank Terry, who wrote several of Harold Lloyd's successes, is writing Conklin's stories, while Everett Maxwell, well-known Saturday Evening Post writer, is putting them into continuity.

Louise Fazenda, having completed her contract with Sennett, is scheduled to start work on her first special comedy not later than December 1. One Fazenda comedy will be released a month, according to present plans.

Neely Edwards and Charlotte Merriam will continue to be featured in the Comiclassic. Edwards has already made two productions, "A Pajama Marriage" and "Watch Your Husband." Reggie Morris is scheduled to continue as production chief for Comiclassics, and the light, parlor, type of comedy will be adhered to, with plenty of beautiful girls to divert the eye of the tired business man.

Milburn Moranti will move his productions from the Balboa studios, Long Beach, to the Special Pictures studios in Hollywood, in keeping with the desire of President Thompson that all the units be produced at one plant. As the company's general offices sales, exploitation and advertising departments are maintained at the studios this means closer relations between production and distribution.

Gale Henry will start work under her contract with Special not later than January 1, and she is scheduled to make twelve comedies during 1921.

The directorial staff for 1921 will include Reggie Morris, for Comiclassics, Harry Edwards, for Chester Conklin, Fred Fishback, and two well-known megaphone wielders, who ask that their names be kept secret because of present affiliations.

The Special studio will be enlarged, two new stages are to be built, and an administration building exclusively for the general offices will be erected.

Wedgwood Novell and Kathryn Adams appear in "813," the Robertson-Cole super-special based on the Arsene Lupin story

New Impetus Given Special

Contract for Dempsey-Carpentier Go Centers Eyes on "Wonder Man"

FURTHER impetus is reported by Robertson-Cole to be given "The Wonder Man," Robertson-Cole's special production, starring Georges Carpentier, heavyweight champion pugilist of Europe by reason of the contract which the latter has just signed with Jack Dempsey, calling for a meeting between the two, to settle the world's championship on or about next July 4.

Ever since the announcement was made of the fight between Carpentier and Battling Levinsky late in the summer, and since Carpentier knocked out this fighter in four rounds at Jersey City on Columbus Day, there has been a great wave of interest in "The Wonder Man," according to Robertson-Cole.

Each new announcement of the activities of Georges Carpentier has stimulated the showing of "The Wonder Man" in all parts of the United States, for the French fighter and actor has had hundreds of columns of space not only on the sporting pages of the leading newspapers but on their first pages.

In "The Wonder Man" Carpentier plays the role of a French secret service man who comes to Washington to aid his government in investigating certain frauds which are being perpetrated by dealers in tractors which France is receiving for purposes of reconstruction. There is a pretty love story running through the action, and one of the biggest scenes shows Carpentier in a ring battle with another pugilist, an encounter which enables him not only to punish his enemy but to win the girl he loves.

Big Bookings for Christie

Charles Christie Reports Demand for Two-Reelers by Big Theatres

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE, who had just returned to the California studios from another cross-country hike, reports heavy bookings on the new series of Christie two-reel comedies which are being distributed through Educational Film Exchanges.

Christie declares that the Educational exchange system which was organized on a broad scale only a few months ago, has made wonderful strides in heavy series bookings of comedies with the highest class of theatres in America.

Some of the theatres which have booked the new Christies are Loew houses, Cleveland; Rialto and Rivoli, New York; Jones, Linick and Shafer houses, Chicago; Liberty and Regent, Pittsburgh; Colonial, Columbus; Moore's Rialto and Garden, Washington; Stanley and Great Northern, Philadelphia; Strand, Dayton; Strand and Walnut, Cincinnati; Adams and Madison, Detroit; Strand, Minneapolis; Liberty, St. Paul; Lyric, Duluth; Liberty, Terre Haute; Valentine and Temple, Toledo; Olympic, Boston; Kinema and Alhambra, Los Angeles; Coliseum, Seattle, and Circle, Indianapolis.

Christie also reports that the bookings of the first Christie six-reel comedy drama, "So Long Letty," would indicate that it will be featured in many best class theatres as the comedy drama of the year. Some of these openings are at the Rowland and Clark's Regent, Pittsburgh; Picture Garden, Baltimore; Strand, San Francisco; Kinema, Los Angeles, and Grand, Columbus. In all of these theatres elaborate plans are being made for prologues and heavy advertising, it is stated.

Rothacker Staff is Dined

Executive Reviews Company's Past Work; Asks Continued Co-operation

THE Chicago Industrial Division of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company held a get-together dinner in the Walnut Room of the Sherman House. It was very informal—nobody made a speech, but everyone said a few words.

H. J. Aldous, Rothacker Treasurer, gave a brief review of the company's history, telling of Watterson R. Rothacker's uphill fight ten years ago when he set out to prove to industry the value of motion pictures for practical uses.

Douglas D. Rothacker, Manager of the Industrial Division, said, "Our president was the first in the practical pictures field. Today the Rothacker Company is still the leader in that field, being the world's largest producer of Industrial films. You and I—all of us—are determined to keep in the lead. We can do so by continuing to pull together.

"The year now drawing to a close is the biggest we have ever had—bigger than Watterson R. Rothacker ever dreamed when he blazed the trail in practical pictures production. Let us make today's success an inspiration for greater things tomorrow."

George Gibson, superintendent of the Chicago laboratory, told that, owing to the increase in industrial work, it had become expedient to give the Industrial Division its own force of negative cutters and assemblers.

Those present were: O. F. Lohsand, J. W. Carnrick, C. P. Tobin, Wildred Aldous, George Gibson, W. F. Kraemer, John P. Hahn, H. J. Aldous, Douglas D. Rothacker, S. J. Stoughton, Ray Aitken, J. A. Freese, Hugh Rotchford, William F. Ahbe, W. H. Strafford, George Kilgore, Lou Boone, Edward O. Blackburn, Paul Cavagnaro, A. L. Parker, Frank Sheridan, E. H. Seifert, Verne W. Blakeley and Wm. F. Kuehl.

Bill Cook Leaves Fox Staff

Announcement States That He Will Do Publicity Work and Scenarios

William H. Cook, who is leaving Fox publicity department after a year and a half of supervision of trade paper publicity

ANNOUNCEMENT is made of the departure of William H. Cook from the publicity staff of the William Fox Film Corporation. "Bill" Cook plans to enter the free-lance publicity field and also to write original stories for the screen. Cook has had a long theatrical career and is one of the pioneers in the field of newspaper publicity for motion-pictures.

He entered the legitimate show business several years ago with the firm of Liebler & Co., under the tutelage of the late W. W. Aulick.

He left Liebler for the motion-picture field in 1912 and joined Vitagraph scenario staff, under J. Stuart Blackton, writing original scenarios. He was the author of Vitagraph's comedy, "When the Circus Comes to Town," directed by Fred Thompson and exhibited by Vitagraph at the Grand Central Palace at the motion picture art exposition.

Cook quit Vitagraph and went into the publicity game as a free lance. Later commercial advertising and catalogue work drew him away from the theatre and the screen for a period of nearly three years.

During the War, Cook served at Camp Hancock, Georgia, where he became a machine-gun instructor with the rank of lieutenant. After the war, Arthur James, then head of the Metro advertising and publicity department, engaged him. When Mr. James left Metro to go to Fox about a year and a half ago, he took Cook with him. During this time Mr. Cook has taken charge of the trade-paper publicity.

Three Additions Made to Lytell's Cast

Maud Milton, Frank Currier and George Spink have been added to the cast of "A Message from Mars," the first of the Maxwell Karger Productions starring Bert Lytell, upon which work has just been started at Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street.

"A Message from Mars" portrays the story of a journey to earth by a Martian inhabitant bent upon the mission of redeeming from selfishness the worst offender in this regard that he can find in the city of London. It is his contact with Horace Parker, a young and self-centered scientist, and his undertaking to bring about his regeneration, that provides the play with its motivation and carries a vital message to mankind. Bert Lytell is seen in role of Horace Parker.

Three of the catchy scenes from "Body and Soul," a Metro picture starring Alice Lake

During the past week, Paul Brunet, president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., received word, according to a statement from the Pathe home-office, that Charles Pathe, founder of the international organization bearing his name and a pioneer in the motion-picture field, had been honored by the French Republic by election as an officer of the Legion of Honor. This marks a promotion from the rank of Chevalier which Mr. Pathe previously enjoyed.

No details accompanied the announcement, declares the Pathe statement, but it is assumed that Mr. Pathe's patriotic services during the War are responsible for this new distinction.

During the War, Mr. Pathe was one of the most zealous of French patriots. He worked tirelessly in the interests of struggling France, and all his own personal interests were submerged in his one great idea, to bring about the defeat of the enemy.

Johnny Hines in Albany

After witnessing one of Johnny Hines' personal appearances at the Brooklyn Strand last week, in connection with the showing of the third "Torchy" comedy, "Torchy In High," produced by the Master Films, Inc., and released by Educational, Max Spiegel, vice-president of the Mark Strand Corp., decided that he had found the one best bet for the added attractions, at the opening of his new Albany Strand theatre, and inasmuch as he had already booked the third "Torchy" comedy, "Torchy In High," for this premiere, Mr. Spiegal arranged to have Mr. Hines make a personal appearance at Albany with the showing of this comedy.

Add to Reelcraft Force

G. C. Parish, manager of the Reelcraft Exchange in Indianapolis, has added Edward Sipe to his sales force, assigning him the territory in the southern part of Indiana.

Sullivan Joins Ass'd. Producers

Famous Screen Author New Member of Producing Combine

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN, regarded by some as the ablest as well as the most successful author in a commercial sense that the screen has ever produced, is the eighth and newest member of Associated Producers, Inc., the screens new independent producing and releasing organization. Thomas H. Ince, Mack Sennett, George Loane Tucker, Allan Dwan, Maurice Tourneur, Marshall Neilan and J. Parker Read, Jr., are the older members.

This announcement in behalf of Associated Producers comes from F. B. Warren, General Manager of Distribution, who is spending several months in Los Angeles watching production with the producers, who are also considering the entry of other famous factors into their organization.

This means an enlargement of Associated Producers' annual output, as Mr. Sullivan will produce four pictures annually, beginning with Spring and Summer releases in 1921.

Associated with Mr. Sulliven in C. Gardner Sullivan productions will be Lambert Hillyer, who has written most of and directed all of the William S. Hart productions since Hart left the Thomas H. Ince fold last year. Mr. Sullivan personally will write his stories and continuities, and co-operate with Hilyer in direction. This combination holds out promise of pictures of unusual power in keeping with exhibitor demands which both men so thoroughly understand.

"I am confident through long experience in picture making, says Mr. Sullivan, that I know what will appeal, basing this belief on the appeal of such of my stories as 'Sex,' 'Peggy,' 'Stepping Out,' 'Hell's Hinges,' 'The Pinch Hitter,' 'The Coward,' 'Wagon Tracks,' and the 'Stepping Stone,' all of which I created."

"My plans are simple: To make the best pictures I know how to make: modern stories of modern people working out the every day problems of every man and every woman. They will not be confined to any particular strata of life and their sole aim will be to afford clean entertainment. I am a great believer in heart interest, and it will be the keystone of my productions. In Mr. Hillyer, who for three years has successfully directed William S. Hart, I feel I have one of the best directors in America. He has the human note. Of one thing I am convinced: that the story told by motion pictures must be believed from beginning to end, otherwise it will fail. Although I am a strong supporter of lavish sets where justified, I know that such sets and the most extravagant outlay of money will not save a production built upon an impossible or unconvincing story. Therefore my stories will be the dominant requirement, coupled with the best direction, acting and photography I can obtain."

Members of the Associated Producers in Los Angeles are during the current week delivering to their New York distribution five completed pictures of great power. Those being delivered this week are:

Maurice Tourneur's screen version of James Fenimore Cooper's famous story of the American Indian, "The Last of the Mohicans."

J. Parker Reed, Jr.'s., second Associated Producers producting starring Louise Glaum. This is entitled "Love."

Hobart Bosworth in "A Thousand to One," produced under the personal supervision of Mr. Read.

Thomas H. Ince's presentation of "Lying Lips," said to be one of the truly big pictures of his career.

Mack Sennett's first five-reel comedy for Associated Producers, "A Small Town Idol," starring the inimitable Ben Turpin and with a dozen Sennett favorites in the cast.

Six other productions are in the making at the coast studios of the various producers.

Film Seen as Fiction Aide

Hampton Says Fiction Author Has Friend Not Foe in Motion-Picture

BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON expresses himself as follows concerning the belief of some prominent authors and publishers tha the ascending dominance of the motion picture will prove a menace to fictional literature.

"This fear, I am convinced, is unfounded. Any novelist whose stories are susceptible to screen treatment receives tremendous publicity through the exhibition of photoplay versions of his novels on the screen. The circle of persons who know of him, a great percentage being possible readers, is increased many thousand-fold —and I believe it would be within the mark to say a million-fold, because of the screen advertising which he receives. Millions of persons who had never read any of his books, who perhaps had never heard of him, become interested in the type of stories he tells. Many of them wish to renew acquaintance on the printed page with the characters they have seen on the screen. They buy a copy of the novel, adding to the author's income from his books.

"I know whereof I speak in this matter. The screen versions of Zane Grey's western novels which I have produced for distribution through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation have added tremendously to the sales of his books. Grosset & Dunlap, who have the right to make the cheaper reprints of his novels, have one entire factory in their Chicago plant devoted to turning out copies of Zane Grey's novels. The books of no other novelist are printed or bound in that factory. It is well within the truth to assert that no such condition ever prevailed before and to ascribe it entirely to the effect of the motion picture versions of Mr. Grey's novels."

A scene from "Torchy's Doub'e Triumph," a Torchy comedy starring Johnny Hines and released through Educational Exchanges, Inc.

New Vitagraph is Started

Corinne Griffith to Be Seen in "It Isn't Being Done This Season"

CORINNE GRIFFITH began work last week on her next Vitagraph production which bears the unique title of "It Isn't Being Done This Season." It is an adaptation from the story of the same name by Thomas Edgelow which appeared in Breezy Stories. Graham Baker and Harry Dittmar collaborated on making the screen version.

George L. Sargent, who directed Miss Griffith in her last two Vitagraph productions, is again her director. An excellent supporting company, including among others Webster Campbell, Charles Wellesley, John Charles, Sally Crute and Nell Spencer, has been engaged for Miss Griffith. The company has gone to the country estate of a noted artist at East Hampton, near the extreme end of Long Island, for exterior scenes and probably will be occupied there for nearly three weeks.

Miss Griffith's well known ability to wear novel and striking gowns to the greatest advantage will again have sway in her new play. The story deals with the experiences of Marcia Ventnor who is told by her mother on her deathbed that she must "always expect a rotten deal from men." The mother instructs the daughter to "use" men whenever possible. Marcia has been brought up in a boarding school and scarcely knows her mother or the life she led. She has no reason to doubt the advice given to her. After her mother's death Marcia spreads her wings under the influence of New York and spends her money freely on clothes.

Plans for Traverse Stated

To Play in Series of Films Known as Madlaine Traverse Photoplays

ANNOUNCEMENT is made that Madlaine Travers, the popular star, whose early return to the screen after an absence of several months was forecast last week, has secured from the World motion picture rights to "The Ivory Disc," by Percy Brebner, well-known British novelist.

With this announcement comes the definite news that Miss Traverse will appear in a series of special productions during 1921, to be called the Madlaine Traverse Photoplays, which will be made by Trinity Productions, Inc. Each of these will be elaborately staged and presented and will be based upon vehicles especially selected for Miss Traverse with a view to giving her the widest range for the expression of her dramatic power, it is declared.

"The Ivory Disc," which has been selected for Miss Traverse's initial screen offering, but which will probably be retitled in its picturized version, is stated to be a psychological drama of unusual quality and distinct novelty of theme.

"The Ivory Disc" will be produced with a well-balanced cast in support of the star and in every respect it will be adequately presented.

Production plans are now going rapidly forward, according to H. Lyons Smith, president of Trinity Productions, Inc.

Well Received by Critics

Production Standard and Star's Work Win for "Slave of Vanity"

THE reception given by trade reviewers to "A Slave of Vanity," Pauline Frederick's new starring vehicle, released by Robertson-Cole, has been favorable. The value of the name of Miss Frederick, especially is coupled with a story and production worthy of her emotional talents, is emphasized in most of the reviews, which declare "A Slave of Vanity" is of such nature as to furnish its star a maximum appeal.

The Moving Picture World's review is quoted as follows:

"Offering a combination of a powerful emotional star and a thoroughly competent support in a really gorgeous production of one of the best of Pinero's plays, 'A Slave of Vanity,' leaves little to be desired.

"The photography is better than good, it is artistic and the cameraman has been given a succession of unusual interior sets, sometimes bizarre, but always in keeping."

The Motion Picture News in its review said:

"Miss Frederick and as a fine supporting cast as ever was engaged do more than well with the material with which they had to work and neither time, expense or technical effort has been spared in an attempt to make the picture truly big. The sets, the lightings, the camera work is of the best. The atmosphere of England and Italy is perfect. The acting of every player is faultless. The star is cast in a role eminently suited to her personality and wears some wonderful gowns."

The Exhibitor's Trade Review is quoted as follows:

"Pauline Fredericks admirers will want to see her in 'A Slave of Vanity' as the role of 'Iris' affords the star something new in the way of a dramatic characterization. The photoplay differs slightly from the stage version, in that the heroine awakens from a hideous dream and is enabled at the close to win her heart's desire. 'Iris' permits of a display of emotion in repose rather than in a succession of irrepressible outbursts, and Miss Frederick is splendid throughout the picture."

Plan Drive for Dwan Film

Mayflower Prepares Campaign for Feature; Producer Returns to West

ACCOMPANYING the announcement of Allan Dwan's departure from New York for the Coast to begin work on his second picture for Associated Producers, comes a statement from the offices of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation that an elaborate promotional campaign is being planned for Mr. Dwan's last production under the Mayflower contract, entitled "The Sins of Martha Queed." This production has been delivered to First National for release, it is announced.

The exploitation in connection with this picture will be featured by a drive on suspicion. Cooperation of business men's clubs, women's clubs and churches will be enlisted in a "Hello, Stranger" campaign being prepared by Mayflower for towns in which First National obtains bookings. The object of this drive will be to bring people together so that they may become better acquainted and thus eliminate suspicion. All literature bearing on the campaign will carry slogans as "Suspicion caused the sin of Martha Queed—don't let it cause sin for you." "If you are suspicious, see 'The Sin of Martha Queed.' 'The Sin of Martha Queed' will cure you of being suspicious."

Mr. Dwan on his trip West is accompanied by a number of well-known folks who will assist him in various capacities in the preparation of forthcoming productions. Among them were Jacquelin Logan, of the Ziegfeld Follies, who will be featured in his next picture; Peggy Elanor, another Follies girl scheduled to play an important part in the next production; Helen Rockwell, well-known feature writer who will handle the producers publicity; Alfred Cheney Johnston, famous New York photographer who will make art photographs for advertising and publicity purposes; Wilfred Buckland, former art director for Famous Players who will now act in that capacity for Dwan; Ward Crane, popular leading man who will appear in the producer's next.

Ernest W. Fredman, managing director of "The Film Renter and Moving Picture News" of London, gave the members of the A. M. P. A. an insight into the motion picture theatre situation in England at the last weekly luncheon.

"In England," said the speaker, "we have but 3,000 thatres as against your 18,000 in this country, and as a consequence it is impossible to play the American pictures as rapidly as they are exported, especially when one takes into consideration the fact that the British houses also play films manufactured in their own country as well as those sent from Sweden, France, Italy and other countries."

All of which leads to the conclusion that a glutted market rather than the block booking system is responsible for a condition which prevents the showing of an American film until after it is two years old.

T. Hayes Hunter, directing for The Dial Film Co. His initial release was "The Dwelling Place of Light," distributed by Hodkinson.

Viola Dana Will Have Two Directors

In the production of "Sorrentina," her next Metro starring vehicle, Viola Dana will have the services of two directors instead of the customary one. The dual directorship of Miss Dana in "Sorrentina"—an original story by Donn Bryne, the widely known magazine writer—will devolve upon George Probert and Al. J. Kelley.

George Probert is better known for his successes on the speaking stage than for the silent drama. He is, however, no novice in screen work, although his present assignment marks his debut as a director of motion pictures.

Al. J. Kelley has been an assistant director for Metro for four years, but his handicraft on a number of big productions has brought him more recognition, perhaps, than has accrued to many full-fledged wielders of the megaphone.

More Exhibitor Praise for "Madame X"

Benjamin Apple, manager of the American theatre, Troy, N. Y., is among the latest exhibitors to write Goldwyn about "Madame X." He says:

"The talk of the town is 'Madame X' at the American theatre, where it is packing them in at both afternoon and evening shows. Despite the heavy rain last night we had them lined from the box office to the corner. Up to the present writing we have done the biggest four days' business since the American opened, and if the last three days are as good we will break all house records.

"Madame X" will pack any house if they go after it right."

Alfred Walker to Head Production Work

The World Motion Picture Corporation has appointed Alfred Walker director of production.

It is planned to have in addition to the field force of news cameramen, sixteen companies working in the studio to be built at Edgewater, New Jersey. Mr. Walker will supervise the work of the entire studio staff.

Saenger Books Entire Output

All Comedy Releases of Educational to Be Shown

ANNOUNCEMENT of a contract between Educational Films and the Saenger Amusement Company, providing for the engagement by Saenger of all the comedy products released by Educational, has just been made from the New York headquarters of the Educational Films Corporation. The Saenger interests control a large number of theatres throughout Louisiana and Mississippi, and accordingly the signing of this contract is hailed by Educational officials as "one of the most sweeping contracts in the history of short-subjects." The contract was negotiated and closed by the New Orleans branch of the Educational Films organization.

The contract includes all of the Mermaid, Torchy, Chester and Christie two-reel comedies from the very start of their release through Educational and calls for these pictures playing the leading theatres in every city where Saenger is represented. It is expected that the Educational releases will supply the comedy element almost exclusively at the Strand and Liberty theatres, the two big Saenger houses in New Orleans.

Bookings range from a solid week down to one day, but it is stated that the contract in many instances calls for a longer run of comedies than has ever been attempted before in this territory. According to advices from Educational's New Orleans branches, these comedies are to be featured in the advertising and publicity in a manner that is new to short subjects in that territory.

The booking includes the leading theatres in New Orleans, Shreveport, Monroe, Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Franklin, Jennings, Lafayette, Lake Charles, New Iberia, Planquemine, Ruston, Thibodeaux, Crowly, Homer, Minden, Houma, Eunice, Winnfield and Opelousas, in Louisana; Frenville, Freenwood, Gulfport, Hattiesburg, Jackson, McComb City, Meridian, Natchez, Vicksburg, Biloxi, Yazoo City, Richton and Tupelo in Mississippi.

Educational points out that this contract includes every city of importance in the two states. The only reason that the Saenger houses in other states are not covered by the contract is that their bookings fall in the territories of other exchanges.

This is said by Educational to be the most sweeping contract for comedies that has been signed with any chain of theatres, although Educational declares at the same time that practically every large circuit through the country, such as the Tom Moore houses, the Rowland and Clark theatres, the Jensen and von Herberg interests, Finkle and Rubinstein, the Butterfield circuit, the A. H. Blank houses and many others are giving the preference to Educational comedies and that these contracts alone run into the thousands of theatres that are showing these pictures each week.

Successful Paramount Contest

Results of Selling Campaign Are Announced

THAT this year's Paramount Week contest among the Famous Players-Lasky exchanges was the closest ever conducted by the company is evidenced in the announcement just made by Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, that each of the three prizes had to be divided between two offices. The Washington and Seattle offices were awarded first place, dividing equally the $3,000 first prize. Second place was given to the Philadelphia and St. Louis offices, each receiving $1,000, and Buffalo and Los Angeles won third place, each receiving $500.

No contest ever conducted by the company was decided with such infinite care, according to Mr. Lichtman. The officials who were appointed to select the prize winners labored for days and figured from every conceivable angle in order to give the first three places to only three exchanges, if possible. But it was so close, says Mr. Lichtman, that it would have been impossible in each case to give one exchange the advantage over the other without doing an injustice to one. The declaring of a tie for first, second and third place was the only thing left to do.

In addition to the prizes given by the company, the Washington, Seattle and Philadelphia and Los Angeles offices received additional money through the bonuses offered shortly after the campaign opened by District Managers W. E. Smith, of Philadelphia, and Herman Wobber, of San Francisco. These additional incentives evidently were sufficient to put the Smith and Wobber men on their toes, so that four of their offices are figured among the first six.

The total gross receipts from film rentals during Paramount Week, September 5-11, was $1,012,252.64 This, it is stated, is by far the biggest single week's business in the history of the company. Already the Branch Managers are laying their plans for next year's contest and they have announced their determination to make the total for Paramount Week, 1921, nearer two millions than one.

Big Demand for "Fantomas"

Exhibitors Line - Up for New Serial Fox Reports

A SPECIAL representative of Fox Film Corporation who has just returned from a trip across the continent reports great enthusiasm among exhibitors following announcement from the Fox offices that "Fantomas" had been chosen as the second serial to be produced and released by William Fox.

This series of detective stories from the pens of Marcel Allain and Pierre Souvestre, the French authors, and adapted for the screen by Edward Sedgwick—who is also the director—is now well under way at the Fox studios in West 55th street, New York City. The release of the first of the twenty episodes will follow immediately the last episode of "Bride 13" which is now playing to tremendous success.

The Fox branch managers have already received many bookings for "Fantomas" from exhibitors who never before have shown serials in their theatres, and those who are running "Bride 13" are fast falling in line—all eager to secure first runs on the new serial. Several of the managers state that they have received from many exhibitors contracts which were unsolicited on their part, due to the fact that it has been impossible to cover all exhibitors in the short period since the first announcement.

William Fox promises that his second serial "Fantomas" will surpass even "Bride 13" as an attraction. This new serial will be in twenty episodes instead of the usual fifteen. This serial, it is said, will be marked by the usual number of thrilling moments left at the end of each episode. There will not be merely the question of what happened to the girl, but what happened to the girl, her sweetheart, the detective, Fantomas, and the girl's father; and also what happened to the mysterious Woman in Black.

According to those who have seen the first ten episodes of "Fantomas" there are more thrills and stunts per episode in it than in a half dozen ordinary serials, Fox states. "Fantomas" has a well-defined story from which the sensation develops naturally.

R. A. Walsh Completes New Production

With the exception of one scene, cutting and editing has been completed by R. A. Walsh on his third independent production which Mayflower will present as a First National attraction. Miriam Cooper heads the cast.

Mary Wynn, to be seen in Gayety Comedies, made by Christie and distributed by Educational

First National Pictures Open Arkansas Houses

Three newly-opened motion picture houses have been added to the list of theatres that are supplying the public in Arkansas. They are the Majestic at Corning, the Garden at Stuttgart and the New Empire at Jonesboro.

The Corning and Stuttgart houses were erected at a cost of $50,000 each and are comfortable and modern in every sense. "The River's End," produced by Marshall Neilan was the initial attraction at the Corning house, while "In Old Kentucky," starring Anita Stewart, opened the doors of the Stuttgart theatre.

The New Empire at Jonesboro is an addition to the chain already owned by the Jonesboro Amusement Company. It seats 1250. "Yes or No," starring Norma Talmadge and distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., was the opening attraction at this new house.

Prominent Modiste Is Engaged by Metro

Under an arrangement just completed by Bayard Veiller, director of production at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, Cal., the well-known Fifth Avenue modiste, Henri Bendel, will design all the frocks to be used in the ensemble scenes as well as the costumes worn by the stars in their forthcoming productions.

The signing of the modiste is the result of the realization by Metro officials that women are keenly interested in the way the artists of the screen dress, explain Metro officials.

Fox Melodrama Being Well Received

"While New York Sleeps," the 1920 cinemelodrama of life in the great American metropolis presented by William Fox and directed by Charles J. Brabin, continues its unprecedented success throughout the country, according to the producers.

One of the most notable triumphs scored by this drama was achieved at the Murat theatre in Indianapolis, where it ran for a week to the largest business ever recorded for a motion picture in that theatre, states Fox.

Griffith Named as Sponsor

Producer Approves of Florida as a Producing Ground, It is Stated

ACCORDING to an article appearing in the Dallas Journal of November 5, another champion of Florida as a film-production center is found in the person of D. W. Griffith. This endorsement from an authority such as Mr. Griffith has given the promoters of the movement to make Florida, and especially Jacksonville, the third seat of picture-production in America great encouragement, and it is expected that the interest already stimulated by the movement will be considerably enhanced by this new pronouncement.

The Griffith endorsement was given, it is stated, when the producer was stopping recently at Dallas, Tex., en route from Florida to California. Mr. Griffith, according to the newspaper account, recommended that a large theatre be erected in Dallas for the staging of legitimate productions as the city is at present lacking in this particular. Following his expression of "moral support and possible financial backing" for such a project, the producer turned his remarks to Florida and its film producing possibilities. An excerpt from the Dallas Journal follows:

"Jacksonville, Fla., is bidding to become the moving-picture center of the world, Mr. Griffith said, and seventeen big producers already have accepted the invitation of Jacksonville to locate there. He said the Florida city has raised $2,500,000 and is offering free studio sites.

"'Florida far surpasses California as an ideal place for movie production,' Mr. Griffith said. 'Then, too, the people are tired of California scenery and want a change.'

"Mr. Griffith does not think he will move his place of operations from California to Florida, although he considers Florida offers superior inducements.

"'I always will have a friendly feeling for the South, because of the reception that the "The Birth of a Nation" received in this section,' Mr. Griffith said. 'The South helped me to make a success as a movie producer.'"

To Film Jack London Novel

Metro Engages Milton Sills, Ora Carew and Nigel Barrie for Cast

MILTON SILLS, Ora Carew, and Nigel Barrie have been selected by Bayard Veiller, director of productions at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, Cal., as the foremost trio of players for the forthcoming all-star cast production of "What Is the Matter with Marriage?" This photodramatic special is to be a picturization of Jack London's popular novel, "The Little Lady of the Big House." It will be directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald.

The three players engaged for the production will enact the respective roles of the traditional dramatic triangle—Miss Carew as the woman, Mr. Sills opposite her as the man, and Mr. Barrie as "the other man."

Milton Sills recently completed an eight months' engagement with Famous Players, by whom he was featured in "Behold My Wife," and "The Faith Healer," two recent releases. Previous to this he played opposite the Metro star, Viola Dana, in "Dangerous to Men."

Ora Carew will play the part of the wife. For several years this screen luminary has appeared in a great variety of pictures, as featured player or star. Her debut was by the comedy route. Among some of her best known pictures are 'Go West, Young Man," "Too Many Millions," "Love's Protege," "Lost," and "Peddler of Lies." Her most recent engagement was with Famous Players.

Nigel Barrie has been a featured player and has supported screen stars for a number of years.

Offer Attracts Exhibitors

World M. P. Corporation Reports a Widespread Response to Proposal

AS a result of series of advertisements inserted in the trade journals by the World Motion Picture Corporation recently, numerous letters of inquiry have been received at the company's home office, it is stated. The advertisements were in the form of discussions and explanations of the straightforward policy the World organization has adapted.

A representative of the organization has expressed the opinion that the exhibitors of the country are eager to investigate thoroughly any proposition which assures them of a square deal.

"It is high time," this representative states, "that the producer give the exhibitor a chance. It is time to grant him the business courtesies allowed to other business firms. For that reason, and the reason that we have faith in the business judgment of the exhibitor, we have offered him a proposition unheard of in the history of the picture industry. Our idea has been criticized and ridiculed. We expect to be the organization which laughs last. You know the old story about him who laughs last."

The World representative stated that the organization was confident its square deal policy would work to its credit.

Although the release date of the first issue of the "World's News Pictures" has not been announced attention is called to the fact that the offer of five weeks free service to the exhibitor is to be withdrawn on November 25.

Grace Darmond and T. Roy Barnes in the Robertson-Cole super-special "So Long Letty."

Reports Favorable on "So Long Letty"

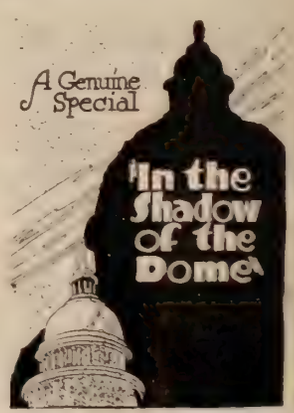
Simultaneously with the Broadway showing of "So Long Letty," the Robertson-Cole special produced by Al Christie and based on the Oliver Morosco musical comedy of the same name, come many reports from the Middle West and from the Pacific Coast indicating that the picture is "going over" as the comedy-drama success of the year, declares Robertson-Cole officials.

The warmth of the production's reception in all parts of the country, as evinced by the speedy and satisfactory contracts which have been made, the stamp of approval placed by national and regional trade papers, and the commendatory newspaper reviews which have followed all showings, are taken to indicate that Robertson-Cole, in this production, presents a desirable attraction.

"Edgar, the Explorer," Now in Exchanges

The seventh in the series of two-reel "Edgar" comedies written for Goldwyn by Booth Tarkington is now in all the twenty-two Goldwyn branch exchanges. It is entitled "Edgar, the Explorer."

In "Edgar, the Explorer," the creator of Penrod has taken his screen hero on an imaginative exploring expedition into darkest Africa. Edgar is a great hero in his imaginary African adventures but when he comes to reducing them to actuality in the backyard of his home with his playmates as African kings and princesses, etc., trouble begins.



A David G. Fischer Production

The association of Avery Hopwood with the Famous Players - Lasky Corporation will cover a period of at least three years, according to the terms of the famous playwright's recently signed contract in which he agrees to write original screen plays exclusively for Paramount.

This statement, according to a telegram received from the Coast, was made at Los Angeles Friday by Jesse L. Lasky, Vice - President in Charge of Production of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, who told for the first time the full story of Mr. Hopwood's visit to Hollywood and the Lasky studio.

Mr. Hopwood's first picture story is to be for Cecil B. De Mille, who is most enthusiastic over the theme, for it deals with a subject in which he has long been interested. It will probably follow the super-all-star De-Mille production of "Anatol," which the producer is now planning.

Prologue Suggestions in Press-Book for "813"

A feature of the press-book published by Robertson-Cole for its release of "813" a picturization of one of the famous Arsene Lupin stories, is the prologue suggestions contained. One of the most attractive of these stunts centers about a velvet drop used to represent a huge clock, of the old "grandfather clock" type, which conceals a dancer. When the hands reach 8:13 on the face of the clock, the dancer, aided by a roller-shade device, suddenly drops out and performs a number of steps. The stunt is described in detail both as to the setting entailed and the mode of procedure to be followed in staging the prologue. Numerous other exploitation stunts and interesting prologue suggestions are included in the campaign book.

New Manager for Educational on Coast

Jules H. Wolf last week assumed the management of the Los Angeles office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., which has been temporarily under the supervision of Irving M. Lesser.

Earle Williams, star of "Diamonds Adrift," his new Vitagraph production. Beatrice Burnham is his leading lady.

Rialto to Show "The Furnace"

Report Heavy Bookings for Wm. Taylor Realart Special

"THE FURNACE", William D. Taylor's second special producion for Realart has been booked by Dr. Riesenfeld for the Rialto theatre, Nov. 21-27. Realart also announces that "The Furnace" has been booked for the Loew circuit. The Loew showing will begin in New York Dec. 13.

In the Loew circuit, "The Furnace" will be played as follows: New York and environs about eighty-one days; Cleveland, two weeks; Toledo, one week; Rochester, one week; Dayton, one week; Washington indefinitely.

Other bookings are reported to be coming in rapidly from exhibitors in every territory. Manager S. Z. Poli, of the S. Z. Poli Circuit, has booked the super-production. This circuit includes Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury, Hartford, and Meridan, Conn.

"The Furnace" will also be shown by Manager W. H. Harris at the Grand theatre, Columbus, Ohio, and by Manager A. M. Schaefer at the Grand theatre, Dayton, Ohio.

Realart announces that Manager J. Laurie has booked the picture for the Modern and Bacon theatres, in Boston. Other bookings are the Madison theatre, Detroit, John H. Kunsky, manager; Dome theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, Joe Trunk, manager; and the Terrace theatre, Danville, Ill., Thomas P. Ronana, manager.

The story of "The Furnace" is adapted from the novel by "Pan", the famous anonymous English author. It deals with marriage and divorce in what is declared to be a strikingly powerful and novel manner. Folly Vallance, London actress, and Anthony Bond, millionaire Canadian, celebrate their wedding at the fashionable Church of St. Mary Magdalene. It is a brilliant affair, attended in full force by members of society. The future of the young couple seems happily assured. No sooner is the ceremony over, however, than an unfortunate misunderstanding causes suspicion. As the weeks pass, this suspicion results in estrangement. Anthony refuses to accept his wife's explanation; he grows moody and more and more suspicious. Folly begins a round of lavish entertaining in an effort to forget. Instead of a happy married life, their existence is a turmoil. The climax of the picture is described as one of the strongest and most gripping in any picture of the year.

Many lavish settings and elaborate scenes form the background for the action of the story, it is stated. There is an airplane honeymoon trip, a magnificent masquerade ball, an elaborate lawn party and a wedding said to be patterned after that of Princess Patricia. The scenes of the story are laid in England and Monte Carlo.

Agnes Ayres plays the part of Folly Vallance. Opposite Miss Ayres in the role of Anthony Bond is Jerome Patrick. Milton Sills is seen as Keene Mordaunt, Anthony's best friend. He has the thankless task of trying to save Folly from the result of her own actions. Another in the cast is Theodore Roberts, who plays the part of the irascible old General Brent with his usual skill. Betty Francisco carries the role of Patricia, the general's daughter, while Helen Dunbar appears as Mrs. Brent. Others in the cast are Mayme Kelso, Robert Bolder, Lucien Littlefield, Fred Turner and Edward Martindel.

Finston With Concert League

OF interest to exhibitors is the announcement made this week by the New York Concert League, of its affiliation with Nathaniel W. Finston, for the past three years musical director at the Capitol theatre and conductor at the Rialto theatre.

At the age of 15 Mr. Finston began his musical career as first violinist in the Fifth Avenue Hotel Orchestra. At the age of 16 he was leading second violinist for the Russian Symphony Orchestra. At the age of 19 he made a tour as far as California with the Orchestra as Concert master. At 20 he became assistant concert master of the Old Boston Opera Company, thus becoming familiar with over fifty operas. On his return to New York he joined the New York Symphony and later the New York Philharmonic as first violinist, incidentally playing second violin in a notable quartette with Altschuler and Saslavsky.

He left the Philharmonic to become assistant conductor at the Rialto where his ability was quick to be recognized and he soon became full conductor. When the Capitol decided to inaugurate a symphony orchestra Finston was invited to become general musical director.

His splendid achievements there were commented on by critics the country over. They hailed this young master not alone for the splendid way he conducted the operas but because of his thorough mastery of picture music. Such leading critics as Max Smith of the American, Charles Isaacson of the Globe, Peiser of the Musical America, hailed this young American musician as one of the foremost conductors of the land, comparing the performances to those of other opera companies and symphony organizations.

In view of this affiliation the New York Concert League announced a vast expansion of its activities so that motion picture theatres can secure not alone soloists from the League but scores, prologues, special orchestrations—in fact anvthing in the line of music for the motion picture. Mr. Finston will score all big pictures, set the prologues for these pictures and orchestrate any particular numbers. Orchestrations, scores and prologues will be made to meet the demand of the larger and smaller theatres and their comparative sized orchestras.

Mr. Finston has set aside a certain time so that he might be available as consulting expert and guest conductor for motion picture theatres for their openings or for special occasions. Several of the new theatres have invited Mr. Finston to come as guest conductor and outline a permanent musical policy for the house which he might visit periodically and keep constantly under his direction. Mr. Finston's headquarters will be in Chicago where he will be working hand in hand with the New York office at 1664 Broadway.

Spectacular Features in Pathe News No. 89

Though competing for interest with such news items as the final events in the presidential election and Britain's mine strike, the spectacular features of Pathe News No. 89 assume leading importance. Scenes taken aboard the Esperanto during the race with the Delawana for fishing-boat supremacy of the Atlantic, and pictures of workmen painting the network of cables above the Brooklyn Bridge, are said to form a thrilling combination.

Some extraordinary pictures of the international schooner race, in which the United States entry, Esperanto, defeated the Canadian boat Delawana off Halifax, are an exclusive Pathe News feature. The Pathe man aboard the victorious schooner was Jake Coolidge, who got flashes of the crew changing canvas during the contest, the rival ships traveling under a cloud of sail, and some of the thrills experienced by sailors when the horizon shot up and the waves washed over the deck of the Esperanto.

The Brooklyn Bridge was treated recently to a new coat of paint. The workmen are shown as they crawl about on cables 270 feet above the river in these scenes from Pathe News. They have something over 14,000 miles of wire to coat with paint. A feature worthy of remark in these pictures is the revelation of some of the "stunts" performed by news-cameramen in the view of the operator's ascent with his paraphernalia up the huge cable to the tower from which he took pictures of the bridge.

Chester Bennett will direct Antonio Moreno in "Three Sevens," his first feature production for Vitagraph, according to a telegram of Albert E. Smith received from the West Coast this week.

Production on this picture has already commenced, and after a few interiors have been filmed at the Hollywood studio, the entire company will journey to Florence, Arizona, where some scenes will be made at the Arizona State Penitentiary.

"Three Sevens" is an adaptation of the novel of the same title by Perley Poore Sheehan.

Nat'l Ass'n Is Kept Busy

Many Committees Meet During Week: 30 Censor Fights Waging

THE various committees of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry are reported to have been unusually active during the past week. With censorship fights in nearly thirty states and other important legislative matters including taxation, Sunday opening, etc., the coming Legislative year promises to be the most active in the history of the association.

The sub-committees of the Censorship Committee have held a number of important meetings. The Committee on Standards, of which James R. Quirk is chairman, is visiting the various producers with a view of having a higher class of titles selected for their pictures. Many of the advocates for censorship have argued that while the pictures were all right they objected to the titles that were being used by some producers.

The Vigilance Committee of which Mr. Quirk is also chairman, is continuing its work of investigating various stock motion picture schemes.

An important meeting of the new Legislative Committee, of which Charles C. Pettijorn is chairman, has been called for next Tuesday. This committee will take up the question of Federal Taxation and Sunday opening.

President William A. Brady has appointed Saul E. Rogers of the Fox Film Corporation as a member of the Executive Committee and also a member of the Finance Committee.

The Executive Committee has accepted the resignation of Arthur S. Friend as a member of the Board of Directors and as a member of the Executive Committee. Lee Counselman has been selected to succeed Mr. Friend on these committees. The Executive Committee refused to accept the resignation of Mr. Friend from the other important committees of which he is a member. Mr. Friend has been one of the most active workers in the National Association since its inception and has also been a member of the more important committees. At present he is chairman of the Finance Committee, a member of the Censorship and Legislative Committees. During the recent strike of the laboratories, he took a very prominent part in bringing about a settlement with the union.

Studio Going Full Blast

Long Island Plant of F. P.-Lasky Reaches Record Point in Output

WITH eight Paramount pictures in the process of production, the high water mark of the activities at the new Long Island studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been registered. Although the new studio has been in operation but two months Arthur V. Smith, general manager, has succeeded in filling the two mammoth stages almost to capacity.

Dorothy Dalton in "The Teaser," a story by J. Clarkson Miller, which was started last week under the direction of R. William Neill, brought the productions up to the present record mark. Mae Murray in "The Painted Lily," by Clara Beranger, is busy every day at the studio. She is being directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Tom Forman, working on "The Quarry" with Thomas Meighan, and Hugh Ford, directing Ethel Clayton in "The Price of Possession," are adding their bit to the studio activities while the John S. Robertson production of "Sentimental Tommy," the winsome story by Sir James M. Barrie, is nearing completion.

Eddie Dillon is finishing "The Education of Elizabeth," with Billie Burke in the stellar role, and Charles Maigne is at present cutting and assembling John Fox's "The Kentuckians," which will feature Monte Blue, who came from the coast especially to make this picture. The final scenes of the George Fitzmaurice production, "Money Worship," by Ouida Bergere, have been filmed and Director Fitzmaurice is now assembling the film into its final form.

New Weeklies Help in Americanization

The Americanism Campaign of the Motion Picture Industry has been greatly strengthened by the cooperation of all of the News Weeklies. President William A. Brady recently called together the editors of the screen weeklies and outlined to them just what the industry was attempting to do in its fight against Bolshevism. Col. Arthur Woods, the acting chairman of the Americanism Committee, also spoke to the editors. It was learned that the editors themselves were attempting from time to time to put into their weeklies some Americanization subject. Under the new plan that was agreed upon they will endeavor to have one scene a week in the pictorial news representing an Americanization subject. They also agreed to furnish the Americanization Committee with the title of the subject for their files, a report of which is to be made to Congress this winter. The following editors participated in the conference: Pell Mitchell, World Motion Pictures Co.; Emanuel Cohen, Pathe News; L. J. Darmaur, Gaumont Co.; H. Hancock, Fox News; E. B. Hattrick, International; D. Selznick, Selznick News; and Ray Hall, Screen News and Kinograms

Mystery Picture Being Edited for Goldwyn

Photographing was completed some time ago, and the editing and titling is nearly finished on a mystery picture on which Goldwyn is basing high hopes for an artistic and box office success of unusual proportion. It is "A Voice in the Dark," picturized from Ralph E. Dyar's theatrical success of two seasons ago with the same title.

"A Voice in the Dark" will be the second of Goldwyn's featured Frank Lloyd productions, the first having been "The Great Lover," now in all Goldwyn exchanges for inspection by exhibitors. Mr. Lloyd is now directing his third featured production, "The Water Lily," an original screen story by Gouverneur Morris.

Ramsey Wallace acts the leading male role while Irene Rich plays opposite him.

Metro announces the completion of the final scenes for Buster Keaton's comedy, "Neighbors," and Viola Dana's new starring vehicle, "The Offshore Pirates." Keaton celebrated his birthday at the studio, refusing to take any time off until the last scenes of his fourth two-reel comedy were "shot," states Metro. The same evening, however, the star comedian was the guest of honor at a birthday party given by his parents. The entire studio personnel was present for the festivities.

Viola Dana and twenty members of her supporting company have returned to Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood, Cal., after three weeks spent at Catalina Island, filming the concluding exterior scenes of her newest starring vehicle, "The Offshore Pirate," from the Saturday Evening Post story by F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Miss Dana and her company made the return trip from Catalina to San Pedro, the harbor of Los Angeles, aboard the yacht "Comfort," which furnished the setting for practically all the scenes taken during the stay at the island.

Reid and Enid Bennett Pictures Pleased

One of the novelties of the year is promised exhibitors by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in "Always Audacious," Wallace Reid's newest starring vehicle which, with Enid Bennett in the Thomas H. Ince production, "Her Husband's Friend," is scheduled for Paramount release November 14.

While the Reid picture is classed as a novelty, it should not be classed as a freak picture. Its chief claim upon the interest of the spectator is the fact that nearly half of its footage is in double exposure.

The original story of the picture appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. "Toujours de l'Audace" was the title and Ben Ames Williams was the author. Tom Geraghty the scenario and James Cruze directed.

Marjorie Benton Cooke, whose death in the Orient this year was such a distinct loss to literature, was the author of "The Incubus," from which Enid Bennett's picture, "Her Husband's Friend," was adapted. C. Carol Kapleau wrote the scenario and the picture was produced at the Thomas H. Ince studios under the direction of Fred Hiblo.

Two scenes from "Prisoners of Love," a Goldwyn release starring Betty Compson

Goldwyn Pictures at Capitol

Four Goldwyn Films at Big House for November Bill

NOVEMBER has been Goldwyn month at the Capitol theatre, New York, the world's largest theatre. One of Goldwyn's biggest fourth year pictures, Gouverneur Morris' "The Penalty," is closing its week's showing with the first of Betty Compson's starring vehicles, released through Goldwyn, "Prisoners of Love," booked for next week. The first two weeks of the month were also devoted to Goldwyn pictures.

"Prisoners of Love," to be screened next week, was produced and personally supervised by Miss Compson, who also makes her first appearance as a star in it. It is the first picture in which Miss Compson has been seen since her tremendous hit in George Loane Tucker's production of "The Miracle Man," and the Capitol has its first showing. The cast was personally selected by Miss Compson for its acting ability and a reading of the names in it shows that Miss Compson is not at all afraid to measure her own acting ability up against the best support obtainable. Roy Stewart, who plays one of the two leading masculine roles, has starred in the past and is now being starred again; Emory Johnson made such a hit as the second leading man that Miss Compson engaged him for her second production. Ralph Lewis is one of the best character actors in the profession. Others in the cast are Claire McDowell, Clara Horton and Kate Toncray. Arthur Rosson, of the Tucker staff producing "The Miracle Man," directed the picture.

Another player developed into stellar material by "The Miracle Man" has the leading role in the Goldwyn picture which was screened at the Capitol this week—Lon Chaney, who leaped into instant fame with his characterization of The Frog in the Tucker production. His acting of the role of Blizzard, the legless and mentally twisted hero of Gouverneur Morris' most popular novel, "The Fenalty," stamped him as one of the screen's most powerful actors and a personality to be counted on in the screen world. The production was directed by Wallace Worsley. Ethel Grey Terry, Claire Adams and James Mason shared with Mr. Chaney in acting honors.

The first Goldwyn picture at the Capitol in November was Tom Moore in the screen version of Augustin MacHugh's stage farce, "Officer 666," supported Jean Calhoun, Priscilla Bonner Jerome Patrick, Raymond Hatton and others. The reviewers found that the star had one of his best fitting parts in this rapid-fire mystery farce.

"Officer 666" was followed by a Reginald Barker production, "The Branding Iron," from Katherine Newlin Burt's best seller Western novel of the same title. Its all-star cast was headed by Barbara Castleton, James Kirkwood, Richard Tucker, Sydney Ainsworth, Russell Simpson, Albert Roscoe and Gertrude Astor. The picture made a powerful impression upon the public and the reviewers alike, justifying Goldwyn's claim that it should be classed among the season's biggest dramatic productions.

Stoll Urges Varied Scenes

Believes Picture Should Be Made in Locale Called for by Story

AN article in a recent issue of the New York Times Sunday Magazine quoted D. W. Griffith as saying that "Picture consumers are eager for new settings. The territory around Los Angeles has been filmed to death. There is a little stream out there which is used so much that the producers have to stake off their claims on its banks to keep from photographing one another. Sometimes three companies are found shooting along its banks at once."

The foregoing called forth a statement from George King, the president of the Stoll Film Corporation of America. "The spirit of what Mr. Griffith says exactly accords with remarks I have heard uttered by many exhibitors," he said. "While of course it is true the article quoted was designed to point out the advantages of New York as a producing as well as a distributing center, nevertheless I believe there is bound to be a definite commercial field for motion pictures that have been photographed in what we may describe as fresh surroundings.

"Consequently I feel sanguine that the productions of the Stoll company, photographed in the British Isles and on the Continent or in Africa, will have deep interest for the picturegoers of the United States. Word has just reached my office that one of the Stoll producing units is going to Northern Africa for a number of scenes. The pictures that will portray the adventures of Sherlock Holmes will be photographed wherever in England the story may indicate—and "Of course, I do not wish to be understood as magnifying the importance of backgrounds to the detriment of story, direction and acting, but, other things being equal, I think exhibitors will agree with me in the statement that fresh backgrounds, especially when these possess rare pictorial and frequently historic values, add materially to the charm of motion picture entertainment."

"Films Worth Seeing"

Twelve current films are listed in Judge under the heading, "Pictures Worth Seeing". Those marked with an asterisk are designated as being "exceptionally good" and in this category are placed five out of the twelve titles.

Realart officials feel considerably elated over the fact that two of their pictures, "39 East" and "A Cumberland Romance" are included in the distinguished quintette, the other three being "Over the Hill", "She Was a Vamp" and "Humoresque."

The list of twelve rated as "worth seeing" was completed by the addition of these seven titles: "It's a Great Life", "The Jack-Knife Man", "Way Down East", "Honest Hutch", "Madame X", "Nomads of the North", and "Behold, My Wife!"

Cobb-Arbuckle Comedy to be Shown

Combine two of the funniest men in the world, author and actor respectively, in a motion picture and you have something to conjure with. Thus with Irvin Cobb as author and Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle as star (by arrangement with Joseph M. Schenck) of Paramount's "The Life of the Party," Famous Players-Lasky holds that this is the greatest comedy of the season. The picture opened a pre-release engagement, the first in the country, at the New York Rivoli Sunday.

First Selling Class Ends

27 Are Graduated from Famous Players School of Salesmanship

THE first class of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's school of salesmanship, which was in session four weeks under the direction of Fred Creswell, Field Sales Supervisor, closed last week. Out of a total of twenty-eight men enrolled for the class, twenty-seven were successful in passing the examinations, winning the opportunity to fill positions as salesmen at Famous Players-Lasky branch offices.

The course was capped by a test which was necessary for each man to pass before he could be considered as acceptable as a salesman for the organization. Immediately after General Sales Manager S. R. Kent was given the list of graduates by Mr. Creswell the assignments of the men were announced. The class was officially closed on Thursday and the new salesmen departed over the week-end for their destinations.

Following is a list of the graduates and the Branch Exchanges to which they were appointed:

D. W. Morrow, Boston; H. E. Underhill, Boston; L. B. Butler, Albany; E. G. Zorn, Pittsburg; L. C. Home, Cincinnati; H. M. Messiter, Buffalo; W. R. Hurley, Buffalo; E. E. Sutton, Philadelphia; A. J. Jeffrey, Boston; A. S. Creelin, Boston; D. Kimelman, Pittsburg; W. S. Allison, Cleveland; A. L. Hancock, Indianapolis; C. A. Wilson, Detroit; R. H. Schriener, Cincinnati; I. K. Fearn, Washington; J. D. Powers, New Haven; S. Cahen, San Francisco; J. W. Hauck, Seattle; C. Ponedel, Los Angeles; J. A. English, St. Louis; E. I. Reed, Denver; W. P. Callahan, St. Louis; L. W. Tenner, Des Moines; J. B. Gilday, Kansas City; E. M. McFarland, Omaha; G. J. Schaefer, New York.

Of these men, only Messrs. Hancock, Fearn, Powers, Cahen, Hauck, Ponedel, Reed, Tenner, McFarland and Schaefer had ever been previously associated with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and to many of the remaining seventeen, motion pictures was an entirely new business, although most of them had had previous sales experience in other lines.

Excited Over Word "New"

Rival Exhibitors Both Claim Their Ray Picture to Be "New"

A LIVELY controversy is reported from Columbia, S. C., and as having stirred motion picture circles in that city last week.

When the Rivoli theatre booked Charles Ray's "Peaceful Valley," an Associated First National attraction, the opposition house, the Imperial, announced a Charles Ray offering, "An Old Fashioned Boy," released through Paramount. Thus far the showmanship may be regarded as an unexceptionable. But from that point on things began to happen.

Gerald Gallagher, manager of the Imperial, came out with a half-page of newspaper space, addressing "the lovers of fair play," announcing that the statement claiming "Peaceful Valley" as the only new picture, was false. He stated that "An Old Fashioned Boy" was also a new picture.

This statement that the original announcement was incorrect, brought forth, a vigorous reply from Manager Lester of the Rivoli theatre. His advertisement read as follows:

"The Paramount and Artcraft Pictures Corporation, after losing their most lovable and popular male star, Charles Ray, decided to hold up releasing the picture that Charles Ray starred in prior to January 1, 1920, and to release them as new productions to compete with the new releases of Charles Ray's own productions released through the First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc."

The Rivoli management appears to have furnished the last word in so far as newspaper argument is concerned, no refutation or rebuttal being forthcoming from the Imperial, it is reported by First National. The effect of the incident on the public is said to be watched with keen interest in Columbia motion picture circles, while the unquestionably correct use of the term "new" by one theatre and the claims to equal correctness in the other is said to have caused considerable perplexed discussion among the motion picture patrons of the town, to aid in the settlement of which Charles Ray came to the aid of Manager Lester with this telegram: "I finished the production of 'An Old Fashioned Boy' prior to January, 1920. 'Peaceful Valley' was completed in May, 1920.

"CHARLES RAY."

Screen Writers Magazine Is Launched

A national magazine for photoplay writers has been launched by the Palmer Photoplay Corporation of Los Angeles. Known as "The Photoplaywright," it will be published monthly and will contain articles and information for screen writers, both amateur and professional. It is claimed to be the first magazine devoted exclusively to the interests of photoplay writers.

"The Photoplaywright" was started nearly two years ago as a house organ of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation, and was distributed exclusively to students of the Palmer school of photoplay writing. Now, however, in larger form, it branches out as a full fledged magazine, available to all who are interested.

Recent contributors include Finis Fox, Frank Lloyd, Thomas H. Ince, H. H. Van Loan and Cecil B. DeMille.

"Stolen Moments" Due on December List

More than usual interest is reported by Pioneer to center on the scheduled release next month by the Pioneer Film Corporation of "Stolen Moments", a feature production, which was made by the American Cinema Corporation and in which is starred Marguerite Namara, the dramatic opera celebrity.

The entire photoplay is described to be one of massive elegance. In this colossal, emotional drama is found the last word in scenic embellishment, declares Pioneer. James Vincent, the man who is responsible for the dramatic and artistic success of "Stolen Moments", has to his credit a score or more successful productions.

"Sentimental Tommy" Has Old-Time Actor

Malcolm Bradley, who has a record of fifty years on the stage, thirty-four years on Broadway and fourteen seasons with E. H. Sothern, has come to the screen.

Simultaneously with the celebration of Mr. Bradley's sixty-ninth birthday John S. Robertson, who is making a special production of Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" for Paramount, signed him for the interpretation of Dominie Cathro and Mr. Bradley began his first scene in a motion picture at the new Long Island City studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Realism to Be Keynote of "Old Swimmin' Hole"

A real "Old Swimmin' Hole," with real red-blooded kids cavorting in it just as James Whitcomb Riley pictured them in his immortal poem, will be the central feature of the film adaptation of this classic, which Charles Ray has been producing recently. To obtain this bit of realism Mr. Ray's business agents had to sign a year's lease on a stretch of creek on one of the oldest Spanish grants in southern California.

"Tarzen" Serial Selling in Southern States

The First National Exhibitors Circuit, Inc., of Virginia, who will distribute "The Son of Tarzan" in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Alabama, have branch officers in Atlanta and Richmond, Va. The company is headed by R. D. Craver, and Frank Ferrandini is secretary and treasurer.

The Atlanta exchange, which is located at 146 Marietta street, is under the managership of C. R. Beacham, and the Richmond exchange, which is also the general offices of the company, is managed by C. F. Schining. It is located at 904 East Broad street.

The South is expected to receive "The Son of Tarzan" with open arms. First National of Virginia, will thoroughly exploit the picture and it is stated, will make use of the doll "Geeka" in putting the wonder serial across.

Cast Announced for Fox Serial, "Fantomas"

William Fox announces the cast for his second serial "Fantomas." The story of "Fantomas" revolves around the activities of an arch criminal, Fantomas. This character is being portrayed by Edward Roseman. Edna Murphy has a leading role in "Fantomas." Eva Balfour also has a big part. Johnny Wauker is playing Miss Murphy's sweetheart. Others in the cast are Lionel Adams and John Willard.

Alphonz Ethier Cast in Big Role for Metro

Metro has engaged Alphonz Ethier, the well-known actor, for the role of the Messenger from the planet Mars in the forthcoming Maxwell Karger screen production of the successful stage play, "A Message from Mars," camera work upon which has been started at Metro's New York studios in West Sixty-first street. Bert Lytell is the star, and the production is personally directed by Maxwell Karger.

One-Reeler in Ascendency

Bruce Scenics and Chester Outings and Screenics in Demand, is Report

EDUCATIONAL Film Corporation reports that the past two months has seen the greatest increase in the demand for single-reel subjects in the five years' history of the organization. This applies especially to the Bruce Scenics Beautiful, the Chester Outings, and the Screenics, it is stated. The marked jump is attributed not only to the fact that the public is demanding more and more of these pictures, but that the release of its single-reel specials has demonstrated the worth of such pictures to the box office.

According to the same authority, the first of these specials to be released, "Modern Centaurs," is showing an increased booking every week, although it was first shown some three months ago, and every other single-reel has shown a gain over those that have gone just before. In a number of instances exchanges have been forced to order additional prints over the issue of the first month to fill the demand.

"A great share of the exhibitors," says Educational, "long ago passed the time when they regarded the quality single-reel picture merely as a filler, but it remains a fact that there were a large number who yielded merely to the public demand and who could not be convinced that such pictures actually brought people to the theatre who would stay away otherwise.

"It has remained for the single-reel specials that we have issued to demonstrate to these exhibitors that these pictures are real audience pullers. 'Modern Centaurs,' the wonder record of Portuguese cavalrymen; 'The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes,' the National Geographic Society's picturization of the Mt. Katmai region; 'Babe Ruth —How He Knocks His Home Run' and then Annette Kellermann in 'The Art of Diving' have encouraged the advertising of these pictures, and the result has been that they have actually made more money for theatres than quite a few features.

"We are taking steps to show the exhibitor more and more plainly how he can make money with single reels and the response to our efforts has been little short of astonishing."

Praise for Taylor Picture

Exhibitors and Civic Society Are Pleased by "Soul of Youth"

"I HAVE never seen a picture that impressed me so deeply. I have never seen a picture that was more entertaining. It is fully as entertaining for grown-ups as for children. I consider it the biggest picture of the year. I consider it by far the best picture of the year. It is the only picture I have ever seen which I believe will please every single one who sees it."

This is the unqualified statement of Manager Charles Q. Carlisle of the Auditorium theatre, Saginaw, Michigan, concerning the Wm. D. Taylor special production, "The Soul of Youth" made for Realart.

Mr. Carlisle ran this picture at his theatre the week of Nov. 7th. What others in Saginaw think of the picture may be gathered from the following report addressed to members of the Saginaw Kiwanis Club:

"Gentlemen: Your committee named at last week's meeting to view a screening of the picture, 'The Soul of Youth,' begs leave to report that we attended the screeiing Saturday morning, October 30th, and found the picture to be all that Manager Charles Q. Carlisle claimed for it.

"It might be well to state that we knew nothing of the picture prior to seeing it, other than the fact that Mr. Carlisle had been impressed with it and desired that we secure our own impressions.

"'The Soul of Youth' is a well-connected story of powerful appeal to the youth of the nation and, as such, to every father and mother.

Hodkinson Drive Speeds Up

Atlantic Division Forces Strive to Smash Records in Closing Days

THE representatives and salesmen in the Atlantic division have been making preparttions for the last three weeks to make an overwhelming success of "Hodkinson Month." These preparations have been along very practical lines. Those branches which had contracts on file without dates made every effort to obtain dates and have these set in November. Exhibitors who were "on the fence" for new business were pulled off the fence, signed up and made to give all the dates possible in November, declares W. W. Hodkinson.

Pathe cashiers were urged to look up any uncollected balances on Hodkinson accounts and get these in during November. A special drive is under way to book in groups all the new releases up to January 1st—getting these sales on record in November with play dates or deposits.

The result of these definite lines of work in the Atlantic division is producing the desired results. The branches on the Atlantic seaboard will receive some very substantial bonus checks, it is stated.

Three Unusual Sets in Use at Lasky Studio

Three very unusual settings have been used in Paramount pictures now being filmed at the Lasky studio. The first is a large cafe set, constructed in the Moorish style of architecture. It was used for scenes in "The Faith Healer," the William Vaugh Moody play which George Melford is producing for Paramount.

The second setting is being used by William De Mille in his film version via Paramount of Sir J. M. Barrie's noted play, "What Every Woman Knows," and represents a man's barber shop temporarily converted into the political headquarters of the young hero of the story, who is running for Parliament.

The third setting is the interior of an exclusive yacht club and in this Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has begun, under James Cruze's direction, to enact the opening scenes of his latest Paramount vehicle "The Dollar-A-Year Man" from an original story by Walter Woods. This structure is built to resemble the interior of the large saloon of a ship and is said to be one of the most attractive and unique settings which has ever been seen in the studio.

George Sargent Starts Vitagraph Picture

George L. Sargent, the director of Corinne Griffith's recent successes, has put into production a magazine story of Thomas Edgelow, entitled "It Isn't Being Done This Season," which will be released as a Vitagraph special feature. Mr. Sargent's cast will include the star, Corinne Griffith, supported by Walter Campbell, George Majeroni and others.

Educational Film Exchange of Louisville

Joseph Goldberg is sales manager of the Educational Film Exchange of Kentucky and Tennessee, who have their headquarters in the National Theatre Building, of Louisville. They will handle "The Son of Tarzan" in these two states. Lee L. Goldberg is secretary and treasurer of the exchange, and Fred Levy, president.

Three glimpses of "The Fatal Hour," a Metro production with an all-star cast

Harry M. Berman, general manager of exchanges for Universal, now is making a tour of that film corporation's branches throughout the United States, in the interest of Universal's exploitation drive to help the exhibitor put over the latest Universal-Jewel pictures.

On the eve of his departure from New York, Mr. Berman said:

"Universal is going to get right behind the exhibitor and boost. We are overlooking no bets in the way of helpful cooperation for our exhibitor patrons. We have three big Universal Jewel pictures. "Once to Every Woman," with Dorothy Phillips, "Outside the Law," with Priscilla Dean, and "Foolish Wives," Von Stroheim's latest.

"My present trip is not primarily to visit the various exchanges. I want to visit exhibitors. I want to talk over the exploitation situation with them. I want to find out just how we can help them put big pictures over with the public. We intend to work with each exhibitor in just the way he thinks will be most beneficial."

Expects Heavy Bookings for New Pathe Serial

A statement from the Pathe headquarters, New York City, declares that present indications are that "Velvet Fingers," Pathe serial, starring George B. Seitz with Marguerite Courtot, and scheduled for release December 5, "will fall heir to a wide majority of the bookings recorded on Ruth of the Rockies and in addition acquire many contracts from houses formerly not on the list of serial-showing theatres."

Pathe expects "Velvet Fingers" to live up to the records of each chapter picture released during 1920 in advancing considerably the serial field, which during this year has been appreciably widened with each succeeding Pathe episode offering, according to that distributing organization.

Metro Signs Popular Authors

Montague Glass, Arthur S. Roche, John Russell Engaged

FOUR more well-known writers have been added to the group of prominent authors whose stories are being picturized by Metro Pictures Corporation. They are Montague Glass, Arthur Somers Roche, John Edward Russell and Gene Buck. By the signing of these authors Metro believes that it has made another material step forward in the cause of securing valuable story material for screen adaptation. Some of the other writers whose stories Metro is producing for screen presentation are Irvin S. Cobb, George Kibbe Turner, Donn Byrne, Hulbert Footner, Arthur Stringer, Lucia Chamberlain and Henry C. Rowland.

There are but few Americans today who are not familiar with the famous characters "Abe" and "Mawruss," those humorous, human, joint-proprietors of a wholesale clothing store, who were first brought to the atention of the public in the magazine stories of Montague Glass. These characters with numerous others with whom they are thrown in contact will be woven into picture stories for Metro by Mr. Glass, who will leave in a few days for the West Coast studios of Metro at Hollywood, Cal.

Since 1900 Mr. Glass has been contributing short stories to the magazines and writing novels. His stories dealing with East Side life found instant puopularity with the public. "Potash and Perlmutter" appeared in 1910; "Abe and Mawruss," 1911; "Elkan Lublimer-American," 1912; "Object; Matrimony," 1912; "Competitive Nephew," 1915; "Worrying Won't Win," 1918; "Potash and Perlmutter Settle Things," 1919.

Some of Arthur Somers Roche's best known works are "Loot," "Plunder," "The Sport of Kings," "Ransom," "The Eyes of the Blind," "Uneasy Street' and "Find the Woman," at present appearing in serial form in Cosmopolitan Magazine. He is co-author of "The Scrap of Paper."

John Russell, who has thrilled thousands with his unique stories of out-of-the-way places in all quarters of the world, is a globe trotter of wide experience for his age.

Among John Russell's fascinating stories of the earth's far places are "The Red Mark," "Doubloon Gold," "The Wicks of Macassar," "The Passion Vine," "Jessain," "East of Eastward," "The Price of the Head," "The Lost God," "The Slanted Beam," "Amok," "The Practicing of Christopher" and "The Fourth Man."

According to Mr. Russell's contract he will write six special stories for Metro and will leave shortly for the Hollywood studios.

Gene Buck is known wherever the Ziegfeld "Follies" are known. He was one of the original collaborators on the first one of these famous girl shows ten years ago and has been associated with every one of them since. Also he holds the same position in regard to the "Midnight Frolic."

At present Mr. Buck is collaborating on an opera with Mischa Elman the violinist; on a play for David Warfield with David Belasco and also on another play with Ring Lardner. He is the author of "Zig-Zag" which had a long successful run in the London Hippodrome. A year ago Mr. Buck married Helen Falconer, who was leading lady for Fred Stone in a number of his plays.

Second Cook Comedy Here

"The Hunstman" With Fox Star to Run in Two Broadway Houses

"THE HUNTSMAN," second of the Clyde Cook Special comedies produced and distributed by Fox Film Corporation, duplicated the New York record of the first release of this star, when it ran simultaneously at the Strand and Rivoli theatres on Broadway last week.

The first of the Cook special comedies for Fox was "Kiss Me Quick," and a pre-release of the film was shown for a week at these same houses. The new Fox star broke through the ice of his first night on Broadway. Now comes "The Huntsman," with Cook mounted and beautiful ladies and trick animals and all, and the Rivoli and Strand again "do the simultaneous," both playing it for the comedy feature of the show.

The Fox organization expresses confidence that the reception accorded the new star by his audiences means but one thing—that the sad-faced comedian-contortionist who convulses people with mirth while never cracking a smile, has come to stay, without competition in his field of fun-making.

Clyde Cook is the same comedian who drew crowds to the big Hippodrome in New York a year ago. The success achieved by his first film for William Fox, "Kiss Me Quick," and his second, "The Huntsman," promises great things for his third which is now in process of titling. Jack Blystone directed "The Huntsman."

Plans for DeMille Special

Picture to Have Fine Cast, Famous Drama and Capable Scenario Staff

A STATEMENT recently issued from the New York headquarters of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces the plans of Cecil B. DeMille for his forthcoming Paramount special production, work on which is to be started late in November. The statement follows in part:

"Mr. DeMille has selected a cast from the ranks of his present and past players, which reads like a roster of screen stardom. It will include Wallace Reid, who will play the principal male role; Gloria Swanson, who returns to the screen after an absence of eight months; Elliott Dexter, recently seen to advantage in 'Something to Think About,'; Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels, Agnes Ayers, Theodore Roberts, Theodore Kosloff, Dorothy Cumming and Julia Faye.

"The story in which this galaxy of screen talent will appear, is founded on Arthur Schnitzler's famous drama, 'The Affairs of Anatol.' Written originally for Viennese presentation, it has since been translated into almost every language and has served as a starring vehicle for John Barrymore in New York eight years ago.

"Not satisfied with cornering the star market in players, Mr. DeMille has chosen Jeanie Macpherson, Elmer Harris and Beulah Marie Dix as the nucleus of a stellar scenario staff, who will write the composite scenario. Avery Hopwood, whose plays have been scoring each season in New York, will supervise one episode and it is probable that a fifth writer, as yet unselected, will contribute to the finished manuscript.

"Schnitzler's play is divided into five episodes and although Producer DeMille expects to make several important changes in the basic story, he will follow this divisional system. Each of the feminine principals will thus have one entire episode entirely to herself. Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson and Elliott Dexter form the central trio, who will continue throughout the entire continuity."

To Develop "Action Stills"

WITH the so-called "still" photograph increasing in importance in connection with the production of motion picture entertainment until now it is widely recognized as second in value only to the film itself, William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, after much planning, has succeeded in co-ordinating his production forces to secure "action stills" for every purpose in the exploitation department of his great organization, the Fox Film Corporation announces.

In the past, as many will recall, the still photograph was merely a record for the producer, or director, to assure accuracy of detail in settings and costuming of a picture. The director took his still picture to-day for reference on the morrow to check the detail of his set or the clothes of his players.

Later, with the influx of more progressive showmen into the picture field, still pictures became more frequent.

Mr. Fox has issued instructions to both his Eastern and Western production forces to concentrate every effort in securing photographs with a story in them; pictures that contain at once the quality which attracts the eye of the passer-by, strength, action and contrast in tones.

Pathe's December Releases

Pictures Made by Jesse Hampton, Leonce Perret and George Seitz

THE works of three producers, well known through their previous contributions to the screen, go to make up the group of features which Pathe will release in December. Jesse D. Hampton's "Dice of Destiny," Leonce Perret's "Empire of Diamonds" and the George B. Seitz feature production, temporarily titled "Rogues and Romance", comprise the feature offerings from Pathe for the month.

"Dice of Destiny", which will be the lead-off feature of the month, releasing December 5th, returns H. B. Warner after his conspicuous success under the Pathe banner in "One Hour Before Dawn" and "Felix O'Day". His new vehicle gives him a role similar to the one in which he scored his greatest theatrical hit, that of a notoriously clever crook whose endeavors to go straight form a tale of marked melodramatic suspense. Another "Jimmy Valentine", those who have seen the picture, call it.

"The Empire of Diamonds" is melodrama served up in a picturesque fashion. The play is unique in that its scenes are laid in New York, London, Paris and Monte Carlo, the producer and his American company traveling to the locations demanded by the story to film his scenes, states Pathe. Furthermore, this photoplay shows on the screen actual pictures of the interior of the Casino at Monte Carlo. The date of issue is set for December 19th.

George B. Seitz after a number of years as a director and star of serial plays will make his bow as a feature producer and star with June Caprice in a film produced for the most part in Spain. The co-stars, supported by a cast in which Marguerite Courtot plays a feature part, are presented in an elaborately stage romance.

ALL-STAR CAST

IN "DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES."
(Vitagraph.)

Don Jose Santos.....G V. Seyferstitz
Eva Denison, his stepdaughter,
Catherine Calvert
Cole Harrison.....Percy Marmont

Here, at last, seems to be a picture that most nearly approaches that goal of all producers, the perfect picture. The story opens in a moment of breathless interest, and there isn't another quiet moment. It is intensely absorbing, and if your eyes leave the screen for a moment, so perfectly is the continuity maintained, that you lose a valuable scene. Never have we seen seven reels packed quite so full of consistent, logical interest and legitimately sustained suspense.

The characters behave like human beings. They do not let drop suspicious words, and actions that would instantly betray them as crooks, in real life. They keep you guessing every minute.

A very great deal of the credit for the whole thing should go, naturally, to Tom Terriss, the director, and to the continuity writers, Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester. But one mustn't forget that E. W. Hornung, who wrote the book, gave these three people the material with which the thing was wrought. The cast is flawless. Catherine Calvert has never looked so beautiful, nor done such work as in "Dead Men Tell No Tales." Her costumes—those of the modern Spanish girl, lovely lace mantillas and soft white draperies—are exquisite, and add no little to her beauty. Percy Marmont, at last, has a role which fits him like a glove, and his work is consistent throughout. Gustav von Seyferstitlz, who plays the incredibly villainous Santos, however, should be the star of the piece. He is superb, and Holmes Herbert likewise acquits himself well.

The picture is perfectly balanced, and the story is far above the average.

This is Gladys Walton, who is to star in Universal's "Risky Business"

Striking Contrast Seen in Holmes Scenic

The Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Picture for October 31st is promised to be one of surpassing scenic beauty, contrasting as it does the fairy-like purity and whiteness of typical New England winter scenes in all their snowy loveliness with the tropical luxuriance of foliage and warmth of landscape to be found in the early summer months in the rural districts of Cuba.

Elsie Ferguson Returns from Foreign Trip

Elsie Ferguson, who has been making a tour of the world during the past six months, is expected home from London this week on the White Star liner Adriatic. After a brief stay in New York Miss Ferguson will go to Hollywood where she will have the leading role in the Paramount production of "Sacred and Profane Love," the Arnold Bennett stage play in which she appeared in New York last Winter.

Nobody Too Great for Screen

So Says Rupert Hughes in Interview Given to Trade Press

RUPERT HUGHES, popular novelist and author of "The Cup of Fury" and "Scratch Back," released by the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation as Eminent Authors' Productions, was interviewed by representatives of the trade press at the Goldwyn headquarters in New York on Friday, November 12. The high-lights of Mr. Hughes's talk were his statement that the motion picture, "the first genuine universal language," is one of the most powerful factors for good on earth and that nobody, no matter how prominent or successful, was too great to be classed as its patron; his prediction that the time is fast approaching when pictures, like stage plays, will be made to appeal to different classes and not attempt, as is usually the case now, to embody an appeal for all classes; an expression of his conviction that the short story, rather than the full-length novel, is generally more adaptable for a six-reel feature; and a declaration of the rise of a distinctly screen-author, schooled and equipped to write from the viewpoint of the motion-picture rather than from the angle of the printed-page.

Mr. Hughes characterized the motion-picture as "the only universal language," compared with which Esperanto falls into insignificance. He likened the author or playwright who refuses to use this wonderful medium of expression to an unprogressive business man who would neglect to utilize the telephone or any other modern facility in transacting his business. He cited the entry of Barrie and Kipling into the scenario field of the motion-picture industry as evidence that great men have come to realize the power of this "new and wonderful language."

Mr. Hughes traced, with numerous references to his own personal experiences, the rise of the author's influence in turning out a motion-picture from the days when a writer was looked upon as a nusiance to be excluded from the "lot" or studio to the present time when he is considered as a vital adjunct of the producing forces, called upon to furnish advice to the director and permitted to take charge of the cutting and editing of the finished film product.

"One of the great handicaps that all picture producers are working under at the present time," said Mr. Hughes, "is that every picture is intended to be universal in its appeal. Yet something aimed to appeal to everyone is most likely to appeal to no one. Whereas the stage has been developing through the last 2,000 years, motion pictures have grown to their present remarkable state in approximately fifteen years. And with the increasing development that is inevitable, they will approximate the stage in the rather important respect, namely, that each production will be made to appeal to a certain class rather than to everybody."

Mr. Hughes is of the opinion that short stories are almost invariably better material for adaptation into six-reel pictures than full length novels. He declared emphatically, that it is a mistake to think that a short story does not contain enough material for a photoplay of the feature length. His experience, he said, has been that the average novel must be curtailed so materially to meet the limitations of six thousand feet of film that essential points of the story are sacrificed.

"Authors are now writing original stories," continued Mr. Hughes. "and in the future when we speak of a screen author, we must be exclusive and mean not those authors who are writing novels which subsequently become photoplays but those authors who are writing in photoplay language in photoplay studios and with the camera definitely in mind."

Rupert Hughes left on Sunday for the Coast where he will write directly for the screen and take an active part in the production of his stories.

Decade of Pathe News' Reels

Résumé Shows High Spots Touched in Last Ten Years

A RESUME of the high-spots touched by the Pathe News during the past decade is given in a statement just received from the New York headquarters of the Pathe organization. This statement was issued in connection with the celebration on November 15 of the tenth anniversary of the topical reel's career in this country. That such a resume is of paramount significance in recording realistically the marvelous progress made in various departments of activity during the last ten years, is the contention of the Pathe statement:

"For example, the aeroplane. In viewing some of the recent aviation stunts shown in the news reels of to-day it seldom occurs that it was but a comparatively brief space back when the airplane was an experiment quite crude and very dangerous. Recently the Pathe News showed scenes of the return to Mineola of the fleet of planes which flew to Alaska and back. It was in 1911 that Pathe News showed scenes of Glenn Curtis's aero flight from Albany to New York, a feat bringing a prize of $10,000, and the applause of a people filled with amazement and wonder at a marvelous accomplishment.

"Nineteen hundred and eleven was a year fruitful of big news events over the entire world. In addition to the Curtis flight, Pathe News presented pictures of scenes in London at the death of King Edward VII, of Great Britain. Captain Scott, whose dramatic death in the Antarctic regions stirred the world for weeks, was shown in Pathe News setting out from London with his South Polar Expedition. Also there were pictures of Portugal's dethronement of King Manuel and the declaration of a republic. Among the other epochal events presented in Pathe News in 1911 were scenes of the coronation of King George V and Queen Mary.

"The Mexican revolution against Madero was an event of 1912 which Pathe News showed in a group of such epoch-making incidents as: The Titanic disaster; Amundsen announcing the discovery of the South Pole; the attempts against the life of Theodore Roosevelt while he was making a campaign speech in Milwaukee; Woodrow Wilson elected President; the assassination of President Madero of Mexico; and the opening of the Panama Canal.

"In 1913 Pathe News showed the U. S. Marines landing at Vera Cruz, and in 1914 scenes from all parts of Europe at the declaration of the World War. Nineteen hundred and fifteen brought forth disaster, and was marked for such terrible occurrences as the great Italian earthquake in which 20,000 lives were lost; the Eastland disaster at Chicago in which 1,100 perished, and the sinking of the Lusitania, all of which were shown in all possible phases in the Pathe News.

"Among the events of 1916 were the Black Tom explosion, the Pershing expedition into Mexico, Villa's bandit raid on Columbus, N. M., and the arrival of the German merchant submarine, Deutschland. The high lights in Pathe News for 1917 were: The Russian revolution, the entry of the United States into the World War, and Pershing's arrival in France.

"The Halifax explosion, President Wilson's departure for France, the signing of the Armistice and the first trip of an aero postal service are among the big things in the news-reels for 1918. In 1919 there were pictures of the flight of the N. C. 4, the flight of the R 34, the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, Pershing's return and D'Annunzio's coup of Fiume.

"The list of Pathe News pictures for 1920 includes: First pictures of the Wall Street explosion; the Olympic Games; Villa's surrender; the Soviet-Pole front; the Rome-Tokyo flight; the Mexican revolution; exclusive pictures of the Supreme Conference of the Allies at San Remo; the entry of the French into Frankfort, and the activities of the German Reds in the Ruhr district and the German Revolution."

Feature Subjects of Short Length

Bear Hunting in California
(Kineto Review)

THE first subtitle informs that this particular hunt takes place in Northern California. And following the hunters up hill and down grade, we learn how the dogs first scent a trail, the guide and hunter follow, until, at last, a bear is "brought down." Then in plain sight he is "skinned," made ready for the Indian chef and finally devoured by hungry hunters. The gall bag, said to be a valuable aid in rheumatic afflictions, is carefully removed by the Indian guide, who treasures it for its medicinal qualities. That is what happened to the first bear hunted. The second one had rather a hard experience. Couldn't keep away from the bait set for him, and as a result, was captured alive. Most interesting were the shots showing the struggle of the captive against being muzzled. His claws were most eager to dig into somebody, but finally, after much force, he followed the hunters down the mountain to the cabin. When we saw him again he had forgotten all about the misery of his capture and was content to feed upon buns children and admirers showered upon him, in a Philadelphia zoo.—LILLIAN GALE.

Movie Chat No. 31
(Urban)

URBAN "Movie Chats" are likened to the neighborhood gathering, in that one subject is not dwelt upon long enough to grow tiresome. The subjects change as often, in the movie chats, as they do in the family confab. It would be next to impossible to enumerate the points touched upon in No. 31. Primarily, however, the "chat" included views of points in Europe affected by the ravages of war, and how these places are being restored. Another was illustrated information as to the different stages of the diamond, from "in the rough," to the polished expensive gem for sale. The cutting process, men at the machines, and the care necessarily exercised as to the deposit of their costly tools and more costly objects, when the day is done, reminds us that luxury lovers create a demand for men whose skill is directed in the art of diamond cutting. There is also a scene in which a barnyard duckling and a blackbird play the leading roles. The duckling objects to the blackbird presuming to drink from the municipal pan, but the blackbird, becoming enraged at the insult, defends himself admirably, quenches his thirst and flies away to taunt the duckling from above. An unusually newsy chat.—LILLIAN GALE.

"A Fireside Brewer"
(Mack Sennett Comedy—Paramount)

"LAUGH and the world laughs with you," but with the rest of the world looking solemnly upon some grave happening, one witnessing "A Fireside Brewer" would laugh, in spite of himself. Louise Fazenda is the featured player. The cast is made up of well known Sennett mirth provokers and the comedy is not vastly different from many others of a similar nature. But with one object in view, to create laughs, it wins in a walk. It is a story about home-made beer, and the troubles encountered by a couple, who start in their Ford, for the beach. Heavily loaded with beer in bottles, a child and a dog, in an extinct type of machine, built, perhaps, one day, for two, they begin to encounter difficulties before leaving their own premises. Another couple, neighbors, start for the same destination, the beach, in their motor cycle. Developments demand most of the beer be given away before the home brewers have a chance to indulge in the enjoyment of it themselves. Needless to say there is not a "dry" moment and for two reels the comedy element keeps laughter at its height. One of the best comedies of its kind yet offered. —LILLIAN GALE.

"Mad Hatters"
(Educational)

THIS is an informative story about the hatters of a tropical clime, where, without the skilled labor and fine materials used in producing the hats worn by the inhabitants of this country, the people engaged in the making of hats, seem to be mad about making them. For that is about all they are seen to do. They take their work seriously, however, and with their trained hands, turn out an enormous quantity of hats made of different kinds of raw material, such as what seems to be young willow, or overgrown straw. There is no particular point to this subject, although it includes shots of beautiful spots, and informs one as to the unheard of customs of the natives. The photography is good, and there is an evidence of respect for sequence, seldom expected in this kind of film. Considerable educative value.—LILLIAN R. GALE.

Frozen Thunder
(Educational)

A NEW way of describing a glacier, which is composed of countless tons of ice, and which, when it moves roars as the passing of two clouds producing ordinary thunder, is to refer to said glacier as frozen thunder. But that is exactly what it is, for it is frozen vapor, or whatever clouds are made of and when one starts down the mountain, shooting the chutes for the camera man, one can almost hear the roar of the progress, as it smashes its way through like a caterpillar tank. Close up views of different parts of these well remembered lessons in geography, furnish interesting and acceptable information, such as usually found in the Chester Outing subjects.—LILLIAN GALE.

Northern California
(Kineto Review)

THIS review shows us many of the beauties of the mountainous country known as northern California. Taking in a fishing expedition, for which an Indian guide is selected, the paths covered lead into spots which might not have been so easy to find a way out of, as into, had not the Indian been employed to see the party through. In this reel, there is considerable information to be obtained about the supposedly extinct Indian and his quaint customs, which still prevail. Most any one would like this diversion from other forms of "picture house" entertainment.—LILLIAN GALE.

Paramount-Artcraft Magazine
(Paramount)

ONE who reads light fiction usually does so to be amused. And the greatest source of amusement is more often centered in the illustrations. Followers of light fiction, therefore, will particularly like this short subject which includes three stories, one of the school room and the amusing happenings therein, one of the troubles of a married couple, each of whim accuses the other of the habit of "forgetting things", and finally a comedy cartoon, by Bailey, in which there are some new touches bringing out numerous laughs. An unusually good short subject.—LILLIAN GALE.

Pyrenees Perspectives
(Burton Holmes-Paramount)

A TRAVEL subject out of the ordinary. It takes one to the famous mountain country in France, known as Pyrenees, and vividly portrays the quaint beauties of the location. The main impression is of the peaceful quietude and that there is seemingly no advancement in the lives, dress or activities of the people, nor are the habitations improved with modern developments. The photography is as good as the best used in the filming of Holmes Travel pictures, which is widely known as having decided merit. A very pretty and restful one-reel subject.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Explorers"
(Bruce Scenic)

THAT Robert C. Bruce knows how to "make 'em" in the educational line is no better illustrated than in this one-reeler. Not that the feature in itself is in any way out of the ordinary, as far as the views are concerned. But when it comes to out-of-the-way places where other men have never strayed, Bruce seems to be a pioneer.

In "The Explorers" he has strayed up and down the northern coast taking views of the ever changing scenery and finally entering Thomas Bay with its snow-clad mountains and glaciers.

The schooner is anchored in the bay while the daring explorers ascend the icy glaciers to the summits in their endeavors to give the spectators a thrill.

When they are not ascending they are decending to chasams which appear before the eye in weird form.

There are also many long shots of the bay with its floating ice, the most remarkable being that of the schooner in the dim distance as she waits for the adventurers who are on the uppermost peak of an ugly glacier.

About Players

ESTELLE TAYLOR has joined the ranks of "personal appearance" favorites. Easton, Pa., was the first city to select Miss Taylor, by popular vote, to appear at a local picture house. "While New York Sleeps" was to be the attraction. In this William Fox production Miss Taylor plays the leading feminine role in three separate episodes. In each, she portrays a distinctly different kind of woman. Having seen her in previous Fox photoplays, and informed that she was to be seen in the heralded melodrama, the patrons of the theatre voted their choice. From the reception Miss Taylor is said to have received, there was not one voter who remained away, and not one who left the theatre wishing he had voted for a blonde. Miss Taylor, be it well known, is identified by her raven tresses.

Lon Chaney, never-to-be-forgotten after his work in "The Miracle Man," has had, following his pronounced success, a number of encouraging engagements. Despite these, however, we wager that he was pleased and doubly encouraged upon receipt of the following night letter which traveled the wires to Hollywood, upon the opening of "The Penalty," at the Capitol theatre, New York. "The Penalty" drew the record Sunday crowds at the Capitol today. Truly a wonderful picture and your work has made a most profound impression. It would not be fair if I did not wire you to say, 'Lon, you are going neck and neck with the best.' I am not surprised, but am glad it is such a thorough and distinctive success for you. Congratulations.'

"ERNEST SHIPMAN."

While resting between scenes, during the making of "Sunshine Harbor," under production of Edward Hemmer, co-directed, by William F. Haddock, Howard Hall was heard to tell the tale of how he happened to be chosen for the role of the doctor. "I originated the doctor in 'The Poor Little Rich Girl,' with Viola Allen. Then came an opportunity to play the doctor in 'Judge La Guarell,' with Wilton Lackaye. Following which I was engaged to play the doctor in 'Damaged Goods,' with Richard Bennett as the doctor in 'The Natural Law,' I seemed to grow into doctor parts. So when approached for the role in Mr. Hemmer's production, I was not surprised when he asked, 'How would you like to play the doctor?' It all ended happily, for I am not only a celebrated doctor in the production, but in addition, I am father of the star, Margaret Beecher, who makes what I would describe, a charming daughter.'" So it would seem in "Sunshine Harbor," some one must "Call the Doctor,' as the camera grinds on and on.

Hope Hampton, starring in "The Bait," a Paramount Picture (C) Underwood and Underwood.

Virginia Lee has been chosen to play the role of Beatrice in the screen presentation of "Scrambled Wives", the second production of Cayuga Pictures, Inc. As will be recalled by those who saw the play during its recent stage run in New York or Chicago, this part is practically as important to the story as that of the female lead, which will —in the picture—be entrusted to Marguerite Clark.

The selection of Miss Lee by Messrs. Naulty & Hunting of the Cayuga organization is an interesting and concrete testimonial to their high opinion of her work. For it will be recalled that Virginia Lee played the leading role in "Three Women Loved Him," the first production of this company, in which she played opposite Robert Gordon.

Virginia Lee's recent screen experience includes important roles with Marjorie Rambeau, Norma Talmadge, William Collier and Louis Bennison. Prior to coming to the films, Miss Lee was known as "the ideal Christy girl," posing for all the war posters and illustrations painted by this famous artist, as well as such other well-known painters as Clarence F. Underwood and Penrhyn Stanlaws.

In "Scrambled Wives," the sartorial burden will fall to Virginia Lee and she promises to astound even the most blase ".fans" with the dressmakers' creations she has gathered for this production.

Upon completion of "The Foreigner", the first of the Ralph Connor stories of Canadian locale to be filmed, for release via First National, director Henry MacRae and Gaston Glass moved their accumulated effects from Winnipeg to Calgary, but were not permitted to rest for long. Immediately they started work on "Cameron of the Royal Mounted", another Connor story. Gradually the cast put in an appearance, including Vivienne Osborne, William G. Colvin, Irving Cummings, Joe Singleton, Gordon Griffith of Tarzan fame. A squad of the genuine thing in Canadian Royal mounted were introduced and the real "shooting" started. "Cameron" is now upon the last laps, and almost the entire cast are to be retained for "The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail". Glass and Vivienne Osborne will again be seen in the leading roles.

Among the many out-of-the-ordinary scenes taken in the filming of "The Road to London", starring Bryant Washburn, is the actual departure of the White Star Liner "Olympic" from Southampton. Among the many distinguished Americans returning from their European vacations on that day none of them suspected that they formed the background to a new American photoplay, and the claim is made that no film was ever made with supers of the kind this picture can boast of. That Lieut. Col. C. B. Gardiner, Royal Marine Light Infantry, Commander of the Bath, was among those giving "atmosphere" to the picture will probably be news to the gentleman, and it is safe to say that Mlle. Alice Delysia, now appearing in New York as "Afgar", never for a moment suspected that she was a supernumerary for Bryant Washburn's first "own" production. The officials of the White Star Line, upon orders from the Head Office, extended unheard of facilities and despite the difficulties of bringing American broadside lamps into the interior of the giant liner, some remarkable scenes were taken on board of the "Olympic". The lavish decorations, every detail of frescoing, the practical arrangements of all facilities—the quick-moving, efficient stewards, and with it all Bryant Washburn, looking for his lost sweetheart, sounds like a picture that "Washburn fans" will find of unusual interest.

A feminine lead will be played by Alma Tell for the first time in pictures in "The Quarry," the John Morosco novel on which Thomas Meighan is working at the new Long Island City studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Heretofore Miss Tell has been seen exclusively in George Fitzmaurice productions for Paramount, and her beauty and acting ability have contributed perceptibly towards their big success.

Gordon H. Standing, who plays a prominent part in "Man and Woman," the first picture to be released by the Sherman Productions Corporation, was selected from the S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion to receive the Victory Medal at the ceremonies held at the Seventh Regiment Armory on Armistice Day.

The Drew Post is made up of a membership of actors and other workers of the theatrical industry who served in the army, navy and Marine Corps during the war with Germany.

Standing was a member of the Second U. S. Division and served in France for twenty-one months. His Victory Medal has six bars which designate the number of major engagements in which he participated.

Word comes from the Famous Players studio announcing the completion of the filming of "Voice of the Blood," the forthcoming Realart picture in which Edith Stockton plays the principal female lead to Alice Brady. It is a story of the home life of the lesser people of the theatre and Miss Stockton and the star play the parts of a couple of chorus girl pals who share the same hall bedroom, eat in the same hash house, play in the same show and go so far as to both be in love with the same man. It is a rather unusual tale and has been treated in the highly dramatic and naturalistic way that brings forth the best qualities of the star and her company. Miss Stockton, it will be remembered, has recently appeared as the star in several independent productions, prior to which she played important roles in a number of feature pictures.

Dorothy Gish will be seen in the paramount picture, "Flying Pat," early in December. The story, which is by Mrs. Chet Withey, wife of the director, deals with a young wife's efforts to please her husband upon his return from France. James Rennie, who plays opposite Miss Gish, will take the "young wife" up on an airplane, and there will be no faking the incident, as Mr. Rennie was in the Royal Flying Corps for two years during the war, and has all the flying qualifications attributed to the character he is playing.

Miss Gish said in speaking of this play, "Its a chance I've been hoping for ever since I've been in pictures, and I wouldn't miss it for anything."

The famous David Belasco play, "The Heart of Maryland," will soon reach the picture theatres. Vitagraph is making it, and Catherine Calvert is the star who will prevent the curfew from "ringing tonight."

Mabel Julienne Scott who has joined the Goldwyn players and has an important part in their production of "The Concert," says her advice to anyone going into motion pictures, is to learn the jargon of the profession. It will save a lot of wear and tear on nerves.

Miss Scott was panic-stricken one day to hear the camera man call out, "Hit her with the ash can." She wanted to run, but decided that like a soldier she must stand and obey. Her relief was great when she discovered that "ash can" is an electric light which takes its name from its resemblance to that lowly object.

Percy Marmont, the distinguished leading man who recently completed his work opposite Hope Hampton, and who is one of the featured players in Vitagraph's special, "Dead Men Tell No Tales," returned this week from a short vacation at Lake Placid. Prior to his departure, Marmont signed a contract with Famous Players, upon which he will commence working next week. The latest production in which Marmont was seen was "The Branded Woman," in which he played the lead opposite Norma Talmadge.

That old saying about "The third time being the charm," was playfully revived on the "Sentimental Tommy" set at the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation studio the other day for the benefit of Kempton Greene and Leila Frost, who for the third time were married to each other in a scene for motion pictures.

ABOUT DIRECTORS

John L. McCutcheon, director of "Determination," is a "stickler" for detail. When he is ready to shoot, everything else must be ready to the smallest item. For instance, there is a set constructed in Grantwood, N. J., where "Determination' is being filmed, which is supposed to represent (and is said to do so to a fine point) streets in London. Whitehall Chapel looms up importantly, and though conceded as an artistic structure, proceedings were held up until the streets could be paved, for, as Mr. McCutcheon explains, in England paved streets are very much in evidence. "What good would the replica of the London district be without the details carried out to the very limit?" asked Mr. McCutcheon. If his entire picture is constructed with the same care, we can count on something to talk about when the big picture is complete.

Director Robert G. Vignola is "shooting" again. This time, upon "Redemption Cove," a story by Donn Byrne, for Cosmopolitan-Paramount. A mid-winter Paramount release, "The Passionate Pilgrim," directed by Mr. Vignola, is anticipated happily. It is the screen version of Samuel Merwin's novel, which, under the well-known director's competent guidance, should gratify the fondest hopes. The cast, also, will bring again to the screen some favorites of days of old. It includes: Charles Gerrard, Matt Moore, Claire Whitney, Arthur MacDonald, Rubye De Remer, Frankie Mann, Helen Lindroth, and Tom Ryan.

Victor Herman, a member of M. P. D. A. coast lodge, is in New York, and was slated to attend the New York lodge at their first semi-monthly meeting, for November.

Frank Lloyd, who directs Goldwyn pictures, is the proud possessor of a meerschaum pipe, which he says is the largest in the world. At least it is so big that when he puts it in his mouth, he looks as if he were hiding behind it. It is no wonder that the pipe is such an elaborate one, for it belonged originally to Baron Rothschild. That famous financier gave it to Frederick J. Titus in appreciation of his ability as a music hall performer. After the death of Mr. Titus, his wife, Lydia Yeamans Titus, who is one of the Goldwyn players, gave it to Mr. Lloyd.

The promotion of Al. J. Kelley to the post of a Metro director will keep intact a trio that has been working together for five years. In the old Edison studio, New York, when Viola Dana first started work in pictures, her assistant director was Mr. Kelley, and her cameraman was John Arnold. For Miss Dana's new starring picture, "Sorrentina," Mr. Kelley will co-direct with George Probert, while John Arnold will photograph the production.

John Robertson, in his production of "Sentimental Tommy" for Paramount, has gone in for "a cast with a past." The latest illustration is Cora William, who is a direct descendant of one of the early burgomasters of New York, and is related to such notables as Oliver Wendell Holmes and Wendell Phillips. Mr. Robertson credits Miss Williams with bringing a bit of real Scotch—atmosphere into scenes taking in a tea party, in which she donned a bonnet which belonged to interested in the screening of her famous Ogilvy family, of Scotland.

John Griffith Wray, director of "Homespun Folks," the first of the Ince Associated Producers Specials, also directed the Thomas H. Ince's second big special, which has been given the permanent title of "Lying Lips," co-starring House Peters and Florence Vidor.

Gertrude Atherton will be able to qualify, if she desire as a motion picture director. She is at the Goldwyn studio, now where her first story written directly for the screen, "Noblesse Oblige," is being screened, and she is on the set before the actors have their make-up on and stays until Director Wallace Worsley calls it a day's work and dismisses the company.

Mrs. Atherton has been deeply interester in the screening of her stories ever since Samuel Goldwyn and Rex Beach organized Eminent Authors' Productions.

Her first picture was "Out of the Storm," made from one of her most popular novels, "The Tower of Ivory," in which Barbara Castleton played the lead.

When Director R. William Neill wanted a faro bank dealer for the Aurora Borealis saloon and dance hall, one of the principal scenes in the new Dorothy Dalton-Paramount picture, "The Teaser," he had to search among the old timers who are playing in the picture. None of the younger generation of actors could depict the character of a faro bank dealer, that form of gambling being one of the lost arts these days. He found H. D. Blakemore, well known on Broadway for his work in "The Traveling Salesman" and other plays, who in his barnstorming days thirty years ago, played stock in Montana. Faro banks in those days were popular adjuncts to all Western saloons. Blakemore had watched many a dealer manipulate the cards so he fitted perfectly into the work which Neill wanted done, "according to Hoyle."

T. Roy Barnes and Grace Darmond in Robertson-Cole's farce comedy, "So Long Letty"

Every big director, being supposedly temperamental—whatever that badly overworked term means—is accorded the right to have hobbies. Lois Weber has hers. Although an all-round executive in every sense of the word, doing nearly everything that's done in Lois Weber Productions except the acting, she takes to the open road in a good many things in her directing. It is one habit of hers to explain things, to discuss frankly and convincingly with an actor a difference of opinion that exists between them in regard to what is the true and appropriate interpretation of a scene.

There are several directors, Miss Weber among them, who like to sit down and talk things over. They find it easier to explain than to criticize and repeat action. Perfect unity of purpose and wholehearted support is said to characterize the attitude of the cast toward Miss Weber, as a result of this method.

Hodkinson Release for S. Barret McCormick

Rosemary Theby—A West Coast Fixture by Choice

ROSEMARY,—that's for remembrance; Theby,—that might be a variation on Thebes, suggesting at once Egypt and Spartan women. Together they make the name Rosemary Theby, and incidentally create a suitable impression of the conversation and personality of one of the screen's most satisfactory leading women.

As to Miss Theby herself,—the Spartan part is no exaggeration; the Egyptian, perhaps is. Yet not altogether, because at one time this actress portrayed Oriental roles for Vitagraph and Lubin. She even did a picture called "The Reincarnation of Karma," a landmark of picturedom,—and the past several months has again been wearing the Sultan's jewels in such lavish Oriental productions as "Kismet."

It's a long journey from Egypt to Mexico and it is evident that Miss Theby has been following the line of western progress. Which doesn't prevent her from making an occasional return to the Far East. One associates with Mexico both Miss Theby and Edwin Carewe's production of "Rio Grande" in which Rosemary did any number of native Mexican dances to enhance the color of her role.

In days gone by Rosemary Theby's name was associated with a particular brand of two-reel domestic comedy produced as a series by Universal, co-starring Miss Theby with Harry Myers. During that contract she co-authored, co-directed and co-edited the film product. She became established as a comedienne,—despite the fact, she says, that until four years ago she couldn't even see a joke,—and many weeks elapsed before directors on the West Coast, whither Miss Theby had journeyed from New York, could "see" her in any role other than comedy.

And then, as the tide turned, she was considered for nothing but vampire roles, like the Parisian adventuress in Griffith's "The Great Love," and even at the present writing she has just completed a vamp for Fox in "The Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court." Again, she was a variety of vampire in a second Fox play, "The Little Grey Mouse," and in the Robertson-Cole special production of "Kismet." Miss Theby's interpretation of the "heavy", has been captioned "a milestone in silent-drama acting."

Rosemary Theby is one of the "picture-actresses-only," as a Los Angeles critic has said. She has never been on the legitimate although, a few years ago, nearly went with Chauncey Olcott. The stage did, however, furnish the first influence in moulding her career, for it was with the ambition to tread the classic boards that she studied at Sargent's school in New York.

But it is the old story, of a pretty girl's difficulties, and a mind made up to return to the paternal hearth, then the note of introduction to a motion-picture director; of Miss Theby being a desirable "type," of long tutelage in the small-part ranks, thence to leads—and stardom. That was with Vitagraph. Later with Lubin. Finally with Universal. Still later, when pictures began to grow out of their "swaddling clothes," Miss Theby "went West" and has been free-lancing ever since. Among the productions in which she has created roles in the last year are Allan Dwan's "A Splendid Hazard," "Athalie," "Rio Grande," and "Michael and His Lost Angel" in which she has been co-starred with Conway Tearle.

And co-starring with an intelligent, finished man like Tearle is her ambition. She cares nothing to see her own name featured exclusively in electrics over a picture production. She likes the team work of a capable male artist in an emotional role, regardless of the time or place of the story.

Around the studio Miss Theby is referred to by everyone on the lot as a typical "good scout." Manifestations of temperament never occur to her.

Ernest Shipman Believes "The Cast Is the Thing"

RECENTLY, while scouting for news regarding certain players, rumored "hooked up indefinitely" in productions for release via First National, it became the happy duty to apply for authentic information to Mr. Ernest Shipman.

During the course of our investigation, he touched upon points of sufficient interest to warrant a record for the benefit of those readers who delve into the "whys and wherefores" of the screen. Mr. Shipman, occupying, to say the least, one of the most unique positions of any executive in the motion picture industry.

"The cast is the thing. We are obliged to trust to the whims of public favor for the acceptance of a screen production, regardless of the cost of it or any other of the vital ingredients which go to make up a production, but one thing we can supply, by judicious expenditure, and that is a cast, a well selected, dependable cast at any cost! Take for instance 'Back to God's Country'. The success of the production is a tribute to the abilities of the players. And 'Nomads of the North'. Why the cast was the best that could be supplied a director, including the 'nomads' themselves. And by the way, the fact that a director worthy of the title was selected for both is a thing not to be overlooked. David M. Hartford, in these two productions proved that distinct care was taken in the selection of a capable man.

"The same will hold good when 'The Foreigner', the first of the Ralph Connor stories is shown, and its reception, to my mind, is already assured. Because I am convinced of the ability of Henry McRae to direct one of the best casts ever assembled. Upon the strength of it, I retained the director and a number of the cast for "Cameron of the Royal Mounted", another Connor story about to reach completion, and when finished 'The Patrol of the Sun Dance Trail' will be its worthy follower—same director, many of the same in the cast, and by the way—same author.

"Do not mistake that I overlook the necessity of an appealing story. But the best story ever written, without a cast worthy of its interpretation would not in my opinion, conform to the demand of the public for well balanced productions. The story is the answer to the first problem. If it is a corking good one, it doesn't matter whether it is a so-called 'costume play' or one of modern twists and turns founded upon modern methods of business and general happenings of down-to-date life—if the story is 'there' you are all set—until it comes to selecting the director and then the cast. There is no economy in saving upon this end of the production. The best are what is desirable and with the proper negotiations, obtainable, and upon their interpretations, depends the acceptance of the finished work more than anything else. I reiterate. 'The cast is the thing'. And in the immediate future I am going to be in a position to back up that statement against any argument. And I have convinced myself that in order to turn out a successful photoplay, we must employ the best people we can secure if we hope to justify the expenditure of securing the proper vehicle, to begin with—and without that—'we can do nothing'."

There is but little one may add to what Mr. Shipman has said. But having glanced over the casts assembled for some of the offerings he mentioned, to illustrate his contention, it is only fair to say that Mr. Shipman does not talk a lot about "casts" and then, where he is concerned, employ them without a strict adherence to the practice of his own preaching.

Jerome Storm Signs James Abbe

JEROME STORM this week signed James Abbe, well known photographer of New York, to direct, under his supervision, special scenes which form decorative inserts of the Storm production starring Lillian Gish.

Mr. Storm recently viewed a Mack Sennett beauty special, directed by Mr. Abbe while in California, and was impressed by the originality and effectiveness of the pictorial composition. As there are several tableaux of an unusual order in the Lillian Gish picture, Mr. Storm at once negotiated for the service of Mr. Abbe.

Last winter Mack Sennett engaged him to act as directing supervisor of a special production. Several Abbe poses of the Sennett beauties were used in the divertissement preceding "Married Life." They particularly impressed Mr. Storm because of the effect secured by lighting, posture and general composition.

Since directing the Sennett picture Mr. Abbe has had several offers from producers. He accepted Mr. Storm's because he particularly wishes to study that director's methods before assuming full directorial duties.

"Pictorial beauty is one of the most vital elements in the success of a photodrama," stated Mr. Storm in announcing the engagement of Mr. Abbe. "And it is the element which has been developed least. There are no limitations to the creation of beauty on the screen. The screen may be restricted as a medium for drama, because it lacks the power of voice, but it is unlimited in the depiction of optical beauty. It offers the canvas for the master artists of the future. In engaging Mr. Abbe I have created a new office. I do not know precisely how it would be titled. That is a detail. What I seek in my organization are ideas on all phases of production. Picture-making is based on co-operation. The director who believes he is all-sufficient is doomed as surely as the ego-obsessed star. I expect to give Mr. Abbe full charge of certain scenes in which the element of beauty is paramount. And with his co-operation, as well as that of the art director, lighting experts and cameramen whom I have been fortunate in securing, I believe some new processes of picture creation will be evolved."

Juanita Hansen is Acclaimed

Juanita Hansen has recently made two personal appearances, the receptions in both cases having convinced her of her popularity as a leading serial star.

At the Court theatre, in Newark, N. J., and at the Poli theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., crowds beyond possible capacity filled the theatres and occupied the sidewalks for hours, hoping to see the fair Juanita as she left the theatre.

The personal appearance of Miss Juanita Hansen at the Court theatre in Newark, N. J., and at the Poli theatre in Bridgeport, Conn., drew overflowing crowds to both of these show houses.

On October 30 Miss Hansen appeared at the Court theatre and addressed the audiences at two performances. The attendance at the shows and those unable to gain admittance are claimed to establish the record for any theatre in Newark. The streets were jammed to the curb in front of the theatre and for several hundred feet on each side of it. The house was taxed to its capacity with standing room at a premium.

Nathan Meyer, manager of the Newark theatre, claimed it the biggest crowd any theatre in his city had ever enjoyed. "While I have presented some of the very biggest attractions ever made," remarked Mr. Meyer, "nothing has compared with the personal appearance of Miss Hansen in the matter of attendance. I have not seen such eager crowds in my life, nor have I ever seen such deep interest displayed in any star. We are showing 'The Phantom Foe.' Miss Hansen's latest serial for Pathe. While we have always enjoyed splendid business on the days her picture was shown, without a doubt we will not be able to accommodate all those who will now want to see it"

At the Poli theatre in Bridgeport where Miss Hansen appeared the crowds were equally as large and eager to see her in person.

It is Miss Hansen's intention to make other personal appearances in houses which are showing her latest serial, "The Phantom Foe." Arrangements are being made through Mr. D. A. Meaney, care of the Pathe main office. On account of working in a serial Miss Hansen can appear only in theatres convenient to New York.

Notes From The French Field

Frenchmen are waxing indignant over the report of an incident which occurred recently in Berlin on the occasion of the production of the famous German picture, "Anne Boleyn." The scene showing the arrival of Anne and the king, Henry VIII, at Westminster Abbey where they were to celebrate their wedding was a remarkable display of film enterprise. Over 4,000 persons wearing the costumes of the period were engaged and the Abbey itself was complete in every detail. Henni Porten, the actress who filled the role of Anne, wore a sumptuous dress which glistened with jewels. Her outfit of eight dresses which she required for the part are said to have cost over a hundred thousand marks. The Abbey scene was staged on the famous Tempelhof Field where William the Second was wont to review his troops in the old days. But instead of William, the "reviewers" on this occasion were his late majesty's successor, President Ebert, and several members of the Reichstag who had been especially invited to appraise the quality of the German cinema art. The arrival of Henry and Anne in an automobile was the signal for tremendous applause on the part of the public and the waiting troupe of actors and actresses. But when the soldiers of Louis XIV marched by with their fleurs-de-lys banners waving in the breeze, as history recounts, the effect was too much for these highly imaginative Teutons who, despite the fact that the so-called French troops who had been sent over to England to grace the ceremony, were merely their own countrymen in the trappings of a French king, could not resist the temptation to exhibit their hate for their late enemies by booing and even spitting on them. A specious example of the misuse of the motion picture!

The great French film, "Rose of the Rail," whose final scenes were recently made in the Alps in the neighborhood of Chamonix, would appear to have established a record in the length of film used by its enterprising producer, Abel Gance. In order to obtain the perfection he aspires to, Gance is said to have used no fewer than two hundred and forty thousand feet of film. The length of the completed film does not run more than nine thousand feet.

In an interesting and extremely instructive book entitled "Laws and Customs," published under the auspices of the French Syndicate of film directors, a page is devoted to the question of the notice which employees in France are expected to give before resigning their positions. These vary according to the nature of the position. For example, an operator is required to give a week's notice; the lady at the ticket booth, one month; a manager, one season unless bound by contract; a waiter, one week; an ordinary employee, one month; an orchestra leader, one month; musicians, two weeks. Only the chasseurs or page boys are exempt from any kind of notice.

Monsieur Raphael Beretta, theatrical and cinema impresario, announces that he has completed the production of a film entitled, "Fabiola," founded on the famous book of the same name by Cardinal Wiseman. Beretta states that he has already secured the exclusive world rights on this famous novel of the early Christian era and that he has already disposed of the North American rights for a million and a half francs, with fifty per cent of the profits, to the Knights of Columbus. The film, "Fabiola," is said to be a masterpiece of historical construction replete with a succession of beautiful landscapes of the old Roman period. Among his many and varied forthcoming undertakings, in addition to his film work, Beretta has been engaged from the first of October, to present a season of French operettas in New York.

French film syndicates are already up against the dreaded German competition. From Brussels, always considered as a stronghold of the French industry, comes a cry of distress. It appears that another invasion of Belgium has begun. The German film companies are nothing if not enterprising. In order to secure a market they are said to be resorting to cut-rates.

Madelaine Traverse, who will soon return to the screen in special features

In Eccentric Role

The role of David Gamut in "The Last of the Mohicans," the initial Maurice Tourneur offering through the Associated Producers, offered Nelson McDowell an opportunity he has long wanted for the interpretation of a quaint character. This role is that of a psalm singer and it required the costume department of the Tourneur organization two weeks to make the correct apparel for McDowell. He was born in New England and knowing the dress and actions of a psalm singer as two of his uncles were of this religious sect, he had to but recall the scenes of his childhood days to give the interpretation Tourneur desired. The first time McDowell appeared on the stage in his make-up, Tourneur greeted him with the statement, "You look like you had just stepped out of a picture book."

Constance Talmadge on New Picture

Constance Talmadge has completed "Mama's Affair," the Harvard College prize play by Rachel Barton Butler, which is directed by Victor Flemming. The screen adaptation was made by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Without a single day's vacation in between, Constance has already started work on her next picture, "The Man From Toronto," directed by Chet Withey.

METRO

Bayard Vellier has arrived on the Coast from his trip East. He announces the engagement of Montague Glass, the author of "Potash and Perlmutter," to write a series of original stories for Metro. Arthur Somers Roche, Done Byrne, John Russell and Eugene Buch will also contribute stories for future film productions under Metro's auspices. Mr. Russell is expected to arrive in Hollywood shortly.

Preparations are now under way for the filming of Nazimova's new starring vehicle "Aphrodite." Ray Smallwood will direct.

Eddie Cline has completed the editing of Buster Keaton's "Haunted House" and is beginning work on a new comedy.

Alice Lake's company, engaged in making scenes for "Mother Love" aboard a lumber schooner, was seriously endangered by high seas. Production Manager David H. Thompson hurriedly engaged a number of tugboats and rushed them to the aid of the film party. The company was brought safely ashore at eight o'clock in the evening.

Henry Bendel of New York has been engaged by Metro to take charge of all costuming for Metro productions. Mr. Bendel has been a fashionable tailor in New York, Paris and London.

INCE

Thomas Ince has completed the direction for final scenes of "Lying Lips." Seven hundred players took part in the "shooting" of some of these scenes, in which the Sacred Heart Church was a feature of the settings.

William Seiter has been selected as director for "Bellboy 13," Douglas MacLean's new starring vehicle for release by Paramount. Margaret Loomis plays the leading feminine role.

Hobart Bosworth will appear exclusively in Thomas Ince's subjects for the coming year.

F. P. LASKY

Cecil DeMille is scheduled to begin production work on his all-star special, "The Affairs of Anatol," from Arthur Sintzler's play, on November 26.

Announcement is made by T. E. Hancock of the organization of the Pacific Film Company to distribute nationally for independent producers. A series of five-reel pictures will be produced, the first of which will be titled "The Fatal Thirty" and will present an all-star cast including Lillian West, Fritzie Ridgway, Carl Stockdale, John Hays and Al Fremont.

Plans have been completed for the distribution of "The Indigestible Weekly," "The White Cap" comedies, the Sunset Burrud scenics and two-reel Breaker comedies.

Jackie Coogan, six years old, who played the "kid" role in Chaplin's big comedy and is now playing in "Peck's Bad Boy," received a fracture of the skull on Friday of last week when his father's automobile was hit by a traction car. He is recovering but will be absent from the studio for over a month.

Irving Willat has engaged Gordon Mullin for the heavy role in "Partners of the Tides."

HERE AND THERE

The Tom Santchi Company directed by Robert Bradberry has completed work on the filming of "LaRue of the Lonesome Land," and plans now made provide for the making of the seventh which has been titled "Sagebrush Musketeers." The interiors will be made at Cyrus J. Williams studio and the company will then leave for Red Rock Canyon near the Mojava Desert to make the exteriors. At this point there are some marvelous rock formation which have become known as "Indian Temples" and around these much of the exterior action will be laid. Vera Sisson will play opposite Santchi and other principals are Fred Gamble, Frank Rice, Earl Dwire and Will Patton.

Allan Dwan arrived in Los Angeles on Sunday from his Eastern trip.

Chilly nights.

The Clan is gathering.

Jesse Lasky is in town.

Carl Laemmle is coming soon.

J. D. Williams may come West.

A. Zukor is coming West the 15th.

Samuel Goldwyn is due to arrive.

F. B. Warren is still with us.

Louis B. Mayer is back in town.

Why don't Dick Rowland come on out?

B. P. Shuleberg registered at the Alex.

Ethel Clayton is expected in our midst from Londontown.

Jack Woody is living in the anticipation of a trip West.

Paul Brounet has delayed his western trip in order to see Paris.

President L. R. Thompson of S. P. threatens to go to New York, again.

Rumor is heard that William Fox is going to come out and see his studio.

Kathleen Kirkham was up in the mountains and had a run away sleigh ride.

Harry Wilson has gone East with Sol Lesser to make George Beban famous.

General Manager Hammons of Educational has not been on the Coast for four years.

Tom Ince was seen working the other day when he directed a number of scenes for "Lying Lips."

Al Jolly was janitor at the Robert Brunton Studios, but fell heir to an estate of $90,000.

Tom Santchi now being engaged in making two-reel westerns claims quality and not quantity is what counts.

Speaking of all-star, Carter de Haven and his wife have King Baggot, Otis Harlan and Grace Cunard for supports in "The Girl in the Taxi."

Mabel Julian Scott celebrated her birthday November 2nd, but forgot to send congratulations to Senator Harding, who was celebrating, too.

Edward Kidder, Charles Ray's Manager of Production, is authority for the statement that Ray's "Peaceful Valley" is better than the original play.

Conrad Nagle and his wife are parents of a child, and everybody about the Lasky plant had congratulated him an hour after the stork arrived.

Ralph Lewis is going to pay Broadway his respects for the next two months. Mrs. Lewis (her first name is Vera) is going to see that Ralph does it right.

In mentioning the film notables who came to town this week, we neglected to insert the name of Peter Gridley Smith. Pete is here and is going to live with us.

The entrance of Mack Sennett into the dramatic production field led a film distribution to say Mack was getting like Eddy Foy who insisted upon playing "Hamlet."

The Universal technical staff built Monte Carlo at Monterey for Stroheim. President Laemmle hearing this upon his arrival in New York, did not hesitate, he is going to see Monte Carlo.

Anthony Paul Kelly is out here to help Louie Mayer make better pictures. By the way, his first visit to California and he told the Chamber of Commerce President "he was in love with the climate."

Claim is made by Jack White that he is the youngest producer-director of the wor-r-r-r-r-r-ld. Jack was about fourteen when he came into this seathing industry in 1912 and he is still with us, making mermaid comedies.

The film industry did a great thing when they adopted William H. Crane, for six months later he and Mrs. Crane celebrated their wedding anniversary, thus proving to the world that there are film people who can keep out of the divorce courts, all of which is a nasty thing to say.

Lloyd Hamilton contends that where there is a still there is a way and claims scenes in the coming comedy "Moonshine" will show a storm brewing, ship anchored over the bar, and genuine cocktails of the feathered type, and mourners passing the bier, which is altogether too much for one comedian to think of in one week.

Believing the film producers are right in selecting books for filming according to the popularity of the author and his work has led Jay Chapman and Rene Rivierre to begin negotiations to secure the film rights on N. Webster's great work, titled "The Dictionary." Who said the original play writer was going to have his inning?

Albert Kaufman finds that his press agents have been under-pressagenting "Man Woman Marriage" for they have said in the public prints, "This production will cost $250,000 when completed." Al having passed out the coin, says they have reached the $400,000 mark now and then some. At the same time we learn that 400,000 feet of negative have been shot and this is to be cut down to 8,000 feet. Allan Holubar don't care how much money he cuts out of a picture.

The man who snoops around our Court House to see whose getting married or sued and puts in half of his time in discovering how many new film companies are organized every day, brings in a notation containing several names who have launched a more or less well-known project to fill the Pacific with pleasure yatch. Some people of the film industry have more money than they need to make films with in spite of the present day financial stringency. But to the News—there is the information that came to hand—Seacraft Corporation of California—Capitalized $250,000—A. E. Featherstone, Hal E. Roach, Dustin Farnum, Thomas H. Ince, William LaPlante, Atty.

Baker Builds Replica of Canfield's

Canfield's, the world-famous gambling palace of former times, is to be reproduced in all its pristine glory in the George D. Baker Production of the Saturday Evening Post story, "Temple Dusk" by Calvin Johnston. George D. Baker is exceeding his past efforts in making this feature the most beautiful production that he has ever directed. The immensity and the costliness of the Canfield interior alone may be judged by the fact that it will occupy the entire stage of one of the largest studios in the east. Both Mr. Baker and Mr. Sawyer, of the Sawyer-Lubin organization, are determined to avoid no expense in making "Temple Dusk" a super-feature worthy of the name. Therefore, instead of using the interior of the old Canfield's they are building an exact duplicate but on a scale two and a half times as large as the original mansion. A special crew of stage hands are working night and day under the supervision of Charles Hunt, Mr. Baker's assistant, in order to have the massive set erected in record time. Andre Barletier has been specially engaged by Mr. Baker to take charge of the camera work and the lighting detail. Barletier has won a reputation for himself as the camerman who photographed "Earthbound."

France Sees "Broken Blossoms"

THE most sensational as well as the most important even tin the French motion picture world at present is incontrovertibly the presentation of D. W. Griffith's exquisite film "Broken Blossoms" which was shown to the trade late in October at the Saile Marivaux, one of the gems of the French capital's splendid collection of film palaces. The name and fame of D. W. Griffith have long since been firmly established in France where his monumental productions, "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" are still regarded as ranking among the most perfect types of film achievement, entitling their author and producer to the foremost places among the exponents of the art and industry of the motion picture. And this latest example of the art of the screen is not likely to diminish this reputation or alter the opinion that the great American producer has earned in this country. On the contrary, as many critics have pointed out, the fact that "Broken Blossoms" differs so radically from his former masterpieces, merely increases this reputation and demonstrates conclusively the versatility and the perfect artistry of the great producer. "Broken Blossoms," or as it is to be known under its French title, "Le Lys Brisé," has been received with the most fervent enthusiasm by the French trade. As one eminent authority expresses it, "Broken Blossoms" is comparable to a story written with the skill of a master hand whose every word has been carefully considered by its author. Another calls it a marvel of poetry and beauty, a vision that can never be effaced. Still another refers to it as the work which is destined to convince the most skeptical and the most determined enemies of the motion picture. "Broken Blossoms" is regarded by another as the Griffith masterpiece, exceeding in beauty and perfection even his former great accomplishments. Its success with the public is a foregone conclusion and already it has been decided that its run shall continue beyond the customary eight days that are allotted the original film in France.

Louis Mercanton, the eminent French producer, who has achieved such success with, among other films, "The Call of the Blood" and "Miarka," is at present engaged with the filming of "Phroso," from the novel of the same name by Anthony Hope. The producer has chosen as his interpreter of the title role the talented young American artist, Malvina Longfellow, a descendant of the poet, while associated with her are two Englishmen, Reginald Owen and G. Harrison-Brown. The entire troupe, which includes several well known French artists, left Paris a few days ago en route for Cannes where they will pitch their headquarters. Seven large motor lorries were required to transport their baggage, which included a portable studio. The film will be made mostly at Cannes, though a number of excursions will be made to Corsica for the purpose of obtaining local coloring. The action of "Phroso" takes place partly in France and partly in the mythical island of Napolie, which is supposed to exist in the Mediterranean. One of the roles calls for an athlete, and to fill this the famous disc and javelin colossus, Paoli, has been selected. With Georges Carpentier and Mademoiselle Suzanne Wurtz, the champion girl swimmer, the screen has claimed at least three French champions of sport.

Still another American artist, Lois Meredith, has been selected as the heroine of a French film, "The Secret of Rosette Lambert," which was exhibited to the trade last week. Its author is none other than the great Parisian humorist and dramatist, Tristan Bernard, who has long been the idol of the French theatrical world and whose works are well known in almost every country in Europe as well as in America. "The Secret of Rosette Lambert" runs to over 5,000 feet and is full of incident. Lois Meredith's part affords the clever American artist plenty of opportunity for the display of her skill in dramatic art. This film represents the initial output of a new and powerful French company, Les Enterprises Cinematographes, under the management of a young but clever director, Adolphe Osso, who has behind him a capital of a million and a half francs. It is to be presented to the public the end of this month.

One of the most interesting of forthcoming French films is "Atlantide," founded on the novel of the same name by Pierre Benoit. It will be recalled that its author was recently the object of an attack for plagiarism, since many of the incidents and as it was alleged much of the text corresponded with scenes and phraseology met with in Rider Haggard's famous novel "She." The film version of Atlantide, however, maintains its originality. Its producer, M. Feyder, spent several months with his entire troupe among the Arabs in Africa where most of the scene is laid. Their baggage, which was extensive as may be well imagined for such an enterprise, contained several powerful projectors mounted on automobiles. Not the least of their trials and tribulations, apart from those resulting from the climate, came from the Arabs, who were naturally unfamiliar with the ways and methods of the camera, and frequently showed a disposition to rebel at the strangeness and complexity of the tasks demanded of them. The picture, however, was completed and "Atlantide" promises to become one of the finest films of its kind. The role of the queen, Antinea, which recalls in many ways, that of Rider Haggard's "She," is played by Napierkowska.

For the first time in its short history, the film is to supply the theme for an opera. According to the management of the Paris Opera Comique, there will shortly be performed a new work entitled "Fortunio," founded on the Famous-Lasky film, "The Cheat," which featured Fanny Ward and Sessue Hayakawa. It will be recalled that the scenario of this thrilling work was written by the American, Hector Turnbull, the well known dramatic critic and produced by Cecil De Mille. In France "The Cheat" is remembered under the title of "Forfeiture," where its success was instantaneous. It was shown for the first time in France during the war, but rumor has it that it was then withdrawn at the instance of the Japanese Government. It made its reappearance after the war, only to be withdrawn again despite the extraordinary popularity it continued to enjoy. It is possible that some day the mystery which appears to surround "The Cheat" will be cleared up.

The Alps continue to attract motion picture operators. Recently a couple of cameramen set out from Zermatt, accompanied by a numerous retinue of guides and porters, for the purpose of obtaining views of mountain scenery. After reaching twelve thousand feet they were obliged to use their ropes. The expedition lasted three days and resulted in a series of pictures whose crystal clearness are said to be such as to render them superior to anything so far attained. The Gaumont Company have also recently obtained some remarkable views of the summit of Mont Blanc, obtained by a Swiss aviator.

An interesting innovation has just been inaugurated in a number of Paris picture theatres, as a result of a reproach only too frequently justified, that in the majority of programs little or no thought was given to the tastes and preferences of children. This state of things has been modified by the announcement of special matinees of programs chosen with care and discernment for the amusement and instruction of school children. Needless to add that these programs will eschew crime subjects.

Writing under the headline, "What the Cinema Needs," the eminent French playwright and critic, Pierre Veber, who himself is responsible for numerous scenarios, calls attention to the rapidity with which the art of the moving picture is evolving. According to him, the film of movement and adventure is for the moment relegated to second place and what may be called "mild" comedies are favored by the public. The taste of the public for original spectacles should be encourged, he states, and the old traditions that are still shackling this new art must be discouraged. Original artists, too, must be found. An incontestable fact which is beginning to make itself felt is that there are too many theatrical artists working at the cinema, preventing the activity of actors formed in the school of the cinema itself and who are not spoiled by the mimicry peculiar to the stage. Unknown talent now and then asserts itself unspoiled by stage tricks. It must be encouraged in opposition to second-class comedians who bring the ideas of the stage with them and lack that intense naturalness which is essential to good cinema work.

An incident occurred in Paris yesterday which for the moment caused consternation but which, as it was fully intended, terminated in the happiest manner possible. While the stream of mid-day traffic was flowing over the bridge just behind the church of Notre Dame, a woman, fully clothed, was seen to fling herself over the parapet into the Seine. Immediately there was commotion, the passers-by rushed to the spot and before long the river guards who had witnessed the act, had pushed off in their boat to the rescue. They were on the point of effecting a thrilling rescue and spoiling a good picture when they were prevented by the cameramen for whose benefit the "act" had been staged.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

DETROIT

Employes of the Universal Film Exchange held a party Saturday night for W. D. Ward, retiring manager, and presented him with an umbrella and cane.

The William Fox Washington has booked "Madame X" from the Goldwyn exchange for Thanksgiving week.

John Zanft of the Fox theatre forces spent two days in Detroit this week with Harry McDonald, the house manager.

The Ferry Field theatre, recently taken over by Phil Gleichman, boasts a new electric sign that almost covers the entire front of the building and is three stories high. Mr. Gleichman has ordered an electric sign for the Majestic theatre, also under his direction.

NORTHERN NEW YORK

Howard J. Smith of the Buffalo-Palace Theatre Company has leased the Top theatre in Syracuse for a term of twelve years. Associated with Mr. Smith in the venture is W. A. Moore, who is also interested in the Buffalo Palace, and Tom Hogan, former owner of the Top, who will act as treasurer of the new company, which will operate under the name of the Syracuse-Palace company. The name of the Top will be changed to Palace. For the next several weeks the house will be under the management of William Cohlan, house manager of the Buffalo-Palace. The opening attraction will be "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals," which will commence Sunday, November 21. The house will be closed for a week to adjust bookings. Just before departing for Syracuse, the employes of the local Palace presented Bill with an attractive suitcase.

John Sitterly, who for the past several years has been connected with the Buffalo Universal Exchange, has been appointed manager of the Buffalo Dooley office, succeeding Howard Brink, who recently went to Robertson-Cole as manager. Mr. Sitterly has been acting as special representative for Universal. He is a veteran in the game hereabouts, having been associated with Harry Marsey several years ago in independent exchange work, as well as with Stevens Attractions, Inc. John is well known throughout the territory. This is his first job as an exchange manager.

Shea's new North Park theatre, Buffalo, opens Sunday, November 21, with Wallace Reid in "What's Your Hurry," and Buster Keaton in "One Week." Arthur Amm, formerly manager of the Circle, will be manager and Harold B. Franklin will act as managing director. There will be a ten-piece orchestra, a Wurlitzer organ, and soloists as features of the music equipment of the house. Simplex projection will be used. The house is one of the most attractive neighborhood theatres in the state. It has a seating capacity of 1400 on one floor. The North Park is in the heart of the rapidly growing Hertel avenue section and will also have the town of Kenmore to draw on. Programs will be changed four times a week.

C. A. Taylor, general manager of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., put over a fine bit of publicity when he presented the new Gardiner release, "Before the White Man Came," before the Indian Welfare convention in the Memorial Art Gallery, in Rochester, one evening last week. Over 1000 leading educators from all parts of the country were in attendance. The chiefs of many tribes were also among those present, and all were enthusiastic in their praise of the production. Mr. Taylor is now arranging for an extended presentation of the subject in Rochester at $2 top price.

H. C. Bissell, formerly with Nu-Art, is now representing Robertson-Cole as salesman. Fred Sliter, district manager, has recovered from a short illness and is now back on the job. Ray Powers is head of the new Robertson-Cole service department. Manager Howard Brink has booked "Kismet" at the Loew Star theatre in Rochester and at the Mark-Strand theatre in Syracuse.

The Arcade theatre in Rochester has been closed and will be reopened by A. J. Roth Sunday, November 21, with pictures. The theatre has been presenting road attractions. The first film attraction will be "The American Legion Over There," an official government war film.

Fred M. Zimmerman, president of Nu-Art Pictures, Inc., has booked the entire output of his office, with Dr. Harry Hall of the Strand and Grand Opera House in Troy N. Y. He has also closed contracts with Fred Elliott of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany for "Keep to the Right," "The Hidden Light" and Billie West and Frazee comedies. Haro'd Dwygert of the Rialto theatres in East Rochester and Fairport, N. Y., and Cass Stahley of the Lincoln and Rose Garden, Rochester, were visitors at the Nu-Art office in Buffalo this week, where they booked a large number of attractions.

Earl L. Crabb, general manager of the Buffalo Motion Picture Corporation, who is in charge of the New York office, reports that the company's pictures are enjoying much business throughout the country.

A. G. White, president of the Empire State Sales Company, was a Buffalo visitor Friday and Saturday, November 12 and 13. He had several conferences with Dan Savage, manager of the local exchange in the Palace theatre building and announced that among new releases will be "The Servant in the House," "The Good Bad Wife," "Bonnie May," with Bessie Love, and a series of new Monte Banks comedies, which, according to Mr. White have been booked by the Mark-Strand in New York. Mr. Savage is kept busy these days booking "The Race of the Age" the Educational picturization of the Man o' War-Sir Barton race at Windsor, Ont. Marion Newman is the new bookkeeper at the Empire office.

E. W. Gavin, American representative in Buffalo, is now visiting exhibitors in the Southern Tier, with two new attractions, "The Week End," starring Margarita Fisher and "The Blue Moon." Mr. Gavin's headquarters are in the Pathe office, Franklin street, Buffalo.

"Why Leave Your Husband" will be a December Merit release, according to an announcement by N. I. Filkins, manager of the Buffalo exchange in the Palace Theatre Building.

E. T. Gomersall, Fox exchange manager in Buffalo, announces the opening of "While New York Sleeps," at the Rialto theatre in Rochester on Sunday, November 14, when it broke all attendance records as it is doing wherever shown.

Manager J. E. Kimberly, of the Buffalo Vitagraph office, has engaged Paul Saven, formerly with Pathe, as a member of his sales force. Mr. Saver will cover the Rochester territory.

Bob Murphy, Pioneer pilot in Buffalo, announces the coming of Alma Rubens of "Humoresque" fame in "Thoughtless Women," on December 15, the release date. Bob also reports the acquisition of the big Fanark production, "The Crimson Cross," and Florence Reed in "The Eternal Mother."

The Hi-Art productions have been taken over by Charlie Saunders of the Famous Pictures Sales Company in the Palace Theatre Building. Among the new Famous Pictures releases are "The House Without Children," "Ashes of Desire," "The Cycle of Fate," "Through Eyes of Men," starring Frank Mayo, and Harry Carey in "Men of the West." Mr. Saunders is also distributing re-creations of H. B. Warner in "God's Man" and Sessue Hayakawa in "The Wrath of the Gods."

Robert E. Hall has purchased the Corning Opera House from B. W. Wellington. The house, when the lease of G. H. Tobias expires next June, will be remodeled and the seating capacity augmented to 400 seats.

John Walker has named his new theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., the Barcli. The house has a capacity of 1800. It will open Thanksgiving Day.

It is rumored that Nat Robbins will take over the Regent in Rome, N. Y. Mr. Robbins operates the Avon in Utica.

PROVIDENCE

S. I. Berman, representative of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was tendered a banquet and reception in Providence, Nov. 5 by the Theatrical Managers' Association of that city. Mr. Berman discussed the problems of motion picture theatre owners during the period of reconstruction and reviewed the accomplishments of the screen theatres during the war period. Practically every theatre in this city and Pawtucket was represented at the banquet.

The Rialto during the week of Nov. 15 ventured a three-feature program with the result that its box office receipts showed a return warranting the act. Manager Mahoney showed Jack Pickford in "Double Dyed Deceiver," Viola Dana in "A Chorus Girl's Romance" and "Shipwrecked Among Cannibals." Most favorable comment was passed on the latter picture.

Jim Henderson is now drawing the Sunday advertisement designs for the Rialto and Emery theatres. Charles P. Lanning has taken on Fay's theatre and is drawing the moving picture feature of the Sunday display. W. M. Strong designs for the former and John Carroll for the latter house.

The Strand, Modern, Emery and Fay's theatres here opened their doors two hours earlier on Armistice Day and reaped the harvest. At opening time there were lines long enough in front of each house to fill up for the first performance. From then on until closing time at 10:30 p. m. the houses were filled. With special shows on Election Day, theatre managers declare the first 15 days of the month unusually profitable days.

The Capitol theatre, a new addition to the moving picture field in New Bedford, opened Monday, Nov. 15 under the management of Allen-Charette, Inc.

The Moving Picture Operators' Union of Providence have nominated the following officers: President, Edward W. Anthony; vice-president, Charles Macomber; recording secretary, Earl Madden; financial secretary, Samuel Taylor; business agent, Thomas E. Shannon. The committee on Sunday moving pictures reported progress on the preparations of a measure, and its introduction in the next session of the General Assembly.

OMAHA

"Go To Movie" week in Omaha turned out to be a literal "First National" week. Thirty-two of First National pictures played in down-town and suburban theatres in Omaha that week. The following theatres ran First National pictures: Rialto, Strand, Alhambra, Grand, Suburban, Rohlff, Boulevard, Comfort, Maryland, Hamilton and Benalto.

Several large suburban moving picture theatres will be built in Omaha in the near future, according to Joe Doyle, representative of an eastern moving picture company, who was in that city last week, looking over the territory. One site has already been chosen, Sixteenth and Vinton streets. Construction on a theatre with a seating capacity of 1,200 will be begun in early spring, Mr. Doyle said. It is to be equipped with a pipe organ and special cooling system. Locations for other theatres have not been announced.

C. E. Holah, manager of First National in Omaha, was in Chicago last week, attending a conference of First National executives.

H. F. Lefholtz, manager of Universal in Omaha, toured territory under his jurisdiction last week. Business in the small towns is climbing, he reports.

Prices of admission at the Rialto theatre have been raised from 30 and 40 cents to 35 and 50 cents. Settlement of the musicians' strike is thought to have brought on the raise.

Joe Bradley of Pathe has been named in charge of short reel subjects. R. C. Carrick is special salesman for Pathe features.

Harry Weinberg has resigned his position as assistant manager of Fox in Omaha to assume an executive position with First National in that city.

CLEVELAND

Cleveland is coming to the fore with short reel pictures. The Pierrot Films Company has been incorporated in Ohio, for the purpose of making two-reel comedies. Charles Boz and Clay H. Austin comprise the leading members of the Pierrot Films Company, which has a modern studio at 3250 Euclid Ave. Mr. Boz is the manager of the organization while Mr. Austin is studio director. Both have had considerable experience in film production. One comedy is done and will be edited this week. It is called "Eat Till You Bust" and promises a couple of thousand feet of hearty laughs. George Leffingwell, actor-manager of the Prospect Stock Company now playing a season of stock in Cleveland, is responsible for the scenario of the comedy. Blanche Martin, known to local theatregoers as a member of a recent popular stock company, is featured in the comedy "Eat Till You Bust." Several more comedies are waiting production, but the Pierrot Films Company is going to market its first comedy before turning out a regular and steady supply.

Ohio Exchange for Educational Films set a record last week that will be hard to beat, when it showed its pictures 100 per cent strong in the Loew houses of Cleveland. "The Race of the Age," featuring Man O' War and Sir Barton, played at the Stillman, Alhambra and Mall theatres. "A Tray Full of Trouble," finished a two week run at the Euclid. "Four Times Foiled" was the featured comedy at the Liberty and "Mules and Gob Talk" appeared at the Alhambra the last three days of the week.

S. Barrett McCormick, manager of the Rivoli theatre, Toledo, continues to hold the lead among exhibitors by holding the premier booking of Zane Grey's "U. P. Trail" the week of November 22.

Canton movie patrons beat all other Ohio fans in the seeing of "Kismet." The big Otis Skinner picture played Opening of Rivoli Is Great Event in La Crosse, Wisc.

Many Prominent State and City Officials Present on First Night

THE opening of the Rivali theatre, La Crosse's new half million dollar motion picture house, marks an epoch in the theatrical history of the city. The big new house, declared to be the most beautiful and up-to-date of picture palaces in the Northwest, is located in North Fourth street, but half a block from the centre of the business district.

The Rivoli is operated by the La Crosse Theatres Company, which also controls three other theatres in La Crosse, the Majestic, La Crosse and Bijou. Frank L. Koppleberger is general manager of the company, and at the head of the booking department is Harry Burford. Max R. Doolittle is director of publicity.

The opening performances of the Rivoli were attended by upwards of six thousand persons, this establishing a record for the city of La Crosse. The day was stormy, but despite the rain long lines of people, which at times stretched from the theatre entrance to Main street, half a block away, blocked traffic in Fourth street for hours during the afternoon and evening.

The new Rivoli was erected for the La Crosse Theatres Company by Frank Schwalbe & Sons, contractors. Parkinson & Dockendorff were the architects, and the Odin J. Oyen Company had charge of the decorations throughout the entire building.

Convenience and beauty are combined in the new Rivoli to make it one of the most attractive temples of the silent art, and an important addition to the city plan that is making La Crosse beautiful. The building is a handsome four-story structure of brick and tile construction.

At either side of the theatre entrance are commodious, up-to-date store accommodations, while the portion of the three upper stories not occupied by the theatre proper is devoted to office rooms. The main entrance of the theatre is on Fourth street, with exits on the alley at the west and south sides of the building. Three large decorative entrance doors on Fourth street give access to the main lobby and the "T" lobby, which, in turn, has an exit leading to the sidewalk on Fourth street.

In front of the lobby doors is set the box office, of ornamental screen on a marble counter, with marble base, commodious enough to accommodate two cashiers during rush hours. National ticket machines and lightning coin changers have been installed.

The spacious lobby is decorated in the Adam design and has a wainscoting of marble, with noiseless floor of linotile. At the sides are ornamental poster frames in keeping with the general design of decoration. In the "T" lobby the same style of decoration is followed. At the left there is a marble fountain, with an infant Neptune and a dolphin as the central feature, and with palms and ferns arranged to give a garden effect, while to the right are the ladies' and gentlemen's rest rooms. The lobbies are lighted with lantern design fixtures.

Upon entering the theatre the first impression is one of great size and space. The auditorium, which seats fourteen hundred persons, is 80 feet by 120 feet, and embodies in its construction the newest ideas in theatre building. The seating arrangement is all on one floor, so designed as to afford a clear view of the silver sheet from every seat in the house. The orchestra pit is three feet below the level of the floor proper and has separate exits leading to the alley in the rear.

The sense of space is enhanced by the vaulted ceiling and the skilful choice of color-tones in decoration. The same unity and directness of purpose is evident all through the theatre, lobbies and rest rooms.

The keystone of the decoration of the auditorium is the mural painting, "Day Quitting Night," which occupies the space above the proscenium arch. This is the work of Mr. A. E. Soderberg, and in it he has worked out a difficult matter of dimension and color tones, which brings together and harmonizes the scheme of the whole interior. Resisting the temptation to overelaboration and intricate symbolism, Mr. Roderberg has kept the painting what it should be, a suggestion and enrichment of the decorative design.

The whole scheme of decoration in the new Rivoli invokes the Greek inspiration of the Adam period. In the silent tile-paved lobbies, wainscoted to shoulder height with Tennessee marble, the color scheme is laid on in broad tones of ivory, amber and sienna. In the auditorium the color is a bit more elaborate. The ceiling panels use an Adam motif, as does all of the decoration, and the walls are stenciled in damask effect. Throughout an effective color combination of ivory, amber, old gold and plum color is used.

Light for the auditorium is furnished by two huge chandeliers of opalescent glass, suspended from the ceiling by plum-colored stems, and the five-color cove lighting system from which emanates the indirect light used while the pictures are being shown. Stained glass medallions of the chandeliers and the wall fixtures repeat a turquoise blue note used in the medallions of the wall panels. All of the lights in the auditorium are controlled from the switchboard in the picture booth, and by dimming one or two of the colors in the coves and intensifying others, a veritable color symphony is produced. An infinite variety of effects is possible, presenting the interior beauties of the theatre in the key of moonlight, of noon, of sunset, etc.

The stage itself has been a special study of the decorator and focusses attention by a heavier color note. The curtains are heavy velour of a plum color with applique of turquoise blue edged with gold. Drawn back to disclose the picture screen the curtains reveal a drapery of turquoise blue. The whole is softly beautiful and orientally magnificent under the varying colored lights with which the stage and auditorium are lighted.

The theatre is well ventilated, with a complete change of air every five minutes assured by the Typhoon system, by means of which the air is washed before being forced into the auditorium. In the summer the air will be cooled by passing it through ice chambers, thereby reducing the temperature to any desired degree. An automatic control system insures uniformity of temperature.

The pipe organ installed in the Rivoli is an "extra-special" instrument, and is regarded as one of the most unique in the country, as well as one of the largest. It was installed by Wangerin & Weickhardt, of Milwaukee, after three other companies had refused to undertake it upon seeing the requirements. The plans upon which the organ was built were furnished by Walter Goetzinger, famous blind musician of this city. Outstanding features are the drum and harp attachments. With these and others of the thirty-seven stops the organist can reproduce at will a full orchestra or almost any instrument individually. The organ has four keyboards. The pipes are built into the walls to the right and left of the proscenium opening, ornamental grilles permitting the passage of the sound while cutting off the view of the pipes themselves. Six months were required for the task of building and tuning the organ, which represents an expenditure of $20,000. Mr. Goetzinger will be the musical director of the Rivoli and master of the organ.

Electrically the theatre is one of the best equipped to be found anywhere, and it is possible to produce any shade of light with a minimum of effort. The curtain and the ventilating system are electrically operated.

Present at the opening were film men and booking agency representatives from this section of the country, who were entertained at a banquet at the Hotel Stoddard following the evening performance.

A feature of the opening was the profusion of floral decorations, consisting of elaborate set pieces and baskets and vases of flowers, the gifts of booking agents and other theatrical folk of the Northwest wh have had business connections with t theatre company. Conspicuous in the di play was a huge floral horseshoe, the g of La Crosse business men.

FOCUS!

A good picture, shot first on one side of the house and then on the other, wouldn't make any great hit with your audience. You've got to focus it in one spot, and keep it there.

Why doesn't the same rule apply to your buying? Doesn't it stand to reason that you will get better action if you focus on one spot?

Buying from the Exhibitors Supply Co. assures you prompt, intelligent service, every time. And the oftener you go to that one source to supply your needs, the better will be your service, for in that way we get to know you, your house, what you want, and why.

Our stock is complete. We make it a point to keep abreast of the times and have every worth-while new thing that comes out.

Manufacturers know us—know they can promptly reach the whole Motion Picture field through us. So they bring us every new thing as soon as they get it out.

The ESCO Catalog is a revelation of what there is in the field, and what it means to you to have such a supply house to draw on, without having to hunt for manufacturers, agents, or other unknown sources.

So we say—FOCUS!

Shackelford and His Akeley Make Good

players were full size on the screen or "close-up" in motion picture parlance, and the plays were seen on the screen many times clearer than if one had the choicest seat at the actual game.

Next came other pictures of fast action, pleasing to the eye but puzzling as to how they were made.

There was the opening game of the World Series Baseball in Brooklyn—one writer stating that they must have been made from an airplane hovering over the field, so closely were the plays followed. And then came the Man O' War-Sir Barton Race that was heralded on the screen as a thriller of thrillers. Shackelford made a view of the race better than was possible to obtain by anyone at the track seeing the actual race. He followed the horses completely around the track, keeping them both in the picture and full size on the screen.

These pictures have been made possible by the Akeley Camera, a new and advanced type invented by Carl Akeley, a big game hunter and explorer, who found the usual make of Motion picture camera inadequate for his work. This camera by a unique pan and tilt device permits the operator to follow a moving object at will regardless of speed. The pan has a range of 360 degrees and the tilt 140 degrees and both can be operated simultaneously by a single lever; pointing the camera as easily as one would a gun or pair of field glasses.

Mr. Shackelford has also produced several new and startling results in the studio while working on big productions with this camera. At this writing he promises us a new thrill in slow motion pictures in which he takes and follows the speeding object.

P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of Nicholas Power Co., was present at the laying of the Loew State Theatre corner stone.

News Notes

The New Stanley Theatre, now in process of erection at 19th and Market Streets, Philadelphia, will be equipped throughout with railings made by the Newman Manufacturing Co., of Cincinnati.

The contract is somewhat unusual in several respects. All railings are two inches in diameter, and the specifications call for a special statuary bronze finish. The sum total is close to $10,000, including erection.

The proscenium, loge and side boxes, and the balcony front are to be equipped with railing. The orchestra will have railing with removable posts or standards. All stairs and vomitories will be fitted with hand rails.

Another contract placed with the Newman folks covers ten especially cast display frames to be finished in statuary bronze and erected on the walls of the 19th Street entrance of the New Stanley. These frames will cost nearly $250 apiece.

The Hoffman-Henon Co., architects and engineers of Philadelphia, awarded these two sub-contracts.

The Howard Theatre to be opened in Atlanta on or about December 1st—one of the finest houses in the South—will be equipped with Newman railings. The stairs to the mezzanine floor, the upper and lower vomitories, the loge boxes, the balcony and the orchestra—all these will be fitted with polished brass railings.

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

A New Type of Continuous Motion Picture Projector

A Paper Delivered Before the Society of M. P. Engineers at Montreal

By C. FRANCIS JENKINS

AMERICA'S supremacy comes about by reason of her social-economic engines. She has given the world more mechanisms to do what had heretofore been done by hand, than all other countries combined; and because we are great folks to love our neighbors, some of our most brilliant efforts have been to facilitate intercourse, for intercourse means friendliness. So we have given the world instruments to promote sociability, the telegraph, the telephone, the typewriter, the talking machine, the typesetting machine, and now we add the motion picture machine to hasten our means of knowing each other.

The motion picture, as applied to the picture theatre, is already the fifth largest industry. When to this is added the much wider field outside the theatre, it is not beyond the range of probability that motion pictures will become the largest single industry in the world. And this probability is strengthened by the fact that the motion picture film is standard the world over. Not only is it the only world standard, but it is unique in other ways. For example—

It is a curious anomaly that in the motion picture projectiing machine business, the usual rule of supply and demand does not hold good. One may buy anything else, a watch, an automobile, a house, paying as much or as little as one chooses, getting increased value with increased cost, but for a motion picture projector one pays about the same price for all makes.

There is not today a picture equipment comparable with the magnificence of a great many of the theatres already built and many more projected. No matter how much the builder of a fine theatre may desire it, he cannot get a correspondingly fine picture equipment; it doesn't exist; the only machine available is the same cheap-priced old style machine used in the little five-cent movie house.

The theatre owner may pay as much or as little as he likes for music, and other accessories, but when it comes to the picture machine, that which produces the thing he sells to the public, he is limited to a very small choice, a choice in name mostly, for the three or four machines available all sell for about the same price.

The reason for this is that the old-style longitudinal projector has inherent limitations, and has been developed just about as far as it is possible to go. For added cost one gets more cast iron only, the quality of the picture on the screen is not noticeably different.

This inherent limitation is the intermittently moved film, for the same reason that reciprocation limits the use of the steam engine. One does not think of fractional steam motors, for example, though we all find daily use for small continuous rotation electric motors.

Of course, such reasoning applied to motion picture machines leads us directly to a study of the continuous motion film projector, a subject from which motion picture engineers shy, as scientists used to shy at the subject of flying machines. But that way is the road out of our projection difficulties, and any investigation and experimentation along that line is worth while and this is my warrant for presenting the following description of a new contribution to the subject.

Everyone readily admits the advantages to be gained by the employment of continuous instead of intermittently moved film. Striking advantages are immediately suggested: (1) Longer life for the film, consequently larger revenue from each print; (2) 100 per cent increase in lighting efficiency, i. e., the same screen lighting with 50 per cent of the present light source intensity; (3) A noiseless and much less complicated projecting machine; and, (4) almost unlimited speed (not for the projectionist, many of them need a speed limiting brake), but continuous motion in a camera permits such speeds as open up possibilities for scientific research not available in any other way. Sharp, clear, discreet pictures at a rate of 50,000 per minute are possible with fast lenses and super-sensitive film now available if suitable film-handling mechanism could be found. Such pictures subsequently projected at normal speed, say 1,000 pictures per minute, are destined to disclose many things impossible of discovery without such apparatus.

Many attempts to attain this ideal machine have appeared from time to time and hundreds of patents have been granted thereon, but most of them propose continuous motion of the film while employing intermittent or reciprocating mechanism. This is not, and cannot be the solution of the problem, for the parts moving intermittently are a greater handicap than the film, because they are many times heavier than that part of the film having step by step motion, and we are no better off than before, being still limited to the restricted speeds inherent in intermittent mechanisms.

In my initial work of thirty years ago, I employed both continuous and intermittent motion mechanisms. The intermittent first got general public acceptance because it was the easiest and cheapest made, and this and all subsequent mechanisms the world over are basicly alike in principle and curiously alike in construction, for example, all are built left-handed.

Of machines having continuous motion of both film and mechanism, the only example of my own ever attaining any considerable degree of speed and picture perfection employed continuously moving film and a plurality of lenses following each other in sequence and single line procession across a stationary shutter opening, which, as you will observe, is exactly the reverse of the intermittent mechanism in which the shutter is in continuous rotation while the lens and film are stationary at the instant of exposure.

But the cost of this large number of lenses and the difficulty of getting them matched gave the intermitten projector the long start it has mainained to this day, though an examination of the old apparatus in its various forms on exhibit in the U. S. National Museum, where it was put some twenty-six years ago, is interesting from other than an historical point of view. The number of different and unprofitable ways a basketful of expensive lenses can be put together again suggests the old proverb that "a fool and his money are soon parted."

Therefore, the contribution to the art which I shall describe herein is the result of experimentation with the object of producing a less expensive machine, while keeping in mind all the time, the absolute necessity of employing —(1) standard film; (2) stock lenses and light sources; and, (3) continuous motion of every part of both film and mechanism. As to the success attained, I shall leave you to judge for yourself from your own observation of machine and screen picture.

(To be concluded)

The mechanical feed arc as it appears on a Powers

A New Mechanical Arc-Feed

A MECHANICAL arc feed that can be instantly attached to and used on any projector whether a. c. or d. c., has recently made it appearance. It is known as the Tepeco and is manufactured by the Projectograph Co., of Cleveland, Ohio.

The Tepeco arc feed consists of a gear box attached near the motor and a flexible shaft extending from the gear box to a special rigging on the hand controls. It is necessary with this arc feed that the motor be one of constant speed since otherwise the variation in motor speed would affect the rate of travel of the carbons.

There are no solenoids, separate motors or other electrical devices in the Tepeco. It is purely mechanical.

One advantage claimed for this feed is that through a special ratchet device on the hand controls the arc may be fed either by the mechanical feed or by hand without tightening or loosening screws or bolts of any sort. All that is needed to attach it to any machine are a screwdriver and a pair of pliers. Once attached and adjusted the Tepeco will feed the carbons continuously at a determined speed as long as the motor of the projector is in operation. This speed is entirely independent of the arc current or voltage.

One of the illustrations shows the simplicity of the device in the few number of its parts. The particular equipment shown was intended for the Simplex machine. The equipment for the Powers, however, is much the same.

Spahr and Louis Get Together

O. F. Spahr, the popular general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, has recently visited Sid Louis of the Rialto Theatre Supply Company, Minneapolis distributors of the Motiograph in the northwest and while there, the two Motiograph boosters enjoyed a fishing trip.

Mr. Spahr returned to Chicago enthused over the fish and the business Mr. Lewis is doing for Motiograph in that territory. He also reports the outlook for the winter business to be splendid.

Pathe Exchange Uses Only Simplexes

A MOST interesting place is the home office of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., located on the 11th floor of the large building numbered 25 West 45th Street, New York City. It is here that every Pathe release is screened before being sent to the numerous branch exchanges throughout the country. To the visitor who looks in at this most bustling unit of the industry, comes the realization that here indeed is a most necessary but still little known phase of the film exchange routine that is intensely interesting and educational.

In the Pathe office are located three distinct reviewing rooms, each of them equipped with comfortable chairs, screens, and other necessary adjuncts for the proper reviewing of the Pathe films. It is in these rooms that the film editors, production managers, censors, art managers and others view the many releases each day from 9 to 5:30, averaging from 100 to 150 reels during such time. The various Pathe Organization Committees who pass on the fin-

"Electra Carbons are so eminently satisfactory that we use no other brand in the Capitol booth.

"We use a 7/8"x12" Electra as an upper carbon, in combination with a 7/16"x6" copper-coated Electranega, as a lower carbon.

"We pull 110 amperes, with a throw of 207 feet, and project a picture 21'6" wide by 15'9" high.

"Electra carbons give a steady, white light of excellent quality. They are long burning and have no 'hard spots' or faulty cores.

ished reeds, the cutters who reduce the film footage, and the title editors all gather here during the various run-off periods.

In order to insure perfect projection results in every instance, and also to facilitate the work of uninterrupted production, a most novel arrangement of projection room equipment has been devised by Mr. Mario Frejmann, who has charge of the well planned projection room with its battery of four motor driven regulation model Simplexes.

A spacious room is devoted to house these Simplex Projectors and the first thing that strikes the visitor upon entering, is the shipshape appearance of this important unit of the Exchange. Upon a concrete floor are ranged two pairs of Simplex machines, one set facing outward toward the larger of the reviewing rooms, while on the opposite side of the projection room, are located two similar machines, one of them furnishing the projection means for the second reviewing room, while the fourth projector takes care of the projection in the third or smaller of the reviewing rooms.

Through this arrangement of projectors, it is possible to project in three separate reviewing rooms by using but one booth for all of the projectors. Two of the Simplex Machines are provided with a special reverse movement,, which enables the projectionist to stop at any desired point during the reviewing period, and run the same backward while projecting upon the screen, to any point where a second screen inspection is desired. The heavy beamed ceiling of this projection room is of a generous height and the room itself is well protected with numerous automatic sprinkler heads. An ideal ventilating system is also installed and the specially constructed low amperage rheostats are located high up on the walls of the room.

Mario Frejmann

Besides Mr. Frejmann, the projection crew comprises the second projectionist, Mr. Joseph Sanfillipo, who has been with the Pathe Organization in his present position for five years, while the remainder of the crew comprises of a reel boy who takes care of the films before and after they are projected. Mr. Frejmann can truly be called a practical projectionist, his activities in the industry covering every photographic and electrical phase. Mr. Frejmann is a graduate of a Continental Electrical University, where he obtained his degree of Engineer and his linguistic abilities including the knowledge of 7 different languages. He first entered the industry 18 years ago taking charge of the projection in a circuit of theatres in the Balkan States, known as the Modern Theatre Enterprises. Six years later he came to the United States and worked at his calling in and around Manhattan, Newark and Brooklyn, finally engaging with the Pathe Organization at its Jersey City Home Office Exchange, as chief of projection electrician, at which duties he has worked for the past 8 years.

When the Home Office moved to its present quarters, Mr. Frejmann planned and constructed the projection room, which contains many little features that are from his own design, chief among them being his system of light projection which is rather novel. On the two reversible Simplex Machines used for the projection in the large reviewing rooms, are two specially designed rheostats built by the Simplex Company, rated for 6-25 amperes while two similar rheostats regulate the amperage for the other two machines. In the larger reviewing room is a 6 x 8 screen at a distance of 32 feet. The carbon lamps in these machines pull 14 amperes each while in the two smaller rooms are screens of a 6 x 4 dimension where but 8 amperes of current are used.

Camera Laboratory — Picture Making — Studio Technique

How To Obtain Results With Studio Lighting Equipment*

A Technical Paper Prepared by Mr. Max Mayer of M. J. Wohl & Co.

Either a mat white surface of slightly bluish tint or a mat aluminum surface is found quite satisfactory, particularly for the flame arcs, as the white ash deposit from the carbons does not materially alter the reflective value of the surface; thereby keeping the light source practically as constant as the lamp itself. With mirror-surfaced reflectors, this ash deposit would gradually decrease the light strength, and cleaning would suddenly restore it to full brilliancy. It is plain that this would be a disturbing factor to the camera man.

The value of reflecting panels has long been recognized by portrait photographers. Cinematographers also use them when working with sunlight; but they have been slow to adopt them in conjunction with artificial light. These auxiliary reflectors are, however, none the less valuable for this purpose. Mat white or aluminum painted surfaces have been the customary practice, but a much more effective reflecting surface may be made by stretching white oil cloth on a frame, treating the smooth surface with sizing and coating it with leaf aluminum, in a manner similar to that employed in show-window lettering. Such reflectors will do wonders in bringing out detail in shadows and in toning down hard contrasts, and will actually reduce the number of lamps required.

DIFFUSING SCREENS

Much experimenting has been done with different materials for diffusing the light and unfortunately the ones which absorb the least light are also least capable of resisting the hard usage in the studio. Very thin glass roughed, finely ribbed, or of otherwise irregular surface, while highly efficient, is out of the question owing to its fragility. Draughtsman's tracing linen is a good and fairly efficient diffuser, but must be kept at a considerable distance from the heat of the arcs to prevent burning or scorching. As this increase in distance from the light source increases the degree of diffusion and necessitates a larger diffusing area, this material is only practicable where extreme diffusion is desired. and therefore, for contrasting effects it is better to use a smaller surface closer to the light source. Strips of glass, about one-eighth inch in thickness, roughed, ribbed orprismatic, give fair results, and one form of diffuser made of woven spun glass mounted in frames does quite as well and overcomes the mechanical weakness of the fragile glass strips.

2. Arrangement of Light Sources

Almost everyone directly connected with the art and technique of motion picture production has some pet ideas of his own on lighting and many who exploit their ideas in their daily work are getting commendable and pleasing effects; some as the result of forethought in arranging the light, and others by mere accident.

However, the arrangement of the lights and reflectors is as much a matter of art as of science, and it is futile to attempt to make fixed rules along these lines. In fact, such a step would meet with just resentment; for many of the beautiful light effects we see on the screen are the result of unique and original ideas of artistic minds.

In photographing the modern film play, no fixed set of light arrangement is practical, as the lights must be placed for each scene to suit the effect desired.

For the general illumination of a scene, the aim should be to attain inconspicuous soft lighting, showing the entire scene and figures therein well modelled and in good detail. In this case, well diffused light and plenty of it is necessary, for if the lamps be placed close to the camera line, the difference in intensity from the light to the opposite side of the set would be extreme, while if the lamps are placed at considerable distance from the line this difference in intensity between opposite sides of the set would be greatly diminished, but the amount of light required would be proportionately greater. With sunlight this disturbing condition does not enter, for with the light source ninety-odd millions of miles away, the difference in distance from the sun between opposite sides of the set would make a ridiculously trifling computation. But in the above condition, the intensity diminishing by inverse squares of the distance must be considered, and practice shows that the lamps should be kept away from the camera line by at least one-quarter the distance across the set at that point. However, this is seldom carried out and the camera man is generally blamed for unsatisfactory results, while the real fault lies in the fact that sets are usually so crowded together in the studios that there is no room left for lamps except close to the camera line. To offset this condition, an excessive amount of top light is then crowded over to the dark side of the set, and while this may help in a way, the effect obtained is unnatural and seldom pleasing.

On the whole it is best to confine general lighting to small sets or to avoid it altogether on interiors. If we study the sunlight illumination of the average room, we find that we must resort to effects in order to simulate the natural conditions and shadows.

Back lighting is a splendid way of obtaining pleasing and natural results. This is effected by placing the lights well back and directing them toward but not at the camera, masking the direct rays at the lamps and preferably using a shielding tube with perfectly dull black interior, over the lens barrel, to prevent halation.

Thus the figures and objects in the set will be silhouetted and by the proper front arrangement of reflecting surfaces and well diffused lights at a fair distance, the features and details may be perfectly modelled in shadow, with pleasing highlight relief effected by the rear lights. Of course, good judgment and practice are essential to carry this out effectively.

This arrangement adapts itself better for an added light effect from a window, lamp, fireplace, or the like, than a general illumination, as the figures being detailed in shadow will light up readily by contrast when they enter within the range of the added light; while in a set fully lighted, such an added effect requires an extremely powerful light source to further illuminate the already well-lighted features, and the effect is usually spoiled by the bleaching out of detail.

Back light may be effected either by top lamps or floor stands or by both. When top light is used, the lamps are best fitted with diagonal reflectors and hung near the back of the set. Care must be used to hide the shadow line cast by the rear of reflector. The lamps should be so hung that this shadow line comes just at junction of floor and rear wall. In small sets an aluminum reflecting panel suspended in front of camera just clear of the lens angle and another on the floor in front of the camera, both carefully set at proper angles, will supply sufficient front light to outline features and other details in shadow, and a diffused floor light on one side, some distance back of camera, will mould these details most pleasingly.

Such an arrangement, used effectively in one of the studios, consisted of six double arc top lights, one eight-tube mercury vapor bank, a six- by eight-foot hanging reflector, and a four- by eight-foot floor reflector.

This outfit with no other light was used repeatedly in sets of twenty to twenty-five foot depth with splendid results.

This is just one illustration to show how a pleasing effect may be obtained with a small number of lights.

An almost endless variety of light arrangement could be described here; but that would stretch this already lengthy paper into a probably wearisome volume.

The Man Who Shot the "Race of the Age"

Probably no film of actual events have been so enthusiastically received as those sensational scenes reproduced the race between Man O' War and Sir Barton. The remarkable "follow shots" in this film feature recall to mind other unusual pictures and the man who made them.

J. B. Shackelford was the first to introduce these mystifying effects in motion pictures and since his wonderful pictures of the Auto Races at Sheepshead track last fall, he has put on the screen many thrilling pictures heretofore impossible to obtain.

Shackelford on the Akeley

Many explanations were given by the thousands that saw for the first time, powerful racing cars thundering around the track at 120 miles an hour, showing full size on the screen at all times. The pilot could plainly be seen making signs to his mechanician who in turn would work frantically at the gas pump, and all the action was as clear as if the cars had been standing still.

Next came the football games. He photographed all the big games and again the people wondered how these marvelous pictures were made. He followed the ball in every play; in one instance, showing a touchdown after a 75 yard run, the player taking the ball on a forward pass and going through six tackles. The

Music For Your Theatre

A synchronizing of effort must be arranged between producers, musicians, musical distributing agencies and the theatres to coincide with release dates.

Where are the specialized conductors and musical showmen who can jump in and handle the whole situation?

When is it right to use classical music, when is it right to stick to jazz, and which is the best business? Why is it that the motion picture theatre finds its best channel in emulating the concert and opera house and not the vaudeville house? Not to compete with but to draw from the musical houses is the desire ot the picture man.

The motion picture theatre can direct to it the better and ever better members of the community and can attain a prestige and glamour which delight the heart of every serious showman.

Together the two industries joined in an organization can do much more than ever will be accomplished by the individual sputtering around and fussing about of a few in scattered territories.

These ideas and viewpoints are in the minds of the men and women who are being drawn to the conference. "Birds of a Feather," etc.—and as remarked, it will be particularly true of the great meetings of January 24-5-6 in New York City.

There will be no loss of time. Be assured of that. There will be none of the meaningless discussion of the machinery of organization—no frittering of time on matters of politics. The conference will get down to serious business from the first moment of the meetings. All this is being worked out now—in advance. The program of activities will be definitely unified, constructive and continuous in its progress of intent.

At the beginning the proposal of the Society of Motion Picture Music will be presented and voted upon; the selection of a board of governors selected from the various industries. To this Board of Governors all matters pertaining to music in theatres will be submitted during the year, and the Board will pass its judgment, thereby stamping the viewpoint of the allied industries.

One of the first matters to be submitted before the newly organized body, in entirety, will be the matter of the Music Tax; and it is purposed to offer a pact to be signed by the Composers' organization which levies the tax and the Picture Industry, whereby that problem will be settled definitely and finally.

Brief, plainly spoken and picture-worded addresses will bring the latest word to the industry from the best-equipped men in these fields; the producer, the composer, the manager-showman, the little theatre owner, the publisher, the conductor, the orchestra man, the dancer, the singer, the club women, the concert managers, the new artist distributing organizations, the vaudeville representative, the newspaperman, the cue-maker, the instrument manufacturer, the organ maker, the music publisher, the organist, etc.

The subjects will be all those which are in the minds of the "birds of a feather."

Among the prominent speakers will be Samuel Rothapfel, Hugo Riesenfeld, Edward Hyman, Joseph Briel, Edward Voigt, Nat Finston, Erno Rapee, John C. Freund, C. M. Tremaine, and a list of others to be announced in detail.

There will be special trips and definitely explained versions of shows to the Rialto theatre, with Hugo Riesenfeld going into careful explanations; to the Brooklyn Strand with Edward Hyman; to the Capitol with Samuel Rothapfel in charge, etc.

There will be close-up versions of some of the latest musical ideas offered to the industry.

The full program is not made up yet. But in the six weeks between the day that this is written and the time that the conference gets together, the last detail of the arrangements will have been completed.

THE TIME TO SEND IN YOUR REGISTRATION TO THE CONFERENCE IS NOW—IF YOU WISH ANY FURTHER INFORMATION WRITE AT ONCE TO CHARLES D. ISAACSON AT THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Avenue, New York.

The New Music Forum

Editor Music Department:

"I am sure you will be interested to know that we had an innovation idea in our theatre. We gave out cards with the title, 'What's your favorite melody?' On the back were, 'Please play——(name of selection). Requested by ..... (name of patron),' also address and telephone. Then by mail we inform our patrons when their music is being played at our theatre. It is working like a charm. Kindly let us know what other managers and musical directors think of this idea."—R. E. Moulton, Musical Director, American Theatre, Butte, Montana.

Music Editor:

"Will you please send me a list of the music publishers whose music cannot be played in theatres without tax."—Bowen & Charles Theatre Circuit, Tenino, Wash.

Music Editor:

"I am most heartily in sympathy with your campaign looking toward the improvement of music in the motion picture theatres, and particularly with the more logical synchronization of music with pictures.

"It seems to me that every producer of big pictures should furnish orchestra leaders with such a schedule as you have arranged and printed in your columns for some prominent pictures. With the cooperation then of such a bureau as you propose there would be no further excuse for hit-and-miss music in the picture houses.

"You will doubtless be interested to know that the American Indian Film Company is now making a one-reel feature picture entitled, 'The Land of the Sky-Blue Water,' from the legend which inspired Charles Wakefield Cadman to write his famous song of that name. For this little picture Mr. Cadman is writing a complete musical score to synchronize throughout the picture. This little picture is the first product of our company and is put out really as a sample of the type of product that may be expected from us. Incidentally it introduces Tsianina, the famous Indian singer, to the film, to the film public. Mr. Cadman is also under contract with us to write the most complete musical score yet attempted in the picture world for a super-production Indian film that we have in preparation. Mr. Cadman will compose an overture and an orchestral intermezzo in addition to the synchronizing music and will also provide one or two impressive choral numbers for the larger theatres where bodies of singers are available. This score will be issued with orchestral parts for full orchestra, a condensed form for smaller orchestras and also a score for piano or organ. It will also be cut for the mechanical organ roll. You can see that we regard music as of great importance from the fact that we are making such elaborate arrangements for the use of Mr. Cadman's music with this picture.

"Wishing you all success in your campaign for better theatre music and assuring you of my desire to be of any assistance possible."—J. C. Wilcox, Manager, The American-Indian Film Co., Denver, Colo.

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

Too often theatre managers have let themselves become swayed into the belief that their audiences would be so deeply absorbed in the pictures that they would not pay much attention to the musical scores or how nearly or not they came to being in the right strain.

That condition, it is pleasing to note, has changed a great deal within the last two years but still despite the efforts of motion picture producers to introduce the musical cue sheets, many theatre managers have continued to ignore the real bona fide value of good music to the successful screening of pictures.

"Slipshod methods have been pursued and have not gained anything for the theatre. If more attention is paid to music it will enhance the possibilities of the theatres. It makes no difference if the theatre has a piano, an organ or an orchestra, proper music is essential. Furthermore, proper music is not only essential but it is also essential that the person or persons playing be qualified to understand the merits of music in conjunction with pictures. And the demerits, I might add.

"The formation of an organization to be known as the Association of Music and Motion Picture Men which will meet in New York next January, I believe to be a very excellent idea. Through the means afforded by cuch an association, I feel that much of beneficial nature to the theatre is to be gained. It will be possible to thoroughly discuss the questions involved and to bring a broader and more general understanding of the subject. I note that one of the questions to be discussed is the question of whether popular or classical music should be used. That is a subject debatable but there is the answer that the picture should be made the basis of the music.

But in connection with classical music, one point must be borne in mind and that is what might be termed the "dry" classical music must not be used. It must be sprightly and never dull. Of course if the picture is one which tends to touch the heartstrings such as "Humoresque," rag time should not be played, but neither should the unresponsive music be offered motion picture audiences, as the majority of audiences are not inclined to enjoy any music except that which sets them to humming, unless as I said before, the picture has an element of, to use the newspaper term, sob stuff.

But still, there is no necessity for offering some of the ragged dragging music that we have been forced to sit through in some theatres. Classic stuff, yes, but classic with a little zest.—F. E. Kenny.

Music Editor:

I will be at liberty on and after November 1 and am desirous of obtaining a position as musical director. I play piano and organ and also direct orchestra, all of which I am doing at my present position; am experienced in cueing and conducting for motion pictures, this being my present employment.

Have had over twenty years' experience as leader of orchestra for vaudeville. Up to a short time ago have had charge of the orchestra at the Orpheum theatre, this city, where I have been employed for the past eleven years in the capacity of musical director.

I have a large library of orchestra music of nearly two thousand copies. I would like a position where vaudeville and pictures both are given, but will consider this or either separate. —Wm. B. Millette, 104 North Third Street, Allentown, Pa.

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

I am deeply interested in your work and I shall certainly be at the conference. I have prepared many players for "movies" and I always insist on sterling workmanship and a high standard of interpretation. It is the future world for organists and I shall do all I can to further the musical end of the "movie" world.

If there is anything I can do please let me know. You have a big task before you, but you can count on every worthy musician to help you. Will you let me know price of subscription to Motion Picture News, I want it surely.—Walter Heaton, Reading, Pa.

Music Editor:

I will name a few of the artists available for long tours in picture theatres:

Marget Wylie, coloratura; Elizabeth Stackowitz, lyric; Jean King, lyric; Lurena Smith, mezzo; Alice Booth, mezzo; Ruth Simmons-Worthington, contralto; Wm. Tell Mitchell, tenor; Gaetano Viviani, baritone; Hazel Gilso, violinist; the Folklore quartette and the Coleman Trio, also the American Syncopated Orchestra and Singers, Inc.

The quartette and trio are colored, the folklores are acclaimed by the critics as one of the few old time negro organizations left.

Viviani an Italian baritone, Mr. Campanini had promised him a place with him this year, not a try-out, but a role.

Looking forward to meeting you at the conference in January, and thanking you for your kind expression, I am, James R. Saville, American Syncopated Orchestra, Chicago, Ill.

(Letter from H. Eugene Hall.)

My Dear Mr. Isaacson:

It seems to me that the proposed conference should offer the adherents of the films and particularly those who have much invested in them, the very finest opportunity possible to present proof to those who are not in the heckling class of an intent to put the business on a plane commensurate with that enjoyed by good music everywhere as an attraction in itself.

There is no doubt of the superior part music plays in the most successful of the big theatres devoted to the pictures. I am heartily in accord with our editor and president on this subject.

Music Editor:

I have noticed with growing interest the advance made in the music of motion picture houses, the laudable endeavor to fit the music to the picture as perfectly as possible, and the serious attitude of the directors of the orchestras and organists in these theatres.

The motion picture houses are sure to be among our most powerful influences in popularizing good music, for not only do musicians attend these attractions, and applaud the every day increasingly better music, but, those who have not been accustomed to the better and best music, are growing more and more discriminating in their appreciation of it.

Trusting that your movement will be highly successful in the building of the music in every motion picture theatre, I am—Ella May Smith—President, The National Federation of Musical Clubs.

Abram's Makes Synchronized Music Possible

The Synchronized Scenario Music Company of Chicago, the organization of which recently was announced in Motion Picture News, makes is possible for every theatre to have the proper musical accompaniment to all features, according to Arthur J. Abrams, vice-president of the S. S. M. Company.

Mr. Abrams, who invented the method of synchronizing music to pictures, so that any musician may play in perfect time with the picture, has provided also, in case the film is cut and is shorter than the original length, that the music can be utilized in just the same way as if the picture was full length.

Mr. Abrams, it will be remembered, is the man who successfully synchronized phonograph records to pictures in the past and has had a varied experience in both pictures and music. The service offered by the new company is the result of Mr. Abram's personal investigation of the music situation in theatres throughout the country, during which he found that in the majority of cases, the musician does not know what music he is going to play for the feature as he cannot see it before the show starts and has to do the best he can while the picture is being run, being forced to rely entirely upon the repertoire which he has in his head, resulting often either in inappropriate music being played, which spoils the picture entirely, or in the same music being used over and over again, so that patrons become tired of the repetition. To avoid this Mr. Abrams planned the Synchronized Scenario Music Company scores, whereby it is not necessary to see the picture before showing and the musician does not have to rely upon memory or have to be an experienced picture player, as the score is perfectly timed to every speed of projection and cued to every scene in complete book form.

Feiber and Shea's Opera House the week of November 14, this being the first release of the picture in the state. Will D. Harris of the Grand theatre, Columbus, has also put his John Hancock to a contract for an early showing of "Kismet."

Dave Warner of the Warner Film Attractions, has added a new serial to his list of releases. It's "Maciste," the strong man hero of "Cabiria." The serial is called "The Liberator" and is done in twelve episodes.

"Doc" Horator, who owns the Pantheon and the Alhambra theatres up in Toledo, was featured in a headline newspaper story last week, but it was not an exploitation story. Somebody must have seen the quarters roll into the cash box of the Pantheon one night so fast to create a desire to annex them. There was approximately $4,000 worth of quarters and dimes and nickles in the strong box of the safe when Horator locked up for the night. In the morning there was nothing left but an empty safe. It is said the money was insured.

PORTLAND, ORE.

C. E. Griffiths, district auditor for the Universal Film company, arrived in Portland the first week of November. He will remain here until the latter part of the month. Edward Armstrong, district Universal manager, is still here but expects to leave for the Seattle exchange toward the end of this week. C. W. Koerher, former local Universal manager, left Portland Friday evening accompanied by his wife, for Butte, Mont., where he will enter the Pathe office. Reorganization activities continued all last week at the Portland Universal office, Mr. Armstrong sending out a personal letter to each Oregon exhibitor. He is stressing activities on Dorothy Phillips' "Once to Every Woman" and Priscilla Dean's "Outside the Law," two of the biggest Universal features to be released this autumn.

Special pains were taken by Paul E. Noble, manager of the Liberty theatre, for his usual weekly program during the showing at his house of Charles Ray's "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway." Noble had original stage sets made to represent a depot scene. The curtain opened on this scene with the three traveling salesmen, impersonated by the Liberty's famous "Thousand Pounds of Harmony" male trio, singing "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway." Miss Idah Lidyard, prominent Portland soloist who has often sung in Liberty prologues, appeared on the stage at the end of the first song and commenced with the trio "Mary is a Grand Old Name." At the conclusion of the melody she stepped back stage and the three men to the front. When the curtain lifted it showed Miss Lidyard standing on the back of a Pullman which had every appearance of making at least 90 miles an hour. This formed the background for the third song, "So Long Mary."

The Hippodrome recently completed its bookings for November. They include some of the biggest stars and best heralded productions of the year. Among the coming Hippodrome features will be Ruth Stonehouse and Eugene Pallette in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," November 7; "Best of Luck," November 14; Viola Dana in "Blackmail," November 21; Alice Lake in "Body and Soul," November 28; Dolores Casselin in "Tarnished Reputations," November 25; J. W. Kerrigan in "Green Flame," and Nell Shipman in "Something New." In addition the serial, "Ruth of the Rockies" featuring Ruth Roland, will be run Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

C. S. Jensen went to Seattle last Tuesday night to confer with his partner, J. G. Van Herberg, who is leaving for New York shortly in connection with his duties as director for Associated First National Pictures. Accompanying Mr. Von Herberg east will be George Beban, the First National character actor.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Announcement has been made that the Bijou theatre at Spartanburg, S. C., is to be remodeled throughout and enlarged so as to possess a largely increased seating capacity. The building, which is the property of J. R. Snoddy, is two stories in height and is of brick. The structure will be lengthened thirty feet, the stage will be moved further back, and many new seats will be installed. An entire new heating system will also be installed in the building. The contract has already been awarded for these improvements and work will start at once. More than $10,000 will be expended, and it is understood that the Southern Enterprises, Inc., will operate an up-to-date motion picture theatre in the building. This corporation leased the building last year, but the lease expired last September and the theatre has been closed since that time.

Roy Boling, formerly with the Asheville Power and Light Company, at Asheville, N. C., has become connected with the Southern Enterprises, Inc., at Greenville, S. C. He will assist in the supervision of the corporation's theatres in the latter city.

Fire broke out in the operating room of the Princess theatre, Wilson, N. C., on November 8th, and a projecting machine was put out of commission, while two films went up in smoke. The operator cautioned the audience not to become excited and all escaped without injury.

Search is being continued for the two unknown negroes who shot and killed John Ford, manager of the Lincolnton, N. C., motion picture theatre, and probably fatally wounded a young woman companion of Ford. With another young man and two young women, Ford was riding along a public highway near Gastonia, N. C., on the night of November 7th, when two negroes held up the party. Ford was instantly killed by a shot from the negroes and a young woman was probably mortally wounded by a second shot. The other man in the party was forced to remain helpless while the two negroes assaulted the two young women. The party returned to Gastonia and gave the alarm, but the guilty parties have never been captured.

The movies operated by the State Department of Public Instruction in North Carolina are now in operation in nineteen counties of the Tar Heel State. Twenty other counties have filed application for the service, and the legislature will be asked to make further appropriations that will permit of the extension of this branch of instruction.

J. T. Hannon, of Spartanburg, has assumed charge of the Greenwood motion picture theatres, branches of the S. A. Lynch system, succeeding W. A. Byers, who has gone to Sumter, S. C., to take charge of a theatre there. Mr. Hannon was in charge of the Strand theatre in Spartanburg.

E. S. Hiller, manager for the Pathe News for North and South Carolina, has been cooperating with Manager L. T. Lester, of the Rivoli theatre of Columbia, S. C., in filming the city of Columbia. Columbia's fire department was filmed while making a rush call and interesting views of various scenes were taken. These pictures are to be shown by Pathe all over the country.

SPOKANE

Fred La Fond, Spokane musician, will go to Seattle to conduct a big orchestra in the Metropolitan Opera House, where the films production "Evangeline" is to be offered there in the near future. The success of Mr. La Fond's musical elaboration of the picture at the Auditorium theatre in Spokane recently was reported so enthusiastically on the coast that George Hood, manager of the Metropolitan, wired Manager York of the Auditorium to arrange for the Spokane musician to officiate in the orchestra pit at the big Seattle playhouse. Mr. La Fond arranged a complete special score for the picture. Various Seattle people who saw the picture here commented enthusiastically on the music to Mr. Hood.

Spokane activities and scenes are to be filmed and thrown upon the screen in motion picture houses throughout the country. The Alexander Film Company has been named Inland Empire photographer for the Pathe News Service, according to J. Don Alexander, president of the Alexander Film Company. The original negatives will be sent to the New York house of the Pathe company, where they will be edited and national attraction pictures incorporated in the weekly national releases. The films shown in the Inland Empire theatres will be completely edited here, including the writing of all sub-heads. Fifteen are employed by the Alexander Film Company here.

"Earthbound," the spiritualist picture, is to be run over a ten-day period at the Liberty theatre here, starting November 27. Manager Ray Grombacher expects to put on an extensive advertising campaign for the picture and expects to use novel features in exploiting the picture while it is being shown. He will have an augmented orchestra for the picture and there will be special stage decorations.

The Auditorium theatre had the film production of "The Stealers," built on a strong religious theme, for a week's run recently and did exceptionally good business with it. Spokane always turns out for a healing picture.

OKLAHOMA CITY

It has developed in Oklahoma City that labor is opposed to the closing of moving picture theatres on Sunday. A resolution was adopted by the Central Trades and Labor Council opposing the action of the Ministerial Alliance in the matter.

The Story theatre at Sayre, Okla., opened on Sunday recently, but there was so much opposition manifested by the church people that the theatre management decided that no more Sunday shows would be given.

L. W. Brophy has sold his new Yale theatre at Vinita, Okla., to the Paramount Picture Corporation.

J. M. Armstrong has completed arrangements for the opening of a moving picture theatre at Stuart, Okla., in the near future.

The Met theatre opened its new playhouse at Wynnewood, Okla., to the public recently. The house will show both pictures and road shows.

A new theatre is being constructed at El Reno, Okla., by Mr. and Mrs. Alderberry.

The Pastime theatre at Duncan, Okla., has been completed and stands well in the first line of modern houses in this section. Both vaudeville and pictures will be shown.

Hal C. Norfleet, manager of the Hippodrome at Dallas, Texas, has resigned, to go into business for himself. Ray Whitfield will succeed Norfleet as manager of the Hippodrome.

At a meeting of the Dallas Texas Film Men Thursday it was decreed that the usual practice of booking pictures and supplying film necessities on Sunday would be abandoned. This does not affect the usual Sunday shipments and it does not mean that any distress or emergencies will not be promptly handled. It does mean, however, that the exhibitors who have been in the habit of looking after their film needs on Sunday will have to put it off until Monday or some other day in the week. Exhibitors are asked to cooperate in the move and are expected to do so. According to the exchange managers, the purpose of the new ruling carries with it no spite or maliciousness, but it is designed to correct an unnecessary practice and to give the booker, bookkeepers and other office help a little recreation and rest.

Betty Reiss, who has been engaged for Prizma production.

The Robb and Rowley Syndicate of Dallas, Texas, has purchased the Liberty and Bungalow theatres at Durant, Okla. J. H. Rowley will manage both theatres.

E. H. Rowley of Dallas, Texas, will soon start construction work on a new theatre at Bonham, Texas, and will spend about $50,000 on the enterprise.

Construction on the new Petit theatre at Hominey, Okla., was started last week. It is to be strictly modern and ready for business by the first of the year.

Petty Brothers have opened a new picture house at Oakwood, Texas.

A modern theatre is being constructed at Cameron, Texas. L. C. Boyd will be the local manager.

The Jackson theatre at Heber Springs, Ark., has been sold to Victor Beale of Judsonia and will be remodeled at an early date.

L. Jaconson has started the construction of a new theatre at Amarillo, Texas, and will spend $25,000 on the project. Sam Zukay of California will be the manager. The theatre will be named the Liberty.

The Jewel theatre at Rusk, Texas, has changed hands. E. G. Weldon is the new owner and manager.

L. E. Johnson of Walnut Ridge, Ark., has purchased the Princess theatre at Des Arc, Ark., from McKinistry & Allen. Consideration $2500.

One-Reeler to Aid Red Cross in Big Drive

Red Cross officials are counting largely on motion-picture theatres to help make a success of the annual Roll Call, November 11 to 25. A one-reel picture, "The Spirit of Progress," will play an important part in the campaign for funds with which to continue the Red Cross work. This film emphasizes that Red Cross work by no means ceases when peace is signed.

The film is allegorical in nature. Exhibitor visitors at the Rothacker laboratories who viewed the picture declared its production was far better than the average campaign film and that it was deserving of exhibition in the highest class houses. The picture will be distributed free from the Red Cross divisional headquarters.

W. E. Waddell, director of Red Cross motion picture activities, liked the Rothacker printing on this picture so well that the following resulted:

"We desire to express our appreciation of the efficient manner in which you have handled the printing of our Roll Call picture, 'The Spirit of Service.' We realized that only an organization such as yours could produce so large a number of prints with any assurance of uniform and prompt delivery. Please accept our thanks for the service rendered."

Watterson R. Rothacker replied: "I am delighted to know that you are so well pleased with our work. I am quite sure that you will be equally well pleased with the work we do in the future, and I want you to know that we thoroughy appreciate the privilege of serving you."

Vignola on His Fourth for Cosmopolitan

Robert G. Vignola has begun the production of his fourth special "made for Cosmopolitan-released by Paramount." The story is "Redemption Cove" (working title), written by Donn Byrne, famous magazine writer, and put into scenario form by C. Doty Hobart.

The principal roles will be played by E. K. Lincoln and Seena Owen, and a choice cast of well-known screen players has been picked by Director Vignola to play the supporting parts, it is stated.

"Redemption Cove," said to be one of the best stories ever written by Donn Byrne, is described to be a "crook" story told from a different angle. Comedy and satire combined in subtle proportions with the intense dramatic high lights are declared to make "Redemption Cove" a particularly desirable story for the screen.

Poli Circuit Engages "Down Home"

R. Miller of Poli's Theatrical Enterprises, has been among the first to book "Down Home," the Irvin V. Willat rural drama, released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. "Down Home" will play for four days at Poli's Waterbury theatre, three days in Bridgeport, three days in New Haven and three days in Hartford.

Otis Skinner in "Kismet," the Robertson-Cole super-special

Early Bookings Sought on Goldwyn Release

The pre-release showing of the first of the Kendall-Chambers pictures, "The Song of the Soul," starring Vivian Martin, at the Capitol theatre, has been followed by hundreds of letters from exhibitors in all parts of the country requesting early bookings. The popularity of this young star, according to a number of exhibitors who are in a position to know the preferences of their clientele, makes her one of the strongest drawing cards obtainable, declares Goldwyn. Her brief absence from the screen has been the cause of many inquiries from patrons, it is stated.

Western Dramas "Have Come Back"

Although a few years ago the "Western drama" was virtually dead, investigation proves that the pictures of the plains are now in strong demand, declares Pathe. During the past year Pathe Exchange, Inc., has been feeling out exhibitors on Western pictures. Pictures like "Rio Grande," "A Broadway Cowboy," "Lahoma" and others dealing with the country beyond the Mississippi, have been found to be overwhelming successes, says Pathe.

In signing Tom Santschi for a series of fifteen two-reel Westerns, to be produced for Pathe by Cyrus J. Williams, through arrangements with Arthur S. Kane, Pathe sought to fill this demand. The announcement of the first Santschi release will be forthcoming shortly, it is expected.

London After Gordons

Robert Gordon and his wife, Alma Francis, have received an offer from an English picture firm with studios located in London. Negotiations are about to be closed whereby the Gordons will sail for England some time in April to make three pictures abroad. The company has purchased two original stories from Mrs. Gordon, who now is doing a scenario for a special production to be released through First National. Mr. Gordon's latest picture, "Three Women Loved Him," is being edited this week and will be ready for showing December 1. It is probable that Gordon will appear in another production for Cayuga Pictures, Inc., which is sponsored by Robert Tremain.

Fox's "Special Election Extra" Shot to Screen

Fox News gave the result of the Presidential election and the full picture-story of the victory of Harding and Coolidge a full hour before the result was generally known, declares Fox Film Corporation in a statement just issued.

As soon as it was apparent that Harding and Coolidge had been elected, the whole staff of Fox News was set to work to produce a "Special Election Extra," with the result that it reached the screens at the psychological moment.

The picture opened with the title: "Warren G. Harding is elected President and Calvin Coolidge vice-president in great Republican victory that sweeps the country."

Then followed a flash of Will Hays, chairman of the National Republican Committee, bowing his acknowledgements. After that came, in a series of human-interest pictures, the story of the lives of the two victorious candidates, closing with close-ups of Harding and Coolidge.

Book Tie-Up Planned on "The Virgin of Paris"

"Sophy", Anthony Hope's book from which "The Virgin of Paris" was adapted for motion pictures by Harry R. Raver, will in all probability be republished in a popular priced edition with illustrations from the picture itself.

Negotiations are now under way with publishers to put out a large edition of this novel with the idea of a co-operative advertising and selling campaign in conjunction with the motion picture throughout the country. Requests will be made on booksellers to lend the widest kind of co-operation to the exhibitor in the way of window-displays and joint advertising. It is the plan to use much of the advertising gotten out on the picture in exploiting the book which in itself will tie both together more definitely.

Dorothy Leeds Opposite Hines in Torchy Role

Dorothy Leeds, who has leaped into prominence because of her work in "Hitchy Koo" right on the heels of her appearance in the Ziegfeld Follies and who is said to be the highest salaried show girl on the stage, has been engaged to play opposite Johnny Hines in the eighth series of two-reel comedies made from the stories by Sewell Ford and released through Educational Exchanges.

This will be Miss Leeds' first appearance in pictures.

Vitagraph Company at Sea Making Pictures

Great difficulty was experienced announces Vitagraph, in securing a vessel for a week's cruise in which to make the shipboard scenes for Earle Williams' next picture, "Diamonds Adrift." The star and his company are now in the Pacific. Because of the scarcity of coastwise shipping, Vitagraph was forced to pay $1,500 a day for the use of the vessel, it is stated.

Massive Villa Set in Stroheim Special

Reports continue to come from Universal City of new and elaborate sets for "Foolish Wives", the big Monte Carlo picture being filmed by Erich Von Stroheim.

The latest is a French villa. Universal City has a beautifully terraced slope upon which the villa was built. To assure realism the Moorish type edifice was built of a glistening white stone. Its approach is a broad carriage-way, flanked with marble steps. Before the house has been constructed a spacious fountain surmounted by a life-sized statue in the nude and throwing a plume of water high in the air. H. W. Day designed the structure.

"Trumpet Island" Liked Says Vitagraph

The success predicted for "Trumpet Island," presented by Vitagraph as a Tom Terriss Special production, has been more than realized, announces that company. Reports are reaching Vitagraph's general offices at 469 Fifth avenue, New York, from exhibitors expressing their approval of the picture, based on the original story by Gouverneur Morris. The managers of the various Vitagraph exchanges, both in the United States and Canada, are reporting that the demand for "Trumpet Island" has been heavy. Not one exhibitor, they report, has sent in an adverse criticism of the production.

Educational Comedies Booked in Toto

Frank L. Newman, a prominent exhibitor, has just contracted for the entire comedy product of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., according to an announcement just made by the home office. These include the Christie Comedies every two weeks and monthly releases of the Torchy, Mermaid and Chester brands. They will all be shown at either the new Newman theatre or the New Royal.

Last week saw the presentation of "A Fresh Start," the first of the Mermaids, at the Newman and "Torchy Comes Through" at the New Royal.

Constance BinneyTakes Final Scenes

Constance Binney's latest Realart production, "Something Different," which was slightly delayed because of the illness of Ward Crane, her leading man, has been completed. The company, directed by R. William Neill, worked all day Sunday to finish the final scenes.

The story, an adaptation of "Calderon's Prisoner," relates the adventures of an American girl in a turbulent South American republic and is replete with romantic possibilities which were made the most of by Director R. William Neill.

The company spent several weeks in and near Havana, Cuba, this summer, obtaining a splendid Latin-American atmosphere for the picture.

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Skyfire"

(Featuring Neal Hart—Independent Film Association—Chicago)

THE small exhibitor whose patrons are composed of the working classes, especially those who do manual labor and whose minds are not developed along educational lines, can book this feature with safety for it will give his audiences the entertainment they desire.

Although its story is illogical, its continuity rather jumbled and the acting of the "ten-twenty-thirty" variety, it has strong dramatic moments, a few thrills and love interest.

The locale is laid in the Northwest and brings the French settlers and the mounted police again into action.

Neal Hart, the star, who also acted as director gives himself plenty to do as a member of the "mountys," getting his man or men every time he wants to. And he doesn't have to shoot them either. When the time comes he "battles" his man or men, throws them to the ground, disarms them and "puts on" the handcuffs.

Then again when hotly pursued by the villains, he does not hesitate to jump from the top of a mountain as high as the Himalayas, breaking his fall by landing on a tree which bends and places him safely on mother earth.

The villains attempt to follow and by means of a rope attached to the saddle of one of their horses, let themselves down over the mountainside. The rope breaks and the "bad men" after their aerial flight land on the ground. They are not badly hurt, however, for they put up a good battle before succumbing to the "irons."

That is just what they like in many of the smaller houses where story, continuity and subtitles take second place to dramatic action and thrills.

A good cast for this type of picture supports Hart, among whom are Lew Bates, Hugh Saxon, Artie Artigo, William Quinn and Rita Pickering.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Pretty Lady"

(Sunshine Comedy—Fox—Two Reels)

"PRETTY LADY" has plenty of bathing girls, and more of a story than usual. It is fairly quick moving, and uses a detective with varied disguises, many swinging doors, and the customary chase to get the laughs. One gag stands out especially. A Ford is being driven down the street. It hits the corner of a building, divides, and keeps running along in two sections. Probably two camouflaged motorcycles are used to get the effect.

The story deals with a couple who fail to pay their rent and their beach bungalow is leased to another. It is a case of two couples living in the same house, each believing they are the sole occupants. Complications ensue in an almost unending succession. Bobby Dunn plays the detective, who is engaged to keep an eye on the wife to obtain testimony for a divorce. Of course, he watches the wrong wife.

The high spot in the comedy is the end of the chase. When the four characters climb up the side of a high city building, dash along the edge of the roof, and swing across a ten-story chasm by means of a thin rope. It has all been done before, but it is as thrilling as any audience will want.

In the cast are Slim Sommerville, Ethel Teare, Marion Aye and Bobby Dunn. J. G. Blystone directed.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"The Sin That Was His"

(Selznick—Six Reels)

"THE Sin That Was His," starring William Faversham, proves a good picture can be made without a love theme. This offering should be remembered because it breaks away from accepted screen tradition—and exploits one of the biggest things in life—religion.

Every emotion—except love—is depicted from the opening when the star, as a notorious gambler of the Canadian woods, turns atheist, following the first good deed he has done in twenty years, through a period when he masquerades as a priest in a small town in Quebec to escape a murder charge, until the end when he finds his spiritual self. The picture is superbly acted by Mr. Faversham and his competent assistants.

The element of doubt and the tense sequences spell a strong flavor of suspense. The setting is simple, thus preserving the atmosphere of the story. The theme is quite gripping and should have a universal appeal. The author and star deserve commendation—the one for providing a story which is unusual, the other for giving it a perfect interpretation.—ELSIE LOEB, Cleveland, Ohio.

"Neighbors"

(Buster Keaton Comedy—Metro—Two Reels)

FEWER comedies of recent date are full of such a number of good gags. The laughter may at times descend to a ripple or few chuckles, but it never entirely ceases, for "Neighbors" slows up for never a minute.

Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline have kept up the pace they set by "One Week." Keaton continues his serious-faced humor and adds a few acrobatic stunts. The action is laid in the tenement district of a large city. Buster is in love with the girl next door, but their respective parents are always at swords' points. After a riot of fun there is a "roughneck" marriage scene. The bride is given away by her 200-pound father, who smokes a cigar and wears his small derby a la the Prince of Wales during the ceremony. "Giving her away" means sending her forward with a vigorous push into the arms of the bridegroom. The guests all carry bricks and clubs behind their back. The groom has a great deal of trouble when his belt breaks. He steals the minister's belt, which causes more embarrassment. Finally the ceremony is continued with all concerned seated on the floor.

You can't help pleasing your patrons with "Neighbors." Its tempo breaks all the speed laws and the whole thing is irresistible. It is another case of a comedy worthy to be featured with the average five-reel picture.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

"Youth's Desire"

(Forward Film Distributors, Inc.—State Rights)

HERE is a picture, while not a world-beater, which should entertain, because of its clean, clear-cut comedy, its "old home" atmosphere, its pleasing cast, and lack of outstanding flaws in production, and its human and straightforward sub-titles.

It has no drama at all, being laid in a small town where the hero, a simple country lad, who has as his rival the debonair young salesman in the local haberdashery. It is this youth's desire to fly. Although scoffed at and ridiculed, he builds a "monoplane" in his father's barn. The whole town turns out on the stubble field, now a "flying field," to watch the first flight. The mayor makes an address, and is induced to be the first passenger. But the "monoplane" turns out to be nothing more than a motorcycle, with crudely made wings extending far on either side. Instead of rising gracefully in the air, as the young inventor expects, it bounces along the stubble field to the great delight of all except the pilot and the first passenger.

But the coming ace is not discouraged. He goes to the city, and works as a mechanic in an aviation plant. The girl believes he is an aviator and comes to see him. In order to keep her devotion, he plans a fake start which develops into anything but a fake, and the huge plane rises in the air. In his ignorance he goes through the stunts of an experienced ace, and when he makes a safe landing, the girl's father relents. Of course, this last episode is highly improbable. The idea of a novice handling a machine like a veteran went very well in a musical comedy such as "Going Up," and it passes here, for the reason that "Youth's Desire" is more farce comedy than comedy drama. For instance, no audience could take seriously the hick constable, who is a burlesque type pure and simple.

Joseph Bennett is entirely satisfactory as the young aviator, and the long shots of his flying are thrilling. Edith Kent is attractive as the girl. The story is from the pen of Philip White. Length 5 reels.

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last eighteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompased in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. Andwe also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to July 31, 1920.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ADORABLE SAVAGE, THE (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....AUG. 14
"Colorful picture on a time-worn formula."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Several parts of this picture are unusual but the public does not seem to get enthusiastic about the local color and scenery of this feature. Fair receipts."

ALWAYS AUDACIOUS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WALLACE REID.....NOV. 20
"Clever twists make interesting crook story."—M. P. News.

"Japanese star versatile in good production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture interested them and it did big business for three days."

ARE ALL MEN ALIKE? (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....NOV. 6
"Rather inconsequental for feature length."—M. P. News.

BEGGAR IN PURPLE, A (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST.....NOV. 13
"Good production given average story."—M. P. News.

BEHOLD MY WIFE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST..OCT. 23
"Novel story given rich production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining picture. Crowded my house every showing. Box-office results very good." "Good picture but nothing extraordinary and did average business for one week." "Very good picture. Business so good held over for second week."

BEWARE OF THE BRIDE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....OCT. 30
"This would look better as a two-reel slapstick."—M. P. News.

BIG HAPPINESS (ROBERTSON-COLE) DUSTIN FARNUM.....SEPT. 11
"Fair entertainment in Dustin Farnum's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only average picture but drew fairly well." "This picture contains a good story with plenty of pep. The audience was pleased and receipts were very gratifying." "The poorest box-office picture I've played in years. Farnum well liked—but the people who liked him want him in Westerns and plenty of action. The ofreign locale of this confused them. Lost money steadily all week."

BLACKMAIL (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....OCT. 16
"Viola Dana gives color to familiar story."—M. P. News.

"The best light comedy of the year."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well all week. Excellent picture. Viola Dana is an especial favorite." "Fair picture. Drew average audience." "Fair picture to average business." "Picture fair; business no better." "Good picture. Lots of interesting situations well done by star and capable company. Opened to nice business and held public interest all week." "Big box-office attraction, a good title, pleasing picture and a well liked star who does a good 'shimmy'." "Two days to big and average business." "Everyone voted this the best Dana picture they had ever seen." "This picture certainly went over big. A pleasing story, well liked by my audiences."

CIVILIAN CLOTHES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Entertaining picture with Meighan as a star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Has met with much favor. Good money maker." "Held up splendidly on third week run. Picture has very entertaining qualities." "Picture went very well. Patrons seem much pleased. Box office returns were very good." "A bully fine picture, with popular plot. Going like wild fire here and getting the best press notices." "Seven days to capacity. Picture well liked but those who saw the stage play not satisfied." "This is a good production as far as entertainment goes but it brought only average business." "Went over big. Meighan is well liked in this city, and his vehicle lost none of its effect in the transposition to the screen."

CLOTHES (METRO) OLIVE TELL.....OCT. 2
"Talky picture made from stage satire."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair picture. Picture drew well for first two days; rest of week mediocre. Average week's receipts."

CONRD IN QUEST OF HIS YOUTH (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) THOMAS MEIGHAN.....NOV. 20
"Delightful story is enriched on the screen."—M. P. News.

CRADLE OF COURAGE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WILLIAM S. HART.....OCT. 2
"Has plenty of action and should please."—M P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing picture but we had about average business." "Well up to the average of Wm. S. Hart's pictures and should be a good drawing card at all theatres where he is popular. We did excellent business with this picture for one week." "The combination of a popular star and a good picture, and the result is good business."

CROOKED STREETS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ETHEL CLAYTON.....AUG. 1
"Melodrama is long on atmosphere, short on plot and suspense."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good for a return date." "Played this picture one week to average business six days and big business one day." "Rather good melodrama; pretty good business." "A great picture. Exciting from start to finish. Had the house spellbound on opening night and did tremendous business all the following performances. Seldom is a picture so universally liked." "Packed 'em on this. Ethel Clayton most popular woman star on Paramount program in this territory. The picture was great, and they liked it from the very start. Fine business throughout."

CUMBERLAND ROMANCE, A (REALART PICTURES) MARY MILES MINTER.....AUG. 21
"M. M. Minter's best—a real picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture which pleased and did good business for one week." "Played it two days to average business." "Did well with this, though Mary Miles Minter's popularity has dropped a bit because of her persistently saccharine roles. This is as good as her best and pleased."

CUPID—THE COWPUNCHER (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....AUG. 7
"Great entertainment with star in ideal role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good Will Rogers picture which drew more than average audiences for seven days with exceptionally good Saturday and Sunday business."

CURTAIN (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....OCT. 16
"Lifelike story suffers from mechanical development."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to exceptional business. Katherine MacDonald appears to be growing more popular." "Katherine MacDonald gave entire satisfaction. Picture well produced. Splendid supporting cast. Business very good." "It's by far the best acting Katherine MacDonald has ever done. People liked it well enough to fill two houses for a week simultaneously. Good entertainment."

"THE FORBIDDEN THING"
(Dwan-Asso. Producers)

Vivid and Vital Story, Rich in Spiritual Quality

ONE feels inclined to place a gold seal opposite Allan Dwan's name in his first production for Associated Producers. "The Forbidden Thing" which he adapted and directed from Mary Mears' vivid and vital story of a "faith that would not die" will certainly be classified among the top-notchers. He has constructed the feature in narrative form and has placed remarkable emphasis upon its rugged simplicity. The tale is peopled with figures who are actually lifelike—whose joys and sorrows are touched upon with genuine feeling. It is dramatic to the core—but not the drama of the theatre, but of life.

The central theme revolves around the eternal conflict of the physical woman against the spiritual woman for the possession of a man's soul and in the development the spiritual note grips with a power which is as sure as that which flames with passion or anguish the hearts of the simple fisher-folk. The action is placed in a Cape Cod fishing village and is concentrated upon a rugged native whose love for his sweetheart and mother guides him into a heartfelt appreciation for their welfare. Then like a storm cloud, passion, which has been dormant, rises within him and he forgets—forgets the kindly solicitude of his beloved ones. His harsh attitude brings death to his mother, and his sweetheart goes away to marry a man whom she has lightly considered. She bears her burden without complaint and the other man, tossed on the storm of passion, reaps a harvest of bitter sorrows. The physical appeal takes flight and there he stands a brooding figure who, despite his sin, earns the utmost sympathy.

The picture is as strong as the tide which flows and ebbs outside his home. And it builds with deep and convincing logic. Finally the wicked wife runs away and comes back as a washed up figure of the tide. And the man's cup of sorrow is complete. He feels himself an outcast—as unworthy of the girl whose life he wrecked and whose husband is dead. So he plunges into the surf—to comit "the forbidden thing"—suicide. His old sweetheart's little boy calls him back and he returns a figure redeemed. Mr. Dwan's realism marks every scéne. The atmosphere is perfect, the backgrounds being harmonious and in keeping with the rugged action. The picture is so vital and vivid that he has needed no recourse to melodramatic incident. The acting is superb. James Kirkwood gives a portrayal which for its spiritual note, its rugged simplicity, its human flavor stamps him as one of the most vital figures on the screen. Helen Jerome Eddy, Marcia Manon, and Gertrude Claire are splendidly real. "The Forbidden Thing" is a human, vigorous photoplay—one which should be appreciated by every type of audience.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The first of Allan Dwan's productions for Associated Producers will have its initial showing at the ———— next ————. James Kirkwood heads a cast of unusual excellence including Helen Jerome Eddy, Marcia Manon and others. "The Forbidden Thing," which is described as "the story of an all-conquering love" and "the story of faith that would not die," is laid in a Cape Cod fishing village. It was adapted and directed by Mr. Dwan from a story by Mary Mears. The triumph of true love over false is the underlying theme of the picture and presents an array of characters who will be recognized as real. The subject has a rugged quality about it.

The young man, Abel, is determined to live up to his good resolutions, but he goes astray. He is purged of his baser impulses, only after he has brought sorrows and tribulations to those who love him. The picture is told with remarkable dramatic power which carries the utmost in action and suspense. The interpretation is on a particularly high plane.

PROGRAM READER

Allan Dwan's rugged picture of a faith that would not die, "The Forbidden Thing," will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ———— with a cast headed by James Kirkwood. It is a story of the simple fisher folk of Cape Cod, their ideals and the home love and lore of centuries as handed down from the Pilgrim fathers. The action presents all the human joys and sorrows of a happy or unhappy people, the scenes of which run with astounding interest from the first reel to the last. The central theme revolves around the eternal contest of the physical woman against the spiritual woman for the possession of a man's soul. It is a remarkable production—remarkable in its semblance to life and its atmosphere and interpretation.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a picture which will be advertised by word of mouth once you have the crowd assembled. But go after the crowd by telling them that it is an Allan Dwan production—his first for Associated Producers. Bring out the value of the producing organization as carrying names which have adorned worth while pictures. Tell that the picture offers a rugged story of a "faith that would not die." Stress its simplicity and the spiritual note. Bring out that it offers heartrending pathos and wholesome sentiment. Emphasize that James Kirkwood appears at the head of the cast—which should mean something in box-office returns. Tell that it is a worthy companion to "In the Heart of a Fool."

"IDOLS OF CLAY"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Colorful Production Marked by Good Incident

GEORGE FITZMAURICE can usually be depended upon to present a colorful production. He is a master craftsman at the art of staging a picture no matter if the locale calls for an Oriental background, the sordid streets of the big city, or the South Sea panorama. And against his landscapes or his intimate shots, there is reflected effective dramatic sequences, because he also knows the value of situation and climax. "Idols of Clay" is rather old time material. It is the South Sea Island formula which means that a young derelict must be reclaimed to civilization by a fair native, who for the purposes of romance must belong to the white race. Antiquated and obvious as this story is, the author, Ouida Bergere, and Mr. Fitzmaurice have added a sufficient amount of good incident which keeps the action moving and the spectator interested.

The picture may well be called a combination of the Griffith offerings, "The Idol Dancer," and "Broken Blossoms." You have the South Sea story of the former and the latter is duplicated in the limehouse sequences which introduce the lovers brought together again after months of separation. The picture builds well for two reels, establishing its story and characterization and planting every idea and incident firmly and without recourse to repetitious detail. Then it takes a flop for two or three reels, while the action flashes back to a period in which the spectator is not keenly interested. How the hero established his fame and certain experiences in his life are presented, which have nothing to do with the main line of action. With this middle footage over with the picture picks up and finishes with the strength anticipated.

Spectators who have followed Mae Murray closely will doubtless take notice that she does her best work here. She seems to have been given more freedom of expression—to put forth her own interpretation. In previous pictures she has impressed us as watching the director too closely. But here she appears to be on her own initiative. And her portrayal is effective. Particularly good are her moments in the limehouse scenes. The title finds meaning in the worship of false gods by the lovers who discover that peace and harmony on a far-away isle are preferable to riches and fame in civilization. Fitzmaurice's scenes are all well composed, beautifully lighted and tinted, and saturated with atmosphere. His South Sea scenes bring a sweet contentment, while the limehouse shots make one shudder, so realistic is the reproduction. In support of Miss Murray are the quiet and forceful David Powell in the opposite role, and George Fawcett, who contributes a clever character study. "Idols of Clay" will be popular.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Faith Merrill.....Mae Murray
Dion Holme.....David Powell
Lady Gray.....Dorothy Cummings
Jim Merrill.....George Fawcett
Blinky.....Leslie King
Old Master.....Richard Wangermann
Doctor Herbert.....Claude King

By Ouida Bergere.
Directed by George Fitzmaurice.
Photographed by Arthur Miller.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Idols of Clay" will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This is a George Fitzmaurice production based upon a story by Ouida Bergere and is said to be a fitting successor to "On With the Dance," and "The Right to Love." The director has demonstrated anew that he is the master of the colorful, emotional story and the opulent background. As in his previous productions, he is assisted by the sympathetic work of pretty Mae Murray and David Powell, the featured players. The public is not allowed to forget that Miss Murray started her career as a dancer since many of the scenes are woven around her ability in this direction. Others in the cast who are conspicuous by their fine portrayals are George Fawcett and Dorothy Cummings.

"Idols of Clay" brings together on a South Sea isle a young London sculptor, who, faith in his career and in mankind shattered by an unscrupulous woman, has drifted to the tropics, and an innocent child of nature, the daughter of a pearl-smuggler. The girl falls in love with the stranger and after various vicissitudes in which she is separated from him, they are reunited. The picture carries a deal of dramatic action which is punctured with romance and atmosphere.

PROGRAM READER

All the keen sense for colorful effects and knowledge of what constitutes the really thrilling and dramatic which George Fitzmaurice displayed in "On With the Dance" and "The Right to Love," is said to be contained in full measure in his latest production, "Idols of Clay." The story, a romance of two worlds, was written by Ouida Bergere, and no expense has been spared in making it one of the most lavishly produced pictures of the season. Mae Murray and David Powell are again the featured players, while prominent in their support are the capable George Fawcett, Claude King and Dorothy Cummings. The action travels from the South Seas to the Limehouse district of London and to the resorts of society. A colorful picture. At this theatre next ————.

SUGGESTIONS

George Fitzmaurice has made a name for himself. Your crowd will certainly remember him as the director of "On With the Dance" and "The Right to Love." So be sure to play up the newest picture, "Idols of Clay," as a Fitzmaurice production. Bring out that Ouida Bergere wrote the story which tells a romance of the South Seas and London—a romance of two worlds. Feature the leading players, Mae Murray and David Powell, and tell that they have another winner here. Play up the title. Stage a prologue in harmony with a colorful scene from the picture. You can secure mats and electros from your exchange. Use them.

CATCH LINES

He journeyed to the South Seas. He wanted to forget. But into his life entered a beautiful romance. And he was reclaimed to society. See "Idols of Clay."

"WEST IS WEST"
(Universal)

Very Ordinary Western for Carey

THIS Western featuring Harry Carey hits below the average in entertainment values, it being nothing else than a program vehicle. The Universal star looks his best when appearing in a character study, but when he comes forward in hectic melodrama, the plot shortcomings are visible. This picture depends for its appeal upon the idea that West and East cannot be merged in matters of love. But the love interest is subordinated for a deal of convenient melodrama which revolves around capital versus labor as these forces flourish in the gold regions. The action becomes real "in-trik-ut," for there is a lot of talk of stocks and strikes and conniving on the part of the capitalist's underlings.

Carey makes his appearance when he signs up in El Paso to work in a mine. He doesn't know that he will be employed as a strike-breaker. While he is putting his "John Hancock" to the paper he picks up acquaintance with a girl whose father is one of the strikers in the gold town. Which is the reason that the love interest goes aglimmering. The director has introduced a crude touch which shows the miners going to work on the night shift at the time that the representatives of capital are giving a porch dance in the palace of the magnate. The workers have to pass this house on their way to work. It doesn't strike us as consistent, for the women have a Ritz-Carlton appearance about them, and the men are of the lounge lizard type.

Then the story sags. One waits expectantly for the conflict between the strikers and the strike-breakers, but it never happens. There is a flash of an explosion and the workers picking up their dead. Carey has his opportunity when the crooked employers bribe him to blow up the mine. But he sees which side belongs to justice and the disciples of evil pay the penalty. The stupidity of the magnate and the underlings is colossal. Money is passed around, men are hired and no questions asked. There is really no meaning for the title since the Eastern girl is never given a moment when she would emphasize the barrier of East versus West. And when the action gives out, the romantic element is lugged in by the heels. The girl responds when she discovers that the adventurous cowboy is honorable. The mine scenes are the genuine thing, the only touch of reality in the picture. However, the director deserves credit for not stressing the strike stuff and showing meaningless mob scenes. Carey should return to the simple character study.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Harry Carey, the popular Universal star, will make his appearance at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week in "West is West." This is a picture which brings out in admirable fashion that "East is East and West is West, and never the twain may meet." In other words, a girl raised in the East and cultured, will not give up her heart or wear it on her sleeve for a man of the West—a man who has little in common with her ideas of life. The picture carries this idea but Harry Carey doesn't mind it since he has found his ideal in a little Western girl.

He has come to the gold-mining district to find a job. When he signed he didn't know that he was to be employed as a strike-breaker. So when he appears in the town at the head of a band of strike-breakers, the girl, whose father is one of the strikers, refuses to entertain his advances. So Harry is forced to abide his time and prove to the girl that her suspicions of him are not correct. A chance comes for him to redeem himself and he accepts a bribe to blow up the mine. But seeing on which side is justice he proves his manliness by exposing the crooks. The result is he is given steady employment at an advanced salary and wins the girl in the bargain. The picture is well emphasized with dramatic moments and is capably acted and directed.

PROGRAM READER

Would you if out of work sign up as a strike-breaker? Harry Carey did. When he signed he didn't know that he would be employed as a strike-breaker. He thought he was going to a gold mine to find steady employment. But when he reached the gold town, the girl, who had regenerated him, was chagrined to discover that he was a strike-breaker, opposed to her father who walked out with the strikers. What did Harry do to win back her friendship? "West is West" is the name of the picture which comes to the ———— next ————. It is a rattling good Western—a Western filled with good thrills and incident and quite up to the Carey mark. Don't miss seeing the human star.

SUGGESTIONS

Well you can employ the slogans regarding Harry Carey which Universal have exploited. Bring out in teasers that "Harry Carey is coming: He's Human." Tell that the star is on the crest of a wave of popularity due to his human attitudes. Tell that the picture carries out the idea of Kipling's that "East is East and West is West, etc." Tell that it is a melodrama of the gold mines with a cowboy who turns strike-breaker. Mention that Carey is supported by a large cast which composes such familiar names as Sue Mason and Arthur Millet. Play up Carey. His name is your big bet.

"THE PENALTY"
(Goldwyn-Eminent Authors)

Great Vehicle for Lon Chaney, But Falls Short in Many Ways

IN spite of a most unique and powerful characterization by Lon Chaney, one which will compare favorably with his never to be forgotten "The Frog" of "The Miracle Man," and a decidedly different basic plot, "The Penalty" fails to deliver much in the way of screen drama. The picture is episodic, jumping to various essential scenes with such rapidity and cutting back and forth to different sequences that have to be carried along in such a way that most of the suspense of the offering is killed.

It would look when reduced to bare basic plot as if this would have made much better serial material. The whole idea is wildly improbable, the romance connected with it inconsequential, and its multitude of characters get lost in condensing the book into feature picture length.

Only one thing stands out as worthy of any great amount of praise. Mr. Chaney has a role that even outside of its uniqueness in that he plays the part of a man without legs, the illusion being perfect, which gives him ample opportunity to demonstrate that he is a great actor.

From a technical standpoint the picture is up to standard. All the sets, a rather unusual number of exacting interiors being required, are excellent, while lightings and photography are noteworthy. The supporting cast is good, but no single player succeeds in making his role amount to anything from an audience standpoint, except Mr. Chaney.

The twist in the plot at the end of the picture saves the offering somewhat and perhaps this fact and Mr. Chaney's characterization will get it over. An occasional title is good, but most of them are commonplace necessaries to tell what is happening.

The fame of the novel from which the picture is adapted and the considerable following which Lon Chaney has acquired ought to make the feature a very good box office attraction.—Length, 7 reels.—J. S. Dickerson.

THE CAST

Blizzard ..... Lon Chaney
Barbara ..... Claire Adams
Wilmot ..... Kenneth Harlan
Doctor ..... Charles Clary
Rose ..... Ethel Grey Terry
Bubble ..... Edouard Trebaol
Lichtenstein ..... Milton Ross
Pete ..... James Mason

Directed by David Worsley.
Adapted from the novel by Gouverneur Morris.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Penalty," the famous novel by Gouverneur Morris with its unique leading character "Blizzard" leader of San Francisco's underworld has been adapted to the screen and will be the attraction at the ———— theatre for ———— days engagement beginning ————.

Lon Chaney who will never be forgotten for his wonderful characterization of "The Frog" in "The Miracle Man" even if his years of consistent playing in other parts had not brought him into prominence is cast as "Blizzard" and in the role Mr. Chaney presents a character most unusual and forceful.

"Blizzard" has no legs, an operation in childhood having deprived him of them. Into his disordered but great brain come three great desires: To be revenged on the surgeon who crippled him, to be a Caesar of the under world and to have the limbs of some other man grafted on his own stumps.

How he schemes and plans and why he falls short of his desires in all three instances makes one of the most novel and entertaining pictures of the year.

"The Penalty" is a picture for those who complain that the "movies" presents nothing new, who object to the sugar coated story of sweet sixteen and her handsome sweetheart. It is a powerful picture founded on a daring theme and should meet the approval of the most exacting.

PROGRAM READER

For the ———— attraction beginning ———— we will present "The Penalty" an adaptation of the famous Gouverneur Morris novel dealing with "Blizzard" the underworld king of San Francisco and his revenge and plans to be the Caesar of his kind. The picture is a Rex Beach-Goldwyn production with Lon Chaney who will be most favorably remembered for his wonderful characterization of "The Frog" of "The Miracle Man" in the part of the legless crook "Blizzard." The role provides Mr. Chaney a most wonderful acting opportunity and in its uniqueness a never to be forgotten demonstration of body manipulation. If Mr. Chaney really possessed no limbs he could not have done better than he has with them.

The plot of Mr. Morris' story is also very different than that of many pictures. A twist at the end so unexpected that it startles will appeal to every lover of good photodrama. The cast which have been secured to support the star is exceptional and includes such well known players as Claire Adams, Kenneth Harlan and Ethel Grey Terry. The picture is a true super-special and one of the most interesting productions to be released under the title of Goldwyn's "Eminent Authors."

SUGGESTIONS

Concentrate your advertising on the fame of the novel and the characterization of Lon Chaney, recalling the latter to your patrons by mentioning his work in "The Miracle Man." Book store tie-ups should be easy on this picture and corperation with public libraries will be worth while. In framing your newspaper displays use a still of Chaney with his "no legs outfit" and the title "Blizzard" with explanations. As a prologue suggestion we offer the plan of obtaining the services of a man with no legs to be presented in a series of stunts similar to those which Chaney does in the picture. Or better still an imitation of Chaney by a contortionist.

CATCH LINES

Lon Chaney the never to be forgotten "Frog" of the "Miracle Man" in another quite as unique and powerful characterization.

A famous novel by a famous author adapted into one of the most talked of pictures of the year.

"Blizzard" the king of the underworld, with a body mangled through a surgeon's youthful error, the brain of a genius the face of a devil and the soul of a poet. That is what Lon Chaney impersonates in "The Penalty."

JACK-KNIFE MAN, THE (VIDOR-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... AUG. 14
"Human interest story rich in characterization, humor and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture. Exhibitors say so. Critics say so, but the public is slow to appreciate it. So unusual, so different from what is generally seen on the screen. A picture that is ahead of the times. Did only fair both downtown and in neighborhood section."

JAILBIRD, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN ..... OCT. 9
"Rather obvious, but fairly diverting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played last week and drew about average crowds. Consensus of opinion was that picture was fair." "Not so good as the McLean-May predecessors. Falls down on story, but acting of this popular pair keeps the interest going until the finish. Did fair business." "They all came—but they were disappointed. In point of business, it did very well. But I don't like to disappoint my people. They expected something as fine and peppy as 'What's Your Husband Doing?' and "Mary's Ankle." MacLean does good work in a typical Charles Ray part—but it was not his sort of role, at all. May very good, also." "Disappointing after seeing '23½ Hours Leave.' Fair business." "Very bad for the star and weak story. Business was poor." "Picture started big, slumped, and then ended big. But on the whole it's a lemon."

"Mediocre picture made from best seller."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Story criticized by newspapers. Audiences appeared to like it. Large attendance." "Elsie Ferguson draws certain class, but class is limited. Each of her pictures does just about the same." "Fair business. Story not much, but star carried it over." "Star attracted many, as she has not been out for some time. Picture not one of her best. Fair amount of business." "A good picture to extra big and big business for two days." "A very entertaining picture and brought big crowds to my house."

LAHOMA (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 4
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Much to my surprise, this one went over well. A very weak picture, with action taking place too far back to be of interest. Costumes hideous, though true to period. They liked this fairly well, but I'd hate to try to play another one like it!"

LAW OF THE YUKON, THE (REALART) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 2
"This picture proves a disappointment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which drew the usual business."

Exhibitor Comment—"This picture affords real entertainment for most any audience and brings hearty laughs from everybody, even from those who claim the situations weren't funny. The photography and cast are very good, direction acceptable. Average business." "Star at her best. Picture only fair. Business no better."

LITTLE WANDERER, THE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON ..... AUG. 28
"Heavier-than-usual story does not suit Shirley Mason."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which played my house three days to big business."

LOVE FLOWER, THE (GRIFFITH-UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 4
"Not Griffith's best, but has audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Beautiful picture. Up to Griffith's high standard and appealed very strongly to audiences. Played two weeks to capacity houses and on account of big business was held over for third week." "Usual Griffith type. Business picked up every day." "A pleasing picture which brought more than normal business." "Eight-day engagement. Very good business. Griffith name still very valuable."

LOVE, HONOR AND OBEY (METRO) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"Too-familiar story causes interest to lag."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture. Better houses last two days than when picture opened."

LOVE MADNESS (J. PARKER READ-HODKINSON) LOUISE GLAUM ..... AUG. 21
"Excellent crook story; finely acted and produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew good-sized audiences for seven day run. More sex stuff which appeals to some, but is 'passed by' by most patrons." "A pretty good picture but a poor box-office attraction." 'Name of photoplay drew rather large audiences. Star at her best in her emotional role. Business not bad." "The essence of mellow melodrama. No good as an attraction for those who look for plausibility in a photoplay. Glaum displays her usual intenseness. Not a great picture, but one that will make money wherever patrons like thrills. Played to fair business." "Louise Glaum well liked here and picture presented her in ideal role. Did very good business with it throughout week."

LOVE'S FLAME (FIDELITY PICTURES CO.) THOS. J. CARRIGAN-VIVIENNE OSBORNE ..... OCT. 16
"Story has distinctive appeal."—M. P. News.

MAD LOVE (VICTOR KREMER PRODUCTION) LINA CAVALIERI ..... NOV. 6
"Average production stars Cavalieri."—M. P. News.

MADAME PEACOCK (NAZIMOVA-METRO) NAZIMOVA ..... OCT. 16
"Picture looks artificial through poor direction and acting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew big houses each day. This city has large number of Nazimova 'fans' and these liked the film. The women were exceptionally pleased with it." "Nazimova popular here. House did a normal business only. Lack of punch in previous Nazimova picturets has affected the box office." "The crowds came to see this picture because they are enthusiastic about the star, Nazimova. Drew well for entire week. "Worst Nazimova picture ever produced and shows plainly lack of direction and lack of judgment in picking story. Another picture like this and Nazimova is finished."

MADAM X (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK ..... OCT. 9
"Tremendous drama faultlessly acted and skillfully produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is a fair picture, its only value being the fact that it was made before." "Medium business." "Pauline Frederick's greatest picture and one of the best productions ever offered by Goldwin. Broke house records for box office receipts Sunday and did big business during entire week. Held over for second week's run." "Wonderful production. Pauline Frederick is at her best. This picture went over extra big, making the biggest week in months." "Great picture. Audiences seemed to like this one very much. Big business during run." "The best work Pauline Frederick has ever done. Picture built for acting more than action." "Opened tdo very poor business: competition to circus and Fair as well. But has built steadily up etver since. Business, total, very good. A fine picture—a classic." "Not up to the standard of Nazimova pictures. There are moments in the picture that do not ring true. However, Nazimova followers seemed satisfied." "An average production. Box office returns fair."

MAN WHO DARED, THE (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL ..... AUG. 14
"Probably Russell's best work to date."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture is fair and brought the usual audiences."

MARRIAGE PIT, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO ..... OCT. 16
"Interesting story of big business and feminine pride."—M. P. News.

MASTER MIND, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) LIONEL BARRYMORE ..... OCT. 9
"Melodrama of interesting quality."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An artistic picture which played to only average houses." "Barrymore is a great favorite. The picture pleased." "Large audiences. Very good attraction." "Powerful and very high grade picture which did better than average business."

MID-CHANNEL (CARSON-EQUITY) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG ..SEPT 25
"Drama lost amidst family squabbles and omnipresent dream ending."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comments—"Big picture which drew more than usual business." "A good picture which drew well." "Filled two houses during a simultaneous first run. Young has a steady following, who are enthusiastic supporters. This picture is different from those which have preceded. Star not so much in evidence as in 'Eyes of Youth.' Good support helps to make the picture interesting." "Picture is O. K. but we had poor business."

MILESTONES (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 18
"Atmosphere and scenic stuff, but short on screen drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture but brought about the average business."

"THE STAR ROVER"
(Shurtleff-Metro)

Artistic Production, But Disappointing for a London Story

BECAUSE it is a fantastic, impossible story, based on the theme of reincarnation of the soul, which few, if any, can take seriously, "The Star Rover" falls down as pure entertainment. It has none of that appeal for which other Jack London stories of the sea and far north were noted. It deals with the previous existences of a man who lives them over again on the screen. This makes it largely a costume picture. There is an episode showing the hero as he lived in his first life as a slave of a roaming, pillaging Viking. The costuming is elaborate and well done. This is a romantic and appealing glimpse of history and there is a story in it, but the incident closes suddenly.

Shifting to the Middle Ages, there is an Oriental episode with the same character as the central figure. All this is supposed to be the spoken dream of Dr. Standing, a part played by Courtney Foote, while he is being tortured by the police in an effort to wring forth the confession of a murder. He, of course, is innocent.

His sweetheart, played by Thelma Percy, has it in her power to release him from the "third degree," but urges him to go through with it once more, in order that in his unconscious state he may reveal the true murderer. This he does and the criminal, a chorus girl, is brought to justice and the cruel police inspector discharged. This is a weak ending and one which will hardly satisfy.

The elaborate production can hardly make up for the lack of story interest. The theatre scene in the beginning is a corker, and the Oriental sequence is artistic to a high degree, presenting some beautiful photography. The scenes showing the third degree methods used become at times overbrutal. The man is hung up by his thumbs three times.

Thelma Percy is an attractive leading lady and capable in her emotional scenes. Courtenay Foote has no very great demands made upon him. "The Star Rover" is practically made up of two one act playlets and a modern mystery story.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Star Rover," one of Jack London's most famous novels, has been made into a motion picture and the film version of this stirring story will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. "The Star Rover" is one of the most popular of all that famous author's stories. It concerns a man who has been falsely accused of murder and who is being subjected to "third degree" methods by the police. Under the torture his soul lives through its previous existences on earth.

Featured in the picture are Courtenay Foote and Thelma Percy, a sister of the well known star, Eileen Percy. Mr. Foote plays Dr. Standing, who is seated in a box one evening at a musical comedy success when a hand holding a revolver is thrust through the curtains in back of him, and a man in the box opposite is shot dead. The doctor stoops and picks up the revolver and is immediately arrested for murder. It is only in the last reel that this gripping mystery is explained and the innocent man freed from the false charge.

Besides being a startling revelation of the "third degree" methods used by the police to wring a confession from an accused, "The Star Rover" presents some of the most beautiful photography ever seen on the screen. One gets a glimpse of history in the scenes which accurately depict the life of a roving Viking in the eleventh century.

"The Star Rover" will be shown for ———— days at the ———— theatre.

PROGRAM READER

Is it possible that each of us has at some time lived through a previous existence on earth? Could it be that we live but to be born again, and that in some long past age we feasted in the halls of Rome, or lived our roving life on the high seas as a hardy Norseman? Jack London thought so, and with this theory as a basis wrote one of his most popular novels, "The Star Rover," which has now been translated to the screen. With a capable cast of players headed by Courtenay Foote and Thelma Percy, the film version of "The Star Rover" is just as entrancing as the written work of that famous author.

This remarkable picture will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————. Whether you believe in the interesting theory or not, it forms the basis of an intensely absorbing story which is bound to afford you entertainment. Jack London entertained you with his books—let him do the same on the screen.

SUGGESTIONS

Of course the biggest exploitation angle is Jack London's name. Recall "The Sea Wolf" if you have shown it. Try to impress upon your patrons that London is one of if not the greatest authors of recent years. Mention all his important works if you can spare the space. Try a tie-up with a book store. This need not be limited to this particular story, but can be used to advertise all London's works for the bookseller. The cast offers you few possibilities, although Courtenay Foote is fairly well known, and Thelma Percy should be made known as the sister of Eileen. It would probably be better to only briefly mention the reincarnation idea, and this in a not-too-serious fashion. Do not let them get the idea that you are offering serious propaganda for this belief.

"THOUGHTLESS WOMEN"
(Goodman-Pioneer)

Human Document With Real Life-like Touches

DANIEL CARSON GOODMAN took quite a task upon himself when he conceived the idea of writing, directing, and producing the "Thoughtless Women" with his own pen, megaphone and pocketbook. The result speaks for itself. Rather than trust his contribution to a director who might misinterpret its logic and argument, Mr. Goodman has developed it according to his own ideas and his directorial effort is quite on a par with his story-telling ability. It is a simple, little tale he has conceived here—one which builds in a straight-forward manner, detailing its plot and characterization without relying upon convenience and coincidence with the result that it scores for its semblance to life.

He indicts the modern mother no matter whether she belongs to the aristocracy or not—indicts her for being mercenary or ambitious toward her son or daughter's welfare. So a girl of Poverty Row is bartered off to a rich scion of society. This romance is eagerly entered into by the young man who has tired of his mother's fawning attitude and her ambition to see him married to a girl of his own station. The girl, however, would remain in her own environment, but for the sake of her mother. It is when the youth takes his bride home that the conflict born of snobbishness finds development. His mother and sister snub her to such an extent that she runs away—to seek solace with a servant. And eventually she returns home to be upbraided by her mother for her inability to play at "catching and holding a husband."

The character extracts a deal of sympathy from the spectator, although one must condemn the youth and the two mothers—even though they are products of their environment. A melodramatic counterplot is subordinated to the main action and it shows the rich mother attempting to disillusion her son by planting the bride as a thief. Mr. Goodman has not introduced any far-fetched hokum. There is no stressing of dramatic incident—no piling on of such elements as pathos and sentiment. These have their places in emphasizing a human touch and no more. The story concludes with a happy ending which is best considering the unpleasant experiences of the heroine. A divorce is to be arranged so that she may find romantic expression with a rich humanitarian. The continuity of scenes is well taken care of, the action building easily and spontaneously. Alma Rubens gives a sympathetic portrayal of the distressed bride—one marked for its depth of feeling and understanding. The others are competent. The picture doesn't conquer for its fireworks, but for its human quality.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Alma Rubens, the beautiful screen favorite, who scored such a decided hit in "Humoresque," is the star of "Thoughtless Women," a picture which was written, directed and produced by Daniel Carson Goodman. It is a sympathetic role she has here—the role of a daughter who is bartered off to the highest bidder. Mr. Goodman has taken a page from life. He causes Annie Marnet to take up residence in a rich home by her mother, whose vain desires and ambitions are to see her daughter's name shining in society. Naturally the innocent girl rebels against this mercenary treatment by her mother. She is driven almost to self-destruction by her unhappy environment, but is brought back to happiness through love.

The picture develops through scenes of good incident which are remarkably life-like. And scars to a climax which is intensity itself. The conclusion restores a happy ending, but an ending which is genuinely true. There is a good moral taught in the offering. Miss Rubens plays her role with keen understanding and sympathy while her support, which includes such well known players as Lumsden Hare and Robert Williams, is entirely adequate. Mr. Goodman's production is as praiseworthy as his story. "Thoughtless Women" will be the feature attraction at the ———— next ————.

PROGRAM READER

"Thoughtless Women" is the name of the picture which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. This offering written and directed by Daniel Carson Goodman, is like a page from life since it shows the activities of a mother, whose vanity and hypocrisy incur unbearable hardships on her daughter. It is a picture which will make people think since it is true to life. The story is told in scenes of compact action which scores because of its dramatic quality. Alma Rubens is the star of "Thoughtless Women" and she gives another demonstration of her emotional capabilities. Be sure to see this soul-stirring picture.

SUGGESTIONS

Here you have a combination of names which should mean much to you in the exploitation of this picture. Daniel Carson Goodman, the author, will be remembered by the steady picturegoer as the man who wrote several Biographs some years ago. His "Battle of the Sexes" should be remembered. Lately he has written "The Wonder Man," the Georges Carpentier picture. So play him up big. Tell that he is the author of a best seller, "Hagar Revelly." Emphasize that he wrote and directed "Thoughtless Women," surely some accomplishment for one man. Bill the picture as a remarkably human document. Bring out that it offers the utmost in the elements of appeal and sentiment. Play up the star's name. She is beautiful and be sure to present stills of her in newspaper copy and throughout your lobby. Link up with the women's clubs and have them discuss the theme in their meetings.

CATCH LINES

"Did not break any records here, but it brought out the S. R. O. sign at each night performance. The picture appealed largely to the women. It was considered a success and booked for a second week." Certainly a great picture and booked for a second week." "Certainly a great picture and it took well here. Crowds jammed the theatre at each performance." "Very interesting picture, which seemed to please my audience." "A great picture and drew like house afire." "Now here is a picture. Typical De Mille cast, direction, and all. Not as enjoyable throughout, of course, as 'Why Change Your Wife,' but finely built for contrast of action and suspense. Big business carried over another week." "Drew very good houses to excellent business during fourth week of its run. Crowds continued." "Picture so good business grows. Held for a third week." "This picture is entertaining and sure did go over extra big. House crowded every performance." "Holding for second week in a one-week house which tells the story."

"THE TEXAN"
(Fox)

Average Entertainment in This Mix Offering

WHEN a star appears in a title role one is safe in saying that the action and incident will be cut and dried and that everything will be done to make the part emphatic. Tom Mix is offering propaganda for Texas here and the theme is based upon the specie of male which is raised in the Lone Star state. In other words he appears as a rip-snorting, "up and at 'em," hard riding, six-shooting cowboy who will show the neighbors over in New Mexico just what constitutes a regular he-man. There is no story interest other than the play for the love stakes between the hero, the villain and the tenderfoot, whose train is stalled in a cow-town and which is carrying a prepossessing Eastern girl.

The Texan has "whoop-eed" his way into the village and acquainted the natives in general and the villain in particular that he is of a superior mould. A rather humorous bit shows the evil forces attempting to eliminate him from the forthcoming rodeo show by the use of drugged liquor, but Tex happens on the scene and wins all the events. This is presenting Mix at his best for his skill in the saddle and with the lariat is given full play. Of course he makes a hit with the girl. The villain, foiled here in showing his superiority, lures the young woman into the hills, but the tenderfoot rescues her with a good display of bullets. He is locked up, but the Texan effects his escape. And the little party are riding away to safety when the villain bobs up again very much alive. He is in hot pursuit, chagrined at being foiled.

The story is obvious to the extreme and the conclusion is guessed far in advance. It must be said that there is a good twist to the romantic element. The tenderfoot, having proven his mettle wins the girl and she rides with him back East, while the Texan gallops in the general direction of his own country. He compares himself to a rabbit who jumps around with apparently no goal to achieve. Henceforth he will copy the ideas of the turtle, who is steady and sure. The picture offers a good thrill in the combat between the hero and villain in the hills. The latter is routed in single-handed fashion. Lynn Reynolds' backgrounds are picturesque and he has supplied some good incident which bolsters up a weak story. Mix and his company are first rate—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Tex Benton.....Tom Mix
Alice Marcum.....Gloria Hope
Winthrop Endicott.....Robert Walker
Jack Purdy.....Sid Jordan

By James B. Hendrix.
Scenario by Jules Furthman and Lynn Reynolds.
Directed by Lynn Reynolds.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Tom Mix is the star of the Fox picture, "The Texan," which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. Like many of its forerunners it offers the star a full measure of incidents—incidents which he has made peculiarly his own. He is a hard-riding, fearless, dextrous, six-shooting cowboy from the plains of Texas who rides over into New Mexico and proceeds to show the natives how "they do it in the Lone Star state!" A train is stalled in the town and among the travelers are Alice Marcum and Winthrop Endicott, Easterners.

Of course Mix as Tex Benton makes a decided hit with the girl much to the discomfiture of the young man. Jack Purdy, who is quite unscrupulous, plans to belittle Tex in the coming rodeo show. But Tex turns up and wins all the laurels. Purdy, meanwhile, has lured the girl away but she is rescued by Endicott. Believing that he has killed the wretch, he is locked up in jail but is eventually rescued by Tex. So Purdy and his gang start in pursuit but Benton attends to them single-handed. But the girl belongs to the East and the conclusion shows her ready to accept Endicott who has proven himself a man of courage. The picture carries any quantity of stunts and thrills and the humor is quite infectious. Lynn Reynolds' direction is first-rate in every particular.

PROGRAM READER

"Whoop—ee!" Make way for Tom Mix, who is coming to the ———— theatre next ———— in a typical comedy-melodrama of the plains, the name of which is "The Texan." He rises to remark that "all you folks who reckon to find him at his best, a whooping, gun-toting buckaroo," should not miss this picture. He sponsors the Lone Star state as a place which raises regular he-men. Tom plays a spirited cowboy who is "afeard" of nothing—who rescues damsels in distress, routs the villain and brings peace and happiness without batting an eyelid. "The Texan" has been directed by a pastmaster in Westerns—namely, Lynn Reynolds. He has incorporated good incident which is in perfect keeping with the picturesque backgrounds. You will like Mix in "The Texan."

SUGGESTIONS

Here is Tom Mix again. So get ready to exploit his name in the papers and throughout your lobby and your billboard concessions. Bring out that he appears in a typical story—one which carries a full quota of action and good incident. Play up the fact that the offering is well punctuated with humor and romance. Use stills. Play up the title and tell that the picture is a comedy-melodrama of a Texan who publicizes himself and his State. Mention should be made that the picture offers a good rodeo show with Mix doing some of his difficult stunts. Play up that it is a vital and vivid Western which is certain to be thoroughly enjoyed. Mention the director. He is a good man with a Western.

CATCH LINES

He came from the Lone Star State. And he didn't care who knew it. When he left New Mexico, the natives breathed more easily. See Tom Mix in "The Texan."

The hard-riding, six-shooting Tom Mix, who is in a class by himself in the stories which have made him famous, will come to the ———— next ———— in "The Texan," a picture of the Southwest. A picture of action and humor.

"HER UNWILLING HUSBAND"
(Hampton—Pathe)

Good Production Given Average Story

JESSE D. HAMPTON has given Blanche Sweet a splendid production in this feature. He has surrounded her with a good cast in Edwin Stevens and Albert Roscoe, but there is one outlying fault—the story is rather weak.

Before it has reached the end of the first reel, it is evident that the picture is to be developed along the farce-comedy lines, and although there are many situations which border on the hilarious, they are offset by a rather draggy continuity and a want of action on the part of the actors.

In the first place Edwin Stevens, who is so well known on screen and stage for his characterizations, plays his role in a rather inactive manner forgetting the tempo which is so necessary in comedy roles.

In this characterization Mr. Stevens acts as a foil to the star and it relies upon his judgment as to the timing of the scenes. But he was not entirely at fault, for Miss Sweet seemed to be guilty of the same offense.

However, this might have been the fault of the director in not building for his climaxes. But regardless of all this the story contained no big moments and there is nothing in it which would send an audience into ecstacies.

The locale is laid upon an island, the theme being that of a woman who is forced to live under the same roof with two men unchaperoned because a tempest is raging without.

One of the men has been previously engaged to the young girl and is surprised at her declaration that the other man is her husband. The result is a determined endeavor on the part of the surprised one to spy on the couple until he learns the truth—that they are not husband and wife, the plot being a little trick of the heroine's to arouse his jealousy.

On account of the splendid production which the picture is given and the amusing value which it has, it should give average entertainment wherever screened.—Length, 5 reels.—Frank Leonard.

THE CAST

Mavis.....Blanche Sweet
Homer Owen.....Albert Roscoe
John Jordan.....Edwin Stevens

Story by Kenneth B. Clarke.
Directed by Paul Scardon.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Blanche Sweet in her latest Hampton-Pathe production, "'Her Unwilling Husband," will appear at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

It is a sparkling, effervescing farce comedy bubbling over with many bright situations of the semi-naughty variety.

It is a story of one woman and two men, unchaperoned, under one roof. Because the house is on an island and a terriffic storm is raging both men are forced to stay. One is a stranger to the woman—the other a cast-off fiance.

When the ex-fiance arrives the girl introduces the just arrived stranger as her husband and then the riotously amusing situations come thick and fast to the very end.

In this production Blanche Sweet appears as a roguish, devillsh young woman whose evanescent and capricious beauty tantalizes and charms, keeping an audience watching for the next flash. It is her beauty and rarely fine spirit that radiates in "Her Unwilling Husband," which is said to be the most amusing picture the star has ever had.

The picture was directed by Paul Scardon, who has given free reign to Miss Sweet's comedy and emotional talents. Mr. Scardon has selected a splendid locale for the story, his exteriors being of the rugged and picturesque while his interiors are homelike and rustic.

PROGRAM READER

Capricious are the ways of the impulse, if one may judge solely by the evidence of Blanche Sweet in "Her Unwilling Husband," the spirited, frothy, farcical and highly amusing feature produced by Jesse D. Hampton for Pathe, which will appear at this theatre on ———— of next ————.

This is said to be one of the most amusing pictures the star has ever had.

The story is sparkling, effervescent, bright and gay and is of the semi-naughty variety which is attracting so much attention from theatregoers. Paul Scardon, who directed the production has developed the action swiftly, giving Miss Sweet free reign to display her comedy and emotional talents.

It is a story of what happens to one woman and two men who, marooned under the same roof because of a terific storm, develop riotously amusing situations. One is a stranger to the woman—the other a cast-off fiance.

When the ex-fiance arrives the girl introduces the just arrived stranger as her husband and then the fun starts.

In the cast are Albert Roscoe and Edwin Stevens.

SUGGESTIONS

When you book this feature your one best bet is to play up Blanche Sweet. Mention her past pictures and the wonderful production Jesse D. Hampton has given to them.

Although this picture is not of the hilarious, it has good amusement value and for this reason should give your patrons entertainment.

Do not go strong on the story for it is rather trite and is not developed in a way that would cause comment.

Play up Edwin Stevens also for he is one of the screen's best character actors.

If you can arrange to have stills placed in the stores and hotels in your vicinity, it would give the picture prestige, for they are of the attractive variety.

CATCH LINES

U. P. TRAIL, THE (BENJ. B. HAMPTON-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST.....NOV. 20
"First-class melodramatic western with fine cast."—M. P. News.

UNTAMED, THE (FOX) TOM MIX.....SEPT. 4
"First class western melodrama with star in likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well during week, but picture replaced Saturday by Pearl White in 'The White Moll.'" "Best Mix picture to date. Orchestra accompaniment helped a lot in making it entertaining. Good box office attraction." "The picture did not bring the usual numbers to the theatre. It is regarded by many as too commonplace." "This is a good feature and we had fine business while it was showing."

VICE OF FOOLS, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....NOV. 20
"A well produced society picture weakening in the end."—M. P. News.

"Ray scores again as country yokel."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"One of the best pictures Ray has played in. This is a regular picture and is playing to big business right along." "Played it one week to big business one day and average six." "Audiences thought Charles Ray just made for this 'Rube's' part. Business only fair." "Went over big first day but average the rest of the week. Ray always in pleasing pictures." "One of Ray's best productions and its box-office value was quite up to the usual Ray standard, which is saying a good deal." "Not one of Ray's best—but it was clever and a bit different, in point of story, to his usual efforts, while giving him essentially the usual sort of role. Anyway they liked it."

VOICES (VICTOR KREMER-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST....OCT. 16
"Crude production of familiar story."—M. P. News.

WANDA'S AFFAIR (CHADWICK-STATE RIGHTS) SPECIAL CAST.....NOV. 20
"Badly blotched picture carries little interest."—M. P. News.

WANTED AT HEADQUARTERS (UNIVERSAL) EVA NOVAK.....OCT. 16
"Clever night scenes provide the interest here."—M. P. News.

WEEK-END, THE (AMERICAN-PATHE) MARGARITA FISHER...AUG. 21
"Typical Hamilton story well produced."—M. P. News.

WHAT HAPPENED TO JONES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) BRYANT WASHBURN.....AUG. 21
"Good Hookum and farce comedy."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A splendid picture. Played it two days to average business." An enjoyable farce comedy that seemed to please. Big business one day." "Rather good comedy. Can't kick about the business." "Average picture with usual audiences." "My patrons enjoyed this picture. Played it one week to average business."

WHAT WOMEN LOVE (SOL LESSER-FIRST NATIONAL) ANNETTE KELLERMAN.....AUG. 21
"Kellerman in thrilling water feats—good comedy—unusual under-sea stuff."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Annette Kellerman great favorite here. Picture drew well." "A very entertaining and interesting picture which brought more than usual business." "Interesting picture which brought good business." "From a box-office angle this is a very poor picture. Did not draw at all. Just barely enough to keep on through the week."

WHAT'S YOUR HURRY (PARAMOUNT) WALLACE REID.....AUG. 28
"Wally Reid and motor truck shine in this one."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good production to extra big and big business for two days." "The best picture Reid has turned out this year. Just packed them in. Looks like some fine advertising was slipped over in this one for a certain brand of truck. Local dealers capitalized on it by putting one of the trucks on the street with mammoth signs on it informing the public that we would show them what the brutes could do." "Up to the usual Wallace Reid standard and drew big crowds."

WHILE NEW YORK SLEEPS (FOX) SPECIAL CAST.....AUG. 7
"New York's night life graphically depicted in three separate stories."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Better than average business." "Broke house records in ten days' run. Great entertainment." "Broke all the house records at advanced prices—30, 50, 75c."

WHITE CIRCLE, THE (TOURNEUR PRODUCTION-PARAMOUNT) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 4
"A Stevenson novel, vividly portrayed by Tourneur."—M. P. News.

WHISPER MARKET, THE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH..SEPT. 4
"Despite bad cutting, this picture is thoroughly interesting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Liked by the women—plenty of styles in this production."

WHISPERING DEVILS (GARSON-EQUITY) CONWAY TEARLE-ROSEMARY THEBY.....SEPT. 4
"A strong, well-acted drama for a high class audience."—M. P. News.

WHITE RIDER, THE (FOUNDATION FILM CORP.) JOE MOORE-EILEEN SEDGWICK.....AUG. 28
"A good western with many thrills and exciting moments."—M. P. News.

WOMAN IN HIS HOUSE, THE (MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) MILDRED HARRIS CHAPLIN.....AUG. 28
"Good audience picture with great child role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture, well acted, which did big business partly aided by the presence of Mildred Harris Chaplin."

WOMAN'S BUSINESS, A (B. A. ROLFE-JANS) OLIVE TELL.....AUG. 7
"Only average interest here, despite attractive theme."—M. P. News.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL (REALART) BEBE DANIELS.....OCT. 16
"A real success from every angle."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture is very pleasing, box-office receipts about average." "A very pleasing little picture; star has made a place for herself and this picture suits her to a 'T.'." "Bebe Daniels shows that she is a real actress. She had a good production and drew well."
Consensus—"Pleasing picture, average puller."

"SHE PLAYED AND PAID"
(Joan Film Sales)

Fannie Ward's Acting the Redeeming Feature Here

THOSE exhibitors who had a clientele for Fannie Ward when she appeared with American companies will have an opportunity to please her following by presenting the star in a French picture, entitled "She Played and Paid." There will be some interest attached to the presentation if for no other reason than to discover the merits of French film production. The offering is strictly of the Continental brand and doesn't strike us as a particularly entertaining piece of work. The story itself is quite daring, naturally, and offers an idea based upon the eternal triangle as the French would interpret it. The title gives the plot away but the director has developed it so obviously that little or no suspense is gained.

It's a tale of a mistress and several lovers—one of whom is her guardian, another, a parasite, who would have her pay the highest price, and the third, a man with honorable intentions. It happens that the latter takes to excessive dissipation because his advances are objected to by the guardian. With his money gone and on the verge of suicide, the distressed woman attempts to raise funds to save him from disgrace. She has to work fast with a time limit of six o'clock. The pawnbroker turns her down since she must have her guardian's consent; the parasite will give up the vast amount on one condition. But she rebels for the moment and hastens home to obtain the sum from her guardian. The amount is staggering and arouses his suspicions. So he refuses. With the fatal hour drawing near she returns to the parasite and succumbs and wins at the same time. But in hastening to her real lover she finds that her sacrifice is in vain. He killed himself on the stroke of six and she arrived one minute too late.

There is nothing really risque about the story. Presumably it has been dressed up a bit for American consumption. A single-track story which doesn't offer any variety and practically no incident. However, the characterization extracts a little sympathy. With such little action and conflict the spectator is solely interested in the acting. Miss Ward rises to the occasion and gives a spirited performance which is more Gallic in conception than the work of the native sons. The lighting is very harsh and the other technical effects are extremely faulty. The direction lacks inspiration and looks quite amateurish throughout.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Baron Le Bourge.....M. Joffre
Baroness Le Bourge.....Fannie Ward
Robert de Chaceroy.....Jean Deaux
Jean Dupree.....M. Crone

By Henri Bernstein.
Directed by J. de Baroncelli.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"She Played and Paid" is the title of the picture which will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week. An occasion of interest to patrons will be the re-appearance of Fannie Ward after an absence of several months. During her sojourn in Paris she was induced to make a picture. And "She Played and Paid" is the result. The story concerns the eternal triangle and revolves around the misery of unrequitted love. As the ward of the Baron, the star rises to the heights of emotional talent. She loves and is loved in return by Chaceroy, who, depressed over the loss of the girl, sinks to the depths of dissipation. He squanders his money and violates the honor of his employers.

A time comes when he is forced to make good his losses. But he cannot gain the necessary funds. So the Baroness, who has been sold to the highest bidder attempts to raise the sum. Her guardian turns a deaf ear to her entreaties, which forces her to sacrifice her honor to one Dupree, who plays upon the heart-strings of women. She gets the money but is too late to save Chaceroy who has committed suicide. This is a story of good heart interest which offers a great deal of sympathy for the heroine. Miss Ward gives a compelling performance. The subject is an adaptation of the play by Henri Bernstein.

PROGRAM READER

She had to raise a vast sum of money to save the honor of her lover. When she was bartered off to the highest bidder the man who won her heart plunged into an orgy of dissipation. He dissipated his fortune and his health and squandered the money of others. Hence if he couldn't pay his honorable debts by a specified time he would commit suicide. But the young woman couldn't raise the sum. Asking her guardian for it only meant arousing his suspicions. So, desperate, she appealed to a wealthy parasite—a man who preyed upon women. And she sold herself in order to save her beloved. But was she too late? This question is answered for you in "She Played and Paid," the Fannie Ward picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ————. It is a picture which carries a deal of drama and heart interest.

SUGGESTIONS

No doubt your steady crowd remember Fannie Ward. They doubtless wonder what has happened to her—if she has retired from the screen. You can set their doubts to rest by stating that she will return in a vital drama of heart and home, "She Played and Paid." Tell that it is a French picture made while Miss Ward was touring France a few months ago. Tell that it revolves around the eternal triangle. Bring out that she has lost none of her talent which marked her career upon the American screen. Play up her name. Tell that Fannie Ward is returning to your screen. Play up the title. It can be exploited in attractive catch lines and newspaper copy.

CATCH LINES

Would she be able to cover his obligations on time? Who could she appeal to? Wouldn't any kind of appeal arouse base suspicions? See "She Played and Paid" with Fannie Ward.

See Fannie Ward, the American star, in a French picture, "She Played and Paid." A picture of the heart and home—a picture of love and passion.

"SMILING ALL THE WAY"
(D. N. Schwab—State Rights)

Butler's Third Is Well Produced and Thoroughly Interesting

THOSE who look to the State Right field for only spectacular or lurid dramas will be surprised in David Butler's "Smiling All the Way." It is a thoroughly interesting and clever little comedy-drama which will keep an audience sitting quiet and absorbed and send them away satisfied. It is not elaborate, but it is carefully and adequately produced and well directed. It does not attempt to thrill, but it tells a simple love story in a clean, entertaining way. One of its most commendable features is the avoidance of "old stuff." The hardened fan will think he is going to see a repetition of the familiar hokum, when the incident suddenly changes and ends in an unexpected but logical manner.

The locale of the story is especially good from an audience standpoint. It opens in Maine, where Butler is the star cook in a lumber camp. It shifts to New York's Greenwich Village, where the star and Alice, played by Leatrice Joy, form a partnership to run a village restaurant. These scenes are slightly exaggerated, but they are true to the popular conception of New York's so-called Bohemia. The restaurant prospers, and the girl, once a snobbish society belle, learns the lesson of cheerfully toiling for a living from the happy flapjack artist. But Hannibal (Butler) is bashful, and the girl's mother, anxious to marry her off to a wealthy suitor, kidnaps her on an outgoing yacht. Hannibal, however, gets aboard, frustrates the "heavy" and brings the girl ashore.

All this is developed with good incident, some of it not essential to the story, but well enough done to pass. It is a typical Butler picture, and if he keeps going at his present pace, a "Butler picture" may soon be as well known as a "Charles Ray picture." He makes his part unusually attractive. Playing the big, broad-shouldered, simple-minded and kind-hearted backwoodsman, bashful and backward with women, courageous and straightforward with men, he presents a personality that will win him many friends. Leatrice Joy is well cast, attractive, and pleasing in her romantic scenes, while the remainder of the cast is first class. The details of the Greenwich Village and yacht scenes are a credit to the directors. —Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

Technical Director, Danny Hall.
Art Titles, C. B. Currier.
From the story by Henry Payson Dowst.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

A dramatized Saturday Evening Post story by Henry Payson Dowst starring on the screen David Butler, will be the attraction at the — ———— theatre on ————. "Smiling All the Way" is its screen title. In the magazine story it was known as "Alice in Underland." It is a rapidly moving comedy drama that mixes plenty of humor with a little pathos and leaves a remarkably satisfactory impression. The action shifts from the Maine woods to the heart of New York's Greenwich village, and the picture ends aboard a well equipped private yacht.

Butler, who will be remembered by many as the broad-shouldered French soldier in Griffith's "Hearts of the World," plays the part of a simple cook in a lumber camp in Maine. When Fate casts him in the midst of New York's colony of artists, he continues his vocation. He becomes half owner and cook in a "Village" tearoom—"The Purple Guinea Pig." The other half owner is Leatrice Joy—a very pretty girl, as many fans will remember—and so, the inevitable happens.

"Smiling All the Way" will be shown at the ————, theatre for ———— days. Do not miss seeing David Butler. In a short time he will be one of filmdom's greatest favorites.

PROGRAM READER

"Smiling All the Way" is not only good philosophy—it is a good picture. It will be shown at the ———— theatre on ————. A straight, clean, human comedy drama, this remarkable story aims at entertainment alone, and it hits its mark. David Butler, who, although he has been playing starring parts for but a short time, has the leading role in "Smiling All the Way." He is destined to be one of the future great favorites of the screen, and he is an actor whose work you cannot afford to miss. Playing opposite him is pretty Leatrice Joy, cast in a highly attractive role.

"Smiling All the Way" was originally published in story form in "The Saturday Evening Post." Its magazine name was "Alice in Underland" and it is from the pen of Henry Payson Dowst, one of the most popular of America's magazine writers.

SUGGESTIONS

It is rather hard to judge the popularity of David Butler in the country just at present. It is certain that if you have shown "Fickle Women" or "Girls Don't Gamble," they will not have forgotten him, and it is more than an even chance that they will come to see his latest. This goes especially for the ladies. Neither is he of the "fairy" type to disgust the men. His is the personality to become a general favorite. But being a new star it would be well to emphasize the story as much as the star. Mention the fact that it is a Saturday Evening Post story and tell the author. You can get a teaser campaign out of the title. A tie-up appears possible with some restaurant or waffle shop, which makes its flapjacks in the show window. Leatrice Joy is well worth mentioning. David Butler played opposite Dorothy Gish in "Hearts of the World."

"JUST PALS"
(Fox)

Jones in New Type of Story; Good Entertainment

BUCK JONES' last three or four pictures preceding this one have been just one shoot-'em-up Western after another. He has made good in them because he rode, fought, and protected the abused lady in the case in fine fashion, and now he should do just as well in a story of a widely different type. "Just Pals" is a human, interesting and appealing story, with interpolations of good audience incidents, and flavored with a bit of romance and, in the end, with action that suggests his former pictures.

The star has new responsibilities in "Just Pals," for he is cast as the village good-for-nothing. Deprived of his guns, his bucking broncho and a villain to pommel, he is called upon to act, and he does it. Sharing his responsibility is little Duke Lee, who plays "Bill," the little ragamuffin who becomes the pal of the good-for-nothing. Together they "bum" about the little village until the pretty school teacher, with whom the star is in love, demands that "Bill" attend school. The youngster defends the good name of "Bim" (the star) with his fists. "They said you were not fit to live with pigs," he explains. "But, gosh, I said you were!"

There is a succession of good incident, some of it really human and humorous, and some it strained. The latter is the case when "Bim" is so kind-hearted that he cannot bear to kill some poultry to earn a meal. Melodrama develops when the school teacher loses the town's money entrusted to her care, and "Bim" brings it back, taking the blame for its disappearance. He is driven out of town, but returns to thwart a gang of robbers who are pillaging the express office. Again, because of his bad name, he is accused of the robbery and is about to be lynched when his little pal saves him. The story becomes just a bit complicated in the end, with the introduction of another kidnapped child and the collection of the reward by the star for his recovery.

But it is the human touches, both of comedy and pathos; the well created atmosphere of the small Montana town; the very natural dialogue; and the picturesque character of "Bim," that will win favor for this picture. It is well directed throughout. Helen Ferguson is the leading lady.—Length, 5 reels.—Matthew A. Taylor.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Buck Jones, the new and popular Fox star, will visit ———— again this week when he will appear in "Just Pals," his latest feature at the ———— theatre on ————.

"Just Pals" is an appealing and interesting story, laid in a small town that borders between the wheat and the cattle country. It is a typical American village, and the star plays "Bim," a typical American character. For Bim is the village "good-for-nothing." Work is foreign to his nature. Even to watch the pitching of hay is enough to weary him. The village laughs at him, derides him and talks about his laziness. But then Bim finds a pal. His name is Bill and his age thirteen. He came into town in a freight, with his belt drawn tight and his pockets empty. Bill and Bim were kindred spirits. So they became pals.

There is romance also in this delightful story. A pretty school teacher figures in the case. She too chides Bim for his laziness, but beneath his indolence she sees something finer and more nob e than the sleek and well groomed men of the town may ever hope to possess. It is not what a man does in his everyday life that proves his mettle; it's the way he acts in the big crisis, when it is a case of sacrifice of self to save another.

Bim and Bill and schoolmistress live happily ever after. After providing such entertainment as they do in "Just Pals," they deserve it. Pathos and humor, action and thrills—they are all there. It is a picture of American life for Americans to see.

PROGRAM READER

He was thirty and the village good-for-nothing. His pal was thirteen and had just hit town via a freight Pullman. They were kindred spirits, these two, so they just naturally bummed around together, until a pretty schoolteacher made Bill go to school, and forced Bim to buckle down to some hard work.

Buck Jones is Bim and the picture is "Just Pals," a Fox feature that will be the attraction at the ———— on ————. You all know Buck Jones, for you have seen his Western thrillers. "Just Pals," is a somewhat different type of story. It has all the thrills and plenty of action, but it has pathos and humor besides. You all like stories of plain American folk, and it is such characters who appear in "Just Pals."

"Just Pals" means just a human story, just a simple tale blending pathos with comedy—just a good hour's entertainment.

SUGGESTIONS

If you have run other Buck Jones pictures, mention them all, and then add that in "Just Pals" they will see a different type of picture. Tell them it has all the action and thrills that they will want, but at the same time is not a cut and dried

"THE BROADWAY BUBBLE"
(Vitagraph)

Corinne Griffith Does Excellent Work in Dual Role

WHILE "The Broadway Bubble" is not the greatest picture that ever reached the screen, it is a picture of unusual merit, a clearly defined story, some excellently drawn characters, and a dual role performance by the star that is going to win her a great deal of praise. Her work is excellent, in both roles—and both roles are difficult ones.

The picture is founded on a sound, and most interesting premise, and it progresses logically and smoothly, an excellent continuity adding no little to the finished picture. Adrienne Landreth finds her home insufficient to absorb her thoughts and energies—she and her husband are drifting farther and farther apart. Making no effort to bridge the gulf that separates them, Adrienne sets her heart on a stage career. Knowing that her husband will not permit her going on the stage, she persuades her twin-sister to take up the role of Mrs. Geoffrey Landreth, while she—the real Mrs. Landreth—pursues the elusive bubble of fame, knowing that, when she has made good, her husband will forgive her. The plan works out splendidly—until Geoffrey notes a change in his wife, a difference in her attitude towards him—and he complicates things by falling back in love with his wife—or the woman he thinks is his wife.

The settings are very good indeed, and the background of the few exteriors equally so. There are some scenes of Broadway so vivid and realistic that they will bring a lump into the throats of those who know Bagdad-on-the-Subway and love it.

Miss Griffith's bath is an interesting scene—and her gowns will arouse considerable comment.

Joe King, as the husband, does the best work he has been permitted to do in a long long time—and Stanley Warmerton will go down in film history as an actor who made "a famous Broadway theatrical magnate" look and act like a rational human being! Which is some achievement in these days.

The work of the star, in the dual role, as well as the camera-work at the points where the twin sisters meet, is deserving of much comment and praise. It is skillful throughout.

The whole picture is one of excellent entertainment value, and the interest is splendidly maintained.—Length, 5 reels.—Reviewed by Pearl Gaddis, Altanta, Ga.

THE CAST

Adrienne Landreth.....Corinne Griffith
Drina Lynn.....Corinne Griffith
Geoffrey Landreth.....Joseph King
Fred Corliss.....Stanley Warmerton
Higginson.....Robert Gaillard

From a story in Young's Magazine, by Leigh Gordon Giltner.
Adapted by C. Graham Baker and Harry Dittmar.
Directed by George L. Sargent.

PROGRAM READER

She was a rich and lovely young woman, but unhappy. She did not love her husband, nor did he love her—but he refused to have his name and his reputation blazoned on Broadway billboards, when she wanted to go on the stage. So Adrienne Landreth sent for her twin-sister, whose resemblance to her was startling, and the two girls arranged the plot. Drina took Adrienne's place as Mrs. Landreth, while Adrienne, as Ruth Raye, made her debut on the stage. It was a good plot, and worked well—until Adrienne's discarded husband found that he was falling in love with his wife. And, worst of all, Drina, too, realized that she was falling in love with her sister's husband. It was a Gordian knot—Adrienne in love with Corliss, her producer—and Drina was in love with Adrienne's husband. See what happened. "The Broadway Bubble," at the ———— theatre, for ———— days, beginning ————.

CATCH LINES

What happened when she fell in love with her sister's husband? Drina Lynn was a small-town girl, but the fire of New York was in her veins. Then she was offered the chance to come to New York—to pose as the wife of another woman's husband. What happened then?

"JUST PALS"

Western. You can run a teaser campaign from the title reading: "Two pals are coming to town. Ragged and weary, they are heading this way. Watch for them." Emphasize it as a simple, yet stirring tale of simple folks.

CATCH LINES

Bim and Bill were pals. Bill was thirteen, had a father in Sing Sing and ran away from home. Bim was thirty, didn't have anybody and ran away from work. But a village schoolmistress, especially if she is pretty, can do a whole lot of character changing. And a village good-for-nothing can turn out to be a good-for-something when the big climax arrives.

Buck Jones' newest and best picture. Action and thrills in a story of pathos and humor.

"It Might Happen To You"

(Artclass-S. & E. Enterprises)

A COMEDY which carries about every element in the composition of present-day slapstick is revealed in "It Might Happen to You," sponsored by S. & E. Enterprises. If you are searching for the bathing girls, you will find them in an appealing quantity; if you want slapstick you will discover it as brought out by Billy Mason; if you want a menagerie, you can locate it in this offering which contains an ensemble of cannies, a group of man-eating lions and an orchestra of monkeys. The picture is not so humorous as it is novel. The comedy is more or less strained. The players are forced to play hard and fast, or fast and loose to gather the chuckles. Still their efforts are not in vain. They manage to keep one thoroughly interested and often on the anxious seat.

The man-eaters are such realistic actors that one almost feels as if they would jump right out of the silversheet and land in the aisle. There is an idea here—a good idea. The antis and wets can use it as effective propaganda. But we have a sneaking notion that it leans to the latter element. For an indulgent father, to cure his inebriated son, tells him to drink his head off. There is a well stocked cellar and son has no idea that he is playing into papa's hands. He drinks, and drinks, and drinks, and drinks some more and finally stages a grand party—girls 'n' everything. Just at the supreme moment when the company is cutting up the biggest didoe, the servants spring the traps and the lions are loose.

The comedy relies upon the animals to score. Which it does with plenty to spare. There is a monkey orchestra which plays for the dancing guests. And the dogs are introduced when the day souse comes home. He has brought every dog within calling distance. The chief interest is in the lions—a well trained and peaceful group. Doubtless they have their eye teeth pulled or fed on raw meat before the grand entry. Anyway the actors put on the frightened glances and scamper about "with and without" with no end of suspense centering upon their welfare. But son has learned his lesson, so he tells the butler—"It Might Happen to You"—to lay off the liquor. There is a deal of repetition, and the picture could be told in three reels, but one doesn't notice the lapses when the animals are out.—Length 5 reels.—LAWRENCE REID.

"Lovely Maoriland"

(Chester—Outing—One Reel)

A VERY interesting subject showing the rugged scenery of New Zealand. The views are taken from a boat which sails up and down the lakes or rivers and penetrates to the innermost recesses of this wild country.

The reel is instructive from the fact that it brings before the eyes of an audience, a country that is less known as far as its wild and picturesque scenery is concerned, than any heretofore seen.

As the spectator sits and watches the views as they appear before his eyes, he is amazed at the boldness of the scenery, the silent fjords and the mountains clothed in snow.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Fine Feathers"—"They Forgot the Town"

(Chester—Screenic)

THOSE who are interested in bird life and those who are not should enjoy "Fine Feathers," for it shows the care that is necessary in raising quails and pheasants.

These birds are shown on the New Jersey State Farm where they are bred from "chickenhood" up to the time of departure from the place of their birth.

At this period in their lives they are put in crates and taken in automobiles to the woods where they are released and allowed to roam at will until the lucky hunter picks them off.

"They Forgot the Town," shows some weird views of the terrain in Southern Utah. The subject features the natural bridges of rock which span the country.

These bridges appear to be the relics of bygone days, some of which are large and strong enough to be in a class with the famous Brooklyn bridge.

No wonder the traveler remarked, "now that the bridges are here, all they got to do is to build the town."—FRANK LEONARD.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales," but Hornung Tells a Capital Story in Swift Action

By EPES W. SARGENT

TEASER campaigns almost always work well if there is the slightest excuse for teasing, and in titling his novel, "Dead Men Tell No Tales," E. W. Hornung might well have had the subsequent picture production in mind. Whatever line of exploitation you may elect to follow, lead off with the reverse cut teasers supplied for this production.

Start with the smallest one shown in the plan book (the second from the top, with the line in upper and lower case.) Run this all through the paper—a dozen or more. Do this for a couple of days, then use the next larger size. They are sold in a set of nine assorted sizes, but you can have new slugs made for repetition.

Use several of the smaller sizes and then go to the larger, reducing the number as the size increases. On a small newspaper you might be able to let the paper have the slugs and use to stuff odd spaces. In this way you might get more space for less money.

Let Them Wonder

Run for a week on the teasers alone and then when you start to advertise, incorporate one or more of these slugs into every advertising space. If you want a large space, take the various sizes to give a stepped arrangement across the bottom of your space, or use the four eighteen point slugs to make a bottom rule.

As soon as you start to advertise anywhere with the title linked to your house, begin to use your press stuff. You have a lot of good material in the plan book, and some of this you can land on the editor as general reading instead of as your share of the press mention.

Get Some Specials

There are some stories on pages six and seven which you should be able to land on the editor as straight reading stuff. The public likes to read about the tricks of the picture trade and the burning ship gives a good line of specials.

Sell the editor on the idea sufficiently far in advance to be able to get him the cuts. There are pictures of the burning ship in one, two and three column widths. These are made from wash drawings, because the plan book was prepared before the destruction of the ship was completed, but it will help to set off the story.

Sell him the idea well in advance, but hold back the stories until the week before release. If you are generous with extra space you may land a couple on him.

More Press Work

There should be another press story in the haunted house. This can be lifted from page three and will prove of interest to the fans. Sell these ideas as general reading and you can then have other space for the purely press stories.

There is a lot of sound publicity stuff in the plan book, written for newspaper readers and not merely to make the big boss feel good. Use as much as you can get into the papers. Take some of the best of the remainder and put in the frames with your stills.

Push It Hard

The story is above the average, both as to plot and production. You can afford to spend a little extra money in advertising. You are safe in getting a little extra enthusiastic in telling about it withou fear of a comeback. It is a sound melodrama, well cast, well staged and directed with unusual care.

It is the sort of romantic stuff that the average audience most thoroughly enjoys and it is not merely a few incidents done around a burning ship. Just as a matter of fact the story interest rises from the destruction of the vessel and is sustained almost to the last scene.

Hornung, who is the author of the Raffles stories, has preserved his suspense with all of the skill of the trained writer and the scenario was made under the supervision of George Randolph Chester, who is himself a master craftsman. The result is a story which stands up to the end and closes before a long run of falling action destroys the impression.

It Will Please

As a result you can promise much and deliver the goods, so sell it with personal enthusiasm, confident that there will be no comeback.

In your advertising give less thought to the description of the ship than to the scenes aboard her when the fire is discovered. Dwell upon this feature to get the interest. It means more than a burning ship, and the scenes have been well staged. Play up the horrors of the panic and you will do better than selling the mechanical sensation.

Window Work

Make a drive for windows. Get a few small wooden boats or beaver board models. Tack on ragged salmon colored chiffon and put a fan below the model to keep the jagged "flames" in motion. At night this will give a particularly good effect, but it will attract attention in the daytime, as well.

Distribute Displays

Get these displays well distributed and have a few stills and a lettered card in each window. You can work from this all the way up to a full set window display that will draw big crowds, according to the amount of time you are willing to give to the preparation.

By all means have a ship in the lobby. If the ceiling is sufficiently high, place the model well above the heads of the incoming patrons. Here, at any rate, you should be able to work light and get winning effects.

Street Stuff

Dress up a couple of the 24-sheets for a perambulator if you have the story two or more days. Cut out the flame parts and replace with oiled tissue paper and at night touch off small quantities of flashlight powder inside of the wagon as the truck is drawn slowly through the streets. This will give life and emphasis to the display.

Send out a man made up as Santos with a moustache and imperial. You can find the make-up in the stills. Let him stop every half block, throw up his hands and cry, "Ha! Ha! Dead Men Tell No Tales!" You can let him carry a rolled banner with the announcement, if you wish, but it will be better to let the passer-by supply the connection, as he will if you have advertised well.

Get out a card reading, "Don't tell your wife where you were last night. Dead men tell no tales." Put the house name and playing date in small type below. If you can get these into any public dance or other affair, change the text to suit. If there is a coming event beyond your playing date, print the cards "Don't tell your wife you are going to the Elks' Smoker next Friday. Dead men tell no tales." Do this and the promoters of the affair will attend to your distribution for you. Otherwise hand them out to patrons as they leave, distribute them to shops and offices, or send to the mailing list.

Hook-ups

Get your booksellers to show copies of the story in their windows, along with other Hornung books. Tie-up with cards and stills. On a slide tell where the book may be had. And always hook up the "Raffles" with the present story. More persons know "Raffles" than remember the author's name.

Hook up other stores. Let a butcher advertise "Our meats are all government inspected and certified. No ptomaines in our goods. Ask any of our customers. 'Dead Men Tell No Tales' but we don't make dead ones."

The same idea will work for grocers, bakers and soft drink places, particularly the later, with some reference to wood alcohol.

Player Angles

And play on the cast. Catherine Calvert is the star and gives a pleasant performance, but Percy Marmont, Holmes E. Herbert, George Von Seyffertitz and Walter James all do excellent work as the hero-barrister, the Squire, the Spaniard and the half-breed respectively. Play them up. They deserve mention. It is not an all-star production, but it is an excellent ensemble, better perhaps than could have been gained with stars, since the story is better proportioned.

You have something worth while selling. Sell it to your best advantage. Use plenty of lithographs and printers ink, put out several sets of stills, and it will make selling easier for plays to come.

The Posters Will Tell Your People That it's All Comedy and All Arbuckle!

Here are some of the posters issued on "The Life of The Party," "Fatty" Arbuckle's first five reel comedy—and positively the funniest five reel comedy ever made! The posters tell the story—that the picture is one grand laugh. Use lots of them and bring the people in.

THEIR child, dying. The father and mother, helpless. And then—the mother's instinct—to get him to sleep! And on her cracked old violin she played "Nelly Grey"—played it with a breaking heart.

When the women in your audience see that scene every one of them will break down and cry with the heart-broken mother!

Eight drunken men—and a woman the prize! "I'll fight you all!" he shouted. And he did!

When the men in your audience see that fight they'll shout and cheer.

EDUCATIONAL QUALITY

CAROLINA THEATRE
PINEHURST, N C

September 11th, 1920.

Mr. A. C. Bromberg,
Educational Film Exchange,
Atlanta,
Ga.

Dear Mr. Bromberg:-

If my letters concerning the Educational Comedies will be the means of boosting them to the slightest degree you are more than welcome to do anything you wish with them.

I haven't said a thing about them which they do not merit and I am mighty glad to do anything to boost them along. They deserve it.

Speaking of the Mermaid slapstick: There is slapstick and again there is slapstick. "High-brows" can enjoy slapstick as keenly as any other class when its clean, when there is a point to it and when it is not overdone and that's exactly what the Mermaid slapstick is. There's a reason for it in "A Fresh Start", there's not a vulgar minute in it and the director knew just when to quit.

So far, the Educational Comedies stand head and shoulders above every other comedy on the market and fortunate is the exhibitor who books them.

They will help to put across many programs which contain weak features.

Very truly yours,

Chas. W. Pierce

IN ONE REEL COMEDIES

WHEN Educational decided to enter the two reel comedy field we combed the market for the best of material. We gave much in time and effort to make sure that these pictures would be the best pictures that the market affords.

From the cinema places in the biggest cities down to the smaller communities like Pinehurst, N. C.—a city of less than 5,000—the verdict on Mermaids, Chesters, Christies and Torchys has been the same—"THE BEST."

Vanity and Gayety Comedies have been selected with the same care. They reach equal heights of quality. Shorter length is their only difference. Exhibitors who have room on their programs for only a single reeler will find their problems, too, solved by Educational.

DIRECTOR.....Travers Vale

AUTHORS.....Thompson Buchanan & Wm. A Brady

SCENARIO BY.....Not credited

CAMERAMAN.....Frank Kirby

AS A WHOLE..... Out and out melodrama, multitudinous situations with splendid holding power

STORY.....Swift moving action, not always coherent, but excellent material for picture of this type

DIRECTION.....Develops climaxes well, and keeps complicated plot clear throughout

PHOTOGRAPHY.....Good; some excellent outdoor shots

LIGHTINGS .....Good

CAMERA WORK .....Satisfactory

PLAYERS.....Arline Pretty, Nita Naldi, Jack Mower and Rod La Roque handle principal roles effectively

EXTERIORS.....All good, some excellent

INTERIORS.....Very good

DETAIL..... Good

CHARACTER OF STORY....Melodrama. Bank cashier convicted falsely of murder is cleared by his wife after a host of complications are overcome

LENGTH OF PRODUCTION.....About 6,500 feet

The melodrama of the stage has always been one of the most popular forms of entertainment, and this feature possesses all the elements of its stage relation, with a lot more possibilities taken advantage of. It is the sort of entertainment that appeals to a large percentage of audiences. The action moves along fast and furiously from beginning to end, furnishing plenty of thrills and an exciting atmosphere that holds close interest throughout. In fact, so much action has been crammed into the seven reels, that careful direction has been essential at all times to prevent confusion. At some moments, the continuity lapses, and there are jumps which must be filled in by the spectator, but on the whole a clear coherence has been maintained, and there is no lagging in the interest. The cast has been pretty well selected, and except for some instances of over acting, give a good performance.

The story is along familiar lines. Billy Reid is the young bank cashier secretly married to the banker's daughter. Ralph Stuyvesant, the banker's son, is enamored with Grace Andrews, whom he has brought to the city and established in a luxurious apartment. To meet the extravagant demands of the woman, Ralph forges his father's name to a check. Suspicion is thrown on Reid by Tom Burnett, a false friend of young Stuyvesant. At a ball given by the Stuyvesants, the banker is murdered by Burnett, when the former accuses him of theft. Burnett and young Stuyvesant again contrive to throw the blame on Reid, who is convicted of the murder on circumstantial evidence and sentenced to death. Through the tireless efforts of Reid's wife, with the assistance of the chief of detectives, Reid makes his escape through a ruse, and is eventually proven innocent and the real criminals brought to justice.

Action Galore and Thrills Will Please

Box Office Analysis for the Exhibitor

This is a picture as full of action as any you have played for a long time and you can make a point of appeal of each of the thrills. Let them know that it is taken from the successful stage play of the same name and play up the fact that it improves on the stage version. Nearly every audience delights in this sort of a picture at least once in a while, so you will not do wrong to advertise the real melodrama features, and promise them excitement and suspense. Make use of the title, by emphasizing the fact that the picture does indeed portray many phases of life in a manner to compel interest. Catchline might be used to advantage.

Louise Glaum
in
"LOVE"
Scenario by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE - Directed by Wesley Ruggles
Personally supervised by J. Parker Read Jr.

Love came with the light that illumined the new-born world and will remain until eternal darkness shrouds Creation.

Love is the undying flame on the altar of life.

Love's divine song has echoed through the ages and its haunting memory lingers after death.

For love countless men and women have striven and died. Its might has ruled the world and all its nations.

This is the screen foreword of J. Parker Read Jr's. picture of consuming power and appeal. Picture the story of happiness, sacrifice, sorrow and suffering, the story of triumph behind such a foreword. A story with Louise Glaum, the magnificent, in an emotional role that hits the heartstrings and tunnels right into your deepest sympathies.

Beginning December 5, national release date of "Love," a charity campaign will be in operation in every state in the union under the auspices of Louise Glaum. Your local orphanage or other charity will cooperate with you on whatever dates you play "Love" and make these Love Days, or Louise Glaum Tag Days.

You may obtain tags carrying Louise Glaum's portrait and appropriate text at Associated Producers Exchanges at cost. Club and society women, as well as the school-folk in your community, will do your work for you.

As photography it is the best, the most beautiful that moving pictures have ever shown—this picture, "The Last of the Mohicans." Maurice Tourneur never made such scenes before, and probably never will again. How he can ever beat them is something to guess about these long Winter evenings. The compositions he makes of Indians, clouds, mountains, trees, gun barrels, waterfalls, are masterpieces, and if this is not great art, then Rembrandt was a blacksmith. Tourneur can do things with sunlight that you cannot dream, and if he could paint emotion with the Hugo touch of Griffith he would be the greatest man in pictures. As it is, he is one of the mighty, and "The Last of the Mohicans" is his best.

See it at the Pantheon now. Before you know it your soul will leave your broken-backed old carcass slumped in the seat and, climbing up onto the silver sheet, will go off back into the old young days of your youth hand in hand with Uncas and Hawkeye and the snaky Magua, who would never, never bite the dust until Cooper had you up against the hind cover of the book. Not by new stunts of story-telling does Tourneur work wonders with your soul, for the story is the plain tale of the Leather Stocking classic; not by marvelous subtitles, for they are short and merely fitting, but by this thnig he has mastered, photography.

Against the dream cliffs and falling wreaths of water in Yellowstone, and again before painted curtains as in "Treasure Island," he puts his nude and gleaming savages through their paces, circling, swirling about the lovely Cora Munro, her "fair hair" sister, her hero Uncas, her canny crack shot Hawkeye, and her foul pursuer Magua.

Although there are good names in the cast, film personalities are kept out; no names are posted, no faces featured; everything subordinated to the illusion, to the come-back of your youthful thrills which Tourneur was hunting.

Magua, the fiend, is Wallace Beery; Uncas, the blameless, is Albert Roscoe; Cora is Barbara Bedford, a beauty who is new but a real actress, and Hawkeye is Harry Lorraine. They come and go, there are thrills when the hundreds of glistening braves massacre the women and children; when Chingachgook and Magua have their duel; when Uncas shoots a crippled Huron out of the tree tops; when Beery, Roscoe and Miss Bedford fight on the lip of the thousand-foot cliff. There are all the thrills you can stand, but, more than that, there is the unearthly beauty of the photography itself; an achievement that will be remembered, Mr. Tourneur!

"Poor Butterfly" Vamps Leo White

Here's a letter that just came from the ar East, from a love-torn Japanese aiden, who thinks there is none other sides Leo White. This letter only goes prove that Leo White's popularity has bounds. Scores of fan letters for Leo hite are received every day from all arts of the globe. The letter:

Sept. 30, 1920.

Dear Mr. Leo White:

May I have a little time from you for reading my letter? In Japan there are two famous heroes who are known all over the cities, and one is Mr. Charles Chaplin, other is my respectfully loving Mr. Leo White. "The Hero" is the famous picture I ever saw. Then I became your screen admirer at once, for you were hero of it.

In my heart the name of your own is heard as if it were the name of one of the Angels in Heaven.

So I love you very much . . so . . .

May I receive your kindest letter with your latest photo? I'm sure that you will write to me as soon as you receive my one.

If I had them it will be my best remembrance as long as my life pasts.

Please receive my request. I'm waiting for them with much wishes. So "goodby" to you and pray your future more and more successful.

Yours truly,
KYATARO OTA.

NATION'S DREAM" SURE "PSYCHOLOGICAL" HIT

"The Nation's Dream," the third Pinacle Comedy made by Calumet Productions, Inc., starring Leo White, is bound be a "psychological" knockout. It is a ariously funny satire on the high-presre life of today, showing how the profers and other twenty-first century wors drove a member of the "general pubarmy" off his bean, and his weird eam of an island of complete achieveent. The sole author of "The Nation's eam" is Kenneth L. Eagon, who also sisted in preparation of continuity for me and will furnish the remainder of nnacle Comedy scenarios. "The Na-n's Dream" will be released to exchange n December 1st.

HIRD COMEDY STILLS SET SOME NEW MARKS

Some of the snappiest comedy stills ever tained were taken on the third Leo hite comedy—"The Nation's Dream." hese stills were snapped on "Pep land," and sure live up to their name.

LEO WHITE ENDS WORK ON HIS THIRD "DIFFERENT" COMEDY

Leo White finished his third "distinctively different" comedy—"The Nation's Dream"—on Monday, November 8th, and immediately started to work preparing for his fourth production, which will be an extraordinarily clever satire on "small town stuff."

Upon completion of the third Pinnacle Comedy starring Leo White, these respective statements were given out:

By OLLIE MOORE, General Manager Calumet Productions—"We have absolutely solved the comedy question. This has been accomplished by a comedy star different and more versatile than any ever before seen on the screen, and with the idea predominant that each comedy must be vastly different in both complexion and action. This has been done. First, we handed out a cunningly clever satire on ultra-fashionable society, a modiste shop comedy; second, we went to the other extreme and made a jazz comedy that will make Irving Berlin shudder; now, as a third treat, we offer 'The Nation's Dream,' so utterly different from anything ever attempted that I beg to ask the exhibitors, exchange men and the general public to simply WAIT. They'll be agreeably surprised."

By LEO WHITE, Pinnacle Comedy Star—"Once I thought I knew what characterization I could do best. Now, without the slightest egotism, I can truthfully say that I believe I can do justice to any character. I have tried three since my inception as a Pinnacle Comedy star, and I like each one better. I'm going to make 'knockout' comedies a perpetuality. My next one will be even different and better than the first three. Wait!"

SCORE OF LETTERS FOR PINNACLE STARS

We are in receipt of scores of fan letters from both Neal Hart and Leo White followers. All laud the Independent's idea of new angles to all stories. Many are firm in the belief, which we most strongly share, that Neal Hart is the coming outdoor star, and that he is due to stick for a long, long time. Leo White's conception of variety in comedies also comes in for much approval.

FLOYD LOGAN AND HIS CAMERA WITH US

Floyd Logan, formerly with Constance Sullard (westerns) and L-KO (comedies) as camera man, joined Pinnacle forces Monday, November 8th, and started to work immediately putting the finishing touches on the third Leo White comedy—"The Nation's Dream." Logan will be on the job Monday, November 15th, when work on the fourth Leo White production is started.

MOORE IS DIRECTOR OF HIS OWN COMEDIES

Ollie Moore, the widely-known general manager for Calumet Productions, Inc., who are putting on Pinnacle Comedies, is now a full-fledged director. When Dr. John West left Pinnacle, Ollie Moore stepped in. Result—One real big KNOCK-OUT of a super-comedy, the sensation of the year—"The Nation's Dream." Harry Hagenah assisted Mr. Moore in directing the scream. K. L. Eagon wrote it. It will be a complete goal.

MANY COMMENTS ON "NATION'S DREAM"

Many comments were made on the Pep Island set in the third Pinnacle Comedy—"The Nation's Dream." All agreed that nothing like this picture has ever been done. There were plenty of pretty girls, lots of action and oodles of new comedy stuff

Neal Goes After Big Desert Picture

Neal Hart has left for the great American Desert to get the greatest American Desert story ever conceived jammed into five thrilling reels of motion pictures. No pains, no expense, nothing was spared by Mr. Hart in elaborateness for this picture, "DANGER VALLEY," which will be released to the exchanges and exhibitors January 1, 1921.

MAMMOTH BALLROOM SET FOR NEAL HART

The City—in all its false gaiety—was never more vividly portrayed than in Neal Hart's third big picture—"Danger Valley."

To drive home with all possible force his main contention—that the city, with its all, is like unto the desert, to those who see only by calcium, Neal Hart spared no expense in setting up the biggest, most magnificent ballroom set ever used.

Huge, fluted columns form the structure of a vast reception room—the home of one of the principal characters in the story, who brings Neal Hart East to give him details concerning a lost mine in "Danger Valley."

Between 75 and 100 extra people have been engaged for this scene alone.

TOUGH TIME GETTING DESERT LEADING LADY

C. M. Giffin, Frank Messinger and the remainder of the executive staff of Pinnacle Productions, Inc., burned the midnight oil plenty last week, trying to get a suitable leading woman for Neal Hart in his third super picture—"Danger Valley." The candidate for the leading feminine role had to withstand a siege of Death Valley—a part of the desert never invaded even by the male of the species. Finally, Miss Edyth Stayart was secured, and put under contract. She says she's not afraid of desert, or anything. Neal Hart, et al, like this, and her, too.

BLANCHE WHITE GETS FURS FROM ST. LOUIS

All the way from St. Louis—the fur market headquarters of the world—rushed an expert fur designer to give Blanche White, Pinnacle Comedy star, the tiger-skins she wore in the third Pinnacle production, "The Nation's Dream." There was no designer or fur expert on the Pacific Coast who could give Miss White just what she wanted, so an S. O. S. was hurled to St. Louis. Four days later, Miss White got the tiger-skin which is sure to create a lot of comment.

NEAL HART MAKES GOOD PROGRESS ON BIG DESERT PICTURE

Neal Hart, "America's Pal," is making good progress on his third big super-production, "DANGER VALLEY." At the close of the first week's work, Mr. Hart reiterated that his third picture would be a "movie revelation."

After spending several weeks selecting his cast, Mr. Hart spent several days on some of the opening scenes of the picture, so determined was the supreme outdoor star to get absolutely perfect camera work and acting.

Mr. Hart chose as his supporter in heavy characterization, William Quinn, who so capably acquitted himself in Mr. Hart's first two productions. Burt Wilson will act as character man. Mr. Hart, at the time this went to press, was to choose from three widely-known leading women for one to support him in "Danger Valley."

When the Hart party started for the desert in a string of sturdy automobiles, they were given a rousing send-off. Mr. Hart made it plain that the trip would be void of frills, and that men and women members of the party alike would have to make up their minds that there was nothing ahead but hard work and real acting.

Neal declares that the opening of his picture—in the East—will give the public an allegorical treat, a vivid portrayal of the contrast between the desert of plenty and the desert of want.

LEO WHITE'S $2,500 MULE IN 3D PICTURE

Jazbo, the $2,500 trained mule owned by Leo White, Pinnacle Comedy star, has an important part in "The Nation's Dream," the third Pinnacle Comedy. The mule, Mr. Jazbo, and a trainer from Mr. White's big farm near San Luis Obispo, came to Hollywood and spent ten days together making perfect the mule gag in Mr. White's third riotously funny picture. Mr. White's chief goat, "Mary Ann," also had a prominent part in the picture. The trainer took both animals back North at the conclusion of the picture. Mr. White says he wouldn't take $10,000 for the mule.

NOW LAKIN'S NOT AFRAID OF THE "WET"

Charles Lakin, the well-known "twin" in the Leo White comedies, had to go through a lot of trouble last week. In one of the tumultuous scenes on Pep Island in "The Nation's Dream"—the third big Pinnacle Comedy—Lakin had to be tossed into the Fountain of Pep, twenty feet deep, and sustain a real drenching. Charley couldn't swim, and told the world so. Director Moore, S. O. S.'d a swimming instructor and Lakin did the flop. Still, he got bruised up a bit, but nothing serious.

MANY UNITS WANT TO JOIN I. F. A.

From all parts of the country come bids from various film organizations, stars and promoters, all wishing for a berth with Independent Films Association. The Independent Films Association is not taking any units into the fold, unless they are thoroughly qualified. "Nothing but the very best," is the motto of I. F. A. Still, there will be an important announcement within a few days.

THE ONE WRONG WAY

There is just one way to AVOID a real money cleanup on SKYFIRE.

That way is NOT TO MENTION THE AURORA BOREALIS, OR NORTHERN LIGHTS!

Scientists as well as the general public have always been more or less mystified by this spectacular phenomenon of the Northern latitudes. The most intense public interest and curiosity has always surrounded its appearance, or even its reported appearance.

For ages, the aurora has been a fascinating topic for speculation among the educated, while by the illiterate it has been regarded with superstition, awe and terror as a supernatural manisfestation.

A SPECTACULAR THEME

You have in SKYFIRE a picture which has its theme and action built around the appearance of the Northern Lights and the traditions and legends concerning it which were handed down from father to son among the Chippewa Indian tribe.

You have in the picture itself a most beautiful and skillful portrayal of the aurora, as it spreads and glows and shimmers in the sky. The camera magic by which this feat was achieved and the panoplied and colorful lights of the northlands actually thrown on the motion picture screen, will stand as one of the real accomplishments in motion picture photography.

Thus you have in SKYFIRE something to captivate instantly the attention and the supreme interest of every man, woman and child in your locality.

PRESS BOOKS DE LUXE

Every item of publicity and advertising in the press book is framed in such a way as to emphasize the aurora borealis and its showing in this picture. Every photograph, slide, litho, carries out the idea of the Northern Lights.

It is the one sure way to MAGNETIZE the public to your theatre.

That is why it is so much easier to tell you how to AVOID a cleanup on this picture than it is to tell you how to make one. For there are a thousand and one chances for creating public interest and curiosity on this one thing alone—the Northern Lights.

NEW EXPLOITATION ANGLES

If you have any local astronomers or scientists of note, have them interviewed on the subject of what causes the Northern Lights. Get the kids to asking their parents and teachers about the aurora borealis—what it is, when they can see it, what causes it, etc.

You will find in this press book a suggestion for a teaser campaign. There are multitudes of others that will occur to you. "You can see the Northern Lights next Wednesday night! Watch!" There's the idea to pound home—and a chance for your own cleverness to manifest itself.

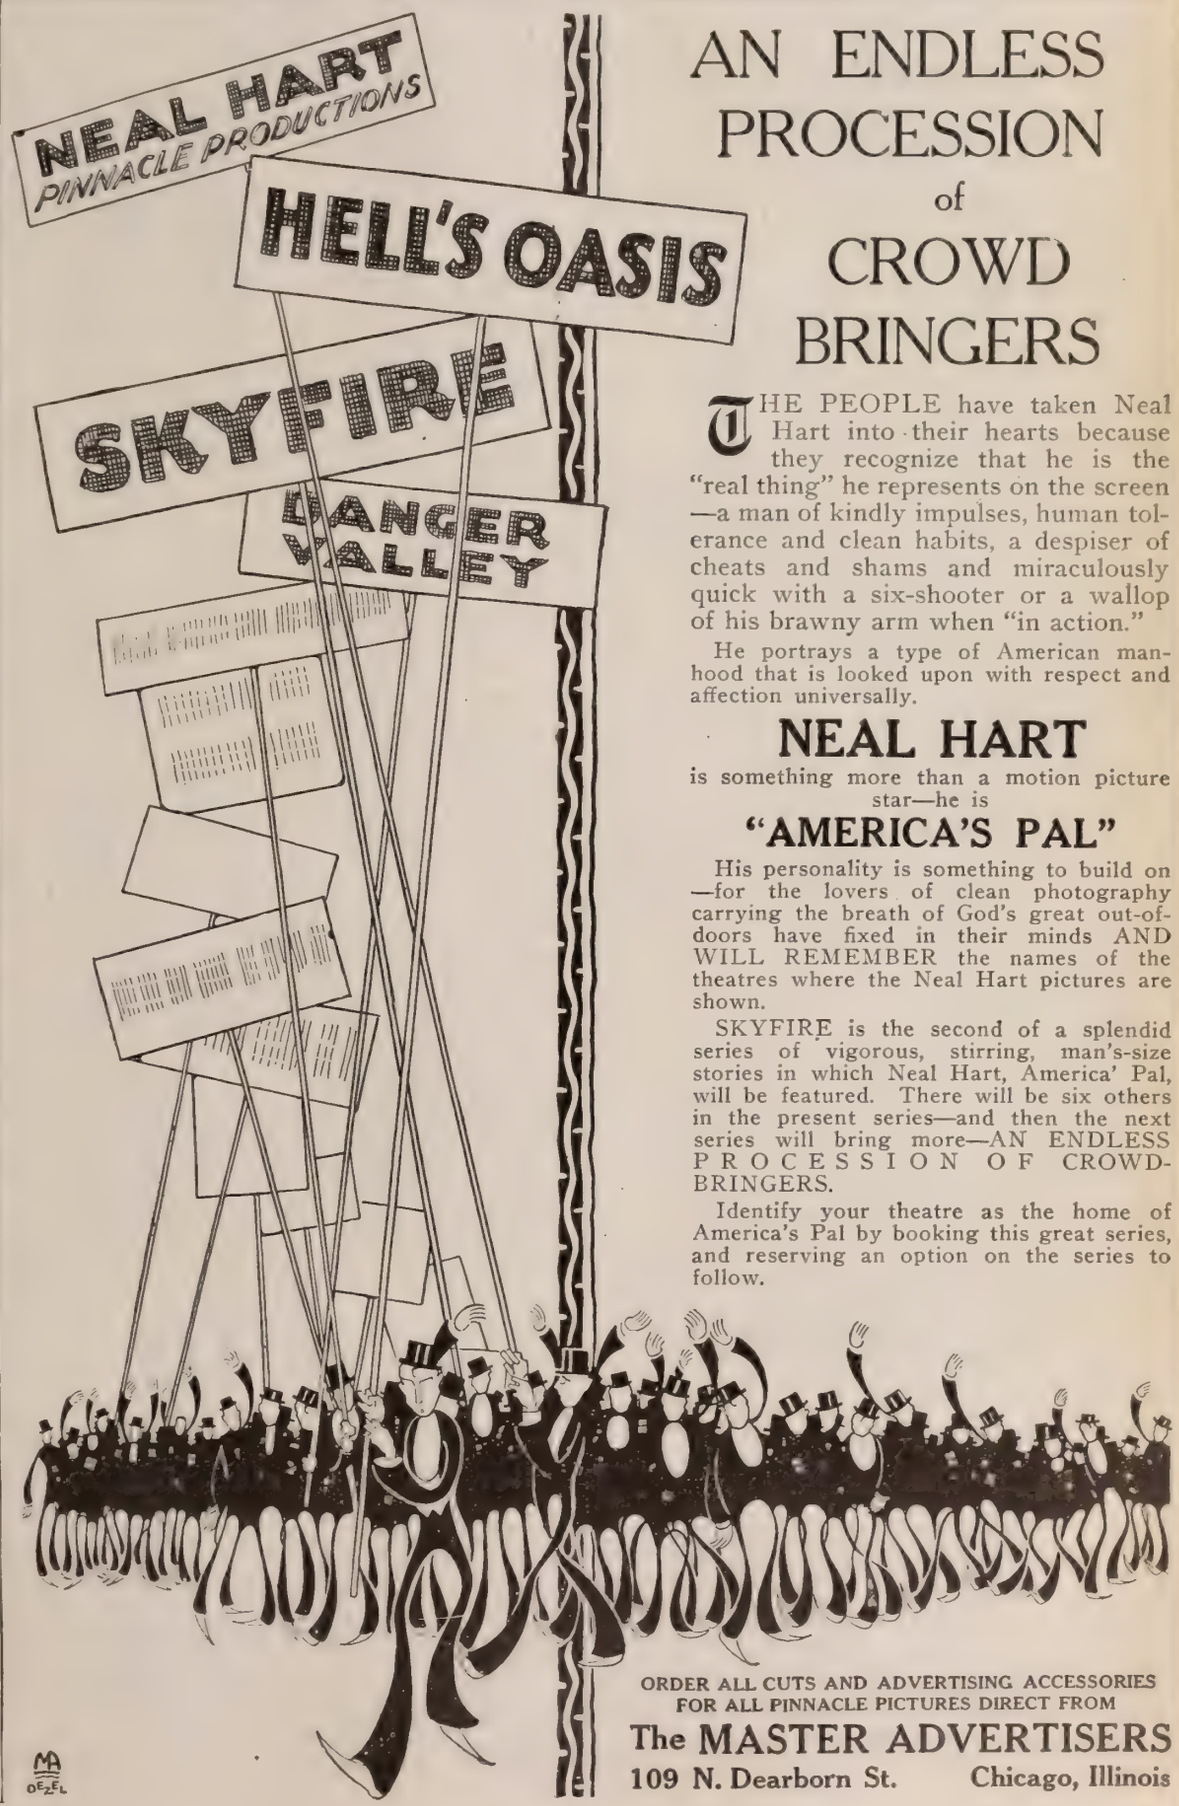
No use to detail the many ways of decorating your lobby—no use insulting your intelligence by suggesting crazy, impossible "stunts."

FLASH THE AURORA

Take the aurora borealis, spread it all over town and hook it up with the SKYFIRE picture of Neal Hart's.

If you do this, you can't keep the people away.

Frankly you can go the limit on getting 'em in to see this picture. It will prove to be entertainment of the finest kind. Neal Hart has never made a better one. Even in the smallest towns, SKYFIRE should play more than a one-day engagement, since otherwise the mouth-to-mouth advertising benefits will be foolishly thrown away and the cumulative value of all preliminary advertising will be wasted and lost.



AN ENDLESS PROCESSION of CROWD BRINGERS

THE PEOPLE have taken Neal Hart into their hearts because they recognize that he is the "real thing" he represents on the screen—a man of kindly impulses, human tolerance and clean habits, a despiser of cheats and shams and miraculously quick with a six-shooter or a wallop of his brawny arm when "in action."

He portrays a type of American manhood that is looked upon with respect and affection universally.

NEAL HART

is something more than a motion picture star—he is

"AMERICA'S PAL"

His personality is something to build on—for the lovers of clean photography carrying the breath of God's great out-of-doors have fixed in their minds AND WILL REMEMBER the names of the theatres where the Neal Hart pictures are shown.

SKYFIRE is the second of a splendid series of vigorous, stirring, man's-size stories in which Neal Hart, America' Pal, will be featured. There will be six others in the present series—and then the next series will bring more—AN ENDLESS PROCESSION OF CROWD-BRINGERS.

Identify your theatre as the home of America's Pal by booking this great series, and reserving an option on the series to follow.

THE most famous—and some say, infamous—spot in the whole world duplicated, not imitated, at Universal City, California. Duplicated as to its exteriors no less than its interiors. Duplicated to such an extent, in the views of the great Plaza, that two shots of 600 feet from right-angle positions have been made possible. Ten thousand cubic yards of earth were removed in preparing this single site, with its two circular parks, one 90 feet in diameter and the other, 112. More than 100 palms, semi-tropical plants and shrubs were placed here—and 20,000 feet of specially-grown lawn. There is not lacking one single thing to give your audiences an exact replica of the gloriously beautiful place where so many of them have been—while the drama of the picture will give them a blinding revelation of something they did not see while there—but have always suspected.

"Impossible to say enough good words for this feature. Had a number of our patrons stop and shake hands and thank us for putting on a picture like this. We had a High School girl sing "Ben Bolt" and there was not a dry eye in the house. Get the singer and you will be just as enthused as I am."—Ed. L. Wegener, Lyric Theatre, Valley Junction, Iowa.

Your Singer

ENGAGE A LOCAL SINGER TO SING "BEN BOLT" DURING THE SHOWING OF THE PICTURE. At the premiere of "Once to Every Woman" at the Hotel Astor the effect of the song in conjunction with the picture upon an audience of hardened showmen was instantaneous. It was their unanimous opinion that the singing so heightened the picture's heart appeal as to be virtually indispensable. Almost every exhibitor is using this singer idea with wonderful results, such theatres as those controlled by the Ascher Brothers in Chicago reporting remarkable success.

If impossible to secure a singer, tie up with your local Victrola shop which will gladly give you window display for a big, attractive sign and lend you a machine and the "Ben Bolt" record sung by Geraldine Farrar in exchange for the publicity and credit in your program and on your slide.

These are not harum-scarum schemes that require a big outlay of money. They are all inexpensive, proven, sure-fire crowd-bringers. Use them and play to the biggest audiences in the history of your house.

STRONG FACTS BY WIRE

After the first showing of the working print in Canada of

"THE FOREIGNER"

The following wires were received:

ERNEST SHIPMAN, New York — Winnipeg, Oct. 9th, 1920.

"Just returned from preview of 'The Foreigner.' This wonderful portrayal of the book gripped and held fast the audience from the first minute to the last. Henry MacRae has produced a marvelous work promising a truly splendid success.—Congratulations."

(Signed) RALPH CONNOR.

ERNEST SHIPMAN, New York — Calgary, Canada, Oct. 12th, 1920.

"MacRae gave us a private viewing of 'The Foreigner' at Allens Theatre here last night. We are unanimous in declaring it a stronger picture than our own beloved 'Back to God's Country.' We predict you will mop up with it."

(Signed) A. W. S. PARK, Managing Director,
Canadian Photoplays, Ltd., Producers of "Back to God's Country."

ERNEST SHIPMAN, New York — Winnipeg, Oct. 9th, 1920.

"Congratulations and then some. Private review of 'Foreigner' last night attended by 200 of elite of Winnipeg and leading business and financial men of city tremendously enthused by strong heart appeal and world wide significance of picture. Sir James Aikens, Governor of Manitoba, Ralph Connor, Author, Premier Norris of Province, Mayor Grey, and President Carter of Board of Trade made addresses congratulating Henry MacRae, the director. Ovation lasted five minutes. Winnipeg Productions is back of Ernest Shipman for another with results such as has been accomplished."

ERNEST SHIPMAN, New York City. Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 9, 1920.

Executive Offices of Trans-Canada Theatres, Ltd.
His Majesty's Theatre Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

My dear Shipman: November 17, 1920.

The opportunity is now right to put through these Connor Features over our circuit on the same percentage basis as road attractions. I think a tremendous amount of money can be made. We speak for the Walker theatre, Winnipeg, and all leading theatres in every city and town in Canada. You may count upon us for hearty cooperation.

(Signed) GEO. F. DRISCOLL,
Vice-Pres. and assistant to the President.

Note—Duplications of these offers—both on "flat rentals," and "percentages"—from nearly every important Canadian city, indicates that far more than the negative cost ($153,000.00) will be realized from Canadian Territory alone.

ERNEST SHIPMAN, Mgr.

Following are extracts from a few of the many letters received by Ernest Shipman

Office of GEORGE H. DORAN CO., Publishers

"Speaking from a foreign standpoint the Ralph Connor stories will command high prices. In days when American authors wrote extravagantly of the wild and wooly west, Rev. Dr. Gordon was taken seriously. His fiction is looked upon as fact. Cinema fans are waiting for these productions."

"Brother Ern:—Don't you worry about the Connor stories in my territory (The Far East). You will get record returns whether it be on percentage basis or flat rentals."
(Signed) FREDERIC SHIPMAN.

Office of AUSTRALASIAN FILM CO.

"I want to assure you of strong Australasian support as Ralph Connor is a household word in our country—in fact his books are generally found alongside the family Bible in most Australian homes."
(Signed) MILLARD JOHNSON.

Office of GROSSET & DUNLAP, Publishers
Broadway and 26th St., New York City.
"Considering the number of years the various producers have tried to get hold of the Ralph Connor stories, it is certainly a feather in your cap. The chances for exploitation are unlimited. Mr. Connor has perhaps as large a following and is as well known among the reading public as any author whose books are on the market today."
(Signed) S. A. JENKINS.

WHAT A WELL KNOWN EXCHANGE MGR. Says.
"There never were any better out-door stories written than some of those from the pen of Ralph Connor. There is no mush about them. They are full of good he-man stuff."

Biltmore, Friday, Dec. 3rd

By Permission

The following extract from the invitation to their guests is herewith produced:

"Immediately following the Dinner will be presented a screen drama entitled, 'The Foreigner,' dramatized by Faith Green, from Ralph Connor's book of the same name, under the supervision of Ernest Shipman.

The Club is enabled to present this picture, the first all-Canadian made drama in the history of the cinema, through the courtesy of Winnipeg Productions, Ltd. The story vividly depicts the struggles of the 'stranger within our gates' and illustrates the great opportunity for the alien in this land of freedom. It drives home the thought that directly or by heredity we are all foreigners and have rubbed shoulders with millionaires, captains of industry and men in high places who reached this country by steerage with their sole possessions in an old-fashioned leather-bound trunk, a bundle or a shawl-wrap."

The Dominating Poster

In the steel industry one company far and away predominates over its competitors. The same holds true for oil, and wool, and lumber. In fact all of the conditions surrounding modern industry inevitably tend to produce one company so far superior in its organization to the organization of its competitors that, without the slightest shadow of exaggeration it can be called the greatest in its particular field. In the production of motion picture posters the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. occupies that leading position. It was the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. that first fully realized the importance of ticket selling posters to the exhibitor. It was the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. that first realized the necessity of having an executive head absolutely familiar with every condition surrounding motion picture advertising. The same far-sighted policy led to the selection of the one man recognized as the supreme authority on poster production in America, to supervise the plant and its organization. The results of that policy have been justified by every passing year, each one of which has witnessed a steady growth and development in the RITCHEY personnel. In the RITCHEY poster these results are plainly mirrored. In box-offices throughout the country they are tested and proven daily. Because of the wisdom of its policy, because of the supremacy of its leadership, and because of the entire perfection of its organization the RITCHEY poster towers dominatingly over every other poster produced in America.

VOL. XXII DECEMBER 4, 1920 No. XXIV

Time to Stand Firm

THE announcement by Edward Earl, president of the Nicholas Power Company, that the present list prices of Power projectors will not be reduced is of general interest and significance to the trade.

Mr. Earl says: "There is scant possibility that a marked reduction will ever take place."

His reasons are two-fold; first that list prices were never advanced fast enough to meet the rapidly rising war time costs and secondly that improvement in product justifies the present advanced prices.

This statement is of particular moment because it applies equally well to films; and as such it seems to underly our entire industrial situation, as it exists in this present period of general readjustment.

Negative production cost advanced during the war period just as did all manufacturing cost. But that is not so important as the fact that negative quality also advanced to a very marked degree.

We do not want this quality reduced. In other words, we need this year the best possible pictures that can be made. And any serious tampering with prices, either theatre admissions or film rentals or both is bound to have an effect upon the cost and therefore the quality of negative production.

We are aware that production waste exists. We do not for a moment justify it. We have recently said that any director today who is "blowing" money is putting a keg of dynamite under his employers' and his own fortunes.

But we do not want a reduction in picture quality —at any cost.

Again, we are not justifying high rentals. But they are not all too high. It is their inequality only that is at fault. Some are too high; some are too low. And the exhibitor who pays too much will find his worst enemy is the exhibitor who pays too little—because the latter has the power to force prices down, and is too greedy and shortsighted to care about production.

The main trouble with the production market always and even today, is too much mere footage. It doesn't pay to make mediocre photoplays—that's all. There's no place for them. And if we are to sacrifice quality in order to lower production cost and still uphold releases, we'll undo all the artistic and economic progress of the past two or more years.

We want today fewer pictures, better pictures and longer runs—just as much as ever and more than ever.

This means sustained prices all along the line. There's no way out of it.

And this means: extra effort, cooperation, above all courage backed by good sense and the knowledge that, in this period of readjustment, we are exceedingly fortunate to be engaged in the one business which will be so little affected by any curtailment in buying upon the part of the public.

Coordinated Individuality

THE recent meeting, in St. Louis, of the Federated Film Exchanges brings to point the old and important question of the form of independent distribution—State Rights.

For years this market has, as a whole, had an up and down strength—now coming strongly into prominence and again seeming almost to disappear.

The main trouble seemed to be lack of cohesion; a large number of local buying units existed successfully right along but their buying power, their bid for product, was constantly dissipated by their lack of united power and effort.

Last spring a movement began to bring about consolidation and it now exists in several instances. It is a healthful development and it promises much.

The motion picture industry needs independent distribution—needs it from every angle of prosperous and sound growth; and this particular form of independent distribution is needed.

The State Rights Exchange is directed by its owner. With his own fortunes at stake, he is naturally a careful buyer and an earnest seller of his goods. By earnest seller we mean that he is not merely bent upon selling his customer, the exhibitor, but in helping the exhibitor sell his public. His customer's prosperity, he knows, is his own.

We have every faith in the state rights market under its present phase of consolidated exchanges. It is facing, however, two serious problems.

It needs, first, to impress the producer. It must evidence buying resources if it is to encourage and secure the product it needs, which is, of course, the best product. It must be big.

And just as importantly the exhibitor must be impressed. The exhibitors' chief problem is still the obvious one; he must have an adequate supply of good pictures. He is always afraid he won't. He will naturally lean toward those sources from which he knows his wants are sure to come. It is necessary to tell him, definitely and continuously, about forthcoming product, its volume and kind.

With this important step of cohesion accomplished we may look to see the State Rights Market, potentially a strong one, take its rightful place in the sun and be a factor in keeping the whole market open—and therefore healthful.

Around the Clock with Wm. A. Johnston

Chicago. Same old town. Conventions, crowded hotel lobbies, bustle, excitement, fast taxis. Congress Hotel: Saw Robert Lieber, J. S. Williams, Sam Katz, A. H. Blank, M. L. Finkelstein, W. R. Rothacker, Ralph Proctor, Harry Garson, Sol Lesser, George Beban, Cathrine Curtis, Al Lichtman, Frank Newman of Kansas City, B. L. Clements now in the oil business, Harry Crandall, Herbert Allen of Toronto, Harry Sherman, A. H. Fischer of New Rochelle, Harry Reichenbach, Col. Fred Levy, Lieut. Jim Anderson, Harry Nolan, Billy Bestar.

George Beban. Claims his rendition of "The Sign of the Rose" brought tears to the eyes of Harry Schwalbe and Von Herberg. We believe him but the trade at large will be highly skeptical.

S. S. Hutchinson. Back from Europe. Buying new books, additional studio site in Los Angeles and getting ready generally for new production. Proud of the fact that the American Film Company owns outright all its plants—studios in Los Angeles, laboratories and offices in Chicago, ditto in London, where a large printing and developing business is done. Reports good year for his pictures and expects a still better one.

J. L. Friedman. Sturdy pillar of State Right market. Believes in independent distribution. Sees big future for Federated Film Exchanges—and makes you see it, too. Forceful, quick thinker, hard worker, lots of sound sense.

Andrew Karzas. Keen, active showman. Sees ahead. Just invested nearly $150,000 in land adjoining his well-known Woodland theatre—according to Chicago papers. Asked if it meant new building immediately, smiled, and said: "Where there's smoke, there's fire." Evidently doesn't foresee any falling off in picture theatre attendance. Ascher Brothers have a 3,500 seat house just around the corner.

George Kleine. Notes that distributors, for the year ending June 30, 1920, took in about $86,000,000. (According to Government tax report.) Figures that raw stock, negative and positive, cost $20,000,000. Printing and developing cost $5,000,000. Figures complete selling and distributing cost at $30,000,000 (basis of 35 per cent). Wants to know where the producer gets off? Says trouble is too much mere footage production.

Eddy Eckles. Lots of enterprise plus picture experience and advertising ability. Ought to send him along far. Believe it will. Likeable and on the level. Ability to analyze and see things in a large way. Latest stunt sending a production outfit into wildest country on globe. Big exploitation possibilities.

Chicago Theatres. Doing biggest business right now. Reports of S. R. O. everywhere. If Chicago is criterion—and why not?—the exhibitor business this winter ought to break records. Anyway the Chicago situation makes even a mild pessimist ridiculous.

W. D. Russell. Like him. Experienced theatrical man—formerly managed tours of Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, et al. Brings to picture business lots of keen and practical insight into amusement going public. Also prominent in and director of American Show Print Company, lithographers. He's one Russell of Russell, Griever and Russell, Capital Film Co., picture sales agents. Other Russell is his son. Good substantial partners for enterprising Si Griever. In the market for best pictures they can get.

B. A. Benson. Live wire in theatre supply business—American Supply Company. Just placed twenty Motiographs with Fitzpatrick-McElroy theatre circuit.

Harry Weiss and Fred Aiken. Formerly the Chicago managers of First National and Vitagraph, respectively. Now in their own Superior Features—State Rights. Two top-notch film men and good fellows. Well-liked and highly respected. Natural they should get together; certain they will do well. Big business already. Fred Aiken goes 'way back to early film days. Sold his Chicago exchange to G. F. Co. in 1907.

Harry Rice. One of the best advertising men in the field. Just back from his first vacation down on the farm in Indiana. Good newspaper man, too. Best man we know of in giving newspapers just the kind of picture stuff they want. Gave us good advertising epigram which we pass along to the many who need its philosphy: "Put effective advertising in an effective medium." That's all; but one could write a chapter on its whys and wherefores and every good advertising man knows so.

A. L. Abrams. Vice President American Photo Player Company, also of Robert-Morton Company, now launching his new synchronized music for the picture. Fine idea. Deserves not merely its own success but thanks of industry for elevating music in picture theatres.

Harry Sherman. Salesman par excellence. Always smiling. Infectious optimism and enterprise. Good film man. Sees largely and clearly. Says "Sherman is right" and seems to be proving it. Out on a whirlwind trip closing final territories on his cooperative plan. Believes that producer, distributor and exhibitor should each work independently of each other, not merely because of sound economics but because success in each field demands concentrated effort.

H. A. Kyler. Of Denver. President and General Manager of Supreme Photoplays Company. Had the courage to start an exchange in the lean Rocky Mountain territory and has now stretched it to the Coast—eleven states in all. Handles a lot of product.

W. R. Rothacker. Off to Los Angeles. Busiest man is this busiest business. Devoted patron of Twentieth Century and California Limited. Got along better in Europe because they have passenger flying machines. Announces in British papers that plans for his London laboratories are under way. Promises more news shortly from Coast.

St. Louis. The new Missouri and Del Monte theatres humming along with crowded houses. Met all the Federated Film Exchange group. Earnest, hard-working crowd. No time for Convention antics. Walter Greene in attendance. Silent as ever. Abe Warner, talking production ideas and costs. Some good substantial people and sound ideas in the Federated crowd. Industry needs good independent distribution. Here's luck to them!

Preaching Optimism

Following is a quotation from the Chicago Evening Post of November 13th:

William A. Johnston, president and editor of the Motion Picture News, is spending a few days in Chicago looking over the motion-picture situation.

From his personal investigation Mr. Johnston expressed himself as very optimistic for the future of the industry. The higher admission fee to photoplay theatres is to remain, according to Mr. Johnston, because the producers are making pictures which come up to the standa.d the entrance charge demands. The next year will witness some of the finest photoplays ever produced, he believes, and it will be notable also for the appearance as exhibitors of pictures of men whose activities in the past have been devoted exclusively to the management of theatres of the spoken drama.

In a statement issued by Adolph Zukor the announcement is made that Famous Players-Lasky will produce pictures that will run for a year on Broadway. In speaking of Grauman's new Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles, the birthplace of Paramount films, Mr. Zukor stated that is only fitting that photoplays should be presented in their home-town in the most lavish manner possible. The Metropolitan when completed will seat 4,000, and all seats will be reserved.

Compromise Ends Big Strike Against Jensen-Von Herberg Interests

Old Contract to Be Carried Out Before New One Becomes Effective

AFTER nineteen weeks of disagreement, the strike called on June 30 by union musicians and operators of the Northwest against the firm of Jensen and Von Herberg, operators of twenty-seven of the biggest cinemas in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana, came by the route of compromise to final settlement.

C. S. Jensen of Portland, senior member of the firm, with a group of associates, met in Seattle, during the first week of November, a delegation of union officials. The conference lasted a full week and occupied more than eighteen hours' discussions before final agreement was made. It was two weeks later, November 20 to be exact, that conditions throughout the Jensen and Von Herberg string of houses came to actually resemble conditions of last June.

Determination to stand by musicians who refused to obey walk-out orders and returned to help theatre owners during the period of boycott caused the delay in settlement. Few of the operators stayed with the firm during the trouble, but every organist with one exception in Portland, remained loyal to their employers. In Portland, the organists returned within the first two or three days. A week or so later, leaders and many members of the orchestras, featured in two of the Portland houses, asked to come back. The organists were welcomed because of their ready offer of aid, but the orchestra players who had waited to see which way the tide was going to turn were told that until the boycott was lifted it would be impossible for them to resume their former positions.

The greatest gain made by the unions was the establishment of a six-day working-week replacing the previous seven days of consecutive playing. Instead of attempting to increase their number of musicians to meet this extra day, the firm of Jensen and Von Herberg has decided upon one day a week during which organs will furnish the sole theatre music. In several cases, this day will be Wednesday; and regardless of program, even though it be the opening day of a new feature, there will be no orchestra music. Many persons, it is believed, prefer the musical background furnished by the huge orchestral unit organs which are installed in each Jensen and Von Herberg house, rather than the many-pieced orchestras. This new plan of procedure will give opportunity for choice.

One point upon the strike settlement revolved was that the unions in every city were under contract, ranging from two months to two years, which they are said to have broken in calling the alleged "unfair" claim last June and ordering members out of Jensen and Von Herberg houses with less than 24 hours' notice. The new settlement provides that musicians and operators of each local will resume work on exactly the same basis on which they abandoned it last June until the close of their respective contracts with theatre owners.

A wire from the Coast informs of the appointment by Fred Dahnken of Frank Costello, former manager of the Tivoli Theatre of San Francisco, as general-manager of the Turner and Dahnken circuit. Mr. Costello takes the place of L. R. Crook, who resigned. Irvin E. Phelps, who was formerly assistant-manager of the Tivoli Theatre, has been appointed manager, according to the telegram.

Men of the cinema industry feel that a tremendous strike was made in the decision at the settlement conference to abandon the policy known as the "minimum orchestra plan." Motion picture theatre orchestras in the Northwest were comparatively rare until about two years ago, when union officials issued an ultimatum to the effect that large numbers of musicians were without employment; the theatres were making money; and, therefore, the unions had decided that orchestras must be installed. The ultimatum had the situation all lined up for the theatre owners, saying that a house of 1,200 seating capacity should have an orchestra of so many pieces; a "movie" of 1,000 seats should have perhaps one less musician, and so on. Following the presentation of the ultimatum a strike occurred which later resulted in a compromise, half the number of men demanded by the unions being employed and placed in two theatres instead of the five as the musicians had outlined.

Backed up by legal data which demonstrated the minimum employment forced by employees as illegal, Mr. Jensen held out for the abandonment of the principle from all future contracts made between unions and theatre owners. As far as Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana are concerned, the minimum plan is no longer a problem for the cinema man to tackle. As Mr. Cox said of prohibition, it is a dead issue.

History of the strike shows that it originated in Tacoma, where both musicians' and operators' unions demanded increases in salary. The employees concerned by these demands worked in four theatres operated by the Moore Amusement Company in which Jensen and Von Herberg own twenty-five per cent stock and the power to purchase all films and to have the houses advertised under the banner of their firm title. Therefore, the strike was called in Tacoma against the houses, the ads and displays of which carried the phrase "operated by Jensen and Von Herberg." For two weeks H. T. Moore, part owner and manager of these houses, refused to even compromise on the union demands, which he declared called for a yearly salary increase of $80,000, while the total net profit, he said, had never yet reached more than half that sum during the same period.

Unsuccessful at the end of two weeks, Tacoma union officials called on locals in cities in which were located other houses operated by Jensen and Von Herberg, with the result that twenty-four hours later the strike was on throughout the four Northwest states.

Picketing was the first move made by the unions. Jensen and Von Herberg met this move by obtaining an injunction against picketing on the ground that the strike was called in Tacoma and concerned houses in which only twenty-five per cent and not a controlling share of the stock was owned.

The unions then conducted a series of street parades with bands and banners designed to win public support to their side. In Butte and Bremerton, the efforts of the strikers proved quite successful in reducing the attendance figures. In Tacoma, halls were rented, and union sympathizers established rival cinema programs.

Salary increases won by the musicians and operators were most conspicuous in the case of the Tacoma locals. These locals must first finish their original contracts with Jensen and Von Herberg, but they have been assured of an increase of from 10 to 25 per cent of their present pay at the conclusion of this period. In twenty-one other cities, the salaries will remain practically the same.

An interesting feature of the strike was that in the very heat of hostilities, a forty-five piece orchestra was organized by non-union musicians and established in the Coliseum theatre of Seattle. One of the provisions of the settlement was that not only would Jensen and Von Herberg retain their former employes but that those men and women who worked during the strike will also be taken care of.

A contract was signed at the conference which will prevent either employers or employes from changing present conditions until the close of a two-year period.

Word also comes from Seattle in connection with the settlement of the strike in that city. The Liberty, Coliseum, Strand and Rex are operated by Jensen and Von Herberg interests in Seattle. The ending of the strike, it is declared, brings

Famous Players Declares Quarterly Dividend

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation after a meeting of the board of directors on Monday, issued this statement:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporation (parent company only and not including the earnings of wholly or partially-owned subsidiary corporations) reports net operating profits of $4,714,382.24 for the nine months ended September 25, 1920, after deducting all expenses including allowances for film exhaustion and setting up liberal reserves for contingencies. This compares with $3,427,950.94 for the first nine months of 1919, or an increase of $1,286,431.30 over the corresponding period of 1919.

"After making reserves for Federal taxes (including $107,579.09 for previous years), the net profits after taxes for the nine months were $3,417,512.54, which, after allowing for dividends on the $10,000,000.00 preferred stock for the period is at the annual rate of $17.86 on the 210,252 shares of common stock outstanding in the hands of the public.

"The earnings of subsidiary companies, not included in the above, and in which the parent company has an investment of over $10,000,000.00, are also running at a very satisfactory rate.

"At today's meeting of the board of directors the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the common stock of the company was declared payable January 3rd, 1921, to stockholders of record at the close of business December 15th, 1920."

No Depression in Business of Cleveland Theatres

The motion picture theatres of Cleveland have not felt any effects of the financial depression as yet. The houses are filled, both downtown and neighborhood houses. As Paul Gusdanovic, one of the leading exhibitors of the city, said recently, "The motion picture theatres are the last to feel a financial depression, and the last to pick up again after the depression has struck 'em. Admission prices are holding their own, too."

However, the word has been passed along that the C. H. Miles Royal theatre in Akron is closed. The last performance was given on Saturday. E. H. Klink, who operates the Hippodrome in Toledo, is also closed. But, so far as is known, these are the only two houses in the territory which have felt any direct effect of the tightening money market.

Griffith and His Star at "Love Flower" Opening

"The Love Flower," the latest Griffith production to be released by United Artists, was given a send-off in Boston this week at the opening performance of which David W. Griffith, the producer of the picture, and Miss Carroll Dempster, the star in the production, made short speeches.

Saenger and First Nat'l Entertain Harding

The Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans added another plume to its bonnet recently when it was selected to arrange a program of motion pictures for the entertainment of President-elect Harding and his party during his trip to Panama aboard the United Fruit boat Parismina.

A. Harrison, of the Harcol Film Company, New Orleans, arranged with the United Fruit Company to have a projector and an experienced operator on the Harding boat when it left New Orleans, November 18th. E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Company, provided a selection of the newest releases which happened to be in the vaults of Jimmy Briant's First National exchange.

The feature pictures selected by Mr. Richards for the trip include Charles Ray in "45 Minutes from Broadway" and in "Peaceful Valley," Norma Talmadge in "The Branded Woman," Constance Talmadge in "Dangerous Business," Mildred Harris in "Old Dad," Lionel Barrymore in "The Master Mind" and the James Oliver Curwood special, "Nomads of the North."

The projector used was a DeVry, and Mr. McAuley, of the Harcol Company, was the operator.

Peacock Productions Seeking New Features

M. R. Fink, special representative for Peacock Productions, Inc., distributing in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and Southern Illinois, is in Los Angeles lining up new features. He is reported to have opened headquarters in the Hotel Alexandria and ready to do business.

Nat'l Ass'n to Fight Proposed Tax Increase

A complete program of the legislative work for the year was outlined at a meeting of the Legislative Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry that was held at the Association rooms on Tuesday, November 16. Chairman Charles C. Pettijohn appointed a committee, consisting of Paul Gulick, Chairman, Gabriel L. Hess and William Wright to take action on the proposed increase of the rental tax from five to ten per cent. The question of Sunday opening was considered and it was agreed that a nation-wide campaign should be inaugurated. It was also decided to cooperate with the exhibitors in the various campaigns for Sunday opening.

Arthur James, editor-in-chief of the Moving Picture World, was nominated as a director of the general division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry at a meeting of this division which was held on November 12th. Mr. James was elected to the vacancy caused by the resignation of George Blaisdell.

Thomas H. Butler, manager of the Film Exchange Building Committee, and Jack S. Connolly, the Washington representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, will represent the National Association at a hearing before the District of Columbia Committee in Washington on Monday morning to amend the building regulations of the city. The proposed regulations, which, if adopted, will go into effect on July 1, 1921, are along the lines recommended by the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Broadwell Gives Warning on Nick Carter Series

Following alleged stories to the effect that the Mastercraft Photoplay Corporation of Filmland City, Medford, Mass., were producing a Nick Carter series of pictures, Robert B. Broadwell, president of the Broadwell Productions, Inc., addresses the trade on this subject as follows:

"I hereby notify all trade papers and others to beware of such misleading statements, for the Broadwell Productions, Inc., a regularly chartered Massachusetts Corporation of which I am the president and director-general, owns and controls the sole world's motion picture production rights to the Nick Carter series of films; I have been producing them since June, 1920; and they are being distributed through the Pioneer Film Corporation of New York City."

Frisco Theatre Is Sold

Dan Markowitz and A. H. Jackson, of Crescent Theatre Company, operating the Verdi theatre in San Francisco, have bought the Rialto. The details of the sale are unknown. Manager Smith and Assistant Manager John Mann have resigned.

Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance Hold Convention at Peoria

November 18 Meeting One of the Most Business-Like on Record

MEMBERS of the Illinois Exhibitors' Alliance mobilized at the Jefferson Hotel, Peoria, on November 18th and held a one-day convention which will go down in the annals of the organization as one of the most business-like and well-handled meetings yet recorded. President Hopp encouraged a full and free discussion of the various matters brought before the convention, and the large number who took the floor and gave their views, showed plainly the interest in the alliance and its work.

The application for membership of two exhibitors who are also exchangemen, brought out considerable difference of opinion, although it was finally decided to allow them both to become members, it being the majority opinion that the alliance was now so strong that it need not fear the domination of producer exhibitors or distributor exhibitors. The resolution committee, however, was instructed to take action towards amending the by-laws of the association to protect it against undue activity on the part of these members.

A resolution was passed protesting the barring of critics from pre-release showings and preventing early reviews reaching country exhibitors. The exhibitors also went on record as opposed to an ordinance which, it is said, will be introduced in the Chicago council requiring that no theatre seat shall be installed within twenty-five feet of the screen on the ground that viewing a motion picture at a close range is detrimental to the eyesight. In a resolution which will be sent to every member of the council, it is declared that after thorough investigation of this question by prominent oculists, such claims have been directly refuted by them. It was also pointed out in the discussion of this proposed ordinance that it would practically put many of the smaller theatres of Chicago out of business.

President Hopp made a statement on the music tax situation, in which he declared that the only hope to escape it was by an act of congress amending the copyright law, as court fights have uniformly gone against exhibitors, which shows that the music publishers can enforce the tax. The sentiment of the meeting was to do everything possible to back up the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in their efforts to have congress take up the question and bring relief to the theatre men.

During the discussion of grievances, Secretary Burford told of any adjustments made between exhibitors and exchangemen by the executive committee of the alliance and his reports were listened to with great interest, as they showed the practical and immediate value of the organization to exhibitors living outside of Chicago particularly. The fact that such matters can be handled satisfactorily without the necessity of coming to Chicago, is being particularly appreciated by the small-town theatre owners.

The recent publication of a story to the effect that William A. Brady, Jr., son of the well-known theatrical producer, had married a Miss Percy brings from William A. Brady, Sr., a complete denial of the story. In a letter just received by William A. Johnston, editor of the NEWS, Mr. Brady states:

"There is no truth in the statement. He does not even know the young lady, and I should be thankful to you if you will deny the report."

Reports of various officers show that the association is making satisfactory growth and that the alliance is being developed along the lines of strength and stability.

One of the pleasantest features of the convention was the big get-together dinner on Thursday night, at which not only the members of the alliance were present, but which also included a large number of visiting exchangemen and members of the press. The opportunity to get better acquainted was appreciated, and the exchangemen indicated in their talks that it was their desire to get closer to the exhibitors and see that they got fair treatment.

Through the courtesy of Dee Robinson, a Jackie band from the Great Lakes Naval Station gave a concert during the dinner which was loudly applauded. The real hit of the concert, however, was a cornet solo by Maurice Rubens of Joliet.

The majority of those attending the convention arrived the night before the first session, and on this evening Manager Lucas, of Robertson-Cole's Chicago office put on an eleven o'clock showing of "Kismet" with full orchestral accompaniment at Dee Robinson's beautiful new Madison theatre, which formed an ideal setting for the great Otis Skinner feature. The final convention event was a showing of "The Son of Tarzan" serial put on by Manager Simon of Selected Films,, Inc., on Thursday night.

The exhibitors in attendance at the convention included:

Joe E. Tabor, Majestic theatre, Belvidere; A. A. Gagnon, De Luxe theatre, Forrest; W. W. Watts, Princess theatre, Springfield; Verne R. Langdon, Hub, Chicago; Henry V. Meeteren, Rainbow theatre, Chicago; H. W. Van Atta, Princess theatre, Le Roy; Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Lyric theatre, Blue Island; Oscar Wesley, Wesley theatre, Benld; J. C. Equity Ball at Astor Is a Brilliant Success

At the Hotel Astor, on Saturday, November 20th, the Actors' Equity Ball was well under way long before midnight, and came to a close upon the approach of daylight, November 21. It will go down in the history of theatrical social functions as the most enjoyable and financial success ever given. The profession in general was represented by men and women from each and every branch of the amusement world.

Two orchestras, one at each end of the Grand Ball Room supplied the continuous music. Supper and cabaret were in order from twelve to three. Fortunate people who subscribed for boxes were able to witness perhaps the greatest show of the kind ever staged, while hundreds exerted every effort to see the performance and were unable to get near enough.

It would require unlimited space to mention even the names of well known celebrities and players present. The more accurate account could be given by selecting the few who were, for some reason, not there.

The Motion Picture Industry was well represented by directors, stars and players, as well as writers for the screen. A most brilliant party was the opinion of all.

Screen Club Holds Grand Ball at New Haven

The Arena, New Haven, Conn., was the scene of a grand ball, held under the aupices of the Screen Club, on Friday evening of last week. Over 2,000 attended the function, including many advance visitors in town for the Yale-Harvard gridiron contest on the following day. Screen stars and other celebrities in the industry attended and were enthusiastically greeted when introduced on the floor between dances by William V. Hart of New Haven. Among those who appeared and were introduced by Bill Hart was Miss Ruby DeRemer, who later led the grand march; Montagu Love, who made a speech on prohibition; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Benham, Miss Muriel Ostriche, Paul Panzer, William Morrissey, the comedian, Corinne Uzzell, Irene Tams, Dora Mills Adams and many others. Billy Quirk and Dick Travers were also on hand for the festivities. The affair was registered as one of the most successful social events of the season.

Universal Secures Outside Serials for Brazil

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has bought two outside serials for distribution in Brazil, it is announced by George F. Kann, manager of the export department. The serials are "Lightning Brice," an Arrow release, with Ann Little and Jack Hoxie, and "Vanishing Trails," a Canyon Pictures serial with Franklyn Farnum. These two serials will be used to supplement the dozen or more Universal serials now being distributed in the South American country.

"No one company can turn out enough pictures to supply a full program for the average South American theatre," explained Mr. Kann. "In a country where serials are run off in two or three nights and where the theatres show two and sometimes three feature productions a day, we are pressed to keep our regular exhibitors supplied with what they need. We find that they can take the regular Universal output and a little more besides.

"To supply this extra demand we have been compelled to go on the outside and buy independently produced pictures.

"From now on, however, Universal will endeavor to supply its Brazilian customers with other American films, both serials and features. In addition to the two serials recently purchased, I now am considering the purchase of several successful feature productions and two more serials which have won popularity in the United States.

"Eddie Polo, our principal serial star, is by far the most popular moving picture actor among the populace reached by our seven agencies in Brazil. Eileen Sedgwick and Elmo Lincoln, two of our other serial favorites, also are among the leaders in South American esteem. Reports which have reached me from our other South American fields show a similar standing for Universal pictures."

Albany Starts Movement for Sunday Shows

A move to secure Sunday motion picture shows for Albany, N. Y., has been launched during the last few days in communications to the newspapers of that city. What effect this will have in changing the attitude of the city officials, who are opposed to Sunday shows, remains to be seen. The claim is made that Troy and Schenectady, each of which has its motion picture houses open on Sunday, are large gainers each week from patronage that comes from Albany.

It is further claimed by the managers of local houses that, if they were permitted to run during the seven days each week, they would be able to offer better pictures in competition with the houses in the neighboring cities than they are now during their six-day week. Albany is a city of 113,000, a population several thousands larger than either of the two cities mentioned.

Disaster Leads to Strict Inspection of Theatres

As a result of the recent disastrou stampede of an audience in a New Yor City motion-picture theatre, causing th death of several children, the authoritie of Troy and Schenectady have ordered a investigation of all motion picture house in these cities to see that the law is en forced in every particular. Chief o Police Charles J. Goerold of Troy, actin under orders from Thomas H. McDon ough, commissioner of public safety, ha already detailed several patrolmen to vis and inspect all motion picture houses i Troy. It is said, however, that the man agers of the houses in both Troy an Schenectady have been insistent fo months past that children under sixtee should not be admitted unless accompanie by parents or guardian.

In direct contradiction to this, however or at least so far as Troy is concerned Commissioner McDonough informed th NEWS correspondent that he had man complaints on file regarding children at tending motion picture shows alone. I is understood that Albany will also cau tion the owners and proprietors of motio picture houses in this city that the law must be lived up to the letter.

to an end all claims and litigations inciden to it. It is provided that operators i Seattle, Portland and Bremerton are t have a six-hour day at $1.25 an hour an $1.50 for overtime. Musicians in thes cities are to be paid $50 per week for side men and $75 for leaders. The old or chestras are to be restored as soon as Mr Von Herberg returns from Chicago.

"I owe much to the loyal persons who knowing our cause was just, continued t give us unstinted patronage," declared Mr Jensen, following the settlement. "Th public stood by me to such an extent tha our business was not noticeably curtaile in the majority of the houses. Many men and women came down to our theatres when under normal circumstances the would have remained at home."

Only Best Pictures Can Survive the Coming Business Depression

By Hiram Abrams

EXHIBITOR demand for good pictures is going to be a great deal stronger in the next six months than it has been in the past six months.

For a long time the whole motion picture industry has been riding on a wave of constantly increasing prosperity. In the last two years particularly, there has been a great increase in attendance at motion picture houses and this growth has come about in the face of rapidly increasing admission prices.

Inflation of our currency and the widespread demand at high prices for all productions of the farm and factory have led to money spending by the great mass of people on a scale never before seen. Much of this spending has been done with little discrimination. Easy come, easy go.

Many new theatres have been built and many more are in various stages of completion. The tendency has been to increase seating capacity to a basis that would be adequate to take care of the crowds at their biggest.

So called feature productions have become much more numerous. Many exhibitors have felt that the public was spending its money so freely and with so little discrimination that it mattered comparatively little what they booked. The man with the inferior show could always count on a fair amount of business from those people who didn't care very much where they went so long as there was a show going on and a crowd to keep them company. Then, too, the man with the inferior show would get a certain amount of "overflow" business from the house of the man who was giving a better show.

Now we are in the early stages of the necessary, but to most people disagreeable, experience of deflation of currency and credit. Commodity prices are falling and with their fall lack of employment of labor has already manifested itself in certain localities.

Estimates of the extent and duration of the coming readjustment vary widely. On the one hand is the chronic optimist who persistently maintains that the effect on general business will be very slight. On the other hand is the chronic pessimist who insists that the country is directly headed for an absolute business panic. Probably, as is generally the case, the truth lies somewhere about midway between the hopes of the most optimistic and the fears of the most pessimistic, and time will prove that the readjustment will be either be a slight one nor will it yet even approach a panic.

But whatever the degree of the depression, some depression is certainly coming. With falling commodity prices and slackening demand for labor, both merchant and laborer will have less money to spend and so will all other classes of people. And whatever amount is spent for amusement will be spent with a great deal more forethought and discrimination as to probable entertainment value to be received for the expenditure.

Here we have then, a seating capacity developed on the basis of taking care of the crowds, when the crowds are at their biggest. And, against that, a diminishing of the crowds.

Undoubtedly, there will be some exhibitors who will try to meet the diminishing receipts by substituting a cheaper grade of pictures. If he has intelligent opposition he speedily gets put out of business. If he has no opposition he finds that his receipts diminish so much faster than he can possibly cut down expenses that he gives up hope of making a profit by operating on that line, and unless he is a really hopeless case he changes tactics and goes out to buy good pictures. There is not much use of thinking about this class of exhibitor right now—he has to learn by experience.

I believe that the deductions I have drawn will convince most people of their truth by their straightforward appeal to common sense judgment of probabilities. But to give additional confidence in their reliability and essential truth, it is well to list some of the clearly established facts of business experience in former periods of depression. Here are two:

Firstly: In general business it is found that the quality product—when not a mere foible of luxury—best maintains its market. This covers all lines of goods—shoes, automobiles, groceries, drygoods, etc., and secondly: in the legitimate theatre it has been found that the established and acknowledged star can still fill theatres when the mushroom stars are all put out of business by decreasing box-office receipts.

That the public is not only willing to pay real money to see really good pictures, but is even more willing, is amply demonstrated by the unprecedented success of such wonderful pictures as "Way Down East," "Over the Hill," "Pollyanna," "Humoresque," "The Mollycoddle," and "Earthbound."

The really good picture will continue to do a really good business. The really great picture will continue to do a really great business. The mediocre picture is going to "get it in the neck."

I believe that the conditions we are approaching will work out to the great benefit of the industry as a whole and to the great financial profit of the real exhibitor and the real producers.

As "Pollyanna" would undoubtedly say, "Let's be glad the business is going to find itself and be established on the firmer foundation which the survival of merit in exhibiting and in producing will ensure."

Black Vindicated in Vermont Theatre Case

Henry L. Salisbury, of Famous Players-Lasky Corp., announces that in pursuance to his promise to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, made at a recent meeting at the Hotel Astor, he has investigated thoroughly the charges and insinuations made at that meeting against Alfred S. Black in regard to his acquiring a theatre in Morrisville, Vermont, which was at that time and still is being operated under lease by Mrs. Dodge.

He states that Mr. Black should be completely vindicated in the matter and that his business dealings in the transactions were entirely honorable. "Unfortunately," states Mr. Salisbury, "there were a great many facts which were not brought out at the meeting and which would have probably changed the entire attitude of those assembled had they been brought out."

Mr. Salisbury has written the following letter to Mrs. Dodge:

"My dear Madam:

"At the hearing last September, at the Hotel Astor, certain statements were testified to in relation to the manner in which Alfred S. Black acquired the Bijou theatre property at Morrisville, Vermont. You, of course, know that I attended that meeting and said that I would investigate the matter in behalf of Mr. Zukor and if I found the facts as stated in regard to this matter to be true, I would use my best efforts to either have the theatre sold to you or your lease continued. Unfortunately, my statements relative to Mr. Black were very badly distorted by some of the trade papers.

"In fairness to all concerned, I have taken time to thoroughly and impartially investigate the facts. The result of my investigation leads me to the conclusion that the statements which were made in relation to the dealings between Mr. Black, the Emmones and your husband are not in accordance with, nor were they all, the facts as I have been able to find them. For example, the fact that Mr. Black purchased the property while your husband was alive and upon his death offered you his assistance in his letter of condolence of February 28, 1920, were unfortunately never brought out, nor was the fact that you never acknowledged his letter, and that so far as Mr. Black is concerned you had never communicated with him in any way regarding the extension of your lease or the purchase of the property. These facts if brought out, in my opinion, would have entirely changed the atmosphere at the hearing and prevented the very grave wrong done Mr. Black, who is a man of very high business principles.

"It is to be regretted that you used through publicity the wrong method in this transaction instead of communicating with Mr. Black directly regarding the continuation of your lease or the purchase of the property, particularly when the lease did not expire until January next, and particularly after Mr. Black had taken the trouble to write to you when he did and stated to you in his letter that he was ready to help you. Therefore, there is nothing further that I can conscientiously do in this matter."

Picture Theatre Fire Panic Arouses Discussion in Trade Circles

Exhibitors to Take Constructive Measures: Varied Opinions Heard

A CONSTRUCTIVE step to safeguard children in attendance on motion picture theatres, following the recent panic in New York City, was taken at a conference held Monday, November 22nd, at the Women's City Club, 22 Park avenue, New York City, between a committee of that organization and a committee representing the Federation for Child Study and a committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the State of New York.

The object of the gathering was to apply constructive thought to the question of insuring the highest degree of safety for children attending motion picture theatres.

Senator James J. Walker, speaking for the Exhibitors' committee, pointed out that the motion picture theatre owners were most anxious to insure the safety of their minor patrons. He said that as an organization they had always favored the segregation of the children under the supervision of a matron to be properly certified and licensed. He also suggested that firemen make short talks to audiences, keeping them constantly on the alert as to the proper precautions. It was also pointed out that children, although brought into the theatre by their parents or guardians, invariably rush to the front of the house and thus escape the control of their parents.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the State of New York want to minimize the possibility of a panic by insisting either on strict segregation of children under the supervision of a matron or parental control over the children while attending the performances. The representatives of the women's clubs were said to be thoroughly impressed with the sincerity and practical nature of the suggestions made by the Exhibitors' committee.

In legislation to be proposed at Albany in the coming session, the exhibitors and representatives of these women's societies will work in constructive cooperation.

The members of the Exhibitors' committee of the New York State League in attendance were: Sydney S. Cohen, John J. Wittman, S. H. Peyser, Lawrence Bolognino, Leo Brecher, S. I. Berman, John Manheimer, Rudolph Saunders, Charles L. O'Reilly and Samuel Sheer, representing each borough of the Greater City.

The claim that the Catherine street disaster has been greatly exaggerated is contained in a letter received by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS from Herbert R. Ebenstein, an insurance broker and executive secretary of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. He states that conditions are not as serious as some would like to make us believe.

"Our records as brokers," writes Mr. Ebenstein, "show a smaller number of actual personal injuries occurring in or around the premises of theatres than those resulting from the operation of a similar number of automobiles.

"Of the total number of accidents occurring in motion picture theatres, the ratio of minors to adults is as one to ten. We also represent the majority of theatres in the congested sections and it may seem improbable, but our experience would indicate that accidents are not more frequent in such houses than in the better grade theatres, where every physical precaution is taken.

"Furthermore, last April we submitted to the insurance companies a record of experiences of a number of theatres and requested that they tabulate their experience for motion picture theatres for the purpose of reducing the rate of insurance and, as a result, we were successful in securing a reduction of almost 50 per cent of the premium for liability insurance.

"The rate for liability insurance for motion picture theatres today is almost identical with that for legitimate theatres.

"I venture my observation that the motion picture theatre today is as safe an institution as any public or community shelter, and the per capita loss or injury is far less than that from many other forms of public gatherings which are not subjected to the severe and penalizing restrictions that the motion picture theatre is governed under."

From J. A. Quinn, president of the Motion Picture Theatrical Association, comes a condemnation of the city of New York for allowing the use of blind galleries in theatres. He states that the safety of theatre patrons is far better cared for in cities one tenth the size of New York. He cites Los Angeles, where, he says, if a motion picture theatre is not strictly fireproof, it would not be allowed to sell seats above the first floor.

"In New York there is another very serious condition requiring remedy," he states. "It is the custom of many theatres to permit the crowding of the foyers with standing room patrons. There are many theatres in New York into which crowds are packed on upper floors. Obviously it is but a question of time until a catastrophe more serious than has yet occurred will emphasize the folly of such practice.

"The Motion Picture Theatrical Association of the World, whose special business it is to safeguard the public interest as well as that of the motion picture industry, again, for the second time, appeals to the city authorities to take immediate action toward closing fire trap balconies and take such other steps as are necessary to the safety of motion picture patrons. The Motion Picture Theatrical Association will cooperate in every possible way."

CONFIRMING reports that he had signed Lady Diana Manners to appear in a series of photoplays, J. Stuart Blackton on his return from abroad on November 24 also gave out a statement that he had practically completed arrangements whereby Arthur Bourchier, English actor-manager, and his wife, known professionally as Miss Kyrle Bellow, will appear in Blackton made pictures.

Blackton's plans also include the establishment of extensive studios in England, in addition to continuation of his productions in this country.

World-Wide Shipment of Film by Post Sought

The transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held two conferences last week in connection with its campaign to extend the parcel-post system so as to permit the shipment of films to all parts of the world. A hearing has been asked for before the Board of Fire Underwriters of New York City.

For the past three months the Washington Bureau of the National Association has been working on this matter with the Postal authorities. During the same time Mr. Millard Johnson and Mr. W. A. Robbins, of the Australasian Film Company, have also been working on the subject.

Under the present regulations it is impossible to ship film by parcel post except to a few countries. A change in the regulations would mean a saving of more than a million dollars a year to the export companies, it is stated.

A report was received from the Washington Bureau of the National Association that the Post Office Department was perfectly willing to accept motion picture film for foreign shipment by parcel post, but that the Board of Fire Underwriters in New York had prohibited the shipment of the same. The Post Office officials declared that in their opinion the Post Office Department should be able to carry anything that is carried by freight.

In San Francisco the local fire underwriters made an investigation of the situation and offered no objection to the manner which they are now being handled from that port.

Word comes from Dayton, O., that the Miami Valley Exhibitors League has elected John Seifert, president; W. F. Kinzeller, secretary; and Paul Banker, chairman of the executive committee.

Far East Awakens to Value of the Motion Picture

AN interesting and optimistic report of film and theatre conditions in the Far East is brought back by Harold H. Horton, traveler and explorer, and maker of travel pictures, who has recently returned from a round-the-world trip. Mr. Horton is not new to globe-trotting. His recent trip follows a similar one in 1907 and it is in contrasting theatre conditions in Japan, China, French Indo-China, and the South Sea Islands of that year with those he found now existing, that he sees encouragement for those who seek the universality of the motion picture, and the spread of its use and influence.

Although the East is not producing pictures to any great extent, it is learning to appreciate them. Mr. Horton describes the development of the screen theatre as tremendous in some countries. In Banjermassin, a seaport on the south coast of Borneo, Mr. Horton found three new and well equipped theatres, which seat approximately 3,500. The top prices are equivalent to one dollar. This, however, is paid only by the white population. The remainder of the audience, while native, is of the better class, being of the seaport type. Eddie Polo and Tom Mix are popular heroes. Strange to say, Charlie Chaplin is almost unknown.

In Japan, American pictures became more popular than ever during Mr. Horton's three-year absence. Apparently the Japanese appreciate the concisely-constructed and swiftly moving drama of the American films, as compared with the monotonous and dignified pictures made by Japanese companies, who model their screen productions on Japanese plays. "It is strange," said Mr. Horton, "that the Japanese, by nature a most artistic people, have not made further progress along technical lines of picture production. A traveler need be in Japan only a short time to appreciate their artistic nature. Their photography in most lines is exquisite, and their painting just as good. Possibly the tardy development of screen technique is due to the fact that Japan desires to use products of its own manufacture only. This naturally forces upon them an inferior brand of projectors, apparatus and cameras." Mr. Horton stated that improvement is due in the near future. Already two large companies on the island are importing Japanese directors who have had experience with American producers in California.

Those who deplore censorship as it exists in America today will find some solace in the description which Mr. Horton brings back of censorship in Japan. It appears that the Japanese police department, instead of carrying nightsticks, must walk about with a pair of scissors in their hip pocket. For the shears clip mightily before a film reaches a Japan theatre. For instance, most kissing scenes must be eliminated. This is because of the different significance which a kiss has with the Orientals. Again any scene which is deemed harmful to Japanese customs is cut. A rigid censorship is maintained in order to see that national interests are furthered.

If you are seeking a man or an engagement in the music line—see the classified advertisements (Page 4336)

Mr. Horton found some theatres in the large Japanese cities which come near to equaling Broadway houses in the magnificence and comfort. Instead of a fireman, Japan places a policeman in every theatre at every performance.

China has not equaled Japan in its number of new theatres. The development belongs entirely to the seaport towns. The vast interior of the Chinese Empire is dead as far as amusements are concerned, and will be, Mr. Horton prophesied, for fifty years to come. This is because of the appalling poverty of the people. In the seaports foreigners are the chief patrons of the theatres. Such productions as "Intolerance" are now in vogue in China. Development in the method of presentation was noted in one theatre in Hong Kong, where a Filipino orchestra has been installed. In smaller theatres in Japan, China, French Indo-China and the South Sea Islands the jingling of a piano is the only accompaniment.

A mild form of censorship is in force in seaports under British protectorate. It is under the direct supervision of the Chinese police.

With the influx of Western customs and Western manners into China came a gradual change—an evolution of Old China into New China. Mr. Horton believes that the screen is largely responsible for the dissemination of Western wisdom. Formerly comradeship between the sexes was unknown. The young men and young women were isolated from each other's company. Through the screen, however, showing to Japan and China the method of social intercourse of the rest of the world, New China is slowly breaking away from traditions. While this companionship of the young men and women is not approved of by many of the older Chinese people, it is gaining adherents, and the motion picture, Mr. Horton believes, is solely responsible for it.

In French Indo-China, where Mr. Horton also visited, he found practically the same theatre conditions as in China. The theatres are found only in the large seaport cities. The films are imported chiefly from Paris and are shown with French titles. The programs are printed in French, Annamite and Cambouge. Serials are the most popular type of pictures, and Pearl White is a national idol.

Mr. Horton sees a great future for Singapore as a center of film distribution for the vast surrounding picture territory. It is geographically the center of India, Malacca, Java and Borneo. India, especially, is growing rapidly in the number of its theatres and requires pictures. Big establishments are maintained by the larger American companies in that city. The Middle East Film Co., a branch of African Films, Ltd., known as the African Film Trust, is operating extensively, with headquarters in Singapore. Small native producing companies are operating in India, Mr. Horton said, on a very small scale.

Mr. Horton stopped in England and in France on his way home to observe film conditions in those countries. He was impressed by the fact that some of London's oldest and most historic playhouses, round which traditions of the past centuries have been woven, have been converted into motion picture houses. The Place theatre, built along the style of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, will show pictures, and will endeavor to introduce American methods of presentation. The Empire theatre, of Leicester Square, for long considered an institution in London, will also house pictures.

Great strides have been made in England in producing pictures, Mr. Horton stated. A number of new companies are operating with a fair amount of capital. There is still a tendency to produce costume pictures, Mr. Horton said. France he described as still staggering from the effects of the war, and still far behind both in the production and presentation of pictures.

Music and The Picture

First Steps in Musical Understanding

BY CHARLES D. ISAACSON

DON'T BE OUT OF THE BIG MOTION PICTURE
MUSICAL CONFERENCE
New York City, January 24-25-26, 1921
Under the call of
THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS MUSIC DEPARTMENT
CHARLES D. ISAACSON,
Editor

FOR exactly half a year I have had the privilege of addressing the Motion Picture Industry through the columns of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS; since that time over a thousand members of the industry have been in personal touch with me over some specific problems of music and the picture; since then the music pages have moved from the back of the book up to the forward section, and a great many correspondents have asked for a summary of the earlier remarks.

Instead of making any formal review of the suggestions of the past, I feel that I had better reconstruct the whole foundation upon which we are building the music-picture structure. The well-informed will, of course, simply pass over this installment of the department and turn to the general remarks in the Music Forum. The beginners in the idea will find the thoughts which are expressed of elemental value.

First, why do we use music with pictures at all? Not because the theatre manager is primarily interested in art or music or the development of the United States, but because he wants to make more profits. How can music help him make more profits out of the theatre? The answer is three-fold; music can be utilized to illuminate and improve the picture with which it is played; also music can help to round out the general program; and it can draw the music-hungry public.

That's the whole story; that's all there is. As Ethel Barrymore might remark, "That's all there is; there isn't any more." Excepting, of course, that while those three facts cover everything, they must be thoroughly understood. The layman might admit that the sun is 90,000,000 miles from the earth, but if he were in a business where it was essential that he understand why that is and understand the scientific principles back of that statement, he would need to investigate the subject more thoroughly.

It is good business for the motion picture man (be he proprietor, manager or advertising representative, producer, musician, conductor, author, actor) to thoroughly understand the reasons, problems and possibilities of picture music.

It is all very well for a theatre manager to sidestep the music matter—but he is losing out to his competitor who doesn't sidestep it. It is all very well for a theatre manager to say "All right, we'll have music,—Jim, let's have music hereafter," and let it go at that, but he won't get his results unless the music is handled right (for truly I can say, better leave the music alone if you can't do it right). It is all very well for the manager to hire a musical director and leave it entirely to him. The engaged man may be good and he may be bad, but unless the Chief knows what's what, the theatre is at the mercy of the musical conductor. Of course, when the Right Man is in the job of musical director, the best way is to let him alone and give him every bit of cooperation and encouragement. But how do you know the right man is in the job? For, further, it may be added, that just because a man is a musician, that doesn't make him a picture success! And just because a man knows pictures and can fiddle a bit, that doesn't make him a picture musician.

No, my dear sir, if you are anxious to make good with your theatre, your productions, whether you be of the theatre, the film studios or the orchestra, you must understand the Psychology of the Film. Now a lot of people who think they know the Film Industry have said to me: "Isaacson, cut out that sort of talk. Psychology—pah, why they don't know what the word means. You're talking over their heads." Now, I don't believe it. While this is entirely off the subject, I think there is too much rot about the ignorance of the exhibitor. I believe and honestly could swear to this belief—that most of the exhibitors who read my columns know a confounded sight more than I ever will know of the big ideas that are worth while. I believe that when I discuss my subject I am at liberty to act as if I were talking to men and not to school children. And I am proceeding on that assumption. By all the gods and little fishes, why should I hesitate to discuss the psychology of my subject? Isn't the exhibitor dealing with schemes calculated to excite, make curious, eager and anxious to see the pictures he shows? Isn't the exhibitor dealing in psychology and methods of getting into the minds of prospective patrons with his publicity, his lobby, his billboards, etc.?

Come now, let's knock that foolish idea on the head and kill it. The exhibitor isn't a boob and he does want to be treated as if he were a thinker. At least, as far as I am concerned, that's how he's going to be treated.

So, if you please, I insist that for the good of your business, it is necessary that you understand the whole story of music and what it can do.

I said that the power of music to make patrons and profits for the theatre is three-fold.

I said that the music can be utilized to illuminate and improve the picture with which it is played.

Why? I'll give you the best proof first. It's this: Play a film without any accompaniment and then with musical accompaniment. The first is dead, tomb-like, stupid beside the other. The music breathes life into the action. It gives a voice to the spirit of the situations. Can you think of a house all silent with people who could not talk, suddenly being given a voice? Now, I am certain that some of my readers are saying: "But wouldn't the best thing be to use synchronized phonographic reproduction of the actual words that are supposed to be spoken." Personally, I do not think so. The big quality in motion pictures is that no specific words are understood. The audience deals in the film with emotions rather than words. The audience sees a feeling—sees an anger, sees a spirit of passion or love or tenderness or tragic abandon. Why rob the audience of its own imagination—which is more alive during the film presentation than during the stage action.

And here is something which has never been sufficiently understood.

I should like to make it the subject of a whole book. I had the opportunity of talking about it in Collier's Weekly and I'm talking about it again and again in lectures wherever I go. May I reproduce a few words here because they are right in point?

"The motion picture is opening minds; it is arousing imagination; it is dusting out attics of brains and breaking up old dirty furniture. It is making provincials into cosmopolitans.

"The motion picture is giving new vision. Where brains were dark and closed, the flash on the screen has brought light and understanding. People who are alone and living the same existence day after day cannot be expected to dream dreams and hold play with pretty ideals. Lethargic, slow-moving mentalities are those which are accustomed to being driven through a continuation day after day, of the same ordinary ideas. Shock the brains, inject a different idea, and something happens. The story is told of a farmer family whose life was as drab and flat as a gray desk. A terrible tragedy—their daughter robbed of her precious virtue; it was only sorrow to them; but it shocked, it reacted, it brought life into a nearly dead exis-tence.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Behold My Wife—

Fine picture but didn't open to as big business as it deserved, probably because of its proximity to holidays. (Middle West.)

Held over for a second week to splendid crowds. (Middle West.)

Excellent—100 per cent Entertainment. Has every requisite feature for the most critical movie fan. Went big all week. A great box office attraction. (West.)

Played at two theatres here and each seemed to do a big business.

LOEW'S LYCEUM
PENN and SIXTH ST.
CONTINUOUS NOON to 11 PM
All This Week Metro Pictures Corp. Presents
WANDA HAWLEY
—IN—
THE HILARIOUSLY FUNNY PHOTOPLAY HER FROM THE FRENCH FARCE "LA VEGLIONE" BELOVED VILLAIN
A YOUNG FRENCHMAN LET HIS FRIEND DO HIS COURTING FOR HIM. COME AND SEE WHAT HAPPENED. A LAUGH RIOT.
PRESENTED IN ADDITION TO HIGH-CLASS VAUDEVILLE.
Afternoons, 15c, 20c, 25c. Evenings, 25c, 35c, 45c.

All type display four inches double column for "Her Beloved Villain," used by Loew's Lyceum theatre, Pittsburgh

One theatre considered it such a success that it held it over for a second week. (East.)

Splendid production which was well liked by my patrons. Sure fire box office attraction. (West.)

The Right to Love—

Went big first week and average second week of run. Ordinary story but fine photography. (East.)

Fell down a bit on box office receipts in third week of run. Audiences satisfied. (East.)

An Old Fashioned Boy—

Should have been called the Whirling Dervish. Ray runs around and whirls like he was crazy. Only fair business. (East.)

Consider this an average picture. Business about as usual. (West.)

The Restless Sex—

Elaborate picture. Wonderful pageant and dance scenes. Marion Davies improving. Big business. (East.)

Civilian Clothes—

Entertaining picture but story could be told in two reels. Meighan always draws them in here. Good box office attraction. (East.)

Lady Rose's Daughter—

Just pulled through for a week. An average picture that shows Miss Ferguson in fairly interesting role. (East.)

Her Husband's Friend—

Fair business. Fair picture. Generally pleasing to Bennett fans. (East.)

Something to Think About—

Came here after a three-week's run at neighboring house and seems to have been played out and lost drawing power for central part of city.

This seemed to please my patrons and filled house to capacity. (West.)

Sins of Rosanne—

Pretty good business. Satisfactory to people willing to accept story as just movie. Rather good drawing qualities. Many liked it. (East.)

A Village Sleuth—

Well liked and drew much better than average. (Middle West.)

Always Audacious—

Drew large crowds and met with the favor of home-going audiences. (South.)

A good production having entertaining story. Box office receipts good. (West.)

The Cradle of Courage—

Attracted large audiences but failed to meet with the approval usually accorded the cowboy. (South.)

A Full House—

This is poor both as to story and box office receipts. Did not take at all. (West.)

The Life of the Party—

An entertaining feature and a good box office attraction. (West.)

Conrad in Quest of His Youth—

Fair picture bringing average box office receipts. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

What Women Love—

Wheeler Oakman and the form in Annette Kellerman's one-piece bathing suit only things that stand out in this picture. Did good business. (East.)

Second week to fair business. Majority of spectators men. (East.)

The Master Mind—

Business very good all week. Fair entertainment qualities. Star the real drawing card. (East.)

This picture was nothing out of the ordinary but it drew very well. (Mid. West.)

The Yellow Typhoon—

Seemed to please and brought more than usual business. (West.)

45 Minutes From Broadway—

Chas. Ray in one of his best pictures. A very good box-office attraction. (Mid. W.)

Peaceful Valley—

A pleasing feature which took well in my theatre. As to box office value it is a pretty good bet. (West.)

Curtain—

Averagely pleasing story. Poor ending. Stars work shows improvement. (Middle West.)

Go and Get It—

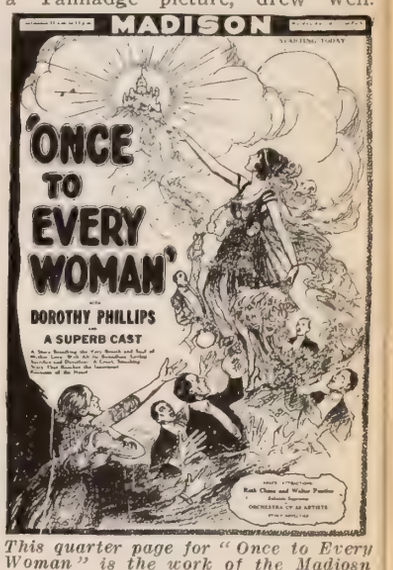
A dandy picture and it went over extra big here. Was well liked and one told another about it and consequently brought the crowds. (South.)

Twin Beds—

Excellent polite comedy. Nothing risque in it but always spicy. Splendid week's business. (Middle West.)

The Branded Woman—

The poorest story Norma has had in a long time—but, as usual with a Talmadge picture, drew well.



This quarter page for "Once to Every Woman" is the work of the Madiosn theatre, Detroit

Played to capacity for the whole week. Well satisfied. (South.)

This has a very poor entertaining value but despite this fact the picture went over very well. (West.)

GOLDWYN

Madame X—

Despite the fact that most persons who saw it seemed to like it, it didn't reach expectations. Crowds were only average all week and my report is only "fair." (East.)

Pleased immensely. Star at her best. Went big all week. (Middle West.)

Earthbound—

From an artistic angle it is wonderful and has unexcelled photography. Well directed and splendid acting. No box office value here, however, because the theme is not acceptable generally. This type of picture is more successful if played in legitimate theatres at $1.00 and $1.50 with two shows a day. (West.)

Appeals mostly to women—Men remark "a church has nothing on you," etc. Box office receipts larger than usual. (West.)

This "The Gilded Dream" ad, ten inches double column, was used by the Superba theatre, Los Angeles

Wonderful production. Went over big first part of week and average last part. (West.)

Fair production. Average box office receipts. (West.)

The Branding Iron—

A usual Tom Mix attraction which probably pleased those who like the Westerners, but hardly anybody else. Fair box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Officer 666—

A very clever adaptation of the stage success. Tom Moore at his best, but as in the case of all previous stage and stock productions, business far below average. (Middle West.)

The Penalty—

Wonderful story and very fine acting on Chaney's part. Good business. (East.)

Godless Men—

An average picture which has no drawing power. (West.)

REALART

You Never Can Tell—

They received this with open arms. Great little picture and went over to full houses. They were crazy about it. (South.)

The Furnace—

One of the best pictures I have seen. It has strength and purpose and is wonderfully portrayed by excellent cast. Exceptionally good business. (Middle West.)

An absolute sensation. A knockout. Had S. R. O. sign up from opening day till finish of week. One of the best pictures I've ever seen. (South.)

Eyes of the Heart—

A fair picture, well acted. Mary Miles Minter has her own personal following, but aside from them, the picture did not have much of an appeal. (Middle West.)

39 East—

Good picture which audiences seemed to like. Brought bigger houses than usual. (West.)

METRO

Madame Peacock—

Opened to good business on the first day. After this business dropped off 75% for balance of week. The poorest thing this star has yet made—one or two more pictures like this and she can look for some other line of work. People as much as they admire her remarked it was disgusting to have to sit through this picture. (Middle West.)

No one but the most ardent Nazimova fans cared for this. Personally, I consider it a shining monument to the insane egotism of the star. Unless she gets a good director and ceases such smears as "Peacock" she will soon run into Finis. I do not intend to show any more Nazimova pictures. (West.)

Nazimova certainly has the conceit, but it did not enable her to turn out a good picture. Positively the worst ever. Fair business. (East.)

The Saphead—

Wm. H. Crane and Buster Keaton with good cast provides unusually good entertainment. Well directed and good photography. The story is too well known and appreciated to be especially commented upon. Good box office value. Every real fan will enjoy it. (West.)

The Price of Redemption—

Why waste one of the screens most virile and satisfying players in tommyrot like this? It didn't go over well at all—it was slow, draggy, hackneyed, with about two thrills. Too long, also. (South.)

Rivoli's Holiday Week Specialties Win

Hugo Resienfeld's Thanksgiving Week Bill Sets New Presentation Standard

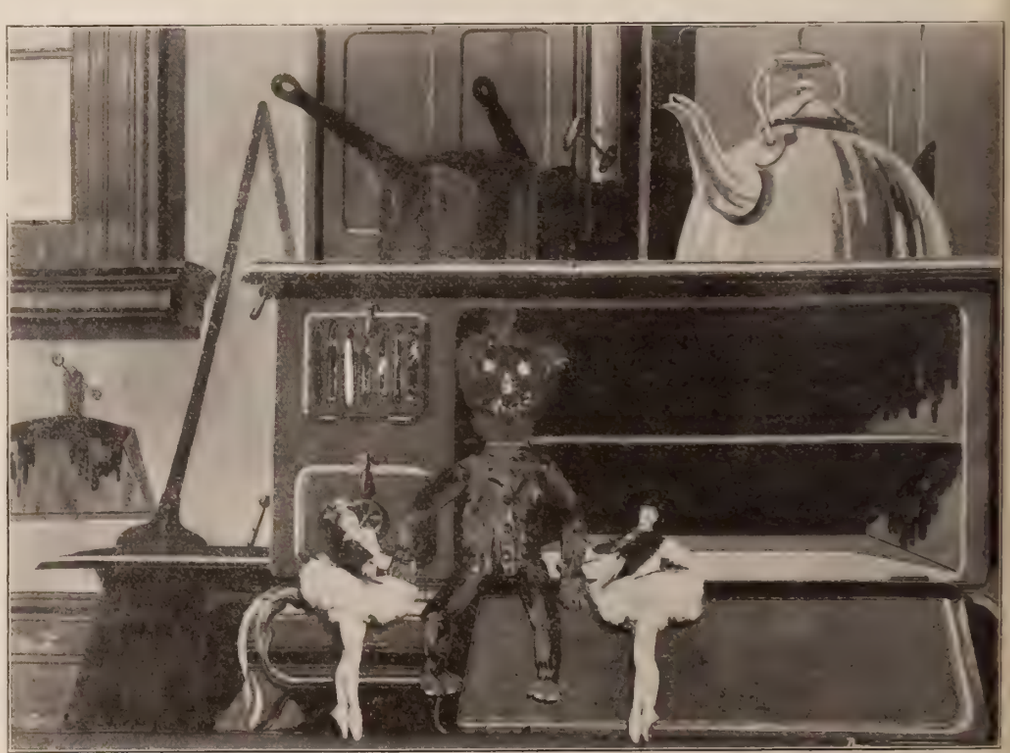
PROBABLY never before has motion picture presentation as a fine art been brought to a higher plane than at the Rivoli theatre, New York, where Managing Director Hugo Riesenfeld is presenting an all-comedy and Thanksgiving Week program, with "The Life of the Party" as the principal film attraction. Two numbers on this program stand out as top-notch examples of the theatre producer's art. They are unusual, not only for a motion picture-music theatre, but for any Broadway house; unusual not only in effect on audiences, but also in their originality and as an example of what can be done with the means at hand in any first-class institution in New York or elsewhere.

The prologue to the feature film is entitled "Falstaff's Dream." The choice of number and title were appropriate because of the girth of the hero of the picture as well as of the Shakespearian character. Emanuel List, the brilliant basso profundo of the Riesenfeld theatres, takes the part of the swashbuckling Falstaff.

In dress, make-up and general acting List lives up to traditions. In voice he is without doubt the equal of the best opera bassos who have essayed the role. But with this characterization tradition ends and originality begins. There is nothing in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," either by Balfi or Verdi, that could be compressed into the time allowed by the Rivoli program or that would allow enough action in a given time.

Whereupon Hugo Riesenfeld sketched out what he wanted and started his staff at work creating it. Herbert Schulze was put at the task of creating the sets, as simple and as striking a series of paintings as have appeared on the Rivoli stage in some time. Josiah Zuro, director of the New School of Opera and Ensemble, took the job of putting on the number. In the preparation of the music it was not merely a matter of selection. Some selections came from one opera, some from another. Twelve bars came out of one aria and four from another, and so on. Keys were changed, tempos disarranged, and still there was not enough good music available. So Mr. Zuro wrote all that was missing. No lyrics were available for the purpose. Bits were taken out of the opera, but in most instances new words were written. Mr. Zuro directed the whole thing for Mr. Riesenfeld. He trained the chorus, selected the soloists, played with the script until he had a harmonious, pleasing ensemble.

In addition to the music parts, special work was done to make it possible to introduce a beautiful little ballet. Paul Oscard, who directs most of the dancing numbers in the Riesenfeld theatres for the New School of Opera, arranged this one under Mr. Zuro's guidance. The result



This illustrates the second episode of the Rivoli theatre ballet number this week, as told on the opposite page

From "Fallstaff's Dream" one of the two Thanksgiving Week specialty numbers being presented at the Rivoli theatre, New York, and described in text appearing below of all this work was as follows:

The curtain rises on the drinking room of an English Inn, with colors and lighting effects that delight the eye. Emanuel List as Falstaff and a male chorus of thirteen fellow revellers in costume are drinking their farewell steins preparatory to retiring for the night after a hard drinking bout. List sings his good night song, the chorus joins in, there is music, conversation back and forth—and, strange to say, it is so clearly enunciated that the audience understands — and finally, as the chorus wanders out, Falstaff falls asleep in his chair.

The strains of the farewell are still ringing in his ears when two little red devils, represented by Grace Eastman and Martha Shelby, come out of the chimney and plant themselves right and left on the stage. A larger devil follows and leaps onto the stage. Paul Oscard takes this role. The three evil characters dance a grotesque little bit—a sort of nightmare dance for the fat hero. Then in the window appears a vision of loveliness in vampire costume. It is Vera Meyers, who does a vampire dance, alluring and enticing, around the sleeping Falstaff. In his dream he tries to seize her, but fails. There is more stage business, carefully planned and well executed, and the little vampire glides out of the window into the night. The little red devils dance around Falstaff again. He tries to strike them with his sword, wakes up—and finds nothing in the room. But he still hears the last echoes of the good night song of his friends. In theory the whole thing occupied only a few seconds of the dream. On the stage it takes up about ten minutes.

It required about two weeks of hard work by half a dozen big men in the music world to prepare this little sketch which remains on only ten minutes and runs for only one week. Is it worth while? Look at the success of the Rivoli and other Riesenfeld theatres and the question will answer itself.

Had Riesenfeld stopped with the "Falstaff Dream" he would have given his public enough to enjoy and the critics enough to think about for one week's work. But he didn't. He added a second number which, to many close observers, equalled, if it did not surpass the first. "Thanksgiving Ballet" it was called, but the title in this case did not tell the story. It was more than the word ballet signifies. It was a fantasy crammed full of action and interesting byplay, dancing of a high order and a bit of the symbolic.

When the curtains opened on this Thanksgiving number a negro chef stood in the set before a monstrous papier mache turkey, which in turn was on its huge dish in front of the fireplace. In real Bert Williams style the young colored actor recited a bit about a turkey. What he said did not matter much but his laugh was infectious. His dancing was original and graceful. With huge carving knife he slices into the bird and two pretty heads appear. Martha Shelby and Grace Sastman recite their few lines and crawl out of the bird, falling into a little dance to celebrate the day. A cardboard pumpkin man, judiciously illuminated, drops from above, scares away the chef who apparently is menacing the little girls and the dance goes on, with the cardboard figure as the partner of the two.

The music, words, stage setting and conception of this number were originated by Hugo Riesenfeld and his staff. Edward Falck, formerly assistant conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, prepared the music.

Advertise Where the People Are, Advises Nelson

"Advertising where the people are" is the one slogan that can never send a motion picture exhibitor on the losing track. No matter what it is that brings a crowd of people together, that is where advertising is effective and never has the truth of this statement been proved more effectively than by an inexpensive campaign used by Ole M. Nelson, manager of the Majestic theatre, at Grand Junction, Colo.

On the third day of the County Fair held at Grand Junction, just at the time when attendance started hitting the high spots, visitors to the exhibition were simply flooded with little tags bearing the question, "Do you want it?" They were attached to the steering wheels of parked automobiles, to the framework of every booth in the fair, in fact to every place that offered a chance to attach a piece of string.

The following day a tag of the same appearance occupied the same places, the wording on it, however, being different from the previous day. Instead of a question mark, an exclamation point was the most striking figure on it and the wording was "Go and Get It!" More tags appeared on the next to the last day of the fair. These were worded "I am going to get it." On the fourth day, the curiosity in regard to the meaning of the striking little tags was made clear by another tag, similar in appearance to the other three distributed, announcing the showing of "Go and Get It" at the Majestic theatre.

This was all the exploitation Mr. Nelson used on the production except for the usual space allotted to it in the weekly house organ published by the theatre,

Cincinnati Club to Push Films for Children

A movement has been inaugurated in Cincinnati which has for its object the presentation of photoplays that are better suited to the child mind. The organization aims to give special children's performances of pictures that are capable of amusing the younger film fans and that are also adapted to the youthful mentality, rather than plays that are beyond the comprehension of children; or, if comprehended, make for unnatural or undesirable precocity. The organization is known as the Cincinnati Council for Better Motion Pictures. It carries out its object by giving Saturday matinee performances in various localities of the city. Neighborhood groups are established, with a committee in charge of each group.

Concerning the Capitol's Ballet Number

VICTOR HERBERT'S "Wooden Shoe Dance" is being presented by Marjorie Thompson and Gladys Waite at the Capitol Theatre this week with typical Dutch costumes and a simple but effective stage setting by John Wenger.

Draped curtains mask the back wall of the theatre across which has been fastened a banner some three feet wide on which in alternation has been painted pictures of a Dutch girl and a Holland windmill. The lightings for the number are amber floods used to bring the dancers into prominence.

Cops Oppose Schmidt's Animated Cut-out

Exploitation and Police Court Publicity Vie With Each Other in Putting Over "A Chorus Girl's Romance"

THIS is the true and touching "drama" (which came near being a melodrama) of a cut-out which didn't shimmy. It has all the elements of drama—a hero whose motives are questioned, who is denounced, and arrested; of the police force, whose duty, according to the latest "crook-drama," is to hound a man back into jail as fast as he gets out. And for a heroine, it has a beautiful life-size cut-out of Viola Dana.

To begin at the beginning, Manager George Schmidt, of the Alamo No. 2, Atlanta, booked "The Chorus-Girl's Romance," and, looking over the campaign book for an effective idea for exploitation, happened on the stunt that tells of an animated cut-out. The idea struck his fancy, and he made all the necessary arrangements.

A week before the picture opened for a three-day run at his theatre, a huge banner appeared across the front of his theatre—jade-green letters on a buff background—reading, "Do Nice Girls Shimmy? Viola Dana will tell you." The "teaser" screen-campaign is always a part of Mr. Schmidt's exploitation stunts, and this one began a week ahead of the picture. Each day the slide was changed, and during the week, such slides as "Could She Shimmy? Oh, Boy! A maple leaf in an October gale had nothing on Marcia Meadows!" "Gilda Grey, shimmy-artist, had her shoulders insured for fifty thousand dollars! Some shoulders, we'll say! But she had nothing on Marcia Meadows!" "Could she shake a wicked shoulder? Oh, lady, lady! You tell 'em, standing room—I'm reserved" created interest in the picture.

On Sunday morning, the animated cut-out was rigged up in front of the theatre. It was a cut-out of "Marcia Meadows" seated, with her knees crossed. A second part of shoulders cut out and mounted was hung just an inch in front of the main cut-out, and these shoulders, by an electrical device, "shimmied" most convincingly. This cut-out, with a lobby-frame full of interesting photographs from the picture, held up traffic for more than an hour Sunday afternoon. The crowd grew and grew—until finally the fat and good-natured "traffic cop" on the corner below the theatre came up to investigate—and remained to admire. He went back to his post, quite lenient with the people who continued to make his job unpleasant.

But noon on Monday brought trouble, in the person of a very important Captain of Police, who took one look at Marcia, and gave Mr. Schmidt five minutes to take her off the sidewalk. Mr. Schmidt protested, belligerently, which resulted in a trip to the police-station, where he was advised to explain it to the Chief.

Which he did. There were two or three newspaper reporters at the station when Mr. Schmidt arrived, but he was too angry to notice them. They, bored with an unusually dull Monday, when nobody had taken poison by mistake, or jumped out of a fourteenth story window, listened to the heated argument between him and the Chief with much enjoyment.

Early in the spring, in a laudible effort to get a great many undesirables out of Atlanta, a sort of "Purity Squad" had been organized. During the hectic enthusiasm resultant from their first activities, they had passed a number of more or less trivial laws over which the most innocent of citizens find themselves tripping. One of these laws had to do with "shimmy-dancing," and the law had been framed and aided through by the Chief himself. So what the crimson cloth is to the celebrated bull, so is the bare mention of the hated word "shimmy" to the Chief.

The end of the argument, when Mr. Schmidt grew too angry to care for fines, and the Chief lost his temper so far he forgot to impose any, the Chief agreed to go up and see the picture and the cut-out. The reporters, half a dozen "smaller fry" policemen and the self-important captain went along. They looked at the picture and the Chief agreed that there was nothing wrong with it—"though it did seem unnecessary to have all that shimmy-dancing in it" he added, and stuck to the decision in spite of all arguments.

But when he saw the cut-out and watched it "dance"—well, when the sulphuric atmosphere cleared a little, he could be heard agitatedly warning Mr. Schmidt that he would fine him one hundred dollars for every five minutes "the thing operated" and would, if opposed, close the theatre. So, borne down by weight of superior numbers, and still too mad to permit himself to talk, Mr. Schmidt agreed. He was told, grudgingly, that the cut-out might remain in the lobby, provided there was no further movement. He went away, content—and, an hour later, a sign was fastened across the bottom of the cut-out—a sign which told its own story—"Censored."

The morning paper, and the noon editions of the two extras treated the whole affair with a great deal of what Mr. Schmidt is morosely convinced was ill-placed humor—but the Alamo No. 2 was packed to the doors for every performance from then on—and such remarks as, "Why, I don't see anything wrong about that picture!" "Why should the police object to it?" and so on indicate the source of their enthusiasm.

Despite the fact that it was good publicity, Mr. Schmidt is very, very sore! For he has been accused of some things which make him fighting mad—and there's nobody he can fight!

This is the lobby display over which Manager Schmidt of the Alama No. 2, Atlanta, and the police disagreed as told in the story on this page

Hyman Gives "Kismet" A Great Send-Off

Manager of Brooklyn Strand Breaks All Local Exploitation Records in Putting Over Skinner Picture

MANAGING DIRECTOR EDWARD L. HYMAN of the Brooklyn Strand theatre inaugurated his engagement of "Kismet" with an exploitation campaign which eclipsed all his previous efforts for any preceding attraction.

Mr. Hyman began his publicity for the picture two weeks before the first playing date with oil paintings showing scenes from the production in his lobby, an advance announcement on the Strand's electric sign and an art trailer showing a few attractive shots from the offering and a titled slogan originated by Moe Mark, "A $3.00 attraction at Strand prices."

Every story on the current attraction that played two weeks before "Kismet" carried a small advance notice.

One week before the showing Manager Hyman rented six gaudy silk turbans, and conscripted the carriage opening staff of the Strand, composed of six colored men, who in their Strand uniforms and rented turbans were sent out to pass many thousands of heralds.

A special folder was presented to every patron that received a program during the week before the showing, and in this way nearly thirty thousand more pieces of live business grabbing advertising matter was flooded in a direction that paid profiteering dividends on a small admission when the show opened.

Two of Brooklyn's leading department stores were easily induced to make "Kismet" window displays of their Turkish and Persian rugs. In the smaller stores, two or three ducats—war tax paid—did the salving for a display of oil paintings in the window.

The only attempt at ballyhoo that Manager Hyman made was when he hired a taxicab on the Saturday morning before the showing and filled it with several members of the "Kismet" prologue chorus in their native costumes. One of the Strand's doormen in regular honest-to-goodness American made clothes as worn by the leading guides of the city's rubberneck buses and equipped with a megaphone piloted the strange looking crew through the Brooklyn residential districts. A small sign on the car announced that the occupants were members of the "Kismet Chorus of Turkey" who appeared at the Strand theatre.

This hand-drawn display was used in the New York papers during the run of "Kismet" at the Strand

On November 11th the special Armistice Day edition of the Brooklyn Times carried the first real advance story issued by the theatre. This story almost monopolized the theatrical section of the Times, and covered "Kismet" from cameraman to star.

After the Times story broke, Manager Hyman visited the editors of every Brooklyn paper, impressing them with the fact that aside from the increased advertising display as theatrical news, "Kismet" was live material. The Brooklyn editors displayed their princely qualities by taking everything that was shot out from the Strand publicity office, and seldom cutting anything unless the story was flavored too richly.

The Strand presentation of "Kismet" was quite as much out of the ordinary as the exploitation campaign. An elaborate prologue was staged which ran eleven minutes and abounded in music and Oriental dancing, led by two excellent female artists who presented their "Danse Orientale," and the sacred "Snake Dance."

Powell Thinks Novelty Stunts Count

Exploitation of pictures in neighborhood theatres of Chicago is one of the big problems. It is generally conceded that big newspaper space is out of the reach of the smaller theatres. Therefore, they must depend upon other means of letting their public know of their attractions. Many neighborhood exhibitors do not exploit their pictures because they feel they are too much handicapped. Not so, with Adolph Powell of the Rex theatre, south side, Chicago. Powell thinks that the little exploitation stunts count in the neighborhood theatre.

He makes a big point of keeping his program snappy and gives them wide distribution. He feels it is important to tie up with the big downtown first-runs by emphasizing that he, too, is showing the same brand of pictures.

When he played "The Cradle of Courage," he did something that other theatres overlooked. He sent an invitation to the Englewood station police to attend a performance to see Bill Hart as a policeman. The police were tickled because they said it was the first time anybody had ever invited them anywhere — usually, they said, the theatre men resent their coming in, even when on duty bound.

Powell then let the Chicago American know about this stunt and they printed an advance story. Later they printed another story telling how the Rex theatre was "raided" by the Englewood police, making a funny yarn out of it. Which shows that even a little neighborhood theatre can break into the news columns if it makes things newsy happen.

On this page is shown some of Edward L. Hyman's exploitation for "Kismet" showing this week at the Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, as told in text on the opposite page

Hammond Proves Thirteen Isn't Unlucky

Novel Exploitation for "Bride 13" Staged by Atlanta Exhibitor

"IS 13 really unlucky? Let's prove it isn't!"

And thus was born one of the best exploitation schemes that Atlanta has had the pleasure of witnessing in a long time. It was when the S. A. Lynch Enterprises booked the "Bride 13" serial for their Vaudette theatre, Atlanta, and there were several reasons why something unusual had to be done. One was that the Lynch Enterprises had never played a serial before in any of their Atlanta houses.

So the thing was turned over to Frank Hammond, publicity manager for the Lynch Enterprises in Atlanta. And it was Mr. Hammond who asked the profound query anent the always so-called "unlucky 13."

First of all, an elaborate "free ticket" idea for the opening installment of the serial was arranged.

Mr. Hammond then began a series of teaser ads that excited the public's curiosity.

When these had run the whole week, he "broke" the story in the Atlanta papers. It was to the effect that thirteen handsome gifts, donated by thirteen department stores, would be given, on the 13th of the month, to the thirteenth bride to be married in that month.

His idea was to get the people in town talking about this mysterious "13th Bride." He went to thirteen different stores in Atlanta, and arranged with them to give some gift valued at $13.00 to the thirteenth bride of that month. He made arrangements with the Marriage License Clerk to advise him of the name of the thirteenth white couple who presented themselves for marriage license, in the month of November.

When he had the talk with the clerk, he did not explain who he was. He simply said that he wished to present a handsome gift to the thirteenth bride of the month. The clerk, accustomed to weird requests as he is, awoke a bit from his bored, jaded air, and looked the man over. But he promised—and that afternoon, when a newspaper reporter was hanging around his office, hoping that the clerk would present him with a story, the clerk happened to remember this strange request. And it looked to the reporter like a story. He was unable to get in touch with "Mr. F. H. Hammond" at the hotel whose address had been furnished. But he printed the story anyway—to the effect that the thirteenth bride of the month was likely to be presented with something nice, provided the man who asked for the information was not an escaped "nut."

Then the stores began to follow up. In the window of each store who had agreed to join in the "stunt" appeared the selected gift—at a department store a beautiful silk umbrella, labeled "This will be presented to the thirteenth bride in Atlanta on November 13th." At a smart furniture shop, a sewing rocker bore a similar label; at another department store, a brocaded satin corset carried the label; another shop displayed a hat; still another, a smart blouse; one a pair of satin slippers, with beaded buckles, and one a satin "breakfast-coat"—all of them just the sort of dainty trifles that any girl likes to have in her trousseau. In all, thirteen shops displayed gifts, with the laconic labels. Curiosity rose to a high pitch, but no employee in the stores could offer any explanation. They were as mystified as the public, and the secret was guarded most carefully by the publicity men of the various stores and shops.

On the 10th of November, the Marriage License Clerk telephoned the hotel, and put in a call for Mr. Hammond, reporting that he had just sold the thirteenth license, and giving the name and address of the bride. Mr. Hammond promptly called on her, explained the whole idea, and won her enthusiastic consent to go through with the plan. She was the daughter of one of the most prominent men in town—but what girl, no matter how wealthy, was ever known to turn down wedding gifts? This girl was much too good a sport, and she appreciated the cleverness of the stunt too well, to protest.

Strand Has Novel Stage Setting

MANAGER JOS. PLUNKETT of the New York Strand is giving the vocal rendition of "Ah, Moon of My Delight" from "A Persian Garden" a novel presentation by the use of an artistic stage setting and the way the singer, Richard Bold, tenor soloist is placed therein.

The stage setting is a canvass showing a blue green night sky with many stars out and an inverted new moon painted in vivid yellow about half way between the horizon and the zenith. By careful lighting and the exercise of considerable stage craft Mr. Bold is shown as apparently sitting on the lower horn of the moon as he sings his selection.

The singer is attired in appropriate costume and the lightings are artistic.

Hammond Proves Thirteen Isn't Unlucky

So notices appeared in the newspapers that the "thirteenth bride" would claim her gifts at the various shops at a certain hour—the hours so arranged that she might go the length of the shopping district, accepting her gifts, in a single morning. This was Saturday, the 13th—and an unprecedented mob of people in each store either awaited the young lady, or followed her from store to store. Each of the three newspapers had a reporter on the job, and Mr. Hammond allowed himself to be persuaded to talk—and the result was highly satisfactory. The "thirteenth bride" even went so far as to make a personal appearance that evening at the theatre where "Bride 13" was being shown, where she was the guest of the management, made a little speech, and later attended a dinner given by the concerns who had shared in the publicity—at which there were more newspaper reporters.

The exploitation was the best that has ever been given a picture in Atlanta, and the serial is drawing better at the Vaudette than any feature they have ever run, while Frank Hammond is receiving congratulations and much praise for his handling of the picture.

And "Atlanta's thirteenth bride" will never be known as anything else, for when her wedding was written up in the papers, she was referred to as the "thirteenth bride," and later, when a friend entertained at a luncheon for her, the same phrase was used. She says that she expects to go down in history, not as Mrs. So-and-So, but as "Atlanta's thirteenth bride." But she doesn't mind, for the fun she got out of it—not to mention the pretty gifts—was quite worth-while.

Overture at Capitol Special Number for Holiday

IN celebration of Thanksgiving week S. L. Rothapfel is presenting "Overture to Thanksgiving" an orchestral selection arranged from "Jubel Overture" by Weber with interpolations from "America" and "Hail the Pilgrim Fathers" and a stage tableau under the title of "Landing of the Pilgrim."

The tableau has as a setting a scenic canvass showing the Atlantic stretching away to the sky line with the historic Mayflower anchored off shore. The shore line of the ocean is masked on both sides by wings and members of the Capitol ensemble attired in proper garments pose as the Pilgrim fathers.

Mr. Wenger's canvass is nicely colored by blended floods and ripple effects are used on the painted water showing between the stage line and the ship.

Sand in Envelopes Used for "Sand"

"The wind and rain made it; William S. Hart played it; everybody will want to see it."

This was the brief advertising slant that covered an envelope containing little grains of sand that were used to spread "SAND" exploitation all over Everett, Wash., when the Hart production of that name played at the Everett theatre. Wayland H. Taylor, exploitation representative at the Seattle Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was responsible for the idea which was comparatively inexpensive and brought a lot of mouth-to-mouth advertising for the picture and the theatre.

Moore Gets Results With "Bulletin Boards"

Are you using "bulletin boards?" Intelligently employed, they have great exploitation possibilities. The public is bound to pause—and buy tickets. Tom Moore, of Washington, placed two boards in front of his Garden theatre during the run of "The Forbidden Thing" and kept count on the number of patrons they drew on the opening day. One board featured choice newspaper clippings, the other telegrams from members of Mr. Dwan's cast. The check-up shows that two persons out of every ten who stopped to read the contents of the boards were converted into ticket buyers. Oddly, the afternoon count showed that a higher average of buyers was secured by the boards in the afternoon than at night. It was also brought out that the "telegram board" was the better "draw" of the two.

Big Newspaper Section Put Over at Mason City

Add Mason City, Ia., to the list of communities which have taken a progressive stand, through their daily and weekly newspapers on the exploitation of motion pictures.

Mason City is a small community of less than 20,000 but it boasts of a progressive spirit. When "Something to Think About" was shown at the Palace theatre, the local merchants, instigated by Norman L. Dixon, exploitation representative at the Des Moines Exchange of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, assumed a lively interest in the opening of their new house. They combined to take a full page in the Mason City Daily Globe and made it a "Something to Think About" section. The title for the picture led the copy of hardware, clothing, fur, piano and grocery advertisements.

"Humoresque" Exploitation Gets Boston Attention

Boston's streets were thronged when an unknown boy violinist, standing erect in an automobile playing familiar strains, was driven repeatedly through the main thoroughfares of the New England metropolis. The boy stayed on his feet playing throughout the day, regardless of the jolting of the machine. Opposite him, seated in the tonneau, was a young girl, with a shawl wrapped around her to represent a scene from "Humoresque." While the boy played several airs generally known, he would always, at reepated intervals, change into the strains of "Humoresque" or "Eli, Eli"; and the rendition of these melodies, one classical and the other religious, added interest to the strange car and its cargo.

The whole stunt was an exploitation feat to accompany the run of "Humoresque" at the Tremont Temple theatre. Walter Lindlar, assistant director of exploitation at the home office of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, had initiated the exploitation of "Humoresque" on its Boston run; but it remained for S. G. Sladdin, coming from Omaha to take up the post of exploitation representative at the Boston Exchange, to put the idea over in finishing shape. The automobile suggestion marked Sladdin's Boston debut.

Staid New Englanders were won by the very boldness of the idea. The thought of a violinist openly courting attention by playing in the open and from a bouncing machine was so brazen as to demand attention. The somewhat pathetic figure of the little girl softened the first snap opinion and won further consideration for the unusual appearance. On the sides of the machine two large cards advertising the run of "Humoresque" at the Tremont Temple theatre explained matters further.

This is the way Tom Moore and Bert Adler, special representative for Allen Dwan, advertised "The Forbidden Thing" at Moore's Garden theatre, Washington

Grauman's Prologue for "Burglar Proof"

Several thousand people in Los Angeles took a trip back to the days of their youth last week when they attended the show at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre and witnessed the clever prologue to "Burglar Proof." Sid Grauman conceived the idea of giving city folks a glimpse of an old-fashioned country store with the usual bunch of gossips sitting about.

Completely equipped down to the last detail, with the old-time coffee mill showing large amid the miscellaneous collection of groceries, tubs, pots, pans and miscellany generally found in the country store of half a decade ago.

The dozen performers first sang the old gray bonnet song, and then, one after another, each contributed to the evening's entertainment. There was a cornetist, a girl whose melodious notes on the cornet in patriotic and other selections proved most pleasing, and a youngster gave a laughable burlesque of an Egyptian dancer, during which he was fanned by a full grown broom in the hands of another member of the troupe.

Another deep-voiced, stalwart young man gave the audience a splendid rendition of "Till the Sands of the Desert Grow Cold," there was an aged, decrepit gent who suddenly straightened up, with the "cricks" in his back suddenly gone and shimmied and shook all over the stage, scoring one of the biggest hits of the evening. There were also many other splendid features.

Hyman Gives Travel Subject Extra Attention

Enlivening quiet travel scenes in a short subject scene through instrumental, vocal and scenic interpolation, simple if the idea used at the Brooklyn Strand theatre in connection with motion pictures of Ireland is put into effect. Managing Director Edward L. Hyman wanted to put some pep into his travel short subject and hit upon a real origination to lend it feature value.

He called the number "Scenic—The Emerald Isle." While the foundation was the short film subject of beautiful Irish scenes he gave it some corking imaginative animation by placing Henry Moeller, a tenor, behind a gauze screen. While the pictures were being cast upon this thin gauze the audience could see in dim outline the figure of the singer, singing "Mother Machree." There was just enough light to silhouette the soloist. The effect was produced of a figure in the heart of the picture singing. In fact, a man in flesh and blood was made a part of the motion picture through a simple piece of mechanics.

Above is shown a picture of a cooperative display obtained for the showing of "The Cradle of Courage" at the Symphony theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., in one of the local sporting goods store's windows

Nathan Effects Good Tie-Up at Binghamton, N. Y.

A new angle for show window exploitation has been discovered by Albert S. Nathan, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's exploitation man for the Buffalo territory, when he took possession of the show windows of a sporting goods store in connection with the showing of "The Cradle of Courage" at the Symphony theatre, Binghamton.

The window was attractively decorated with foliage and stuffed chipmunks, grouse and partridges. A row of rifles and shotguns was displayed for the hunting enthusiast, to harmonize with the fall hunting season which was just commencing.

The display was headed by a huge poster reading: "The Cradle of Courage" is the U. S. Army. Keep Up Your Rifle Practice. Get Your Arms and Ammunition Here. See William S. Hart at the Symphony Theatre Starting Monday—a Paramount Picture." The window display was supplemented by posters around the city.

Mrs. Albert's Stunt for "The Mollycoddle"

Mrs. Robert Albert, wife of the manager of the Albert theatre, of Lancaster, N. Y., was a party to one of the best exploitation stunts the town ever knew of, when she flew over the city in a brand new Curtis bi-plane, advertising "The Mollycoddle." The plane did all sorts of stunts for the amusement of the villagers, during which time Mrs. Albert dropped literature, advertising for the picture from the sky. Mrs. Albert was formerly a professional performer and therefore somewhat of a dare-devil when it comes to hazardous stunts. She claims the honor of being the first Lancaster woman to go through the repertoire of aeroplane thrillers.

A complete country grocery was built and equipped for the Grauman theatre, Los Angeles, prologue for "Burglar Proof" as told in the accompanying article

Miester's Lobby Decorations for "Pink Tights"

O. L. Miester, manager of the White House theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., likes novelty in his lobby displays. He long has had the reputation of getting everything there is in a picture for his front.

This is well illustrated in his recent lobby for "Pink Tights."

Mr. Miester obtained a large marquee which he mounted over the front of his lobby so it resembled the front of a circus tent. Then he obtained a stuffed elephant, life-size, and a regular circus animal wagon. With these splendid exhibits and with alluring cut-outs of Gladys Walton in circus costume, which he suspended under the marquee

Toronto's Campaign for "The Wonder Man"

To introduce "The Wonder Man" as a coming attraction at the Pantages theatre, Toronto, Ontario, the management conducted a guessing contest, the question of which being, "Who Is the Wonder Man?" Two free tickets were presented for the first hundred correct answers sent to the theatre. Guessers were requested to send replies to "The Wonder Man," care of the Pantages theatre.

Small advertising space, in conjunction with the theatre's regular advertisements, was used for the contest announcements, and no special entry or answer blanks were used.

"Little Things Count" Says This Manager

Manager George Schmidt, who manages the Alamo No. 2 theatre, Atlanta, believes in exploitation to the limit—and he also believes in making use of the things you have on hand whenever possible, for effective lobbies. Inasmuch as his lobbies attract more attention than any others in town—with one exception—it is manifest that he succeeds.

As an example: Mr. Schmidt had two iron stands, something on the order of old-fashioned "hitching-posts" that used to stand in front of "fine homes." Instead of the traditional horse's head at the top of these stands, were iron loops through which the velvet cord held people away from the box-office before the opening hour in the morning.

When "Dangerous to Men" played a three-day run at the Alamo No. 2 recently, the "hitching-posts" were put to good use. Large circles of cardboard about two and a half feet in diameter, of bright scarlet board, were cut. These were bordered with a narrow white border. In "box-car" letters the word "Stop" went across the top of the circle. Beneath this one word, in small, inconspicuous black letters, were the words, "she is." In white "box-car" letters, the word "Dangerous" glared forth. Under it, the end of the sentence, in small black letters, were "to men."

Thus, at first sight, the scarlet circles cried "Stop! Dangerous!" But on closer inspection, the whole sign read, "Stop! She is dangerous to men!"

People passing cast casual glances at the signs, then halted to see what it was all about.

"And once let 'em stop to look at the posters—and I've got 'em!" exults Mr. Schmidt. And he has!

What a Live Wire Can Do with a Dead One

The Story of How Jack Mowatt Brought the Defunct Grand Circus Theatre to Life

THE Grand Circus theatre, for three years a dead and buried issue in the heart of Detroit's busy downtown district, is doing a comeback unparalleled in Detroit film circles and Jack Mowatt, former film salesman and promoters is hailed as the miracle man among the automobile city's showmen as a result of a combination of circumstances recently, that placed the management of the Grand Circus in Mowatt's hands.

The Grand Circus was a good paying proposition as picture houses went three years ago, but that was before the Madison and Adams theatres, John H. Kunsky's two leading downtown first run houses, were built, each within a stone's throw of the Grand Circus.

From that time on the Grand Circus took a nose dive so far as profits were concerned, and the plane was never righted through a series of a dozen or more changes in management—until six weeks ago, when Mowatt took the helm. People simply refused to enter the dingy gates of the Grand Circus, when by walking a few steps further, in either direction, they could see a first run with soloist, orchestra, prologue and all the other novelties of a high class theatre.

This was the discouraging outlook that faced Mowatt when he took over the Grand Circus and he was forced to accept the sympathies of all of the exchange men in the film building. oS stereotyped a failure was the Grand Circus that poster boys smiled and poked each other whenever Mowatt came in sight, and the film salesmen made many a merry quip at his expense.

Then things began to happen. The first official act of Mowatt's was to engage a professional sign painter. The second move was to buy "Nomads of the North."

And then film soothsayers about town prepared to bury Mowatt. "Poor old Jack," they chuckled, "putting a picture into that dump for a week where for three years no picture ever played a whole day to a profit."

The first day of the engagement of "Nomads of the North" found the Grand Circus theatre completely transformed. A bright November sun cast its rays on a front that took on the appearance of a log cabin in the Canadian wilderness, enhanced in natural beauty by a three-inch fall of snow during the night. Banners and streamers of every description, cutouts of animals and pictorial forest fire illusions arrested the interest of every passerby in the downtown district. They who stopped to look invariably invested in a ticket.

Perhaps the best testimonial that could be offered to the opening day's business was the action of three Detroit bandits, who, noting the throng that lined in front of the box office all opening day, attempted to break into the office early on the following morning, being frustrated only after a thrilling pistol duel with the night watchman.

The Sunday opening of "Nomads of the North" was the turning point in the career of the Grand Circus theatre. The week's business was the biggest in the history of the house and ever since the receipts have responded in proportion to the amount of exploitation that Mowatt has put behind his attractions.

Mowatt's policy on every production will be unusual fronts and lobby displays, he says, and he is firmly convinced that such treatment for sluggish theatres—especially in downtown sections—is an absolute cure.

Fowler's Election Stunt Worth Remembering

This stunt may be a little out of date now, but it is worth cutting out and pasting in your derby for use next election day. At the Elmwood theatre, Buffalo, on election evening, Manager Bruce Fowler put on the returns better than any other house in town. Both theatres either read the returns from the stage and stopped the pictures to throw them on the screen. At the Elmwood, Mr. Fowler erected a small screen next to the regular silver sheet and thereon flashed the returns with a stereopticon. The returns were thrown on the small screen only when there was no title projecting on the larger one or a bit of dramatic action, Audiences were enthusiastic in their praise of the stunt, because, unlike other house patrons, they were not forced to go through breaks in the continuity of the subject as the returns were given via stage or screen.

This cut shows how "Snooky," the Educational Exchange's star, was featured at the Alhambra theatre, Los Angeles

"Kismet" at Albany Strand Next Week

With Otis Skinner's "Kismet" as the attraction, a week's stand will be attempted for the first time at the new Mark Strand theatre, Albany, during the week of November 29. Other theatres about the city, which, however, charge a smaller admission, have run pictures for the entire week, with more or less success. If the plan is found to be productive of box office receipts with the top price at 50 cents, solid week bookings may be expected from time to time at the Strand.

Effective Prologue Staged at Tivoli, San Francisco

The atmosphere of Hawaii was much in evidence at the Tivoli Opera House in San Francisco the week of October 24, when "What Women Love," many scenes of which were made in "the Paradise of the Pacific," was supplemented by one of Manager Frank J. Costello's inimitable prologue productions, "The Legend of Aloha," featuring Prince Lei Lani, the noted Hawaiian tenor, who also had a minor role in the picture.

The prologue was one of the most pretentious and elaborate that Costello has yet staged at the Turner and Dahnken picture playhouse, and one of the best. It is an original song act written by Prince Lei Lani and utilized a cast of seven. It is a love romance of Hawaii telling in plaintive, native melodies the story of the prince who wandered from his island home, but came back to his sweetheart only to incur the wrath of Pelee and be swallowed up in its burning lava.

Costello's stage setting carried out the atmosphere of the act perfectly,

Harwell Does with Mystery Woman Stunt

The good friend of the live wire exhibitor, the "Woman of Mystery," helped William Harwell, manager of the Empress theatre of Wichita Falls, Texas, acquaint his city's residents of the fact that "Madame X" was coming to the Empress.

Mr. Harwell's stunt was to have a strange and attractive woman register at a local hotel as "Madame X," go immediately to her room after leaving instructions to be called at a certain time. When the time for calling "Madame X" arrived the clerk proceeded to do his duty. No answer came from his summons and the hotel man proceeded to investigate. He entered the room and found a note which read, "Life to me is no longer worth while. Please do not attempt to find me. Your search will be of no avail. I have taken the road that leads to 'God knows where.'"

It was signed, "Madame X."

The hotel man lost no time in calling the local detective force. Investigation developed that the woman had literally disappeared, through thin air. In a short time all of Wichita Falls was pondering on the mystery and the local papers were writing articles telling all they knew and a little more perhaps, about it.

Only one person in the Falls remained calm and that was Mr. Harwell. He smiled to himself, paid off the hotel "Madame X," and kept all his secrets, including how he managed to get the lady out of the hotel unobserved, to himself, and a little while later began to advertise the picture "Madame X," using the catch line, "On the Road to God Knows Where." Then it was that Wichita Falls knew that it had been the victim of a publicity stunt. Only one resident of the city, it is said, resented what had happened and that was the local detective who had started out to unravel the "Madame X" mystery. He couldn't see the joke but finally admitted that he did want to see the picture.

Stage setting used for a musical specialty by Frank Costello, manager of the Tivoli theatre in conjunction with the showing of "What Women Love." The title of the number was "Legend of Aloha." Text description appears on this page

Sid Puts Over Big Specialty

"Memories of Days Gone By" Latest Grauman Theatre Novelty Number

UNDER the title of "Memories of Days Gone By," Sid Grauman, manager of Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, recently put over a specialty number which brought back old days.

Inspection of the accompanying cut will illustrate Mr. Grauman's idea of what can be accomplished with shadowgraphs.

A shadow cast on a white sheet by a moving figure is something with which we are all familiar, but it remained for Sid Grauman to improve on the idea and to build around it one of the biggest acts he has ever had in his theatre, famous for its elaborate, instructive and entertaining presentations.

Four distinct numbers, each a show in itself, to say nothing of the feature picture, were on his program for one week, with the opening showing of "Something to Think About."

For the shadowgraphs, Sid Grauman worked out special lighting effects, with astonishing results.

A dancer comes on the stage, her filmy draperies fluttering. Her figure is outlined in inky black against a background of clear, blue light. But it is radically different from the ordinary silhouette, as the fine traceries of beautiful lace are clearly and distinctly shown. She is Miss Grace Immerman, one of the famous Immerman twins and the graceful steps of her dance, seen only in silhouette, take the audience by surprise.

One after another, dancers and singers go on, the blue light changes to gold, and back again to blue, the music gives a soft, pleasing and appropriate tonal background, and the whole offering is one that will live long in the memory.

Probably one of the reasons for Sid Grauman's amazing and spectacular success as a showman is based on his intimate knowledge of human nature. He is a practical psychologist and one of the factors which have made him one of the best showmen in the United States is his practice of having members of his organization work with as well as for him.

He knows that most girls like to sing, all girls like to be admired and ninety per cent of them believe they are or could be fine actresses. In this same bill, he selected thirteen of his pretty usherettes to sing the illustrated song, with organ accompaniment. "All You Have to Do Is Smile" carol these dainty maids, and the audience smiles with genuine appreciation and enjoyment during the number.

Another original stunt is carried out by the soloist, Robert Davis. He takes over the baton from Orchestra Leader Mish Guterson, and conducts the orchestra while he sings "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." And he makes a very good conductor, at that.

While everything moves smoothly and perfectly, without pause or hesitation, big acts and prologues seem simple enough, but the audience do not know that this perfection and smoothness were brought about by many hours of hard work, planning and careful supervision.

Carroll Proves Lobby Displays Pay

Thomas G. Carroll, manager of the Standard theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, now is firmly convinced of the value of a lobby display that reaches right out to the curbing and jerks them in. He recently tried out two pictures of approximately equal merit. With the first one he did not use a lobby display. With the second he used a very striking lobby effect. Result: Double the business with the second picture.

The second picture was "Wanted at Headquarters," in the exploitation of which Mr. Carroll turned his lobby into a prison set as illustrated by the accompanying cut.

He added to the effect by obtaining a set of "Wanted" notices from Police Headquarters, showing the pictures and descriptions of several sought-for criminals. These he mounted in frames and arranged under the barred windows in the prison set. They attracted no end of attention. He thinks his lobby display was the greatest factor in the success of the week's run of the Eva Novak picture.

Johnny Hines Makes Personal Appearance at Albany

Johnny Hines, star of the Torchy series, journeyed to Albany last week to make personal appearances at the new Mark Strand theatre in conjunction with the showing of his "Torchy in High."

Manager Booker is so delighted with the results accruing from Hines' appearance that he will book other movie stars if possible in conjunction with the engagement of a picture in which they appear.

"The whole city went crazy over Johnny Hines," said Manager Booker, in discussing the personal appearance stunt, as a means of drawing the crowds. It was the first appearance, with one exception, of a dyed-in-the-wool actor in this city, with the result that the Strand was jammed to its doors and Hines was showered with invitations to dinners and luncheons."

Puzzles Used to Good Effect in South

Frank Hammond, general publicity representative for the Lynch Enterprises, in Atlanta, has been grabbing off generous handfuls of space in the local newspapers for several weeks. His latest, and one of his most successful space-grabbing stunts, was used to advantage on the "World and His Wife," which played a three-day engagement at the Forsyth recently.

On the Sunday preceding the showing, the Atlanta Journal carried a cut-out puzzle of the sort that is always popular both with children and grownups. The puzzle was a still from "The World and His Wife," which had been jig-sawed into small bits. When this puzzle was cut out and pasted neatly on cardboard it was entered, with the owner's name and address, at the Journal office, and there was a list of prizes—tickets to the Forsyth—for the neatest puzzles. Six tickets were given for the first prize, four for the second, and so on, down to one for the "booby" prize. Over one thousand solutions were turned in.

Another "puzzle stunt" a little different is to be a regular feature, for fifteen weeks, of another local paper. Every Sunday two photographs are published—all of them old photographs, some child-photographs, of now prominent motion picture and stage stars—though there are three picture-players to one stage star used. The first two used were Mary Pickford and Dustin Farnum—and two-thirds of the answers gave "Sarah Bernhardt" as the name of the picture of Mary.

The contest has aroused keen interest, and the number of answers that are sent in each week is steadily increasing.

Russian Opera Being Presented at Capitol

WHAT is perhaps the most ambitious ballet number ever staged in a New York motion picture theatre is presented at the Capitol this week, in the enactment of the finale of the second act of the Russian opera "Prince Igor," based on the "The Epic of the Army of Igor" an old historical Russian chronicle supposed to have been written by a literary monk in the twelfth century.

The story of the second act of the opera ends with an elaborate ballet when "Kontchak" who is holding "Prince Igor" and "Vladimir" prisoners in his army camp orders the slave girls to dance for the entertainment of his enemies. The complete ballet scene from the opera is reproduced with correct costumes and scenery. The scenic setting which artist Wenger has provided shows the inverted cup shaped huts of the Oriental army camp with the painted sky tinted for a night scene in a cold latitude.

The role of the "Chief Warrior" is played by Alexander Oumansky, with Mlle. Gambarelli as "Ischa" and Doris Niles as the "Polvotsein Girl." The parts of the warriors and slave girls are danced by the Capitol ballet corps. The excerpts from the opera score used are sung by the Russian Cathedral Choir grouped with the orchestra.

The ballet was arranged by Alexander Oumansky with the choregraphy by Micael Fokine.

Jennings Makes Capita from "Safety Week"

Manager Herb Jennings of Allen's St. Clair theatre, Toronto, Ontario, did not permit "Safety Week" to pass without linking up his theatre with the local campaign which was conducted under the auspices of the Ontario Safety League. Mr. Jennings issued a small folder on the outside of which was the salutation, "To the Mothers regarding Safety Week." The figure of an angel child also appeared on the front page. The inside pages bore a message regarding children's Saturday matinee which are held regularly at the theatre.

"Every week is 'Safety Week' regarding our Children's Saturday Matinees," it read. "Every picture shown at these 'Kiddie Treats' is picked for its clean, wholesome fun and entertainment."

Then followed a reference to the feature which was scheduled to be presented on the Saturday of "Safety Week." This was "Little Women," a picture which had been presented as a regular offering in theatres elsewhere in Toronto.

Another little announcement for a recent attraction at the St. Clair theatre by Manager Jennings consisted of a small card in an envelope to which had been tied a short piece of string. On the envelope was printed, "As a pleasant REMINDER for a wonderful time." Printed on the card was: "Tie the attached piece of string on the little finger of your right hand so as you will not forget that Mabel Normand in 'The Slim Princess' will be shown at Allen's St. Clair theatre, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, October 21, 22 and 23."

Mr. Jennings has charge of a handsome suburban theatre which enjoys a regular neighborhood patronage. He holds the opinion, however, that little printed novelties are valuable, in his case, for the injection of fresh interest and pep into the boosting for pictures which have already been advertised and presented at downtown theatres. He relies more on the little cards, inexpensive printed souvenirs and novelties which are distributed from the theatre than on advertising in the daily newspapers which circulate throughout the whole city.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 220 SO. STATE ST.

E. F. Tarbell, who succeeded Fred Aiken as manager of Vitagraph's Chicago office, has signed up L. A. Quill as sales manager for the Chicago territory. It means coming back home to Mr. Quill, who, ten years ago, was special man on the Billboard and also worked for Clipper in Chicago. Later he broke into the movies with Fox in Pittsburgh, later becoming manager of Fox's Denver office and handling two theatres for Bill Swanson in Salt Lake. He then went back with Fox as Mr. Sheehan's personal representative in the south with headquarters at Atlanta. He knows the game thoroughly and is noted for his mixing ability and salesmanship. Mr. Tarbell also has reassigned his salesmen and added some members to the staff. C. R. Lindau remains as assistant manager; J. H. Salters and E. H. Lansing will cover the Chicago territory; R. Y. Lockett and Benny Edelman will cover northern and southern Illinois; E. P. Cassanave and Charles Buford northern and southern Indiana; J. L. Souther, assisted by Harry Abrams, Milwaukee and Wisconsin; H. D. Wunderle will cover the entire territory on specials and Paul Deoto will also travel the entire district, devoting his attention exclusively to serials.

Gollos Enterprises announce the following new features are now available: "She Flayed and Paid," "Whispering Devils," "The Hidden Light" and "Keep to the Right." These four productions will each have a downtown showing. "She Played and Paid," featuring Fannie Ward, played a week's run at the Bandbox theatre, Madison street.

M. J. Mintz, special salesman for Celebrated Players Film Corporation, celebrated his twentieth wedding anniversary last week by inviting a crowd of film folks to his home. Mr. Mintz has left for a trip in the interest of Celebrated which will take him as far west as California. President Friedman has launched a big sales campaign for Celebrated Comedies, his new national release, and early indications are that this series will be a big success.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales," the big Vitagraph special, was shown to exhibitors and press representatives of Chicago at the Playhouse Tuesday morning. The picture is replete with stirring incidents and unlike many features, some of the big scenes are in the early part. Very favorable comments were heard on the production from the large crowd that witnessed the preview.

Phil H. Solomon, widely known Chicago film salesman, has joined the staff of Celebrated and will specialize on features covering the northside for President Friedman's exchange.

Lee Herz is back again at his exchange in the Consumers Building after a visit to New York during which he states he purchased twenty pictures for release in the Illinois territory immediately after January 1st. Mr. Herz is not ready to announce the names, as yet, but says that they will cause the exhibitor to sit up and take notice when he announces the names of the pictures.

George B. West, general manager of the Sunkist Comedy Company, which is producing the new series of one-reel Alice Howell comedies, who last week sold the rights to the series to J. L. Friedman, president of the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, has left for the west coast studios where he will oversee production. Dick Smith, it is understood, will continue to act as director.

General Manager Eddy Eckels, of Independent Film Association, Chicago, who is a great believer in the pulling power of first-class posters, has closed a contract with the Ritchey Lithographing Corporation to furnish all paper including one sheets, three sheets, six sheets and twenty-four sheets, required in the exploitation of the Neal Hart five-reelers, Pinnacle Comedies and other pictures distributed by Independent Films.

President J. V. Ritchey, of the big lithographic company made a special trip to Chicago to talk over the advertising campaign of Independent with Eddy Eckels and declares that the posters, as planned, will be both beautiful and striking, and will also be a great aid to exhibitors in attracting patrons to their box offices.

Mr. Eckels states that the high standard already set by Independent in their advertising and exploitation material, will be lived up to and even exceeded by the paper that the Ritchey Company will turn out and that the posters will be a fine example of this famous company's work.

Manager Carl Harthill of Reelcraft is enthusiastic over the twelve western five-reel features starring Wm. Fairbanks, which have been acquired by his company for the state of Illinois. "The Western Adventurer" will be the first of the series to be released, the date having been fixed as December 15.

Harry M. Gilbert is the latest salesman to join the staff of Realart. He is a newcomer to the motion picture industry, but has a successful record as a automobile and auto accessory salesman.

Dr. Shallenberger of New York and Dave Chatkin of San Francisco visited Chicago for a few days following the Federated Convention at St. Louis, which they both attended.

D. O. Reese, has resigned from Reelcraft to become manager of the Indianapolis office of the Merit Film Exchange Company and will leave Chicago within a few days to take up his new work. Mr. Reese is one of the veterans of the picture business, having been engaged in it for sixteen years in Chicago and in Kansas City where he was manager for Unversal for some time.

Phil Banovitz has returned from a two weeks' trip in Indiana in the interests of the Neal Hart series of five-reel out-doors pictures and reports splendid business. Manager Arthur Lowy of the Illinois and Indiana Exchange, which is handling the Hart series in this territory, states that forty-four first run theatres have been signed up in Indiana and that Illinois exhibitors who are showing the pictures are enthusiastic over the box-office pulling power of these westerns.

Messrs. Isaacson and J. M. Howland, the latter formerly of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange, will hereafter sell the pictures offered by Favorite Players Film Corporation, Isaacson handling the city territory and Howland the Illinois territory. Manager Von Ronkel expects to open up a Minneapolis branch within a few days and is about ready to close contract with a new manager whom he will put in charge of the exchange.

President Zambrino of Unity has bought "The Unfortunate Sex," a five-reel Frank Gersten production for the states of Indiana and Illinois. This feature will be released at once and the First Chicago showing will be at the Band Box, opening Sunday. Sales Manager Frank Flaherty reports "Thunderbolt Jack," the thrilling serial, is going over strong throughout the territory.

Realart's Chicago Exchange has ended its six weeks' 1920 franchise drive with a rush which brings the total contracts closed in the territory up to $600,000, according to a statement made at the Realart office. Manager Mayberry and his salesman are now starting a two week's campaign to put over "The Soul of Youth" and "The Furnace."

G. E. Braddock, who has made a successful record as manager of the Liberty theatre, St. Paul, Minnesota, and whose presentations have created much favorable comment, has resigned to become associated with Ascher Brothers, Chicago. It is understood that he will manage one of their theatres and already has arrived in Chicago to familiarize himself with their methods.

Franklin B. Coates, director for Mesco Pictures Corporation, Kansas City, has leased the Rothacker Chicago studio for a month to shoot interior scenes for "Jesse James Under the Black Flag," an eight-reel photoplay featuring the life of the famous outlaw. The last of the exterior scenes have just been completed in New Mexico.

Sixteen different sets will be built in the studio. The first of these is one of the most elaborate ever seen on the Rothacker floor. Jesse James, Jr., a Kansas City lawyer, son of the outlaw, plays the lead supported by Marguerite Hungerford. Two hundred persons will be used in the interior scenes.

On Mr. Coates' staff are cameraman Frank Zucker, Technical Director Edward Keller and William Grimes, Assistant Director.

E. W. Johnson, one of the popular and able salesmen of Chicago territory, has joined the sales staff of Selected Films, Incorporated. He has worked in Chicago for the past four years and is widely known to the trade and will doubtless put over his quota on "The Son of Tarzan" in good shape.

Manager Lesserman of Universal states that "Once to Every Woman" is making a remarkable booking record, such circuits as Lubliner & Trinz, Ascher Brothers, Marks & Goodman, Schoenstadt and Gumbiner already having signed up for this super feature.

Harry Berman stopped off in Chicago for a few hours en route to Los Angeles for a conference with Carl Laemmle, president of Universal.

B. A. Krueger, formerly with Universal's Minneapolis exchange, has been transferred to Chicago where he will work under Manager Lesserman.

Manager Bob Lucas and his entire staff took off their coats, rolled up their sleeves and worked all day Sunday getting Robertson - Cole's headquarters moved from the Consumers Building to their big new exchange on South Wabash Avenue. This is another step towards the concentration of the film industry in the new locality.

STATE RIGHT AND EXPORT NEWS AND VIEWS

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatrical Association of the World, held at the organization's headquarters in New York on November 11th, a resolution was unanimously adopted, expressing formally the association's recognition and appreciation of "the great assistance given by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS through its editor, W. A. Johnston, to the M. P. T. get together movement for better pictures and more equity and co-operation in the industry."
A uniform membership fee of one dollar per year was adopted. A campaign to acquaint the trade and public with the purposes of the organization was also discussed in detail.

Reelcraft Expands Its Selling Force

With the opening of a Branch Office and Exchange at 2169 East 9th street in Cleveland, Ohio, last week, the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation made several changes and additions among its selling force.

The new Cleveland office will be in charge of George W. Wilson as manager, Wilson being transferred from Indianapolis Reelcraft Exchange where he has served as manager for several months. G. L. Parrish, formerly assistant manager at the Indianapolis office, has been promoted to the position of manager at that exchange.

Carl Harthill, manager of the Chicago Reelcraft Exchange, is appointed a District Manager with jurisdiction over the Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis offices, with headquarters in Chicago. Harry L. Muir, manager of the Minneapolis Exchange, added Wm. Dick to his traveling forces to cover North and South Dakota for his office.

Elaborate Presentation for Kineto Review

"The Emerald Isle," one of the Kineto Reviews which was so beautifully presented last week at the Capitol theatre in New York is going to be a featured part of the program at the Strand theatre in Brooklyn next week. Showmen everywhere are watching with interest the presentation which Manager Hyman will give it.

The Kineto Rview is one of the series under the general name of

Equity's Latest Service

Co-operation Is Planned to Aid Salesmen in Selling Productions

EQUITY PICTURES CORPORation announce a new form of co-operation designed to aid the buyers of "Whispering Devils" and "Keep to the Right." It will connect the salesmen of the State Right organization with the exhibitor directly and consists of selling points which the salesman is to advance to his exhibitors.

It has been the experience of Joseph I. Schnitzer, head of Equity, who is responsible for the innovation, that all the aids offered by state-right producers to buyers overlook the most important element—exhibitor contact. The state-right buyer does not sell the picture to his exhibitors. His salesmen do that. The press-book, which forms the chief service to the exhibitor is in most cases too bulky and wordy for the exhibitor to digest while the salesman visits him. All the publicity, exploitation and advertising outlined in press-books is only partly appreciated by the busy showman, Schnitzer believes.

Equity therefore came to the conclusion that its elaborate press-books on "Whispering Devils" and "Keep to the Right" were not sufficient to impress the exhibitor, for that pre-occupied person could not afford the time to read all the matter. It was therefore necessary to give the exhibitor a briefer idea of the pictures, and leave the press-book with him for perusal and study outside of business hours. Mr. Schnitzer therefore, in conjunction with the advertising and exploitation department of Equity, has prepared a brief description of the outstanding features of "Whispering Devils" and "Keep to the Right," and listed the selling points of each production in a two-page circular, in which the exhibitor is referred for further details to the press-book. This "Selling-Sheet' as it is called describes the classes to which the picture will appeal, some of the critical scenes and situations, the theme, the nature of the exploitation, a short biography of the stars, and a sketchy idea of the accessories on the picture. An interesting feature of this "abridged press-book" is the information it gives about the exploitation and advertising methods used by other exhibitors on the picture previously.

The "Selling-Sheet," on which Equity is now working, will be kept up-to-the-minute, and information added weekly, as it is received at the Equity offices.

Federated Convention Held

All Members at St. Louis Session; Announcements Expected Shortly

THE Federated Film Exchange of America held a meeting of all its members at St. Louis, Mo., starting with the directors' meeting on Sunday, November 14, and the membership meeting starting Monday and ending on Thursday night.

The meeting was attended by every member of the Federated, consisting of the officers, J. L. Friedman, president, representing the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill.; W. E. Shallenberger, general manager, of New York; J. E. Pearce, vice-president, representing the Pearce Films, New Orleans, La., and Atlanta, Ga.; D. J. Chatkin, representing the Consolidated Film Exchange, Los Angeles, Calif.; S. V. Grand, treasurer, representing the Federated Film Exchange of New England and H. Charnas, of the Standard Film Service, Cleveland, Ohio; A. G. Whyte, of the Empire State Film Co., New York City; Ben Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia, Pa.; Sam Werner, of the United Film Service, St. Louis, Mo.; W. G. Underwood, of the Southwest Federated Film Exchange, Dallas, Tex.; H. A. Kyler, of the Supreme Photoplays, Denver, Col.; Al Kahn, Crescent Film Co., Kansas City; M. J. Frisch, Greater Productions, Inc., Des Moines; F. W. Thayer, Merit Film Corp., Minneapolis, Minn.; Ralph Wettstein, Mid-West Distributing Co., Milwaukee; H. Lande, Quality Film Corp.; P. Oletsky, Federated Film Exchange, of Baltimore, Md.

No definite statement could be secured at the time of going to press regarding the activities of the Convention, but it is understood that an announcement would be forthcoming within a very short time as to certain pictures contracted for at this Convention.

Wrong Film Credited to T. Hayes Hunter

In the issue of November 27th of the News, a photograph of T. Hayes Hunter, who is now directing for Dial Film, bears a caption announcing that Mr. Hunter was the director of "The Dwelling Place of Light." A communication from the headquarters of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation requests that this statement be corrected. Mr. Hunter did not direct "The Dwelling Place of Light" but "Desert Gold"; both these pictures are Benjamin Hampton productions.

Little of Canyon Picture Is Changed

Announcement have just been issued by the main offices of the Canyon Pictures Corporation in New York to the effect that the release originally entitled "Danger" has been changed to "The Fighting Stranger."

This move was taken upon the suggestion of several of the independent exchanges which have purchased the right for the Franklyn Farnum series of five reel westerns.

Roy Marshall Directs Art Acord Series

Roy Marshall, formerly on the directorial staff of the Hobart Bosworth productions for J. Parker Read, Jr., has been given the megaphone to direct Art Acord in his series of two-reel Westerns at the Special Pictures studio, replacing Walter de Courcey. The Acord series is sponsored by Western Photoplays, Inc., and will be released by the Special Pictures Corporation.

Harry Weiss, president of the Superior Screen Service, of Chicago, announces that he has acquired the exclusive rights in Indiana and Illinois for the release of all Sherman productions.

Superior Screen Service is one of the youngest, but one of the liveliest independent exchanges in the Middle West. Both Harry Weiss and Fred Aiden, secretary-treasurer, are widely known to exhibitors booking out of Chicago.

Many Thrills Seen in "Cowboy Jazz"

"Cowboy Jazz," the two-reel novelty western now being distributed by S. & E. Enterprises, is described as a picture showing "The daredevils of the West in stunts and thrills." Throughout the entire two reels the various performers take chances with their lives in the handling of wild steers and unbroken horses. Several accidents are said to have occurred during the filming of "Cowboy Jazz."

Day Succeeds Proctor as Allied Manager

Harvey Day, a well known theatrical and moving picture producer and manager, has assumed the general management of the Allied Independent Attractions, Inc., succeeding Ralph Proctor, who has assumed the management of the Stoll Film Corporation. Harry Leonhardt is president of the Allied with O. E. Chaney as secretary and treasurer.

Big New Orleans House Books Monty Banks

The home office of the Federated Film Exchanges of America, Inc., are in receipt of a letter from Pearce Films of New Orleans, who are the Federated franchise holders for that territory, to the effect that the Tudor, New Orleans leading theatre, has contracted for the Monty Banks comedies.

Omaha Exchangemen in Flying Trip East

M. Wintraub, head of the Fontenelle Feature Film Company, of Omaha, made a hasty trip to New York to sign with the Canyon Pictures Corporation for rights to their Franklyn Farnum serial, "Vanishing Trails" recently. Mr. Wintraub states that in Iowa and Nebraska the exhibitors would much prefer to give their business to an independent exchange. The greatest difficulty, however, he stated, was in obtaining productions of uniform quality on the independent market.

"The Galloping Devil" Press Book Ready

The press book on "The Galloping Devil", in which Franklyn Farnum is being starred by the Canyon Pictures Corporation has just come off the press. One of the distinguishing points of this publication is the department devoted to special articles written by experts upon the subjects of theatre advertising and program building.

Cuneo Starting His Second

"The Ranger and the Law" Selected for Capital Film's Favorite

W. D. RUSSELL, general manager of the Capital Film Company, announced this week that work has started on the second five-reel western drama starring Lester Cuneo.

"The Ranger and the Law" is the story selected for this production.

Mr. Cuneo will be supported by an all star cast and have as his lead Francelia Billington who played the doctor's wife in Eric Von Stroheim's "Blind Husbands."

Miss Billington is a very fine addition to the Cuneo Company as she has had a world of experience before the eye of the camera. Besides playing the feminine lead in "Blind Husbands" for Universal, she was starred in "The Day She Paid." Prior to her connection with Universal, she worked at the Griffith, Reliance, Majestic and American studios.

"The Ranger and the Law," according to a statement from W. D. Russell, production manager for Capital on the coast, will be one of the most gripping westerns ever produced.

The Capital Film Company's faith in the Independent field is so strong that it announces that every effort is to be put forth on this next Cuneo release to make it incomparable as a box office attraction.

To Screen "The Foreigner"

Picturization of Ralph Connor's Story to Be Shown at Biltmore

RALPH CONNOR'S story of "The Foreigner" will be screened for the first time in New York at the Biltmore Hotel on Friday evening, December 3. It is the occasion of the annual dance and dinner given by the Canadian Club of New York and will be one of the most select affairs of the season. Admission is by invitation from the officials of the club.

A private presentation for critics, friends and the trade will be given at a later date by the management.

This is the first of the Ralph Connor stories directed by Henry MacRae, and intepreted by the following: Gaston Glass, Wilton Lackaye, Robert T. Haines, William Colvin, Jule Cowles, Nathaniel Sach, Dan Duffy, Bigelow Cooper, Edward Elkas, Gordon Standing, Wilton Lackaye, Jr., Edna Shipman, Anne Sutherland, Gladys Coburn, Frances Eldredge, Alice Lawrence and Kate Price.

Every foot of this picture was "shot" north of the International border, and has already created such an interest in Canada, England and Australia, as well as the United States, that unusual inducements are being made the management to book upon a sharing basis, it is stated.

No definite arrangements, however, have been decided upon for its exploitation as the usual drawing power of the author in many countries warrants an unusual treatment, it is explained. George H. Doran, and Gosset and Dunlap, the publishers of the Ralph Connor stories in America, are arranging a "tie-up" for publicity exploitation in this country and similar methods will be adopted by the various publishers abroad.

Co-operation Secret of "Son of Tarzan" Success

According to reports from the Coast, the director-photodramatist combination formed by Harry Revier and Roy Somerville is bringing forth great results in their production of "The Son of Tarzan" as a big special serial for the National Film Corporation.

They work in absolute harmony in the preparation of the script and the outlining of each day's activities. Sets, locations, characters, situations and action are all thoroughly discussed and threshed out before being written into the photodrama and filmed by the camera. Consequently, the episodes on the screen are smooth and logical in plot development and are full of pep.

This constant cooperation between director and photodramatist is of inestimable value in the production of a serial such as "The Son of Tarzan," which combines thrills, romance and sensationalism with the high technical standard and plot consistency to be found in a dramatic feature. The world's rights to the serial are controlled by David P. Howells.

Gaumont Changes Title of Feature

Gaumont announces that the title of "The Masquerade of Truth," the third of its series of features, which stars Paul Capalleni, has been changed to "The Infatuation of Youth." This picture was recently purchased by First National of New York, and when signing the contract, Mr. Clark, of that company, stated that he considered it by far the best that Gaumont has offered to the trade.

"Copperhead" Dramas in Big Demand

Photo Products Export Company, handling the sales of Breed-Howell's series of ten two-reel "Copperhead" dramas, reports that this series of pictures has exceeded in popular demand any other series of pictures ever handled by its organization. According to reports from the state-rights' buyers, handling the bookings the "Copperhead" series are especially attractive in the smaller houses and have met with much success as fillers on the programs of the first-run houses.

Strong Cast for Edna Shipman Selected

A strong supporting cast has been picked by Legend Film Productions, Inc., to surround Edna Shipman and John Junior in their initial Legend two-reel special light comedy, "A Million — More or Less," written by Treve Collins, Jr., and directed by Tefft Johnson.

The Legend Co. is bending every effort and sparing no expense to establish a new standard for two-reel comedies, not only from the standpoint of story, acting and direction, but artistic production as well, reads an announcement from the Legend headquarters.

Grace Cunard, who is returning to the screen in "The Man Hater," to be offered to the states rights field by C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation

Chester Conklin Begins Two-Reel Comedy

Chester Conklin this week began work at the Special Pictures studio on his third two-reel comedy under his new contract with the A. L. Hart productions. "The Winner Loses" is the working title. The story was written by Frank Terry, author of several Harold Lloyd successes, and the continuity created by Everett Maxwell, well known Saturday Evening Post writer. Conklin will have the role of a small town tailor, which should afford him many opportunities for his style of fun making. Lillian Hackett has been engaged as Conklin's feminine lead in this comedy. Harry Edwards will direct.

Cast of "Life" Play in Broadway Successes

Several players in William A. Brady's production, "Life," are now appearing in Broadway stage successes. Curtis Cooksey is playing "Thy Name is Woman," opposite Mary Nash: Nita Naldi is seen in a prominent part in "Opportunity": Rod La Rocque was recently in the Alice Brady play "Anna Ascends" as was also Effingham Pinto. Leeward Meeker, also of "Life," is playing in "Opportunity."

Scene from "Below the Deadline," a special feature to be offered independent exchanges by Ascher Productions, Inc.

"Top Notch" Producer Plan Exploitation

Upon the completion of the first four two reel "Top Notch" comedies made by the Plymouth Producing and Distributing Syndicate, of Cleveland, O., of which Joseph Rybak is president, a private showing was arranged for a number of moneyed men, and, according to reports, an unlimited financial backing for further production and exploitation was obtained. This company is now preparing for its big competition among theatre patrons, when $7,800 will be awarded to those who select the best titles for each "Top Notch" comedy.

Edgar Jones Will Make Series for Arrow

A contract has been closed between Edgar Jones and the Arrow Film Corporation whereby Mr. Jones is to produce two special pictures for distribution by the Arrow.

Mr. Jones has long been identified with the motion picture industry, having produced a series of two-reelers known as the Northwood dramas which were also distributed by Arrow. Work has already started on the first picture, title of which will be announced in the near future and the picture is scheduled for release on December fifteenth. Just prior to the release date Arrow will inaugurate an extensive publicity and advertising campaign for the Edgar Jones Productions.

"Honeymoon Ranch" Pre-Release in Texas

"Honeymoon Ranch," Bert Lubin's five-reel western feature, in which Allene Ray and Harry McLaughlin are starred and which is adapted from a Tex O'Reilly story will have pre-release showings in Houston and San Antonio during the latter part of November.

This was decided upon because Allene Ray, the winner of the motion picture beauty contest, is a Texas girl and well known in both these cities. Unusual interest is centered upon her in the Lone Star State.

Second Joan Film Release

"Service Stripes," Billy West Two-Reeler, Ready for Exchanges

THE second release of the "one-a-month" schedule of Joan's Billy West two-reel comedies, is announced this week. It goes under the title of "Service Stripes," and includes in its cast of sixteen Ethelyn Gibson, leading lady, and Sam Ash, who takes the heavy role. The completion of "Service Stripes" was delayed a week, states Equity, due to the fact that the introduction of some novel touches towards the end was not originally planned, and required the shipment to the West studio of specially-constructed apparatus.

Here is Billy West as he appears in his latest Joan comedy, "Service Stripes"

The story of "Service Stripes" is laid in prison, and the opening scene shows a husky guard standing duty at the prison wall, when he is suddenly startled by the appearance of the convict in the garb of the wall itself, his clothes being camouflaged to resemble a layer of bricks. This device failing West conceives others to facilitate his escape.

Peter Oletsky of Baltimore, Jow Skirboll of Pittsburgh, Ben Amsterdam of Philadelphia, Sam Zierler of New York, Tom Branon of Charlotte and William Underwood of Dallas—all of them buyers of the series of twelve two-reelers have expressed themselves unanimously in approval of West's second effort, and report a great exhibitor-demand for the two-reelers.

Sees Rise of Series Making

Canyon Executives Believe Buyers Prefer Series of Pictures

THAT intelligent supervision of production by independent producers will be the greatest benefit possible to the State Right market, is the belief of J. M. Goldstein and J. Weinberg, the executives of the Canyon Pictures Corporation, of New York City. By "intelligent supervision" they mean more than careful attention to the making of a single picture. They mean the application of sound economic theories. And they believe that in making a series of pictures instead of a single production they are putting into practise an unfailing business principle which will curtail expenses; be more acceptable to the exchanges, who are assured a steady supply of pictures, and satisfactory to the exhibitor, who can promise a successor to the initial picture.

"In the past," stated Mr. Goldstein, "the cast, director and entire technical force were hired for a short time to make one picture. Naturally, if a producer can assure his force an extended engagement, they would be willing to accept smaller salaries. It also cuts down studio and overhead expenses.

"Now there is no reason, of course, of making a series of pictures if they are not acceptable to the exchanges. But give the State Right men a star whom they know has drawing power in the box-office, and you will find that a series of pictures starring him or her, is not only acceptable, but eagerly desired, by these men. They want to feel that they can be given other pictures of the same style at a definite time, instead of being entirely ignorant of when they will have another to offer. It gives them a real exchange. It enables them to compete with a regular program company. A series of pictures is a nucleous about which they may build up their other product."

On the left, J. Weinberg, president; and on the right, J. Goldstein, secretary and treasurer of Canyon Pictures Corporation

Mr. Goldstein and Mr. Weinberg are so firmly convinced of the desirability of a series of pictures over productions, that they announce they will shortly start production on at least two series of productions, to consist of six or eight pictures each, which will feature both male and female stars. Canyon Pictures is now offering a series of Westerns starring Franklyn Farnum, which have already won high praise from exchangemen.

"Of course," continued Mr. Weinberg, "the series must be of uniform quality. An exchangeman must feel that in seeing two of a series of six pictures he is seeing the standard picture."

Speaking of the popularity of a series with exhibitors themselves, Mr. Goldstein stated, that for the same reason that an exchangeman prefers a continued flow of pictures of the same style, so does an exhibitor. "There is a growing tendency among all independent producers," he said, "to adopt this view of production. The independent exchangeman has stern competition, and he must have sufficient pictures of high enough quality to place him in the class with the program companies. The making of a series of pictures is a benefit to all concerned—the producer, the exchangeman, and the exhibitor and it will not be long before more independent producers will realize it."

S-E Will Have Road Show

Two Pictures and Monologist to Make Up Complete Program

DUE to the exploitation qualities of "It Might Happen To You" and "Cowboy Jazz," the two state right productions now being distributed by S. & E. Enterprises, this organization is offering these pictures as a combined road show attraction. A complete program has been made up for the various state right buyers who wish to take advantage of this opportunity to secure a road-show. This program includes the presentation of "Cowboy Jazz," the two-reel western production showing the Champion cowboys of the world in "stunts and thrills," followed by "It Might Happen To You," the five-reel feature comedy starring Billy Mason, supported by a company of wild animal actors including lions, monkeys and dogs. In several instances this complete S. & E. program will be road-showed by state right buyers in conjunction with a cowboy monologist making a personal appearance with "Cowboy Jazz," and a troupe of monkey actors who are to be presented prior to the showing of "It might Happen To You."

It is said that many buyers have enthusiastically endorsed these two pictures as a combined road show, due to the animals, which present opportunities for novel and "bally-hoo" advertising. Opportunity is said to be afforded the showman to exploit this combination attraction in advance of its playing dates by the use of cowboys riding through the streets, the exhibition of lions or monkeys in a street cage, and also by means of an unusual "teaser" campaign in conjunction with the title, "It Might Happen To You."

S. & E. Enterprises believe this is the first time that two productions of such novel character as "Cowboy Jazz" and "It Might Happen To You" have been offered state right buyers as a combined road-show, and it is believed that this method of handling state right productions marks a new departure in this particular field.

Penny Ross Cartoons to Be Ready in December

Penny Ross, one of the most widely known cartoonists of this country and the creator of "Mamma's Angel Child," featured by leading newspapers for a number of years, will shortly add to his popularity through the medium of his forthcoming "Esther Starring Series" of animated cartoons.

The "Esther Starring Series" will be handled by the Merit Film Exchange Company, 207 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago. The president, D. Padoor, states that the first release is scheduled for December 1st, and will be followed by one each week for fifty-two weeks.

Initial Kineto Review Pronounced a Success

"The Emerald Isle," the first of the Kineto Reviews to be shown in any theatre, is scoring a remarkable success states Kineto. It was first chosen by S. L. Rothafel, of the Capitol, and presented by him with a musical accompaniment as a solo feature.

Then Edward Hyman of the Strand in Brooklyn chose it as a special feature in his house and in his own words, "it went over like a house afire." His musical accompaniment included a soloist as did Mr. Rothafel's.

Charles Urban, president of the Kineto Company of America, which publishes the Kineto Reviews, is elated at the spontaneous outburst of enthusiasm which has greeted this first bow of the Kineto Reviews.

6 Series of Releases Will Be Added to Short Subjects

SIX more series of releases are soon to be added to the exclusive Short Subject program of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation according to the announcement of President R. C. Cropper. During the past three weeks plans and details for these new additions have been worked out, contracts drawn, closed and signed which, it is said, will involve the expenditure of more than a half million dollars for the Reelcraft output.

There will be a feature Series of twelve two-reel Mystery dramas, built along entirely new and different lines from anything now offered the Public. The pictures will be founded on a series of well known stories written by a nationally known author. The production unit for this series has already been formed and has several well known names in the personnel which will be announced shortly.

Another series of two-reel comedies to be released every other week, will be ready for release early in January. A brand name will be selected for these comedies. They will be what might be termed "organization-built" and not personally made by any one star or individual. A comedy producing unit is being organized that will number only experts in their special lines from the scenario writer to the comedians, including a well known comedy director.

Two new single reel comedy releases are also to be added, one featuring a comedian of no small reputation, surrounded by an organization just completing a series of one reelers for the market. The other single reel offering will be a slap-stick comedy with a weekly release. Both of these series are now being made ready for production at the Hollywood Studio of Reelcraft.

Reelcraft will also release a series of re-issued single reel comedies of a well known brand and trade name, remembered for their box-office pulling powers by Exhibitors.

The new single reel Reelcraft Scenic Nature Beautiful scenic releases announced three weeks ago, will be ready for the market and the first release date set for December first.

Each of the series above listed will have an individual advertising campaign in its behalf in the national trade papers. Complete lines of advertising accessories are to be made for each release including paper, photos, slides and advertising cuts. The first of these new series will be announced within the next two weeks.

Distribution will be through the Reelcraft and Allied Independent Exchanges throughout the United States and Canada.

Far East Rights Sold on "Determination"

The United States Photoplay Corporation has sold the rights of the super-feature photoplay "Determination" now under production at the studios in Grantwood, N. J., for India, Burmah and Ceylon to J. Pearson & Co., of Bombay, India. Mr. Pearson personally concluded the deal with Capt. Stoll.

The company also announces that Al Lincoln, well known on stage and screen, has been engaged as leading man in "Determination". On the screen he has played opposite Mme. Olga Petrova and Mabelle Trunnelle, and has appeared with Arnold Daly.

Canyon Sells Big Serial

Celebrated Players Purchase Two Territories on "Vanishing Trails"

ONE of the outstanding events of the past week in the independent field of the Middle West was the purchase by the Celebrated Players of the big Western Serial "Vanishing Trails," for Illinois and Indiana.

This serial, which stars Franklyn Farnum and has Mary Anderson in chief support, was made by Colonel William N. Selig, has proven to be among the most successful picture offerings of its kind. The story was written by William E. Wing and is in fifteen episodes.

The deal was consummated for the Celebrated Players by J. L. Friedman, who is now busy superintending the initial work in an exploitation campaign which will bring this serial squarely before the attention of every exhibitor in Illinois and Indiana.

Mr. Friedman expressed himself as confident that the Celebrated Players would eclipse even the high records set by other independent exchanges which had purchased right in their territories for the "Vanishing Trails." The work which Franklyn Farnum does in this serial is said to rival and in some instances surpass the athletic courage and prowess of the most strenuous of our motion picture stars.

Both Joseph Goldstein and Jack Weinberg, heads of the Canyon Pictures Corporation, in commenting upon the sale to the Celebrated Players, said in part, "We are naturally very much gratified with the record of 'Vanishing Trails.' It has always been the policy of the Canyon Pictures to handle only that type of picture which would find a constant market. This serial and other productions from the studio of Colonel William N. Selig, which we have handled on a states rights basis, were all made to fit the specific needs of the independent exchangeman and the enterprising exhibitor."

"Tarzan" Serial in Demand

Houses Tabooing Serials Before Book Pioneer Release, is Report

A SPECIAL announcement from the headquarters of the Pioneer Film Corporation, issued over the signature of president A. E. Lefcourt, tells of a new record in bookings for a serial having been established with "The Son of Tarzan", the big David P. Howells production.

It is pointed out by the Pioneer Film Corporation that bookings up to date indicate that scores of houses where serials have been tabooed, in the past, will show "The Son of Tarzan" serial for fifteen weeks, commencing with the release date which has been set by the Pioneer for the later part of next month.

There will be first runs in every section of New York, it is stated. Private showings for exhibitors are being given daily at the Pioneer headquarters, and an open invitation is extended to those in the industry to witness any or all of the episodes of the serial. Those who have seen "The Son of Tarzan" acclaim it the biggest serial done yet, asserts Pioneer.

The New York Evening World recently concluded the story in its columns, and commencing on December 27th the Brooklyn Daily Times will commence a new screen version of "The Son of Tarzan" in its columns. This arrangement has been made through permission granted by the author of "The Son of Tarzan" stories, Edgar Rice Burroughs.

At the headquarters of the Pioneer Film Corporation, 130 W. 46th street it was said that every previous record, so far as serials are concerned, has been smashed into "smithereens" by the "Son of Tarzan."

"Life" to Be Sold Abroad

Sir Wm. Jury Asks for Print: Brady Seeking Broadway House

WILLIAM A. BRADY is in receipt of a cable from Sir William Jury asking that a print of "Life" be forwarded immediately to London that Sir William may conclude at the earliest possible moment negotiations now pending, covering the purchase of the Brady picture for Great Britain. Sir William Jury also who bought "The Whip," a previous successful Brady production, for Great Britain. With the acquisition of "Life" he is demonstrating again his policy of acquiring the biggest American productions for distribution abroad immediately they are available here.

In connection with "Life" there is strong liklihood that the Brady picture before long will be housed in a legitimate theatre on Broadway. While at the moment there is a certain amount of congestion in the New York theatres devoted to high-class attractions, Mr. Brady has started negotiations looking to the placing of "Life" in the New York theatre for a Broadway run at the earliest possible moment. The success achieved by the picture when presented as a legitimate attraction in Stamford recently, at which time it showed a box office pulling power of unusual strength, has actuated Mr. Brady in his desire to secure a New York theatre for "Life."

Mr. Brady's office, it is announced, has been deluged daily with offers for territorial rights on "Life," which are being held in abeyance temporarily pending the result of Mr. Brady's quest for a Broadway theatre in which to present the picture.

Sun Films Buy Dalton Two Reel Westerns

Emmett Dalton, world-famous bandit of early days, reports that he has sold to the Sun Films, Inc., of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle, the rights to his series of two-reel Westerns, featuring himself for Arizona, California, Nevada, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Alaska and Hawaiian Islands.

President Wyatt, of the Sun Films, after looking over many independent films in California, decided that the Dalton thrillers were the best average productions he had seen and personally closed the deal with Dalton.

Dalton will now turn his attention to the production of big thrillers in which he will play the lead. as he did in his previous six-reel producton, "Beyond the Law."

WHAT THE MAKERS SAY ABOUT PICTURES

Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Strand theatre, New York City, pays "Kismet," the Robertson-Cole super-special, starring Otis Skinner, the great tribute of saying that it broke all records during its week stay at his house.

In his letter to Robertson-Cole officials, he said: "I have the honor to announce that Otis Skinner in 'Kismet' has broken every record, both daily and weekly, ever held at the Strand."

This is a record for the great picture fraught with deepest significance to all exhibitors, says Robertson Cole, considering the standing of the Strand, and its reputation for discriminate bookings.

"Desert Gold" Cleans Up for Ohio Exhibitor

H. J. Ochs, Hodkinson representative in Cleveland, Ohio, has sent to the home offices of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, a letter recently received by him from a Lakeville, Ohio, exhibitor. The letter follows: "Just a few lines to let you know how we got along with 'Desert Gold.' The people here still had the opinion that we would not get the film of 'Desert Gold' and I had an awful time for the last two weeks telling them it would positively be here. Well, Saturday afternoon they called in on the telephone for miles around and when 7:30 rolled around they came driving in here from as far as twenty miles to see it.

New Frisco Studio Opened

6,000 Travel to San Mateo to Inspect New Company's Studio

WITH a large portion of the San Francisco public excited over the possibility and probability of having a big share of the film production industry in the vicinity of San Francisco in the near future, and the local daily papers full of the advent of filmdom in the northern city, more than 6,000 persons travelled the short distance to San Mateo, last Sunday, to witness the formal opening and public inspection day program at the Pacific Motion Picture Studios Corporation, at that place.

Producers welcome the prospect of a studio in the vicinity of San Francisco, declared Isador Bernstein, director of productions for the Universal Film Co., who with other Los Angeles folk journeyed north for the opening of the large studios.

Hundreds of prominent people, including mayors, congressmen and other officials attended the exercises. Alf Goulding who is filming a picture in San Francisco on Chinatown and North Beach locations, with his star "Snub" Pollard, brought his company of seventeen to the studio site where a scene was filmed later to be produced on the Pathe program.

H. H. Van Loan, scenario writer and others prominent on San Francisco's film row, together with many well known theatre managers addressed the gathering.

Shirley Mason in New Role

Has Started Work on New Story Written by Pearl Doles Bell

THE New York headquarters of the William Fox Film Corporation reports that Shirley Mason has started work on her next starring vehicle under the Fox banner. The story for Miss Shirley's new vehicle was written by Pearl Doles Bell, the author of the two previous stories in which Miss Mason has been starred. The first story, "Her Elephant Man," served to introduce Miss Mason as a Fox star. The role of a pretty circus performer won instant popularity for Shirley Mason in this initial production.

The second Bell story in which Miss Mason made her bow was called "Love's Harvest," adapted from the author's novel entitled, "His Harvest,' which gave her a role of a different sort and emphasized her versatility as a screen star.

Comedy, slightly tinctured with drama, dominates the Paramount release schedule for November 21, the features being Billie Burke in "The Frisky Mrs. Johnston" and Bryant Washburn in "Burglar Proof."

The Billie Burke feature is a picturization of Clyde Fitch's play, "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson," which was produced with Amelia Bingham in the title role in New York in 1903. Miss Burke has the role of a young American widow who during the carnival season in Paris has come to be called "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson."

"Burglar Proof," with Bryant Washburn as its star, is from a story by William Slavens McNutt. Tom Geraghty wrote the scenario and Maurice Campbell directed.

World M. P. Supervisors Report Success

The three traveling zone supervisors of the World Motion Picture Corporation are reporting one hundred per cent success. M. F. Tobias, who left New York last week for New England, has wired the home office of the World at 500 Fifth avenue that he has met with success in every city and town in which he has visited. Mr. Tobias expects to cover the larger New England towns calling on the newspaper editors and exhibitors.

F. G. Wallace and A. L. Selig, Southern and Central and West Coast supervisors, respectively, have reported contracts from every town and city in which they have called during the last month. In each city or town a newspaper has signified its intention of using stills for illustrating purposes.

"Virgin of Stamboul" Shown at Panama

Election night along the Canal Zone was one riot of moving pictures. In almost all of the Canal club houses, in the Y. M. C. A. and Army clubs, elaborate entertainments, built around various feature productions, were shown in connection with election returns. In Balboa the interest was heightened by a mock election staged around a local matter of humorous aspect.

The club house at Ancon staged the biggest entertainment seen there in several years. The feature of the evening was a showing of "The Virgin of Stamboul," the big Priscilla Dean oriental picture, which was loaned to the club members by the Canal Zone Branch of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. As soon as this feature was run off in Ancon, it was rushed to Balboa, where a new audience was waiting to see it.

Dorothy Dalton Back in Northwest Picture

Dorothy Dalton is back again in the role of a daughter of the great Northwest, the type of character that suited her so well in her greatest success, "The Flame of the Yukon," in which she starred three years ago. In her return she says she is happier than she has been for some time. As Collette Brissac, daughter of a French-Canadian miner, in "The Teaser," a story of the Canadian Northwest, Miss Dalton is giving a character delineation which, it is said, is bound to make this super picture one of the best things she has done for Paramount.

Window Display Taught by Motion-Picture

How the show window of the retail merchant can be used to increase his profits is demonstrated by means of a new one-reel moving picture production, produced by Jam Handy of The Bray Studios.

"Window Advertising" was produced for the National Cash Register Company by Mr. Handy as one of four units entitled "Getting the Most Out of Retailing."

Mae Marsh Again on Screen

Will Return as Star of Robertson Cole's "The Little 'Fraid Lady"

MAE MARSH returns to the screen after an absence of more than two years in "The Little 'Fraid Lady," the Robertson-Cole super-special which was based on Marjorie Benton Cooke's novel called "The Girl Who Lived in the Woods," and which is soon to be released.

The picture presents not only the atmosphere of the Great North Woods, but contrasts society life against this picturesque background, then shifting to Greenwich Village, in which are shown not only the homes of artists, but the whole quarter in holiday array and spirit, as well as a most colorful performance which is put on as part of a bal masque, and which involves the use of hundreds of dancers and special performers.

The heart story of "The Little 'Fraid Lady" is one which, it is stated, starts in mystery and ends in a burst of rapid action and big scenes. While seeming at first a quiet pastoral study it suddenly stands forth pulsating with life, and baring the heart of big city intrigue and the daring struggles of the underworld against the forces of order and right, declares Robertson-Cole.

Miss Marsh is surrounded by a supporting cast including Tully Marshall, Kathleen Kirkham, Charles Meredith, Greta Hartman and Herbert Prior. In the cast also is little George Barthelon, Jr., four years and a half old, the nephew of Miss Marsh, who plays a large part in the story, his fall down a hill, whither he had been pushed by his pet dog being one of the motivating forces of the action.

"The Little 'Fraid Lady" is described to be rich in settings and spectacles.

Goldwyn Coast Plant Busy

Four Companies Are Well Into New Productions; Three Others Starting

AT the Goldwyn Coast studios four companies are well into the making of four new pictures, and three others have just begun.

On Monday last Frank Lloyd began the photographing of Gouverneur Morris' original scenario, "The Water Lily," a tale of the Boxer rebellion; and Victor Schertzinger, a day or two before "shot" the first of the interiors of Tom Moore's new stellar vehicle, a picturization of Archibald Clavering Gunter's old novel, "Mr. Barnes of New York," which was the literary sensation of the early eighties and which later was a celebrated stage success.

Mason N. Litson last week completed the tenth of the "Edgar" comedies by Booth Tarkington and is now at work on preliminary arrangements for the eleventh of the series of comedies of boy life.

Will Rogers and his director, Clarence Badger, back a week from "location" on Irving Cobb's story, "Boys Will Be Boys," are making excellent and rapid progress on photographing the studio scenes of that famous story which last year had a very successful career in New York as a spoken comedy with Harry Beresford in the role that the cowboy star will create for the screen.

Work on Gertrude Atherton's first original scenario was held up several days last week on account of the illness of Charles Clary, a member of the cast. Wallace Worsley is directing this production.

Director E. Mason Hopper is reported to be making excellent progress on Rupert Hughes' original screen story which went into production a few weeks ago under the working title of "Mr. and Miserable Jones."

First National Releases Entertain Harding

Associated First National Pictures states that seven of its productions were selected as the only motion-pictures chosen for the entertainment of President-elect Harding and his party on board the Parisimina during his trip of inspection of Panama Canal. The request for the pictures came from the United Fruit Company, which operates the Parisimina, to E. V. Richards of the Saenger Amusement Company. Mr. Richards selection comprised the following First National releases:

"Peaceful Valley" and "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," the first two independently produced Charles Ray features; "The Master Mind" the Whitman Bennett production starring Lionel Barrymore; "The Branded Woman," starring Norma Talmadge; "Old Dad," starring Mildred Harris Chaplin; "Nomads of the North," a James Oliver Curwood production" and "Dangerous Business," starring Constance Talmadge.

Lauds Ray's Art Titles

The art titles in Charles Ray's "19 and Phyllis" made such a hit at the Rothacker Chicago laboratory that Superintendent George Gibson addressed the following tribute to the Charles Ray Productions, Inc.:

"I must tell you how well the laboratory crowd liked the art titles of your latest picture. To put it tritely, they created a sensation. They are a refreshing departure from what the public is accustomed to seeing on the screen."

"April Folly" Release Delayed Slightly

Delay in the arrival of the prints from the Los Angeles studios of "April Folly," the latest Mermaid Comedy to be released by Educational Films, is responsible for the tardy issue of the picture by several of the exchanges. Prints have now been shipped to all the exchanges, announces Educational. Some of the leading theatres of the country will feature next week, it is stated.

Striking Views Mark Pathe News No. 91.

Pathe News No. 91, the first of the series of eight feature numbers to be released in connection with the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the topical reel, has excited much favorable comment since its release on November 13th, according to a statement emanating from the home-office of the Pathe Exchange, Inc. The views of the solemn ceremonies attending the funeral of the late Lord Mayor of Cork in Ireland have been generally accorded first place.

Morton Saint Clair, a young French flyer, is "shot" standing upright on the top wing of a plane which circles about the Woolworth tower, swoops under the Brooklyn Bridge and makes a complete circuit of Manhattan Isle. Al Wetzel, the Pathe cameraman, also took close-ups, shown in this reel, of a boxing match between the French daredevil and another companion in rashness atop of the wing of the speeding plane. Mt. Etna in eruption is also a feature of this news strip.

In Pathe News No. [illegible] of the specials, there are startling pictures of duck-hunting by aeroplane. The plane overtakes the flock on the wing and passes through the fluttering birds, thus producing for the audience, says the Pathe statement, the "sensations of actual flight."

Aero Announces Opening of Universal Feature

News of a tie-up between an exhibitor and the Curtiss Aeroplane agency comes from the Philippine Islands. The Empire theatre in Manila engaged "The Great Air Robbery," the spectacular melodrama made by the late Lieut. O. L. Lockler for Universal Film, for a week's run. The Empire management arranged with a local Curtiss agency to provide an aeroplane which flew over the city several days in advance of the showing and dropped thousands of pamphlets, descriptive of the picture and announcing its opening at the Empire theatre on the following Monday. The stunt is said to have proved a most effective tie-up from the box office angle.

"The Thief" Ready November 28

Presents Pearl White Again as Feature Star of Fox

As his third presentation of Pearl White in her feature series, William Fox announces "The Thief" as ready for general release November 28. This offering was drawn from Henri Bernstein's stage play of the same title, produced originally in New York sent on tour for several seasons. Its translation to the screen is likely to see again in newer form the play that entertained hundreds of thousands the country over.

With this large following in readiness, it will be easy for showmen to capitalize on Pearl White's remarkable popularity, declares William Fox. Every possible advertising and exploitation aid to healthy box-office results is said to have been prepared. Prints are in readiness at Fox exchanges the world over, so the time has arrived for picture-showmen to go after their individual share of the prosperity that has invariably attended a Pearl White offering.

In "The Thief" the Fox organization declares that Miss White has an offering of her own choosing. In consultation with Director Charles Giblyn, she decided that this famous play would give her the opportunities she desired to prove herself rightfully established as a star graduated from the serial class into the realm of screen favorites who present their appeal in one self-contained production.

"The Thief" is classified as a "society drama"—but that need make neither manager or public "shy" at the prospect, declares Fox Film. For there is heavy drama, tense interest, a story that carries logic throughout its interesting details, according to the Fox statement, and enough of the melodramatic to purge its scenes of any frailties attributed to the usual "society" offering. There is "punch" and force in every screen detail of "The Thief," asserts the statement from the Fox Film headquarters.

But the very fact that Pearl White is permitted to garb herself in fashion's latest edicts—plus Miss White's native inventiveness in designing "creations"—will lend an appeal to women in any audience that might assemble anywhere. And these gowns are not intended to turn Miss White into a manakin—she acts in them; and when Pearl White starts acting her legion of admirers well know that she waits not to pose in pretty gowns just for the sake of posing.

William Fox promises a "big picture" in "The Thief," without going into superlatives. Director Giblyn and Miss White had their own way when it came to the matter of setting and casting the offering, and the results promise showmen an opportunity to go after the "Pearl White fans" with a vigor that may not alone lead to fat box-office takings, but an outcome of entire satisfaction to the public that pays the toll.

Charles Waldron heads Miss White's supporting company, enacting the role of an aggrieved husband, who looks to Wallace McCutcheon as the cause of all his anguish. George Howard, Dorothy Cummings, Sidney Herbert and Anthony Merlo are other players who carry important roles. Max Marcin and Paul H. Sloane translated the Bernstein play to the screen.

Showmen who exhibited "The White Moll," which introduced Miss White as star of complete dramas, and her second Fox picture, "Tiger's Cub," will best show the prospect of profits that are to come from presentation of "The Thief," declare Fox officials. The records show that as star of a single showing offering Miss White has attracted all the friends she made as a star of serials—and "The Thief" gives promise of still more firmly establishing her in favor as a star of completed dramas.

Robt. Bruce Back from Europe

ROBERT C. BRUCE, creator of Scenics Beautiful, which have been produced by Educational Films Corporation for more than five years, returned this week from a several months' expedition to Europe where he is said to have obtained a large amount of footage which promises to set a new mark in European scenic subjects.

Mr. Bruce first visited England and Scotland and then went to Switzerland and finally to Italy and France. Among the pictures which he made are some which show the beauties of Alpine scenery from a novel angle. Many of the views were made from an aeroplane along entirely new lines.

Bruce always prepares scenarios for his pictures in advance and works in his scenes to fit his subjects. He contends that the scenery of a country is as typical as its peoples themselves and he has undertaken to demonstrate this in the new product that he has just completed. He will spend the next several weeks cutting and titling his own product. The new pictures will not be released before 1921.

According to Educational the demand for the Bruce Scenics Beautiful is showing a constant increase and that the past year has seen fully double the number of theatres using scenics, the gain being evidenced in all classes of theatres. The last two Bruce series which are being released alternately, the one made along the British Columbian and Alaskan coast and the others in Cuba and Jamaica are said to be enjoying their first runs in the largest number of theatres that have ever regularly played single reelers. In many instances these pictures are uniformly given special musical interpretations. outlined in advance. With the exception of slight accidents it is said that practically every bit of material taken on his last expedition was found to fit in perfectly with the scenarios that he had outlined in advance.

Keen Rivalry in Pathe's Drive

Uncertain Conditions Have no Deterring Effect on Drive

REGARDLESS of the general uncertainty of conditions throughout the country, Pathe branch managers, in the third week of "Pearson Month" contest, have reported brilliant accomplishments to the home-office, both in collections and new business. Even in those territories where the industrial situation, pending the "turn in the road" in the present crisis, is none too roseate, most favorable progress has been made by the Pathe exchanges, it is declared.

The race for first honors in the four divisions still remains a free-for-all. In two divisions, the leaders at the conclusion of the third week were holding some advantage, but even this margin could easily be wiped out in the final rush of business during the closing week.

More apparent even than during the second week is the fact that the winners during "Brunet Month" are likely to be upset in nearly every division, declares a statement from the Pathe headquarters, unless they set a whirlwind pace during the final seven days. At the end of the third week, the four victors in March were holding positions advantageous for the final spurt, yet none too comfortably situated to be assured of ultimate triumph, it is stated.

An entirely unexpected complexion has been placed on the $10,000 prize competition, in unforeseen strength developed by the New England and Southern exchanges, states Pathe. These sections have been the hardest hit by the economic readjustment, but despite this the exchanges in these territories are right up in front with a good chance of establishing the national high mark.

Outstanding in the many extraordinary feats reported in the contest thus far, is the increased bookings reported on the Pathe News. Two weeks after the opening of the "Pearson Month" drive, the Pathe News inaugurater its tenth anniversary. The service of this pioneer news reel has been augmented during anniversary month by a number of special features. One is the addition of specially staged thrill pictures, which are proving sensations. Another feature is the issuing of local editions, which exhibitors have found to be wonderful box office attractions, it is declared.

All departments of the Pathe organization are profiting by the run of business during "Pearson Month."

Coast Studios Shown in Christie Comedy

One of the most distinct novelties in film comedies is promised by Educational in "Movie Mad," a two-reel Christie which is shortly to be announced for release through Educational exchanges. As the title indicates, the story is built around production and a considerable part of the photography was done from aeroplanes.

Not only do the scenes include these novel shots of players at work, but they include panoramic views of various studios and will probably afford the average motion picturegoer the best appreciation of the scale of the work in Los Angeles that has ever been permitted.

"Movie Mad" marks the return of Dorothy Devore to the Christie studios after having been loaned to Charles Ray as his leading woman in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway." She and Neal Burns are featured in this new Christie.

Mayer Discusses Most Popular Type

What type of picture will be in demand during the next six months or the coming year?

Will the picture-goer's appetite continue on edge for the spiritual subject or the big dramatic production or will it embrace the spectacular offering, the comedy-drama, the sex problem or the light comedy?

Louis B. Mayer, producer of pictures for First National release, starring Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin, and a potential factor in the all-star production fields, says that the public's preference for certain types of pictures is influenced by what they see on the screen.

"The man who is trying to forecast the market demand of three or six or eight months from now on," says Mr. Mayer, "with a view of producing pictures to harmonize with public favor of that time, has but one thing to worry about. And that is to produce an unusual picture. If it is not of the type then in demand, it will create its own market."

Picture Is Greeted by Star's Home-Town

"Once to Every Woman" was given an elaborate showing recently at the New theatre in Baltimore, the home-town of Dorothy Phillips, the star of the production, according to word from the home-office of the Universal organization, which is releasing the picture. Miss Phillips' family, including her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Strible, her sister, Miss Genevive Strible, and her little daughter, Mary Holubar, and leading citizens and exhibitors from all parts of the Baltimore territory, were on hand for the showing which was an invitation affair.

Jules Levy, manager of the Washington branch of the Interstate Film Company, Inc., distributors of Universal pictures, arranged the presentation. The twenty-piece orchestra of the New theatre, led by Professor Cupero, a well known Baltimore musician, supplied the musical background for the picture, which is the screen version of the life and romance of a grand opera prima donna. The presentation was further enhanced by a series of songs rendered by Miss Edith Richard, a local musical celebrity.

Two of the leading theatres of Los Angeles are exhibiting Buster Keaton comedies for long runs something hitherto absolutely foreign to the policy of both houses, declares Metro.

At Grauman's Rialto "Convict 13" is scheduled for a six weeks' run in conjunction with "The Restless Sex." Mr. Grauman is said to have signed for the entire Keaton output.

At the Alhambra theatre, which is managed by Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser, "One Week," Keaton's initial comedy, is scheduled for a three weeks' run. This comedy is featured in connection with Charles Ray's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway."

To Check Selection of Story

Goldwyn Has Plan to Judge Opinion of Exhibitors

ANOTHER manifestation of how far motion picture producers have advanced beyond the haphazard method of selecting stories for the screen, is said to be found in a report from Goldwyn Pictures Corporation's studios at Culver City where an interesting system designed to determine accurately "what the public wants" has been put in operation with excellent results. A six months' test of this check on the taste of the public in photoplays has proven it to be of the greatest value in the choice of stories that have a strong box office value to exhibitors.

Recognizing that in the last analysis, the worth of a picture must necessarily be estimated by the public, and that the exhibitor is closer to the public than any other factor in the motion picture business, the Goldwyn Coast organization, for the past six months, has been receiving complete reports from the twenty-two Goldwyn exchanges, giving accurate returns on all current productions, together with comments from theatre managers.

These reports, reflecting accurately the preferences of the motion picture public in all parts of the country, are carefully studied by Abraham Lehr, vice president in charge of production, and J. G. Hawks, managing editor, who are thus enabled to know at any time just how much money a picture has taken in. They provide a definite answer to the question of what type of photoplay will draw the largest patronage, and offer a reliable guide for the selection of future subjects.

Supplementing the reports from exchanges, are the exhibitors' comments and reviews published in the various trade papers. These are carefully tabulated and referred to the Story Committee, which consist of Mr. Lehr, Mr. Hawks, Thompson Buchanan, Clayton Hamilton and Louis Sherwin.

8 Paramount Pictures in Dec.

EIGHT features, including Roscoe Arbuckle's second production of feature length, Lois Weber's first Paramount production and the fourth picture made by William C. Hart, as an independent producer-star, find places on the Paramount release schedule for December, as announced by Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Thomas Meighan in William De Mille's production, "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," leads off for the month on December 5. This picturization by Olga Printzlau of Leonard Merrick's novel brings back to the screen, after a long period of retirement, Mabel Van Buren, who at one time was one of the best known of picture stars. Others in the distinguished cast are Mayme Kelso, Margaret Loomis, Kathlyn Williams, Sylvia Ashton, Charles Ogle, Bertram Johns and Ruth Renick.

On the same day comes Dorothy Gish in "Flying Pat," a comedy by Virginia Withey. The scenario was written by Harry Carr and F. Richard Jones, and the latter directed the picture.

Pointed to as a combination of the talents of the screen's funniest actor and literature's funniest author, "The Life of the Party," starring Roscoe Arbuckle, is the delectable feature ready for comedy-hungry theatre patrons on December 12. The story is by Irvin Cobb, and was scenarized by Walter Woods. Joseph Henabery directed.

Also released the 12th is the Cosmopolitan production, "Heliotrope," scenarized and directed by George D. Baker from Richard Washburn Child's story, "A Whiff of Heliotrope." The production is one of drama, the prominent roles being in the hands of Frederick Burton, Diana Allen, Wilfred Lytell, Julia Swayne Gordon, Betty Milburn, William B. Mack, Thomas J. Findley and William H. Tooker.

December 19 marks the release of Lois Weber's first production for Paramount, "To Please One Woman." It was personally directed by Miss Weber, who also wrote the story and scenario. The cast includes Claire Windsor, Edith Kessler, Edward Burns, George Hackathorne, Mona Lisa, Howard Gay and L. C. Shumway.

The other release for the 19th is Bryant Washburn in "An Amateur Devil." Douglas Bronston wrote the scenario from a story by Jesse E. Henderson and Henry J. Bixton, entitled, "Wanted—a Blemish."

On the 26th, William S. Hart comes to the screen once again in a typical Western role in "The Testing Block," scenarized and directed by Lambert Hillyer from an original story by Mr. Hart.

The other concluding release of the month is the Thomas H. Ince production, "Silk Hosiery," starring Enid Bennett. Fred Niblo directed, the story being by Frank Dazey.

H. B. Warner in "Dice of Destiny," a new Pathe picture

New Christie Comedy in Broadway Houses

"A Tray Full of Trouble," latest of the two-reel Chester Comedies featuring Snooky, the Humanzee, occupies a prominent position in the bill at the Rivoli theatre this week along with "Fatty" Arbuckle in "The Life of the Party." Following its week's run at the Rivoli, "A Tray Full of Trouble" will go to the Rialto next week.

Denies Scarcity of Production

OFFICIALS of Associated First National Pictures deny that production is at low ebb on the West Coast and point to the activities of the various producing units that release their pictures through Associated First National Pictures in support of their statement. During the past week four special productions have been completed, and eight producing companies are still busy on forthcoming releases.

Outstanding among these just completed is Allan Holubar-Albert Kaufman production "Man, Woman, and Marriage." With the filming of the Senate scenes last Friday, this mammoth picturization goes to the cutting room with reports branding it as the greatest achievement to date of Director Holubar and according to the inhabitants of Holywood's film colony, the master piece of the star, Dorothy Phillips. It is claimed that the Holubar film ran 400,000 feet in length, which means that it will have to be reduced to one fifty-seventh of its original size.

Holubar is now having prepared a special music score to accompany the presentation of the picture and is devoting considerable time and stage space to the task of selecting a suitable prologue to accompany the production. Associated First National officials, convinced of the importance of "Man, Woman and Marriage," enlisted the services of M. Leone Bracker, well-known poster artist, to travel to the West Coast in order to pose Dorothy Phillips, James Kirkwood, Shannon Day, Robert Cain, Ralph Lewis, Emily Chichester and J. Barney Sherry of the Holubar cast for a series of tableaux which will be used for the lithographs.

First National Units Just Finish Four Big Features

The production required over eight months to film and while most of the sets were prepared in the Hollywood studios, other parts were made in Los Angeles, Chatsworth Park, San Francisco, Balboa Beach and in and around the famous Millionaires Row in Pasadena. The first print of the Holubar spectacle is expected to arrive in New York before December 1.

Sidney Franklin's initial independent production is finished, and the director is now applying the scissors to what he claims is his best work. It is a film version of Harold MacGrath's popular story, "Parrot and Company." The production is declared to be a particularly beautiful one, and in it has been incorporated some new double exposure scenes which will be a distinct innovation, declares First National. The cast includes Sylvia Breamer, Richard Dix, Molly Malone, Herbert Prior, Lloyd Whitlock and many others.

Charles Ray's fourth independent production, "The Old Swimmin' Hole," has also reached the cutting room. The famed James Whitcomb Riley poem is said to have lost none of its charm in the film version prepared by Bernard McConville. The production will abound with picturesque settings to delight the eye, and the story is portrayed by a cast which will be long remembered, including Laura La Plante, Marjorie Prevost, Charlotte Pearce, Lincoln Stedman, Lon Poff, Blanche Rose. The production was directed by Joseph De Grass.

If length of time and amount of absorption is any criterion as to the merits of a film production, Marshall Neilan's "Dinty" should be his greatest achievement. Neilan has spent seven months on the making of this mystery story, and spent over two months in the process of cutting and editing it. And not until last week was the negative shipped East to First National officials. The picture will serve to introduce Wesley Barry as a star and the supporting cast includes Colleen Moore, Marjorie Daw, Pat O'Malley, Noah Beery, Tom Gallery, J. Barney Sherry, Tom Wilson, Kate Price, Walter Chung and Aaron Mitchell. The last two names are the kiddies who are cast as playmates of "Dinty" played by Wesley Barry. One of the big scenes in the production will be the grounding of the steamship Great Northern in San Francisco Bay.

And no less than eight big productions are under way in the studios of First National's independent producers. Every conceivable type of photoplay is included in this list, ranging from two-reel comedies at the Henry Lehrman plant to James Oliver Curwood's thrilling North Woods story, "The Golden Snare."

Charles Ray in "Nineteen and Phyllis," a First National attraction.

Fox's Special in Tenth Week on Broadway

"Over the Hill," the William Fox picture, is now enjoying its tenth week on Broadway, and its third week at the Lyric theatre. It is, to all appearances, destined for a long and uninterrupted run at its present quarters—its fourth "home" since its premiere at the Astor theatre on the night of September 17.

The popularity of "Over the Hill," already demonstrated through having reached the pulpit as a topic for Sunday evening Sermons, was again in evidence last Sunday night (November 21) when the Fox picture was the subject of an illustrated lecture in Newark's worshipping house, the Church of the Redeemer, on Broad street, near City Hall, declares William Fox. Beautifully colored lantern slides were used by the pastor, Dr. Harry R. Rose, to illustrate the various scenes from the picture.

Long-Run Theatres Being Built

PHIL RYAN, of Associated Exhibitors, reports, on the conclusion of his recent trip through the Eastern territory, that there is a marked increase in the construction of theatres that are to be devoted to the principle of longer runs for special picture productions. The elimination of the week or the two week stand in favor of the longer run is made almost a certainty by the manner in which the really good pictures, given the opportunity of longer runs, have made good with the exhibitors and with the public, declares Mr. Ryan. Prominent members of the Associated Exhibitors organization are active in the construction of these "longer-run" houses, being convinced, it is stated, that long-runs for motion-pictures, runs to terminate only upon the decision of the public, is a policy that has come to stay.

John P. Harris of the Associated will soon commence construction on a new playhouse in Pittsburgh, which will be devoted to the principle of longer runs. The theatre will be one of the finest in the country, it is stated, particularly adapted, because of its limited capacity, to longer runs, and the productions shown there will be presented with all the art exhibited by Mr. Harris in his previous ventures.

Phil Ryan Reports on Conditions as Seen in Tour of East

In Cincinnati, Ike Libson, also a member of the Associated Exhibitors, is preparing to devote one of his four theatres to the exclusive policy of longer runs for better pictures. All of his theatres in Cincinnati are classed among the finest in the country and his decision in favor of running time on worthy pictures is taken as a sure indication of the rapidly growing tendency of men of his calibre.

In the Southwest, J. H. Cooper, a member of the executive committee and of the board of directors of the Associated, is just completing the building of a $1,000,000 theatre in Oklahoma City. It is designed to be the theatre de luxe of the entire Southwest. The principle of booking only pictures of superior merit, capable of long runs, and of continuing them as long as public favor dictates will prevail in Mr. Cooper's new house.

The magnificent Doric theatre of Kansas City, just purchased by Sam Harding, another member of the executive committee of the board of directors of Associated, will also be immediately placed in the indefinite run class of houses. The Doric was built three years ago.

Mr. Harding is another exhibitor so well known for his many years of successful showmanship that his decision in favor of indefinite runs will be appreciated by the theatre managers of the country.

The steps being taken by these important exhibitors and by many others in various parts of the country are taken to mean that exhibitors are coming to thoroughly understand the criminal waste of shortening the life of productions of magnitude and perfection. Exhibitors of foresight are actually investing in special theatres to house these attractions just as long as the motion picture patron will continue to evidence at the box-office his willingness to pay to see them.

Two Additions Made to Alice Lake's Cast

Metro announces two important additions to the cast supporting Alice Lake in "Mother Love." They are Richard Headrick, the three-year-old child-actor, and DeWitt C. Jennings, well-known for his police-inspector roles in New York stage-productions during the past twenty years. The picture is now being made in Hollywood, Cal., at the Metro studios. Wesley Ruggles is directing.

Credit Given Adapters of "The Penalty"

"The Penalty," which was reviewed in last week's issue of the News, was adapted from the original story by Philip Lonergan and Charles Kenyon. Both Mr. Lonergan and Mr. Kenyon deserve equal credit for writing the continuity of this picture, states Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Credit for the adaptation was through an oversight omitted from the review in last week's number.

Knowledge of Camera Aids Director

Ray C. Smallwood, who directed Nazimova in her last three productions for Metro release, bears the distinction of being a "specialist in motion-picture photography." His early days in the studio were spent in acquiring first-hand knowledge of all the photographic phases of picture production as a camera-man. He consequently became an expert in "shooting" and negative and positive printing. The present excellence of the camera work evident in Nazimova's productions is accredited to Mr. Smallwood, who finds his acquaintance with the photographic requirements of a good picture a valuable asset to his position as Nazimova's director.

The news that Hugo Ballin is at work on the filming of "East Lynne" is interesting exhibitors everywhere.

"East Lynne" will be the second independent production for Hodkinson release. Mr. Ballin chose it, after an exhaustive search, as one of the great outstanding pieces of dramatic literature. The lead is being played by Mabel Ballin.

Progressing Rapidly on New Fox Serial

Edward Sedgwick, who is directing the second William Fox serial, "Fanomas," is working so fast that he is keeping five crews of stage carpenters, electricians, painters, paper hangers, artists, property men and others building sets for him in the William Fox New York studio. Sedgwick has every bit of available space he finds not occupied by the sets of Directors J. Searle Dawley, Harry Millard and "Dick" Stanton.

The Sedgwick company remains out on location long enough to have three or four sets put up so that the director can "shoot" them and have them knocked down ready for more.

Five more chapters have been added to the continuity, making the Fantomas serial twenty episodes in all.

Carl C. Milligan with Robert C. Davis

Carl G. Milligan, motion picture sales manager of the Street & Smith publications, has resigned and will represent the screen department of the new Robert H. Davis Corporation, of which "Bob" Davis, formerly managing editor of Munsey's, is the head. The Davis organization is handling the works of prominent authors and playwrights.

Milligan has been in the amusement business for twelve years. After managing and directing his own dramatic stock companies in Seattle and Spokane, he became connected in an executive capacity with the Alexander Pantages vaudeville enterprises and was eventually sent to New York as publicity director of the Pantages circuit. Three years later he entered the service and, after the armistice, joined the scenario department of Joseph M. Schneck, where he was employed until last spring.

Ballin Production Has Special Showing at Selwyn Theatre

ON THE evening of Sunday, November 21, there was held at the Selwyn theatre a private showing of "Pagan Love," Hugo Ballin's first independent production distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. The affair was, it is said, an unqualified success, viewed from every angle. Mr. Ballin's long years of training as a mural painter and interior decorator have served him in very good stead. "The Honorable Gentleman" is filled throughout with delicately beautiful bits of photography. The lighting effects are of a singular degree of excellence and the settings represent an artistic achievement.

The central role in this production is played by Mabel Ballin, Hugo Ballin's talented and beautiful wife. She plays the role of "Kathleen Levinsky," the little blind girl whose sight is eventually restored.

Togo Yamamato, seen as "Tsing-Yu-Ch'ing," draws a screen portrait as the noble-hearted Oriental and Charlie Fang, with a long record of screen successes to his credit in the past, adds new laurels to his crown as the grim little "Hatchetman." Nellie Filmore is in the role of the blind girl's aunt.

Rockcliffe Fellowes plays the young medical student who finally restores Kathleen's sight and leads her through the portals of love. Mr. Fellowes will be remembered for his work in support of Norma Talmadge.

The first number of the program was the overture, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Hymn to the Sun." This was rendered by an orchestra of twenty-five artists under the direction of Samuel Jospe, after which Joseph M. Mack, the concert singer, rendered the same composer's "Eastern Romance." Then the curtains were drawn back and the picture began.

A great many very famous people turned out to do honor to Mr. Ballin. Representatives of the stage, the artistic world, the literary world and the editorial world were all present. Among those seen in the audience were the following:

Rex Beach, Ex-Governor Whitman, Jules Bache, Louis Joseph Vance, Maurice Tourneur, Mrs. Sidney Drew, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Freelander, Paul Manship, the sculptor; Captain Achmed Abdullah, George Mooser, George Gray Barnard, another famous sculptor; Ernest Peixotto, Ernest Poole, Jesse Lynch Williams, Fania Marinoff and Barbara Milton, Herbert Croly, Adolph Ochs, Heyworth Campbell, Irving Wiles, Charles Melville Dewey, Alphonse Jongers, Robert Henri, Thomas Hastings, Walter Damrosch, Augustus Thomas, Agmar Embury, Charles Hopkins, Chester Beach, Solon Borglum, Frederick MacMonnier, Robert H. Davies, Arthur Vance, Maude Hannaford, Ex-Borough President Marcus M. Marks, Dr. A. A. Brill, Mrs. Isaac Seligman, Mrs. Eustace Seligman and Mrs. Isaac Untermeyer.

Series of Surprises in Store

Edeson Has Won "Rep" for Doing Things "Differently"

AS soon as Robert Edeson completes his work in May Allison's starring vehicle, "Are Wives to Blame?" he will enter upon the duties of a director under the Metro banner. A new screen drama now being prepared for the screen under Bayard Veiller's supervision will be given to Mr. Edeson to direct. The title of the story has not as yet been announced. For nearly twenty-five years Mr. Edeson has been a prominent figure on the American stage; and now upon the eve of his entrance upon the directorial field, it is announced that he is "preparing a series of surprises for picture-goers." In connection with its announcement of Mr. Edeson's prospective work as a director, Metro writes as follows:

"During his long and varied stage career Mr. Edeson earned a reputation for doing things 'different.' It was because of his original interpretations of stage roles that he was selected for important parts with such players as William Faversham, Cyril Scott, Viola Allen and others, while he was still young in years as well as experience. His purpose now is to make use of this new point of view, not merely for one role, but for the entire productions for which he will be responsible."

"For years the speaking stage was in a stage of stagnation," said Mr. Edeson. "The difficulty was that all productions were duplicates of one another. Everybody was doing the same thing in the same way.

"That now appears as a danger that picture producers must avoid. The possibilities of the camera as a means of telling a story are practically unlimited. But it is easy to follow a beaten path and overlook all but the most obvious mediums of expression. I hope to accomplish something out of the ordinary in a small way in the very near future."

Mr. Edeson has been engaged in a study of screen technique and possibilities since his first appearance before the camera in the Fox production of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," several years ago. Some of his ideas, it is stated, will materialize in the Metro production of "Are Wives to Blame?" in which he is playing an important role. Philip Rosen, who is directing the picture, has conferred with Mr. Edeson and has announced that much of the actor's personality will find its way into the screen version of this one of Ben Ames Williams' greatest stories.

"Are Wives to Blame?" is a screen version of Mr. Williams's story, "More Stately Mansions," which was pictured by Edward Lowe, Jr. Theodore von Eltz will be seen in one of the leading male roles in support of Miss Allison.

Big Campaign Is Promised

Prominent Exhibitors Preparing Advertising for Lloyd's Comedy

A STATEMENT from the Pathe headquarters in New York announces that members of the Associated Exhibitors organization, including some of the largest exhibitor interests in the country, have given their assurance that they are preparing to launch extensive newspaper campaigns for the new Harold Lloyd comedy, "Number, Please," which Pathe will release on December 26. An exploitation campaign surpassing in extent any so far accorded to the Harold Lloyd productions is accordingly anticipated by Pathe officials in connection with the release of the new Lloyd subject next month.

"Ever since Bumping Into Broadway, a curiously significant title in view of subsequent events, Lloyd has claimed for himself a large portion of the 'spread' advertising indulged in by the larger picture houses, so that it is no longer a novelty to find Lloyd displayed above some of the most important feature productions in the theatre advertising pages," declares Pathe in the statement just issued.

"A continuance of this practice on a notably larger scale is promised for Number, Please? and the Pathe officials are convinced that the resultant publicity will firmly establish Lloyd as unquestionably the greatest box-office attraction the screen comedies have developed.

"Number, Please? has merely to live up to the most conservative promises held out for it in order to produce an effect that becomes more amazing in view of Lloyd's comparatively brief career as a featured comedy star, for it is little more than a year since his first two reel special was offered by Pathe."

Release Title Is Selected

"Lure of Youth" Name Chosen for Metro Adaptation of Reed Drama

"LURE OF YOUTH" is to be the releasing title of Luther Reed's screen drama which Metro Pictures Corporation has just completed with an all-star cast at its West Coast studios in Hollywood, Cal. The picture was filmed under the working title of "White Ashes," but inasmuch as the theme of the photodrama is a young man's infatuation for an actress older than himself, and her deep interest in his career, Metro officials concluded that "Lure of Youth" would more aptly describe it.

According to reports from the company's Pacific Coast studios, "Lure of Youth" is unusual in screen annals in that while it is a story of love and jealousy, it is without the ever-present "villain" in the eternal triangle of the sexes, decares Metro. It is said to be enhanced by a number of scenic effects that are being used on the screen for the first time.

Luther Reed has signed to contribute four original stories to Metro for screen presentation. "Lure of Youth" and "Cinderella's Twin," in which Viola Dana is starred, are the first two from his pen under this contract.

The all-star cast in "Lure of Youth" is headed by Gareth Hughes, recently signed to appear in Metro productions for a term of years and now loaned to Famous Players for its production of Barrie's novel, "Sentimental Tommy." Others of the principals are Clea Madison, William Conklin, William Courtwright, Alta Allen and Lydia Knott. Philip Rosen directed the production. Mr. Reed provided the continuity from his own original story.

To Start Special Nov. 29th

Date is Set for DeMille All-Star Production; Melford Finishing Film

IT IS now virtually settled that Cecil B. DeMille will start work on his all-star production for Paramount, based on "The Affairs of Anatol," the 29th of November, and already the most extensive preparations are being made for this superproduction. Undoubtedly, some of the most elaborate sets and effects that can be devised will be employed in this picture, upon the scenario of which, as recently announced, several well-known writers will collaborate, incuding Jeanie Macpherson, Avery Hopwood, Elmer Harris, Beulah Marie Dix and possibly a fifth writer.

George Melford has been busy this past week making some added scenes for "The Faith Healer," his production for Paramount, and this will complete the photographic work, when the picture will go into the laboratory for cutting and assembling.

Wallace Reid, under the direction of Frank Urson, has a week or more to go as yet on his Paramount Picture, adapted by Eugene Lewis from Frank H. Spearman's story, "The Daughter of a Magnate." Some difficult and striking scenes taken in a railroad tunnel are engrossing the attention of the director of the company at this time.

William DeMille makes his last shot on his production for Paramount, "What Every Woman Knows," this week. This picture, it will be recalled, is the work of Sir James M. Barrie and Olga Printzlau made the adaptation.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle is now in New York, but is expected back shortly and will probably start work December 13 on "Three Miles Out," under the direction of Joseph Hanabery, the story being by Frank Condon. Mr. Arbuckle is enjoying a long awaited vacation in the big town.

After completing her work in Cecil B. DeMille's production, based on "The Affairs of Anatol," Gloria Swanson will begin, it is understood, on her Paramount Picture, "A Sheltered Daughter," the story of which is being especially written for her by Elinor Glyn, the noted British author.

Add to Still Department

Well Known Photographer Joins Staff at Famous Players Studio

IN order further to increase the efficiency of the still department at Famous Players-Lasky's Long Island studio, a special portrait gallery has been installed and Lewis Nathan, formerly a photographer with the Bradley and Merrill studios, 435 Fifth avenue, has been added to the studio publicity staff. Portraits, fashion pictures and all special photographs are made in this gallery, which is specially equipped for this kind of work.

The importance of better stills has been the first thought of Studio General Manager Arthur Victor Smith and he consequently has equipped the still department with the most modern appliances that could be obtained. Thus equipped, the department under William O. Lyman is turning out stills that are a real aid to the advertising and exploitation departments.

The still department with its drying rooms, chemical rooms, printing and enlarging rooms occupies an entire wing of the studio. One large room is devoted exclusively to making bromide enlargements. Two of the most modern enlarging machines take care of this work. The drying room is equipped with electrically driven and heated machines for drying matte surface prints and a specially designed machine for drying ferrotype prints. Coloring and spotting is done in a special room and in an adjoining room retouching is done.

Automatic and hand printing machines have been installed in a separate room. The automatic machine has a speed of thirty prints a minute, which makes it possible to turn out as many as ten thousand 8x10 stills a day. In the developing room are six large tanks which contain developing and washing fluids. The chemicals are stored, handled and mixed in a room equipped for this purpose. A dark room for developing negatives and a filing room where more than 150,000 negatives are filed complete the main equipment of the still department, which Mr. Smith considers one of the finest in the business. The department operates eleven cameras in addition to the portrait cameras.

Baker Receives Five Offers

That nothing succeeds like success has been strikingly illustrated by the case of George D. Baker whose latest production, "Heliotrope," was disclosed at a pre-view at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, November 18, as one of the greatest pictures of the season. The ovation that the picture called forth was a personal triumph for Mr. Baker inasmuch as he wrote the continuity of the story as well as personally directed it. The success of this Baker production may be attested by the fact that it has been booked for two consecutive weeks by Hugo Reisenfield. The first week it will run at the Rivoli theatre and will follow that with a week's run at the Rialto. "Heliotrope" stamped Mr. Baker as one of the greatest directors in the industry and since its first showing he has been deluged with offers. One of the best known California producers offered Mr. Baker an unusual sum if he will sign to direct a noted woman star. Another producer offered him the largest straight salary paid to any motion picture director. Two financiers offered Mr. Baker a partnership wherein he would head his own producing corporation and his other offers came from two of the largest organizations in the motion picture industry. Mr. Baker has not decided which of these opportunities he will accept, but will make his decision upon the completion of the present George D. Baker Production which he is producing for Sawyer-Lubin. Baker has a contract to direct one feature for the Sawyer-Lubin organization and in view of the offers made him by other concerns he has not decided as to whether or not he will continue with them after completing "Temple Dusk." One reason for the demand for George D. Baker's services is the fact that he is one of the few business-like directors in the industry. Baker never spends a dollar of producton money that is not shown in the completed picture, all all Baker-directed features are notable for their box office successes.

Society in Stroheim Picture

Social Function to Be Staged for Universal Production

THE most elaborate society function ever filmed for moving pictures has been arranged by Universal for a sequence of Monte Carlo scenes for Erich Von Stroheim's coming production, "Foolish Wives," announces Universal. For the scenes showing the great promenade at Monte Carlo, in which the cream of European society is supposed to be shown strolling in and out of the Casino and clustered around the band stand, three hundred of San Francisco's leading society folk have agreed to take part.

The gigantic sets which accurately reproduce the famous Casino, the terraced promenade and other architectural features of the noted Riviera resort, were constructed under Von Stroheim's direction at Point Lobos, on Monterey Bay, and not far from the Del Monte Hotel, a rendezvous for California society. San Francisco's Four Hundred is looking forward to the affair as the outstanding social event of the season. Society matrons and the younger set will vie with each other in the expense of their jewels and in the gorgeousness of the gowns to be worn at the unique film party.

Led by Mrs. Charles Templeton Crocker, Mrs. Rudolph Spreckles, Mrs. Daniel Jackling, Mrs. Robert Hayes Smith and others equally well known throughout the United States for their social standing, the West Coast aristocracy will motor to the Del Monte for the week end. Saturday night there will be a big dinner and ball at the hotel, with music by the California Theatre Orchestra, reproduced by wireless, for the dinner, and music by Art Hickman's Syncopated Orchestra, also by wireless, for the dance.

The moving pictures will be taken Sunday morning. For several hours, the belles and beaux of society will play their roles as "millionaire extras" while Von Stroheim, as the Russian Count in the story of "Foolish Wives" Marguerite Armstrong as an American ambassador's wife, Rudolph Christians as the ambassador, Maude George and Mae Busch as two vivacious Russian adventuresses, and others in the cast, mingle with the crowds and stage bits of action necessary to the picture.

After the cameramen have ground away to their heart's content, the "millionaire extras" will be guests of Universal at a luncheon served by the Del Monte on the beach below the Monte Carlo sets. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, will be there in person as host and will present the society folk with a certified check for $5,000, to be devoted to two San Francisco charities, the Children's Hospital Auxiliary and the Girl's Recreation and Home Club.

It was this inducement, in addition to the novelty of appearing in a big feature production, that enabled Universal to win the support and cooperation of such prominent Californians. The tie-up was arranged as an outcome of a charities drive being held by the San Francisco Bulletin. The stunt is being featured in the Bulletin above everything else. Other west coast newspapers have given the affair great attention because of its news value. "Society's Day at Monte Carlo" is expected to draw hundreds of prominent persons to Monterey in addition to those actually appearing in the picture.

Vets Laud Pathe News Reel

Old-Timers Extend Best Wishes for Continuance of Its Success

LETTERS continue to arrive from exhibitors in large numbers at the home-office of the Pathe Exchange, congratulating Pathe News on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of its existence in this country and conveying their wishes for its continued success in the future. According to a statement from the Pathe headquarters, some of the exhibitors in writing in declare that they were in business when the first Pathe News reel was issued, and while still continuing at the old stand remain steadfast users of this topical reel.

E. V. Richards, Jr., general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company, is one of the original Pathe News exhibitors. That he is proud of the fact is evidenced by the following telegram:

"Have played Pathe News number one and every news made by your firm. This original idea of Pathe has grown to a place with the thinking public second only to newspapers and is undoubtedly one of the world's greatest educational mediums."

S. N. Chambers, of the Princess Theatre Co., Wichita, Kans., probably the oldest user of Pathe News in the Kansas City territory, expresses his sentiments on the anniversary in these words:

"I wish to take the opportunity at this moment to congratulate Pathe on the splendid up-to-the-minute and timely features it is releasing through the Pathe News.

"As you know, we are perhaps the oldest Pathe News customers in this territory. I think we were first to use this news when it was originally compiled, and we have never had any reason to become dissatisfied with it, as it is head and shoulders above all the rest on the market."

H. E. Ellison, of the Mountain States Theatres Corporation, owners of the Rialto and Princess Theatres in Denver, says:

"I have been using the Pathe News for a long time, with more than ordinary satisfaction. It is always up to the minute with sufficiently diversified material to make it a very wholesome addition to any program. In addition to this, I want to express my appreciation of the splendid co-operation you always give us in helpful service."

"Behold My Wife" Opens Three New Theatres

Three new theatres in the immediate vicinity of New York have selected George Melford's production of "Behold My Wife" for their premieres. These new photoplay houses are the Capitol at Riverhead, the Rialto, Jamaica, and the Astoria, at Astoria, all on Long Island. Each house will have its first performance on Thanksgiving Eve or Thanksgiving Day. The cost of the three houses is over a million dollars and the event in each instance will be attended by special ceremonies in which the local commercial and civic notables will take part.

The selection of this Paramount picture for the opening of these houses, all of which are owned by different business organizations, was said to have been made not only because of the popularity of the picture but because of the ex-

"The Penalty" Is Shown at Capitol Theatre

Goldwyn's picturization of Gouverneur Morris' novel, "The Penalty," has at length had its New York showing at the world's biggest theatre, the Capitol. It did not break the attendance record at the Capitol, which has a seating capacity of 5,500, but it came within striking distance of the record set by "Earthbound" and which was nearly equalled by the attendance of "Madame X" and at "The Branding Iron."

Famous French Writer Coming to America

A cable from Paris announces to Pathe Exchange, Inc., that the celebrated French novelist and playwright, Valentin Mandelstamm, shortly will pay a visit to this country. His arrival in New York will coincide with Pathe release on December 19th of Leonce Perret's picturization of "The Empire of Diamonds," which is said to be the most original and thrilling of Mandelstamm's series of detective romances.

Subject of Timely Appeal

Fox's "The Face at Your Window" Deals with Present-Day Problem

WILLIAM FOX presents "The Face at Your Window" as a subject of timely interest. The assimilation of immigrants in America is the basis of the Max Marcin story on which the Fox picture is founded, and in a statement from the Fox headquarters William Fox points out that at the present time this subject of immigrant assimilation is occupying a big space in the news and editorial columns of the daily newspapers. Hence the claim is made by Fox officials that in "The Face at Your Window" exhibitors will find a subject occupying a place of vital interest in the limelight of current events and one offering unusual exploitation angles because of this fact. The Fox statement follows in part:

"Senator Borah, who lately visited Ellis Island, declared that his first act in the new Congress would be to introduce a bill further regulating the reception of the foreigners who are pouring into America.

"Unrest in the old world grows apace, and it is to draw the attention of foreigners as well as native Americans to the dangers of Bolshevism that The Face at Your Window particularly serves an essential purpose. Washington D. Vanderlip, as recorded in recent cables, has acquired an immense concession in Russia and is coming home to organize an urgent propaganda for recognition of the Soviet Government—with its aftermath of hoards of immigrants.

"Americanization of the foreigner—showng him in pictured drama the schemes of a plotting Red leader—is not alone the purpose of The Face at Your Window. The entertainment value of the story is just as appealing as though its story were to unfold any other phase of life in a prosperous American community.

"The Fox organization is making a special drive on the Max Marcin play. The publicity value of its subject is fully developed from all angles and in all Fox exchanges the sales forces are in active competition to place the photoplay. Public men in every community are becoming interested in the exploitation, and from many sources come indorsements of a work that is admittedly beneficial to the masses as well as the classes."

Exhibs Still Climb Aboard

Letters—Skeptical, Laudatory and Inquiring—Flood Realart's Office

"THE fairest offer ever made to me"; "some surprise"; "it is certainly going to revolutionize the industry"; "every exhibitor should support the idea"; "you can bank on me"; "a bomb";—these are some of the expressions of appreciation of Realart's new selling plan for the five Mayflower Special productions which it distributes.

It will be recalled that under this plan the exhibitor bases his rate of payment for the picture on his actual box office returns, no money being required in advance.

"The widespread success of the plan is due largely to the spirit of cooperation and fair play shown by exhibitors," says General Manager J. S. Woody.

"Letters are pouring in—most of them of a laudatory nature. Some exhibitors are frankly skeptical; others want more information. Here's one who strikes the keynote: 'Will say this looks like a very fair offer; however, would like to know what percent you consider a fair rental.'

"There were many others like that—who wanted more light on the subject. In most cases the upshot of the correspondence was that another exhibitor booked the specials. We certainly did not think it strange that exhibitors

"The Kid" Survives Accident

A telegram received from Irving M. Lesser, producer of "Peck's Bad Boy," in Los Angeles, which features Jackie Coogan, tells about the serious accident that occurred last week when Jack Coogan's automobile collided with another car and he and his small son, Jackie met with serious accident.

The elder Coogan was driving the car with his boy sitting beside him. After striking the other car, the Coogan car turned over, which resulted in Jackie receiving a fractured skull and many minor bruises and Jack Coogan breaking a leg, receiving many cuts and a bad shake up.

The pair was hurried to the Glendale hospital, a distance of five miles from the accident and at first it was thought by the doctors that Jackie's life was endangered. Late reports proved that the extreme youth and health of the boy were in his favor and that his battle for life would be realized.

According to Mr. Lesser, the "Peck's Bad Boy" story was being speeded along and half of the story was filmed. While Jackie will be confined to his bed for five or six weeks, production activities will not cease.

The Realart Offer

should be anxious to learn more about the plan. The whole was so unusual it was only natural that they should wish to be shown.

"However, a big majority appeared willing to accept our proposition at its face value. 'I see your offer in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS,' writes a Southern exhibitor, 'and am enclosing the coupon. It looks as if you had some confidence in the exhibitor and that you would not expect any more than all the window receipts, at least.'

"It is still too early for me to predict what permanent changes the new plan may eventually bring about, in distribution, but I am not at all sure that one exhibitor is very far off in his prediction when he writes: 'Your ad in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS is the beginning, we believe, of a general change in the relations between the exhibitor and the producer."

The EMPIRE OF DIAMONDS

FROM THE NOVEL BY VALENTIN MANDELSTAMM

Through the ages men and women have perished in the fire of the diamond; thrones have been overturned, countries laid waste, and peoples have been massacred under its spell.

With this theme in a modern day setting a powerful motion picture filled with heart gripping action and suspense has been created. It is a great American story in a world setting.

For the first time in the history of motion pictures a production has been achieved with every scene taken in the exact locations called for in the scenario.

Monte Carlo, Nice, Paris, London, New York, and the broad sweep of the Atlantic form the actual background for the story, and the company of noted artists under M. Leonce Perret visited all of these places in the creation of the picture.

The main entrance to the new Robertson-Cole studios at Hollywood, California

Robertson-Cole to Open Coast Plant

THE new Robertson-Cole studios, which have been in course of construction since last summer, at the corner of Gower and Melrose streets, Hollywood, will be informally opened within the next few days and then there will have been added to the motion picture colony of Hollywood one of the finest built and equipped studios in the world. Several of the Robertson-Cole producing units are completing pictures at other studios at the present time and will move to the new studios for their next productions; some of the Robertson-Cole units are moving into the studios immediately and within the next two months every Robertson-Cole unit will be housed there as well as a number of independent units now being organized.

The studio proper covers a little more than sixteen acres of ground fronting on Melrose Avenue and Gower Street. Here eight huge stages, together with the many other structures required for complete picture production are being pushed to completion by an army of workmen under the supervision of several Robertson-Cole building experts.

The studio will have a frontage of about thirteen hundred feet on Gower street. A sixteen foot wall, set off with Grecian pillars will be broken in the center by the main entrance. Here a colonnade of Grecian pillars will lead into formal gardens which will cover a space one hundred and seventy-five feet wide and two hundred feet deep. In the center of this will be a mirror pool, which at night will reflect secluded lights upon the main executive building.

The executive building is "U" shaped, built around a large portico, with a long flight of white stone steps leading up to it. A colonial stairway leads from the reception hall to the second floor of this building. Here are the executive offices, the exploitation department, a large modern theatre for the screening of pictures and a private dining room and kitchen which will be used by the executive staff.

There will be eight enclosed stages with a floor space ninety-five feet wide; one hundred and seventy-five feet long, with scenery dock along side and with an overhead clearance of twenty-eight feet which will afford ample room for settings of the largest magnitude. Should necessity arise requiring a greater space for interior settings, the stages are so constructed that sliding doors along their sides will be opened, thus making it possible to carry the setting over two of these huge stages.

A network of bridges, equipped with electrical connections at given points, permits overhead spotlights to be placed at such angles as to secure any lighting effect that is required. Beneath the floor of the stage is a large concrete tank that can be used for water scenes or for such scenes that require a stairway leading down from the level of the action that is being photographed. A scene dock will furnish ample space for the storage of scenery and the properties that will be required during the making of a production. Near the front of the stage will be located the director's office and offices for his assistants, together with a dark room and repair shop for the cameramen. Each stage will have its own cutting room and projection room which will be located in a separate building between the stages.

Arrangements have been made for a 15,000 volt line to come into the grounds. Five 20-ton transformers will reduce this current to 2,200 watts and spread it out to the two generator stations that are located at convenient points between the stages.

The wiring of the entire plant will be laid under ground and brought to the stages through connection points located at convenient places to eliminate as far as possible cable running across the stage.

A large building for the electrical department has been constructed where lamps will be restored and repaired and the many electrical devices required for picture work will be made.

There will be no dressing rooms on the stages proper, but following out the policy of keeping each company as an individual unit, a dressing room building will stand directly in front of each of the stages. The upper floor of these dressing room buildings will contain ample dressing rooms for the cast and the extra talent, while the lower floor will have rooms for office purposes and the star's suite at one end. The star's suite will consist of a reception hall, a dressing room, private bath and reception room.

Directly behind the stages is a paved roadway, twenty-eight feet wide which leads from the freight entrance on Melrose avenue, directly through the center of the studio. Runways lead from this drive into the various stages making it possible for the trucks to carry their load right to the point on the stage where their deposit is required in place of having to carry it from the stage entrance by hand.

On the other side of this roadway are the various construction and service buildings including a large mill, electric building, machine shop, store room, property department, paint shop, wardrobe, emergency hospital, gymnasium, auto sheds, etc. There is also ample space for the many exterior settings such as streets. A part of this space is already covered with the mammoth exterior setting that was required for the Robertson-Cole production of "Kismet", which is one of the most elaborate settings that has thus far been erected for picture purposes.

In the wardrobe building will be the costume making department, the designing department, the store room for the costumes and large dressing rooms to be used when mob scenes are to be made. One of the foremost designers on the Pacific Coast, who was responsible for the elaborate creations in "Kismet" has been engaged to supervise this important detail of the organization.

A large gymnasium, with all modern equipment for the physical training will be one of the features of the new studio. Here a professional trainer will attend to the physical development of the attaches of the big plant and assist in the scenes that require a physical display.

An emergency hospital will be in constant readiness to take charge of accident cases which are bound to occur in a plant of this size and this will be in charge of a competent physician.

The Robertson-Cole studios promise to mark a new epoch in motion picture production. The keynote of the entire plant can be summed up in the words, "common

Pathe Serials Hang Up Record for 1920

"Ruth of the Rockies" and "The Phantom Foe," Pathe serials, are playing bookings which give Pathe a wider representation than at any time since the inauguration last year of the two-at-a-time schedule, declares the Pathe organization.

Through the medium of these two pictures, "Ruth of the Rockies," with Ruth Roland starring, and "The Phantom Foe," starring Juanita Hansen with Warner Oland, Pathe serials are showing to the largest public they have claimed in their career.

"Ruth of the Rockies" will complete its first run December 5th, or within a stone's throw of the new year, with a record-breaking mark to its credit, for according to a recent announcement from the serial sales department of Pathe, this picture had out-stripped all predecessors for the quantity of bookings acquired previous to the close of its first run.

"Ruth of the Rockies" will be supplanted on the current program by "Velvet Fingers," which will become the running-mate of "The Phantom Foe" on December 5th.

The ballroom was tastefully decorated for the showing of this motion picture super-drama. American and French flags predominated in the color scheme and were used lavishly in setting off the frames of the boxes and softening the corners and pillars of the huge hall. The stage was banked with palms and flowers of every description up to the edge of the screen.

The girl ushers were dressed in a Louis XV court costume, and their powdered wigs, beruffled silken waistcoats and knee breeches made a picturesque appearance in the softened light of the big room. A specially selected orchestra played a score prepared for the incidental music of the time and action of the production.

The comment on the picture was as varied as laudatory praise can be. The performance of Miss Negri was pronounced by many to exceed any acting ever before seen on the screen. The production, especially in the way the larger scenes were displayed, was accepted as a revelation of the artistic realism that can be accomplished by the camera. Many inquiries were received as to the directors and the names of other persons in the cast, and altogether the showing resulted in an endorsement of the film which has never been exceeded in the Philadelphia territory.

The presentation was organized by Mrs. Faith Greene and Mr. Joseph Kerr with the co-operation of Mrs. McGill, society editress of the Philadelphia North American.

R. E. Wales Joins Trinity

To Be Supervisor of Production for Madlaine Traverse Pictures

R. ELLIS WALES, for the past year and a half director of production service with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and formerly associated with D. W. Griffith and Famous Players-Lasky as a technical expert in production, supervision and design, has been engaged by Trinity Productions, Inc., as supervisor of production for the Madlaine Traverse Photoplays.

This announcement by H. Lyon Smith, president of Trinity Productions, Inc., which will make during 1921 a series of four elaborate feature films, starring Madlaine Traverse, follows closely upon the news that this gifted star was to resume her activities on the screen in vehicles especially selected for her, which would give the widest range of expression to her distinctive dramatic talents and popular personality.

Mr. Wales will begin at once to carry out the plans, already initiated by Mr. Smith, for the picturization of "The Ivory Disc," the novel by Percy Brebner, the English author, which has been selected as Miss Traverse's first starring vehicle, under her own banner.

Mr. Wales' career in motion pictures dates back to the early Kalem days and embraces years of association and experience with many of the most notable figures in the realm of the silent art.

He was D. W. Griffith's personal technologist during the making of "Intolerance," his work on this great production including designing, costuming and historical authorization. He also assisted Mr. Griffith personally in staging the premier performances of "Intolerance" in each of the Key cities of the United States and this experience has given him an unusual and valuable insight into the showman's side of the industry, a knowledge rather uncommon in those whose speciality is on the production side.

For the past eighteen months he has been associated with W. W. Hodkinson as director of production service, and while his new duties with Miss Traverse will necessarily occupy him fully for some time to come, he will not entirely sever himself from these connections.

Promises Fast Action in "Velvet Fingers"

"Velvet Fingers," the new Pathe serial to be released December 5th, promises fifteen chapters of the liveliest sort of action, according to a statement from the New York headquarters of the Pathe organization. "Velvet Fingers" tells the story of an adventurous young man whose passion for excitement drives him into a career of burglary. Bertram Millhauser wrote the original play, and James Shelley Hamilton adapted the work to the screen. George Seitz, the producer, is starred in the featured role and opposite him appears Marguerite Courtot.

Supporting Mr. Seitz, who plays the role of Velvet, and Marguerite Courtot, appearing in the heroine role, are familiar figures in serial plays. Capable performances in former Pathe serials have popularized Harry Semels, Frank Redman, Joe Cuny and other members of this cast with the serial devotees. Semels plays the leading heavy role, that of the professor.

"To Catch a Thief" is the title of the initial chapter, which is in three reels.

sense." Avenues run between all of the buildings making it possible to drive trucks to any point on the entire lot, but there is not a foot of ground wasted in the entire studio.

The various buildings are so located that the construction departments are equally accessible to all of the stages. The technical departments are not only located where they are convenient to officials, but they are equally convenient to the construction departments and the stages as well.

The exterior of the big plant shows no hint of the mammoth working organization for it is artistic in the extreme. Back of those gardens and stone walls however, is a motion picture studio that promises to hold its place for a long time to come as the most efficient plant of its kind in existence.

"So Long Letty" to Open at Kinema

"So Long Letty," the Robertson-Cole super-special produced by Al Christie, will have its big Western opening at the Kinema, the Gore Brothers and Sol Lesser first run house in Los Angeles the week of November 27th. This will be the Western arrival of a wave which has swept the entire country sensationally.

Sol Lesser, Abe Gore and Richard Spier, house publicity manager, have arranged an elaborate prologue and extensive local exploitation which is to be on a larger scale than any picture locally shown.

As a feature of the advance campaign the Kinema will show scenes of Christie's "Golden Wedding" day which was at the studio October 27th, which featured couples in the city of Los Angeles which had been married the longest time.

New Realart Manager at Omaha Office

Another promotion from the ranks of Realart's sales force is announced by General Manager J. S. Woody. Mr. S. T. O'Brien, who has been connected with the Philadelphia office as salesman, will assume the duties of manager at Omaha. This promotion, according to Mr. Woody, is in keeping with Realart's policy of advancing men who have given efficient and loyal service.

This promotion to a managership is the third which Realart has made recently from within its own ranks. James S. Hommel, assistant manager at Buffalo, was elevated to the position of manager at Pittsburgh and Paul R. Aust was promoted from assistant manager to manager at Seattle.

Universal Releases Polo Serial

THE new Eddie Polo serial, "King of the Circus," has just been released through all Universal exchanges. Universal officials unite in saying it is one of the best serials ever produced. They declare that is by far the best serial ever made by Polo, who has a long string of successful thrillers to his credit.

It is a story of circus life. In many respects it is an autobiography of Eddie Polo's own life. The popular star was born of circus parents and raised in the atmosphere of the tan-bark. He became a regular performer before he was six years old and was an accomplished acrobat at nine.

Polo long cherished the idea of weaving his family history, replete with thrills and drama, into a photoplay. Upon the completion of his previous serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," an International serial, he visited New York and won from Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, the authority to write and produce this new circus serial.

The serial star spared no pains, it is said, in getting real circus atmosphere in his serial. Many scenes were taken on real circus lots. Several times during the filming of the serial, Polo took his entire company to distant cities where well known circuses were playing. In one instance, he and several of his company actually appeared in the regular circus performance, states Universal. Polo is an expert on the flying trapeze.

One of the principal supports engaged by Polo for "King of the Circus," was Charles Fortune, at one time one of the most famous clowns in America. He was one of the Fortune trio, known and laughed at wherever Barnum and Bailey or Ringlings have played. Fortune is an old friend of the Polo family. In the new serial he plays the role of an aged clown.

Polo has managed to reproduce in "King of the Circus" much of the back-scenes life of the circus that small boys yearn to see and experience. Raising the big top, feeding the animals, mealtime in the circus world, and many other bits of true circus life are worked in deftly and form a colorful background for the stirring action of the photo-thriller.

The story concerns the life and adventures of Eddie King, a young circus acrobat who has been brought up as an orphan by the circus manager. The manager professes to be his best friend, but in reality was the man who killed his father and robbed the youngster of his inheritance. An old clown, his memory a blank from a blow on the head, is the only living person who witnessed the circus chief's villainy.

The action of the story deals with the awakening memory of the old clown, and of young King's fight to discover the secret of his parentage and win back his inheritance. Polo, as the young acrobat, has able support in Caroline Porter, as the daughter of a wealthy surgeon, and King's sweetheart. Miss Forter is as daring as she is pretty, and is shown in the serial taking part with Polo in all of his dare-devil stunts. She also is at home on the flying trapeze.

The serial was directed by J. P. McGowan, the leading factor in the successful production of many Universal serials. Polo, himself, however, took considerable part in the direction, lending to it his accurate knowledge of a showman's customs. Anthony W. Coldewey prepared the continuity from Polo's own story. Universal turned over the entire Universal City zoo, including animals of all kinds, to the Polo company. McGowan actually organized a one-ring circus, with main tent, side shows, benagerie, and everything down to the peanut and popcorn wagons, for use in the serial.

Has Qualities of a Special

Acting, Direction and Production of High Order in Holubar Picture

THE artistry of Dorothy Phillips, the masterful direction of Allen Holubar, $300,000 in cash and nine months' work are said by Associated First National Pictures to have gone into "Man, Woman and Marriage," the super-feature which Allen Holubar has produced for First National release.

In collaboration with Olga Linek Scholl, the story was written by Allen Holubar. Then came the casting of the picture. From New York, Los Angeles, and Paris, too, it is said the players were assembled and rehearsals began with James Kirkwood playing in support of the star. Among other widely known names in the cast are those of Shannon Day, Robert Cain, Margaret Mann, Jean Calhoun, Barney Sherry and Mlle. Valerie de Chevallier, a reputed sensation of the Paris speaking stage.

The opening scenes of the production were made when it was decided that a capable instructor should be engaged to assist Mr. Holubar in staging the elaborate dances which were to follow. Marion Morgan, who for several seasons has headed her own dancing troupe on the Orpheum Circuit, was signed to collaborate with the noted director in the scenes featuring the dance.

The story of "Man, Woman and Marriage," because of the magniture of its theme required scenes depicting dramatic action in the Stone Age, the Roman days of splendor that preceded the fall of the Empire, the medieval period and the present day. For each sequence of scenes immense sets had to be erected and hundreds of players accurately schooled in the customs of the day and costumes with elaborate splendor, it is stated.

In the filming of "Man, Woman and Marriage," Holubar was aided by a capable technical staff. Harry Bucquet was his first executive assistant; Eugene Pouyet was his second lieutenant; Ben Carre, art director; Ernest Smith, master of properties; H. Lyman Broening and William McGann, cinematographers and Mrs. Frank Lawrence, editor-in-chief.

New Melford Picture Is Given Title

"The Fighting Schoolmaster" is the effective title chosen for George Melford's production for Paramount with Monte Blue, adapted from "The Jucklins," Opie Read's novel. The adaptation is by Frank Condon.

Ed. Knoblock Has Ideas for Better Pictures

Deeper psychological treatment, more intimate development of character, not mere situation but contest of human wills from which the situation develops naturally; the exemplification of a big theme, a universal appeal—these are the elements that, according to Edward Knoblock, the noted playwright, must be infused into the modern drama of the screen, that it may advance continually and appeal to every race and class by reasons of its essential humanness.

Mr. Knoblock, who arrived at the Lasky studio with Jesse L. Lasky, first vice president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, will remain there for an indefinite period, studying at first hand the technique of the motion picture and developing an original story for Paramount Pictures which he and Mr. Lasky discussed while the latter was in England recently.

Clubwomen Impressed by "Madame X"

W. H. Ostenburg, Jr., manager of the Orpheum theatre, Scottsbluff, Neb., asked a committee of clubwomen of that town for their opinion of "Madame X" and gave them a special screening a day or two before its public showing.

Here is what the clubwomen had to say concerning the picture:

"My Dear Mr. Ostenburg—In the opinion of our committee, 'Madame X' is a truly wonderful production. It is essentially a 'mother' play, full of pathos and devotion, and must be seen to be appreciated. The acting of Pauline Frederick in the title role is above description or comparison. It is true art. While this is not a play for children, we feel that those who are older should consider it a privilege to attend such a production."

Marcus Hook Exhibitor Resembles Farnum

Marcus Hook, Pa., boasts an exhibitor that looks so much like William Farnum that he is often stopped by strangers and quizzed as to whether he is the real "Bill" of stellar fame or his twin brother. Among his friends, he is known as "Philadelphia Bill Farnum," but he signs his checks "Daniel McKnight, Jr." Mr. McKnight is the owner of the Marcus Hook theatre and is well known among the Philadelphia exchange-men.

Stoll to Be Ready Dec. 6

Business to Open Then at Pathe Exchanges: First Release Named

THE hum of activity pervades the offices of the Stoll Film Corporation of America, at 130 West Forty-sixth street. Preparations are being rapidly completed for the opening of business by Stoll representatives in Pathe exchanges on December 6. The first release date has been set for January 2. The subject listed for initial issue is "Squandered Lives," an adaptation of Cosmo Hamilton's novel "Duke's Son."

The immediate successors of "Squandered Lives" will be chosen from among "The Hundredth Chance," by Ethel M. Dell; "God's Good Man," by Marie Corelli; "The Lure of Crooning Water," by Marion Hill; "The Swindler," by Ethel M. Dell, and "Mr. Wu," by Harry M. Vernon. All of the six productions are selections from the World's Famous Authors Series, the backbone of the Stoll story source and including in its wide scope twenty-five representative authors.

"Squandered Lives" will introduce to the exhibitors of the United States Ivy Duke and Guy Newall, two actors who are certain of a hearty welcome. While it is true Miss Duke is not a stranger to the screen in this country—pictures in which she played a leading part having been shown here before the war—nevertheless she now brings in addition to her charm and wholesomeness a ripe experience. The partisans of Mr. Newall with large justification insist he is one of the screen's most natural actors as well as one of its most skillful character delineators. His work in "Squandered Lives" goes far to sustain the claim.

Featured in "The Hundredth Chance" are Dennis Neilson Terry, Eille Norwood, Mary Glynne and Sydney Seaward.

New DeMille a Winner

"Midsummer Madness" Acclaimed by Famous Players Executives

PARAMOUNT executives are said to be unanimous in the opinion that in Wm. DeMille's production, "Midsummer Madness," the company has one of the best pictures of the year. The general release of the picture is scheduled for the latter part of January when, following pre-release engagements in New York and other leading cities, it is confidently expected that it immediately will take its place along with "Humoresque," Cecil B. DeMille's "Male and Female" and George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man."

"Midsummer Madness" was adapted by Olga Printzlau from the novel, "His Friend and His Wife," by Cosmo Hamilton, and one of the first to see the DeMille picture at a private showing in New York was the author himself. At the conclusion of the showing he sent the following telegram to Mr. DeMille:

"I have just seen 'Midsummer Madness.' It is the most utterly satisfying, beautiful and human thing, all alive and throbbing, that has ever been created for the screen. I am proud and happy and cannot thank you enough."

Press Books Ready for "Kismet" and "813"

Robertson-Cole announces that press-books are available for "Kismet" and "813."

The Strand theatre, Broadway, New York, the house at which "Kismet" American premier took place, exploited the picture to the limit. Following it the Strand theatre, Brooklyn, the Goodwin theatre, Newark, N. J., and a number of others of the country's leading theatres have eagerly seized upon the exploitation chances which "Kismet" offers, and are planning campaigns which embrace every sort of extraordinary advertising in the newspapers and inside and out of the theatre.

With its cover an attractive combination of yellow, green and half tone tints, the Robertson-Cole press and campaign book on "813," the super-special based on the Arsene Lupin story of the same name, gives the exhibitor a complete outline for advertising and exploiting this production, which is soon to be released.

Pathe Announces Forthcoming Releases

Two forthcoming releases on the Pathe list are Robert Brunton's "The Devil to Pay," which appears last on the list of Pathe's November releases; and H. B. Warner's starring vehicle, "Dice of Destiny," scheduled for release on December 5th. Henry King directed the H. B. Warner production. The cast includes Lillian Rich in the leading feminine role, Rosemary Theby, Frederick Huntley, Claude Payton, Howard Davies and Harvey Clark.

Ernest C. Warde directed the Robert Brunton production, "The Devil to Pay," from the novel by Frances Nimmo Green. Included in the cast are Joseph Dowling, Roy Stewart, Robert McKim, Fritzi Brunette, George Fisher, Evelyn Selbie, Richard Lapan, Mark Fenton and William Marion.

Elmer Pearson Visiting Pathe Branch Offices

For the purpose of surveying conditions in the middle west as they affect the motion picture industry in general, and the interests of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in particular, Elmer R. Pearson, director of exchanges of Pathe, left last Tuesday, November 16th, on a trip that will keep him in the field for about three weeks.

He will visit the branch offices at Detroit, Chicago, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, and St. Louis. In several of the exchange cities, Mr. Pearson will make arrangements for the enlargement of the Pathe offices.

"Old Swimmin' Hole" Finished by Ray

Work has been completed by Charles Ray on "The Old Swimmin' Hole" in Southern California, where he has been making this subject. Officials of the Ray organization are enthusiastic over this new picture, which is said to present the star in a most appropriate role. The film is now being edited, preparatory to its shipment to First National for release.

"The Big Idea" Is First Rufus Steele Film

During the week of December 5 the first of the two-reel pictures written and produced by Rufus Steele, Saturday Evening Post writer on commercial and industrial subjects, will be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc. "The Big Idea" is the first of the series of two-reelers and this will be followed a month later by "The Kick Back." The third of the series has just been completed and work is well under way on the fourth.

While the industrial life of the country forms the background for the Steele films, which are being produced by the Pilgrim Pictures Company, the pictures have nothing of the usual commercial or trade efforts. They are produced purely for amusement purposes and from the point of view of audience appeal. Educational makes it plain that nothing of the advertising element enters into them and though some big plant is used as the background for each there is not even a sign visible that indicates the name of the company.

"The Big Idea" tells the story of a well meaning American who is led astray by the false doctrines of anarchistic agitators. He is seized with the "big idea" with which he would change the whole rule of things, until the personal experiences of himself and the members of his family with those very ideas shows him the falsity of them.

Patricia Palmer Stars in Gayety Comedies

Patricia Palmer, who until she deserted the field for more dramatic roles, was a favorite in Christie comedies, has returned to the realm of fun films and will be featured in Gayety comedies, single reelers which will be released through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., alternating with Vanity comedies.

Born in San Francisco twenty years ago, Miss Palmer started in to playing child parts in the California city at the age of five. After spending several years on the stage she entered motion pictures and became a featured player with Vitagraph. Recently she contributed an important dramatic role in support of Mitchell Lewis in "The Faith of the Strong." Her last work before returning to comedies was with Bessie Love in a feature that has just been finished.

Picture for Ex-Service Men Is Planned

C. F. McIntosh, who is at the head of the Federal Board for Vocational Education of Ex-Service Men, was a visitor at the Lasky studio on Friday, November 12th.

Mr. McIntosh has come out from Washington for the purpose of investigating and sanctioning plans for a proposed two-reel film production which will be made under the auspices of the Federal Board, to be directed by Mr. Bishop, and enacted by a cast of ex-service men and women. The picture will be entitled "Say, Buddy!" and the story and scenario were written by Mr. Bishop.

Vitagraph Now in Full Swing

Production Activities at Highest Point in Three Years

VITAGRAPH'S production activities are now at the highest point in three years. Both the Eastern and Western Coast studios are running full tilt. Five companies are at work at the Brooklyn studio, and seven at the Vitagraph studio in Hollywood. Three big special productions are under way, and a fourth—"Dead Men Tell No Tales"—on the eve of its release following a mammoth exploitation campaign.

At the Brooklyn studio, Alice Joyce is at work on "Her Lord and Master," under the direction of Edward Jose; Corinne Griffith is filming scenes for "It Isn't Being Done This Season," with George L. Sargent in charge of the production; Alice Calhoun, the newest star in the film firmament, is completing "Princess Jones," which G. V. Seyffertitz is directing; Tom Terriss is starting an ambitious version of the David Belasco stage success, "The Heart of Maryland," and "The Son of Wallingford" is being transferred to celluloid under the supervision of George Randolph Chester, Vitagraph's production editor and the creator of the original "Wallingford."

Mr. Terriss, with Catherine Calvert, the star of his production and a large cast, will be in the South for a number of weeks in order that the true Southern spirit and atmosphere may be injected into "The Heart of Maryland." Miss Calvert has the role of Maryland Calvert, originated by Mrs. Leslie Carter, and the unusual cast includes Crane Wilbur, who plays opposite her, Felix Krembs, William Collier, Jr., Ben Lyon, Henry Hallam, Bernard Siegel, Arthur Earl, Jane Jennings, Victoria White and Marguerite White.

"Black Beauty" is one of the special productions under way at Vitagraph's Hollywood studio. David Smith is now filming the final scenes of this picture, which is based on the novel by Anna Sewell. The book has been followed in every detail, yet much has been added by Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, who have created what is called an "inside" story, dovetailing into the story told by Black Beauty, the horse. Jean Paige portrays the leading feminine role in this special, which will be released early in the new year.

Still another special production which was announced months ago, and which seems to have created interest everywhere, is "The Son of Wallingford," written by George Randolph Chester, who made "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" a household word. "The Son of Wallingford" is a new story. It has nothing to do with any other Wallingford story.

Holmes E. Herbert is playing opposite Alice Joyce in "Her Lord and Master," which is a screen version of Martha Morton's stage play. The supporting cast includes Frank Sheridan, Walter McEwen, Marie Shotwell, Louise Beaudet and Ida Waterman.

Webster Campbell appears as Corinne Griffith's leading man in "It Isn't Being Done This Season," which like its predecessors, "The Whisper Market," and "The Broadway Bubble,' offers Miss Griffith a rare opportunity to display some wonderful striking gowns.

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, is now on the West Coast personally supervising the wealth of production at Vitagraph's Western studio. William Duncan and Edith Johnson are more than half through the production of an entirely new type of chapter-play, entitled, "Fighting Fate," and Joe Ryan is starred in a smashing Western serial called "The Purple Riders." Larry Semon completed his two-part comedy, "The Sportsman," only last week, but is already in actual production on its successor. Jimmy Aubrey has just completed "The Mysterious Stranger," and has started on another comedy, under the direction of Jess Robbins.

Antonio Moreno and Earle Williams head the feature companies on the West Coast. Moreno has just started his first production as the star of "Three Sevens."

"Diamonds Adrift" is the title of the five-part production which Earle Williams is completing on the West Coast.

Vitagraph's increased production activities have been accomplished by increased facilities at both studios, and Albert E. Smith has taken three trips to Los Angeles to purchase additional acreage and supervise additional studio construction. The mechanical facilities at the Brooklyn studio, particularly as related to the developing and printing of film, have been more than doubled within the past six months. Never before in its history has this pioneer company of the film industry been in such a mechanical and physical state of preparedness to produce films well and quickly. Productions of the super-feature class will continue to be made by Vitagraph at both its East and West studios during the coming year, it is announced.

Expect Record Bookings on Pioneer Release

Pioneer Film Corporation reports that advance bookings on "Thoughtless Women" indicate that the picture will be a record-breaker in the point of bookings secured for a feature production. The acting of Alma Rubens and direction of Daniel Carson Goodman are two factors that have come in for an unusual amount of praise, according to Pioneer. The wholesome character of the theme is also said to have won favorable comment.

DeMille Opposes Censors

Director Against Suggestion of Censorship in Scenario Stage

"CENSORSHIP nulified the work of the creative artist because it limits that work to the mentality of the censor. Therein lies the greatest of the many evils of censorship."

So says Cecil B. DeMille, screen producer and director-general of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in a recent interview given out at the Lasky studio following the wide publicity given to the suggestion that pictures be nationally censored while still in the scenario writing stage.

"It is this limiting of the creative work of the artist that is the most deadly danger of censorship," says Mr. DeMille. "It is the very fact that the creative artist is capable of rising above the level of the rest of the world that makes his work truly creative art. Without this pioneering spirit, the world of art would be at a standstill.

"Yet such a deadlock would inevitably result if censorship were permitted to become general and all-embracing. The censors, without conscious fault, would inevitably censor that which they could not understand. All too frequently this censored matter is the very heart of the creative artist's work—the particular thing that makes his work distinctive and valuable to the world.

"One hypothetical censorship board might presumably censor without damage to art. Such a board would have to be composed of the highest examples of artistic workers. Unfortunately for censorship and fortunately for the photoplay, these men are busily engaged in creating rather than destroying; in building up rather than tearing down.

"Censorship, whatever its form or however applied by official bodies, must be undemocratic and un-American. It resolves itself into a rule of minority over majority. It means that a single individual or a small group of individuals shall be permitted to dictate what the masses shall see."

Harding Shown on Trip

International News Has Fine Set of Views in Current Issue No. 79

A FEATURE of the views shown in International News reel No. 79, just released by Universal Film, is the interesting group of pictures showing President-elect Harding enjoying a fishing trip at Point Isabel, Texas.

Roy Kluver, the International cameraman, caught the next president in the act of landing a huge tarpon. The president-elect's stiff fight to subdue the big fish is shown in lively close-ups. These pictures give an entirely new angle on Mr. Harding's personality.

International News No. 79 also contains the first pictures received from Cork, Ireland, of the funeral of Lord Mayor MacSwiney, showing the huge crowds that followed the cortege and the militant attitude of the Lord Mayor's sympathetic countrymen.

Interesting sidelights on the situation in Ireland were sent by Captain Ariel Varges, who photographed the scenes. Writing to E. B. Hatrick, general manager of the International News Reels he said:

"A raid by the military is performed with great dash. Troops (Black and Tan) with a few officers, arrive on the scene to be raided in swift lorries, holding about twelve men each. This contingent is followed by Rolls Royce armored cars. The party places a cordon or picket at the street heads as a control and searches all persons at pistol point. Meanwhile, the suspected house of Irish Republicans is being searched by another group. The military search for arms, etc., and to reverse the tables, the Irish Volunteers perform some rather surprise attacks. It is here that the real trouble breaks.

"Last night, in returning to my hotel, I walked into a raid. Two people were shot, and I had to take pot-luck with the remainder in the street. In a few minutes ,all was quiet again. The people are out to break away from England. However, only a small percentage favor terrorism of any sort."

Charles Ray to Come East

Was to Attend Atlanta Exposition But Engagement Spoils His Plans

WORD comes from the Arthur Kane offices that Charles Ray is planning to come to New York in the near future. In addition to visiting New York, Mr. Ray will go to Atlanta, Ga., for a brief stay. The Southeastern Motion Picture Exposition is scheduled to open in that city on December 6 for one week.

The exposition management asked the Kane Corporation to assign one or more of its celebrities to attend the big show, adding the "double assurance," superfluously, it would seem, that the star would "enter hospitable Georgia heralded as he never was before" "The gateway to the South," the message added, "asks your serious consideration."

Arthur S. Kane was in the Ray studio when the telegram was delivered to him. A brief conference between Mr. Kane and Mr. Ray followed, the outcome of which was Mr. Ray's decision to return East with Mr. and Mrs. Kane in response to the invitation. Richard Willis, Ray's production manager, however, put the plan to rout, according to the statement from the Kane offices, by insisting that the star postpone his trip East until the completion of his current production, "Scrap Iron."

Mr. Willis evidently scored his point, because Ray will not come East as the guest of the Atlanta association during the week of the Exposition. But his plan to visit New York and Atlanta at a later date has not been changed.

"My long-desired trip to New York at last! Then a run down to Atlanta and after that a swing back to Gotham before returning to God's country. That's a bully idea!" is the way that the popular star expresses his delight over the anticipated trip to the East Coast.

Scientists See Novel Film

Famous Players' Pygmy Films Shown to Geographic Society

MEMBERS of the National Geographic Society at Washington had the privilege of seeing for the first time on any screen the first motion pictures ever taken of the pygmy tribe of the African Congo last Friday (November 19), the day after their completion in the Long Island City laboratories of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Dr. Leonard John Vandenbergh, missionary and explorer, who headed the Vandenbergh-Paramount expedition into Central Africa, addressed the society at the invitation of its officers.

The National Geographic Society, whose interest in the diffusion of geographic knowledge is purely altruistic and rigidly non-commercial, has honored explorers similarly. Theodore Roosevelt, on his return from Africa, made his first address before the National Geographic Society, and Admiral Peary, after his return from the North Pole, was honored with the invitation to address the National Geographic on his first public appearance.

While the cutting and titling of the 36,000 feet of film brought back by Mr. Vandenbergh is not yet completed, four reels were rushed through the Paramount laboratory and sent by special messenger on a midnight train to Washington preceding the day of the lecture.

Add to Viola Dana's Cast

Francis McDonald Opposite Star; Jackie Saunders in Leading Part

FRANCIS McDONALD and Jackie Saunders have been added to the supporting cast of Viola Dana in her latest starring vehicle for Metro release, "Sorrentina." Mr. McDonald will play opposite the star. Miss Saunders has been engaged for an important role in the picture.

Filming of this picture has been started at the studios, with Dallas M. Fitzgerald directing. In the romantic story of "Sorrentina," which centers around the adventures in New York of a pair of young Italian immigrants, Miss Dana will play the part of the wife, while the role of the husband is enacted by Mr. McDonald. Miss Saunders will enact the role of the "vamp" manicurist who lures the Latin husband from his wife. Don Byrne is the author of "Sorrentina," which is an original story. It was adapted for the screen by Ruth Ann Baldwin and Molly Parro.

Viola Dana has applied the dark make-up, donned the typical red and yellow Italian dress and started work in "Sorrentina." The initial scenes for this production were filmed on an elaborate Venetian street setting built on one of the Metro studio lots in Hollywood.

As a little Italian peasant girl, who, with her husband, has a small street show, Miss Dana will have a quite different role in this Don Byrne story to any which she has ever enacted. With her dark hair and snapping eyes, Miss Dana, when made up, might easily be accepted as a born Italian, says Metro.

Fox Announces "Blind Wives"

IN a statement eminating from the New York headquarters of the William Fox Film Corporation, announcement is made of a new Fox production titled, "Blind Wives," which has been produced in three episodes after the manner of the recently released Fox special, "While New York Sleeps." This picture is based on Edward Knoblock's famous stage play, "My Lady's Dress." Charles J. Brabin is the director. Estelle Taylor, Mark McDermott and Harry Sothern, the featured players of "While New York Sleeps," are again seen in the principal roles of this new production. The statement issued by William Fox in connection with the announcement of "Blind Wives" follows in part:

"Produced several years ago on the speaking stage American and European critics hailed this play as the strongest exposition of the eternal feminine and her frivolities and frailities that had ever been presented and its consequent sensation and prosperity as a theatrical attraction formed the foundation of the fame of this brilliant author whose writings are now holding the world's attention.

"To William Fox the play of 'My Lady's Dress' had always appealed as a great opportunity for the drama, the producing effect, the story carrying efficiency and the pictorial and colorful effects that it would bring to the screen. In studying methods of treatment that would give it the most pretentious and powerful presentation Mr. Fox immediately recognized the great value of again using the episode form—the unfolding of three vital life chapters—as he had done so skillfully in 'While New York Sleeps.' Great, really brilliant strokes of construction have been shown by Charles J. Brabin in preparing this wonderful story for the screen—the same bold lines of character drawing, the same subtle and swift development of plot and situation, the same striking denouements that he showed with such great power in the former episode picture—these have been shown in 'Blind Wives.' But it is with a new and a remarkably fascinating phase of life with which he has dealt.

"It is the foibles, the frivolities, the frailities, the slavery to fashion, the following of the butterfly existence, the surrender to all that is vanity this is the great theme of Mr. Knoblock's play. He tosses his frail bit of femininity into a gilded and rainbow colored world where selfishness rules and where the thought is only of today and no thought of tomorrow ever comes. Once in this velvet tangle where all is ease and luxury the character develops that side of the texture which shows only the bright designs and the colors of the weaving; with no sign of the hand that guides and which points but to one end; until the author deftly turns his fabric and shows the rough side and all of that portion of humanity which has had to suffer so that others might have luxury, which has lived in the shadow so that others might have all the sun.

"Dress, then is reason for this remarkable story—women's dress, the rainment of my lady' wardrobe, what it cost to procure for her but still deeper and more intensely interesting than that what it cost to procure—just how hard, how cruel, how tragic is the making of that which appears to eyes, that only see the surface, to be wholly beautiful. To produce such a picture, to give it the setting of luxury, the touch of fashion in all its luxury and spendthrift splendor the very gates of the temple of Dame Fashion had to be stormed and taken.

"In each of the episodes there is a different story, each dealing with that human cost of the gown or its adornment which makes a tragedy for someone in some unknown corner of the world."

A statement from the New York offices of the World Motion Picture Corporation announces that approximately seventy-five per cent of the charter members of the Associated Press have signed contracts for the use of its illustrating service, thus assuring a wide exploitation for the World's news-reel. Other papers outside of those in the Associated Press have also signed for the service, it is stated, and it is expected that in a short time the total number signed up will approximate 2,200. according to the statement.

The illustrating plan, as it is described in the World's statement, consists of a daily service of "still" pictures made by the cameraspondents of the World. This service will be supplied to the newspapers for a small consideration and will give them timely subjects for reproduction, it is stated.

All photographers will carry captions giving credit to the World Motion Picture Corporation and in this manner will the tie-up with the local exhibitor be complete, say World Motion Picture officials. Such an arrangement between the producers and the newspapers of the country is expected to result in the maximum amount of publicity and exploitation for the exhibitor.

Keaton Completes His Fifth Metro Comic

Buster Keaton has completed his fifth comedy, "The Haunted House," made for Joseph M. Schenck and to be released through Metro, at his studios in Hollywood, Calif. The picture, written and directed by Keaton and Eddie Cline, will be en route to New York, where a release date will be set, early next week. Virginia Fox appears opposite the agile comedian and as usual Joe Roberts is the "villyun."

Film to Aid Uncle Sam Abroad

WHAT is described to be the most comprehensive industrial picture ever made has just been completed by the Rothacker Film Company for the Carborundum Company, and will be used to get Uncle Sam his share of the foreign trade. The picture is really a survey of American industry.

"The Jewels of Industry" is an eight-reeler. After showing how Carborundum is made, the film visualizes many of the uses industry has found for that abrasive. In all, Carborundum is shown on the job in fifty-eight different branches of American industry.

This picture, when shown abroad, will give foreign buyers a fairly well-rounded education as to Uncle Sam's industries, it is stated. And it will be circulated in all parts of the world.

Here at home the Carborundum Company will show it to chambers of commerce, Rotary Clubs and at industrial conventions. While it is an eight-reel film it is so assembled that it can be shortened to suit any program.

The picture, it is expected, will be a revelation to the average viewer. Most people have no idea what an important part abrasives have come to play in the romance of the Twentieth Century. There is not a factory in the country that does not use an abrasive paper, cloth or grinding wheel of some kind. Abrasive cloth will do a job that is too delicate for a metal tool, and grinding wheels will cut steel that is too hard for any lathe.

Carborundum was evolved by an American scientist who was trying to make diamonds. When he opened his furnace he found, instead of a diamond, a new jewel—Carborundum, the jewel of industry, which will cut anything and is second only to the diamond in the scale of hardness.

Carborundum is virtually but everyday coke and sand welded at 4,000 degrees Fahrenheit in an electric furnace. Metal will vaporize at less heat.

Dwan Wants All-Star Cast

Producer Believes Specials Will Share Honors With Star Pictures

BEFORE leaving New York for the Coast, Allan Dwan stated that he believed the all-star special was "coming in"—not to drive the star production out of the field, but to divide honors fairly with it.

Mr. Dwan said: "You would think the idea was new, judging from the trade papers. It is really old. There was never a time when such pictures would not have 'gone over.' We were simply afraid, as an industry, to try 'em. We knew what the star production could do."

"Will stars lose their value in star series productions, through merging their talents in the all-star ones?" he was asked.

"Most of them will not," said Mr. Dwan. "A few stars who work best all alone may suffer. And then not in their series pictures? They may not show their usual zest in the all-star productions. Even that will depend upon the chance for the so-called full expression of the individuality that the particular play affords. The 'individual worker' type of star will require careful thought when the parts are given out."

This is the only danger point I can think of at the moment," said Mr. Dwan. "The very fact that they haven't seen their favorite at what they believe is her best makes them wait eagerly for her next series production. Putting the wrong star in the wrong part can only react on the all-star production. Watch and see."

Mr. Dwan said that the all-star special would at the start do bigger business than the best of the star series pictures.

He predicted that the public, unaccustomed to them, would flock to see the all-star subjects as they would any novelty, that gradually the better of the single star pictures would attract on a par with the all-star stuff, and that the success of the first all-star subjects would result in heavy production along that line to the end that the single star pictures would never again "own the field."

"Great Lover" on Screen

Goldwyn Picturization of Stage Success Seen at Capitol Theatre

LEO DITRICHSTEIN'S stage success, "The Great Lover," written by himself in collaboration with Frederic and Fanny Locke Hatton, received its first screen showing this week at the Capitol theatre.

"The Great Lover" is the first picture directed for Goldwyn by Frank Lloyd since "Madame X." It is also the first of the Frank Lloyd Productions, Goldwyn having decided to feature the productions directed by Mr. Lloyd. His first picture after receiving the honor of having his work featured is said to be fully up to the high expectations which Goldwyn confidently awaited. The verdict of the reviewers and of the fans proved these expectations justified.

John Sainpolis in the role of Jean Paurel, created on the speaking stage by Mr. Ditrichstein, gave a polished and brilliant performance which proved highly entertaining, and very moving in its serious phases. Claire Adams as the young prima donna who won the affections of the great tenor but whom Paurel renounced in favor of her younger lover was well liked in the part, as were Lionel Belmore as the harassed impresario, Richard Tucker, John Davidson, Mme. Rose Dione and Alice Hollister.

Big Demand for Comedies

Educational Reports Big Bookings for Vanity and Gaiety One-Reelers

ALTHOUGH the first release is set for the week of December 5, Education Film Exchanges, Inc., reports that the announcement that it would distribute single-reel Vanity and Gaiety comedies weekly has brought so heavy a demand for these subjects that it has been necessary to send a rush order to the laboratories for a number of prints in excess of the original estimate.

While arrangements for these pictures were made some time ago and production has been in progress for several months, Educational made the announcement of this new product only two weeks ago, and, according to the sales department, the response from the various exchanges shows a heavy demand for these single-reel fun-films from exhibitors who have become familiar with the Educational comedy standard as represented in the Mermaid, Christie, Chester and Torchy series.

It is declared that the only difference in these pictures and the ones that have been on Educational's schedule for several months is the matter and length and that they will be up to the full standard of the two-reelers. "The Vanity series comes from the Christie Film Company studios, and the Gaiety brand represents equal quality with a somewhat 'girlier' spirit running through them," declares a statement from the Educational Films Corporation headquarters.

The first single-reel comedy-release from Educational will be "Tea for Two," a Vanity, in which Charlotte Merriam and Eddie Barry are seen. Several of the better known Christie comedians are in the first few of this series; but after the initial ones, entirely separate casts from the two-reelers will appear. "Ain't Love Grand?" will be the first of the Gaiety series.

Prints of the first releases of both series have been in all the Educational exchanges for the past two weeks, "under instructions from the home-office that no contracts should be signed until exhibitors had been given an opportunity to see the pictures themselves and to establish the fact that Vanitys and Gaietys would establish a new standard in their field," declares the statement from Educational's home-office.

"Snow Blindness" Is Begun

Reginald Barker Production, for Goldwyn Release, Gets Under Way

GOLDWYN'S next Reginald Barker production, "Snow Blindness," by Katherine Newlin Burt, the author of "The Branding Iron," one of Goldwyn's fall releases, is now actively under way at the studios here. Director Barker, Clifford Robertson, casting director, and Abraham Lehr, vice president in charge of production, have selected an all-star cast for "Snow Blindness."

Vice President Lehr has just returned to the studios from New York where he held important conferences with the officials at the home office.

Will Rogers and his director, Clarence Badger, are putting the finishing touches to the picturization of Irvin S. Cobb's story, "Boys Will Be Boys." Editing and titling will begin early next week, tasks in which the star will have a hand.

Gertrude Atherton, here advising with Director Wallace Worsley in the production of her first original scenario, temporarily entitled, "Noblesse Oblige," is enthusiastic about the progress that has been made on the picture and about the screen possibilities for expressing an author's own ideas about a story.

J. Frank Glendon, Leatrice Joy, Wallace Beery and Jack Abee have been assigned to enact the principal roles in Gouverneur Morris' first story written directly for the screen, "The Water Lily," a tale of the Orient. An entire Chinese street of magnificent proportions was erected on the Goldwyn lot for this picture and every detail is absolutely correct. Frank Lloyd, who recently completed "A Voice in the Dark," is directing "The Water Lily."

Excellent progress is being made by Director E. Mason Hopper on Rupert Hughes' screen story which has not yet received its definitive title.

Director Victor Schertzinger is about ready to begin work on Tom Moore's next starring vehicle, "Mr. Barnes of New York," from Archibald Clavering Gunter's old novel.

Kaufman Brings Print of Picture East

Albert Kaufman, producer of the feature pictures now being directed by Sidney A. Franklyn for distribution by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., is on his way east with the finished prints of the second Franklyn First National productions which has the working title of "Parrot and Co." It is an adaptation of the novel by Harold McGrath which bears the same title, but before release the motion picture title will be changed to one not yet decided upon which will be more descriptive of the action.

Sylvia Breamer, Richard Dix, Molly Malone, Herbert Prior and Lloyd Whitlock are among the players in the cast. Billy Shea did the editing on the completed print after it was delivered to him from the hands of Mr. Franklyn.

While in New York Mr. Kaufman will discuss methods of exploiting the picture with officials of First National. The title under which the picture will be released will also be decided while he is here.

Wells Hawks Resumes Place on Fox Staff

Wells Hawks, or rather "Commander Hawks, is back again with William Fox. He returns to the studio of the film producer after an extended leave of absence, during which time he acted as personal publicity representative for Governor Cox, and his presidential campaign train.

Prior to the opening of the campaign Hawks was associated with Fox Film Corporation in the capacity of special representative for William Fox. Now that the matter of "who will be our next President" has been settled, Wells Hawks takes up his duties with Fox as before.

Kate Bruce Plays in "The Quarry"

Through a special arrangement with D. W. Griffith the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has obtained the services of Kate Bruce, who has appeared exclusively under Mr. Griffith's management since the early Biograph days, for an important role in 'The Quarry," the John Morosco novel which Thomas Meighan is now making at the new Long Island City studio.

Miss Bruce has recently scored strongly in "Way Down East."

Foreign Conditions Described

Laemmle Plans Active Production Work in Germany

THE observations made by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Film Manufacturing Company, during his recent trip to Europe and some of the activities contemplated as a result of these observations are made the subject of a statement just issued from the New York headquarters of the Universal Film organization. The statement from the Universal home-office follows:

"The second anniversary of the signing of the armistice terminating the World War finds the foreign activities of the big film producers still in much chaos and confusion. The causes are principally the depreciated currency and weak credit of many foreign countries, their inability to pay for American films and the various protective regulations by which they have endeavored to foster home industries by excluding the American product.

"The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has always been one of the largest exporters of film, having agencies in every civilized country of the globe. Four months ago Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, went abroad to investigate for himself the conditions under which business would have to be conducted by the company in European countries.

"In England extremely satisfactory arrangements were completed by Mr. Laemmle with the Film Booking Offices of London, whereby the producing of pictures in Great Britain will scarcely be necessary, though the possibility is not definitely closed. The entire Universal and Jewel product will be handled by the big British Company at the head of which is Sir Edward Hulton, a peer who is known as a great newspaper owner and a very successful business man.

"In Germany an entirely different situation presented itself to Mr. Laemmle. The film industry is more seriously regarded in Germany than in any other country in the world. It is so regarded not only by the people who attend the theatres, but by the government itself. The result has been that in Germany everything possible has been done by the government to foster the industry, to give it protection from without: encouragement from within. For the last two years there has been an effective embargo on all films coming into Germany from foreign countries. This embargo will be raised very slightly on January first. Two per cent of the footage at present released in Germany will then be permitted to come in from all foreign countries. This would be so small an amount as to be ridiculous to a company the size of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

"For two years the Universal has had an office in Berlin, maintaining itself by trading in German films and waiting for the embargo to be lifted. While he was abroad Mr. Laemmle decided that the only way to do business in Germany was to make his own films there under American supervision and direction, but with German actors and actresses. By making films there of the same quality that the company makes at Universal City, Mr. Laemmle expects not only to do a very profitable business in Germany itself and the new countries which are so dependent through transportation on Berlin, but to make films which will be equally acceptable in this country.

"Mr. Laemmle has gone to Universal City, the huge producing center of Universal activity, partly, to supervise the completion of two huge Jewel pictures, Priscilla Dean in "Outside the Law," and Von Stroheim's "Foolish Wives," and partly to select one or more producing units with which to produce films in Germany.

One interesting comment which Mr. Laemmle made just as he left for Universal City was to the effect that the supposed German hatred of all the countries arrayed against her in the War was entirely gone. The film industry is responsible in a large measure," said Mr.Laemmle, for this condition."

Pathe Drive Bringing Results

Unprecedented Returns in "Pearson Month" Campaign

PATHE reports "unprecedented returns both in collections and new business" just as the $10,000 "Pearson Month" campaign passes the half-way mark. In the feature department, there has been realized a gain of more than thirty per cent over the average for the three preceding months, declares the Pathe statement. The serial department is reported to have also done creditably, while a "slightly better progress" is reported for the short-subject department. The "Pearson Month" will be brought to a close at midnight of November 30. With every cog in the Pathe selling machine working at maximum efficiency and returns coming in rapidly it is not possible to forecast results at the present time, according to the Pathe report, but it is expected that the feature department will "wreck all records" and that the serial forces will surpass the "wonderful marks it has established in the last three months." The Pathe report follows in part:

"Far more than the surface gains indicate, the progress of the Pathe feature department during the first stage of 'Pearson Month' contest, has been particularly noteworthy. The average struck by the feature sales department during August, September and October, outrivalled that of any similar period in the entire Pathe history. Consequently, to beat this record by thirty per cent, meant tremendous efforts by the department. The gains have been so marked in some of the exchange territories, that a figure much better than thirty per cent will represent the gain made by Pathe features at the conclusion of 'Pearson Month.'

"Numbered among the features that are being eagerly received by exhibitors are Benjamin B. Hampton's, The Money Changers; Jesse D. Hampton's, Half a Chance; Edgar Lewis', Beggar in Purple; Blanche Sweet's, Her Unwilling Husband; Robert Brunton's, Devil to Pay and H. B. Warner's Dice of Destiny. Of the earlier releases still meeting with the widest favor, the pace is being set by the Associated Exhibitors' special, The Riddle: Woman. Key-city first-runs have been arranged in every territory on this sterling attraction, and other runs are following in quick succession.

"A wide demand has been created for George B. Seitz's first feature, Rogues and Romance, in which he is co-starred with June Caprice, with Marguerite Courtot prominent in the support. This is the production made in Spain, where Castillian plotting is mixed with American love making, into what constitutes one of the most colorful and actionful dramas ever issued by Pathe.

"Another international drama attracting wide attention is Leonce Perret's, The Empire of Diamonds, adapted from the Mandelstamm novel of the same name, which is shortly to be published in the United States. Already it has created a sensation in Europe, where Mr. Mandelstamm is rated among the prominent literary men of the old world.

"While the feature department is stepping at a pace calculated to wreck all records, the serial department has all cylinders working in a tremendous effort to surpass the wonderful marks it has established in the last three months. In these efforts they have been substantially backed up with a product that rivals comparison, including The Phantom Foe, in which Juanita Hansen makes her first appearance under the Pathe banner.

"Ruth Roland in Ruth of the Rockies, Velvet Fingers, in which George B. Seitz will again be seen in a popular role play, ably assisted by Marguerite Courtot; and Double Adventure, in which Charles Hutchison, champion daredevil serial actor, returns to Pathe.

"THE COUNTY FAIR," produced by Maurice Tourneur, opened its Ohio run last week at the Grand Opera House, Canton, setting a new attendance record for the house. Streams of people were standing in line in front of the box office for every performance. The Grand Opera House seldom plays a picture a whole week. In fact "THE MIRACLE MAN," "WHY CHANGE YOUR WIFE?" and "THE COUNTY FAIR" ARE THE ONLY ONES THAT HAVE BEEN PLAYED THERE FOR A FULL WEEK; "THE COUNTY FAIR" PLAYED TO THE BIGGEST BUSINESS OF THE THREE. Representatives of Feiber & Shea, who run the Grand Opera House in Canton, say it's the best money getter of the year. The picture was played like a circus. Street parade, big show in the lobby of the theatre, with apples and pink lemonade were on tap. There was a "rube" band and a comedy prologue staged before the opening of the picture. Circus billing all over the town and the country districts BROUGHT PEOPLE IN FROM TWENTY MILES AROUND.

MILWAUKEE NEWS

By Elizabeth Scott

"The County Fair" is at the Merrill. Talk about thrilling! Oh, boy, this is a crackerjack! There's a bully horse race that's so exciting I could hardly stick to my pew. Believe me, the picture's varied. It contains all the necessary elements from the mortgage on the old farm to greased pig, and revolves from one thing to another as freely as one could wish.

It's a regular medley—has excerpts from David Harum, "In Old Kentucky," "'Way Down East," etc., etc. But you never under the sun could say it's a steal or the same old thing any more than you could compare beef loaf and a doughnut.

This pleasing concoction was whipped into shape by Maurice Tourneur, one of the ablest directors of the screen and who assembled a cast that's very much up to snuff. Besides Wesley Barry and John Steppling, displaying freckles and avoirdupois, respectively, there's Helen Jerome Eddy. She's Sally, who gets herself all set for considerable self-sacrifice. David Butler is Joel, likable hired man, whose shrewd analysis of the villain wins the day for Cold Molasses. C. M. is a very fast trotting horse. I can't understand why they dubbed him thusly, though. I always thought cold molasses ran kind of slow.

Edythe Chapman is an awfully nice Aunt Abigail, and Charles Barton is Tim Vail, the peppy little jockey. The Merrill orchestra gives an imitation of the village orchestra that is responsible for whoops of delight from the audience. If you don't see this, you'll be sorry.

Special Service Section on "The County Fair"

NEIL BURGESS' famous old play of rural life and a county fair horse race is so well known both as to actual plot and dramatic punch that little needs to be said in this connection. Most people know that it toured the country for many years as a companion play to "The Old Homestead", "Way Down East" and "In Old Kentucky." The majority of older people have seen it and all of the younger generation have heard about it.

The picture version of "The County Fair" is a very faithful transposition of the play to the screen. No liberties have been taken with the plot and many of the original lines of the play are retained as titles. The characters with the exception of the extras are the same as in the dramatic version, all excellent types and entirely adequate for the roles they portray.

"Sally" is played by Helen Jerome Eddy whose reputation for parts of the kind, the simple wholesome country girl rivals that of Charles Ray as a country boy. David Butler, through his recent starring vehicles, such as "Fickle Women" and "Girls Don't Gamble", is now well known as a likeable personality and a competent player and has a considerable following. As "Aunt Abigail" Edith Chapman, one of the best known and most popular character women who has ever appeared for the screen, has an ideal role. Wesley Barry, whose screen debut as a full-fledged star is just announced in his appearance in "Dinty" is the "Tommy Perkins" of the story. The balance of the cast is more than competent, boasting such names as William V. Mong, Arthur Houseman, John Steppling and Charles Barton.

The production was personally supervised by Maurice Tourneur.

High Lights of "The County Fair"

Adapted from a stage play in which Neil Burgess toured for many years, playing nearly every city and village in the country.

A cast in which three real stars, Wesley Barry, David Butler and Helen Jerome Eddy have principal roles and where the balance of the company is carefully picked for types from the most distinguished players to be secured.

A picture produced by a director who has an enviable reputation and whose previous productions have been so successful that his name is in itself a real box office attraction.

A production that offers unlimited exploitation opportunities of the sort that never fail to go over.

The adaptation of "The County Fair" has been intelligently done. No attempt to make it a dramatic picture is made. The big punch is the race in which "Cold Molasses" comes in second but wins the money because Solon Hammerhead's horse is disqualified. Homely bits of rural life, correct atmosphere and pleasing scenic locations backed by the titles from the play make up the rest of the offering.

EXPLOITATION OPPORTUNITIES

"The County Fair" is essentially an "exploitation" picture. The pre-release showings that have been given in various parts of the country beginning with the one by S. Barrett McCormick manager of the new Rivoli theatre, Toledo, Ohio, as described at length some two months ago in the NEWS, and followed by such notable engagements as that at the New Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, as explained by photographs and tests in this same issue have demonstrated this fact.

The angles of exploitation presented by this picture begin with the fame of the play itself. This applies to large and small cities since there are few of even the smallest towns where Neil Burgess did not take his drama in the days when the road show was in its prime. Next in importance from a box office angle as applied to the average theatre which is not in a position to put on big exploitation stunts is the cast. Such names as Wesley Barry, which the writer considers of greatest importance from the star angle because of the amount of publicity the youngster is receiving and will continue to receive as the featured player of "Dinty", David Butler whose pictures as mentioned have been pronounced successes by both press and public and Helen Jerome Eddy are seldom associated in one picture. Then comes the reputation of the producer and supervising director, Maurice Tourneur. His many pictures of unusual dramatic and entertainment value have established his name as meaning something with picture patrons. Therefore these three things should be given the greatest publicity except for the largest theatres. In the case of the last named houses, the opportunity to stage a horse race in the theatre by the use of the tread mill, with live horses, is the best bet.

This stunt is of course not new. It has been used with such pictures as "In Old Kentucky" and many others but it is always the greatest box office attraction that a theatre can contrive, if not worked too often. How to put on the tread mill race is something that any house which is equipped for such a stunt will not need to be told. If any manager does want details on this idea they have but to refer to other pages in this section where what was done by the New Lyric of Minneapolis is fully explained both in text and by photographs.

For special stunts that will fit in well with "The County Fair" we can not do better than to refer you to our pages for the past six months where exploitation on "Down on the Farm" has been described. Exhibitors who wish an index to these exploitation pages will be furnished same on application to the Exhibitors' Service Bureau.

Suggestions as to appropriate "hokum" stunts are to be found in the producer's press book. In addition to these the writer submits the following:

If you use a "rube" orchestra, for press book suggestions, for "bally hoo" purposes, present the overture you select for the bill behind a screen lighted from the rear as has been described in this issue, in an article about one of the prologues used by Sid Grau-

Wesley Barry, Helen Jerome Eddy, David Butler and Edith Chapman are in "The County Fair." Lyric Theatre, Minneapolis, gross receipts one week $8,300.

Here they are, all the famous characters that made Neil Burgess's "The County Fair" an immortal stage play

"The County Fair" Has Three Big Exploitation Angles

If you use a "rube" orchestra, one of the press book suggestions, for "bally hoo" purposes, present the overture you select for the bill behind a screen lighted from the rear as has been described in this issue, in an article about one of the prologues used by Sid Grauman of Grauman's theatre, Los Angeles, and as Hugo Reisenfeld, managing director of the Criterion, Rialto and Rivoli theatres did in presenting the overture used in conjunction with "Something to Think About". The "shadowgraph" stunt was used by Grauman and Reisenfeld without the comedy angle but for "The County Fair" we recommend making the figures grotesque and burlesqueing the idea whenever possible.

Even before Wesley Barry became a full-fledged star, exhibitors were getting results with "freckle-faced" contests for pictures in which he appeared. For "The County Fair" this idea can be elaborated in many ways. One good stunt is suggested by a scene in the picture in which "Tommy Perkins" goes to church with squeaky shoes. Give prizes for the boys who show up at a stated time with the "squeakiest" boots. In this connection window tie-ups with shoe stores where a picture of "Tommy" showing him in his shoes is explained along with a window of boys' shoes and the information to the effect that "Tommy Perkins'" shoes in "The County Fair" differ from those shown in more ways than just the "squeak."

Other scenes of the picture that present opportunities are those showing "Tommy" catching the greased pig and climbing the greased pole.

You can stage a greased pig race outside the theatre, preferably in the street if police permission can be gained and the greased pole stunt can be pulled off on the stage. Both are sure-fire interest arousing events good for free newspaper publicity and a lot of talk among both the youngsters and the grown ups.

PROLOGUE SUGGESTIONS

A prologue for "The County Fair" that would provide entertainment and atmosphere is also to be found in scenes of the picture.

Use a stage setting showing the exterior of a side show tent at a county fair, with a raised platform on which the various "performers" do their stunts. You can use your orchestra again dressing them as musicians in a typical side show band. For other characters a couple of dancers attired in the traditional showy tinsel dresses, the fat lady, the living skeleton and the barker will be suitable. Let your band open up the ballyhoo show with the other artists following. Off stage use the effects that go with a fair, such as the noise of rubber squawkers, the cries of the "hot dog" man, the bellowing of calves, the clang of the starter's bell on the race track, etc.

If you want to bring out the more serious side of the picture and build on its rural note rather than on the horse racing and "hokum" side of the offering, a "husking bee" in a barn could be staged with a musical program and rural gags featured.

For such a stunt, build a set that represents the "drive in" bent of a barn. The back wall should represent barn doors with a loft and the roof of the barn showing. The sides of the set should show the cornstalks' butts and underneath this the hay that fills the two mows on each side.

Your players dressed as rural types, burlesqued somewhat since the actual rube is now a scarce article should be kneeling in pairs in front of shooks of corn with bushel baskets about for the husked ears. Old time country songs, like "All Bound Round With a Woolen String", "Seeing Nellie Home", "Johnny Won't You Go", "Little Brown Jug", "Bingo Was His Name", "Captain Jinks", "Solomon Levi", "Mulligan Guards", "Sweet Adeline", "Old Black Joe", "Old Zip Coon", "Turkey in the Straw", etc., can be used in chorus style.

For details in your stage setting, the fanning mill, lumber wagon, horse rake, double harness hanging on peg, etc., will be suitable. At this time of year unhusked corn will be easily obtainable and a considerable emount of "business" can be evolved in the actual husking of the corn. The red ear of corn that permits the finder to kiss his partner can be used for good gags, such as the girl running to escape, the struggle over the kissing process, can all be worked up to provide action and atmosphere. For effects the wind whistling about the barn, a rural scene in winter to be shown when the barn door is opened, "northern lights" flashing on your scenic sky and a winter moonlight effect will add to your prologue.

For specialties in the prologue the male quartette selection is bound to please. Such old time quartette favorites as "Old Black Joe", "The Old Oaken Bucket" should be used. As to the personnel of the quartette select singers who can make up to eccentric characters. A fat chubby tenor, a lank Yankee baritone with chin whiskers, a basso with a "peg" leg (to be faked, of course), etc. The farm dog, sheep the red rooster, doves, etc., can be used to advantage in dressing the set.

NEWSPAPER DISPLAY

Suggestions for display advertising for "The County Fair" can not improve on that which has been turned out by the exhibitors who have already run the picture for pre-release showings, notably S. Barrett McCormick of the Rivoli, Toledo, Ohio. Mr. McCormick is an advertising expert whose newspaper ads while manager of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., won him wide fame. For the benefit of exhibitors who would like to inspect Mr. McCormick's copy for "The County Fair" we are reproducing two of the displays used for the Rivoli showing: also a display used for the New Lyric, Minneapolis engagement, last week.

PROGRAM AND PRESS NOTICES

Do not miss Maurice Tourneur's picturization of "The County Fair" when it comes to the . . . . theatre for . . . . days commencing next . . . . .

It's the big screen version of Neil Burgess's famous play which took the country by storm some seasons back. The picturization is bigger and finer than the original story and it is a sure fire winner both for its fine rural types, its quaint humor and the fun and excitement of a county fair ending with the greatest horse race ever staged for a screen production.

Do not miss Maurice Tourneur's screen story of "The County Fair", which is on view at the . . . now. It is the biggest thing of its kind ever shown and has all the fun and excitement of a day at the fair crowded into a tale which reaches its climax in the best horse race ever flashed before the camera. A great all-star cast is also in it, including such stellar favorites as Wesley Barry, the delight of all kids; David Butler and dainty Helen Jerome Eddy.

"Talk about thrilling! Oh, boy, this is a crackerjack! If you don't see this you'll be sorry!"

The New Lyric's Exploitation for "The County Fair"

The engagement of "The County Fair" at Finklestein and Ruben's New Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, was characterized by an exploitation campaign originated by Manager Charles C. Perry which ranks with anything of its kind ever put over in the Twin Cities. The illustrations show Mr. Perry's rube band and circus parade staged each day of the showing. The bottom cut presents a view of the stage setting used for a prologue and the characters which took part therein. Gardiner Pictures Expects New Records

"Full Steam Ahead!" is the password from C. A. Taylor, the genial general manager of Gardiner Pictures, of Buffalo, who will distribute "The County Fair" in northern New York, to the whole Gardiner sales force.

The Gardiner Pictures of Buffalo and Albany is one of the livest independents in the business. It was organized by "Tom" Gardiner, who is still the president of the concern. Mr. Gardiner is known to all exhibitors in New York State since he purchased "Mickey." He put his efforts forth in special exploitation methods and largely through his personal efforts he sold the patrons Gardiner Specials.

"Yankee Doodle in Berlin," "Birth of a Race" and "The Lost Battalion" followed "Mickey." Now comes "The County Fair," and from the inquiries received and the contracts closed on this picture, it appears that it will surpass any super-feature ever shown in Northern New York.

The new quarters of Gardiner is fully equipped to handle "The County Fair." The new publicity director, Mr. Ward, and the art and scenic director, Harry Epstein, have their departments working day and night.

Each company of "The County Fair" will have two advance publicity experts, a rube band, side show paraphernalia and a lobby display said to be different from any other ever shown in that territory.

Another new and thoroughly attractive tie-up has been arranged with the Victor and Columbia record dealers for a demonstration in their windows and in the theatre of the talking record by Cal Steward of his trip to "The County Fair." This talking record, of the "Rube" variety, is one of the most amusing ever made for phonographs.

"The County Fair" Books Quickly in South

The reported bad conditions existing in the South have not affected the sale of "The County Fair" in that section, according to reports received from Ceanel Enterprises, who are handling this special for that territory. According to the Southern exchangemen, the bookings on "The County Fair," which has only been offered to exhibitors for a comparatively short time, are phenomenal.

The Ceanel Enterprises is a recently formed exchange, and in presenting "The County Fair" they are making their bow in the independent field in that territory. Their office is at 146 Marietta street, Atlanta, Ga.

"County Fair" in Northwest

Friedman Film Controls Picture; Premieres Held in Two Cities

Benjamin Friedman, president and general manager of the Friedman Film Corp., of Minneapolis, and owner of "The County Fair" in his territory

THE Friedman Film Corporation, which is distributing "The County Fair" from its Minneapolis office, in the Film Exchange Building, is one of the largest independent film exchanges in the Northwest, and has been in existence approximately eight years. It has exploited, in addition to a number of well-known productions, the following specials: "The Unpardonable Sin," "The Whip," and "The Spoilers." Now it intends to go just as hard at "The County Fair."

At present the Friedman Film controls a number of Triangle pictures featuring the Talmadges, Douglas Fairbanks, Charles Ray, Wm. S. Hart, Louise Glaum and a number of other famous stars. They also own the special "Peggy," and the serial, "The Evil Eye," "The Screaming Shadow," and "The Trail of the Octopus."

Ben Friedman is president and general manager of the Friedman Film Corporation, and is one of the oldest State Right men in Minnesota. His exchange occupies the second floor of the Film Exchange Building, having approximately 5,000 square feet of space.

The first big showing of "The County Fair" in Minneapolis was given on Sunday, November 14th, at the New Lyric theatre. On Saturday morning at ten o'clock a big street parade, headed by a hick band, several clowns and animals, which included bears, donkeys and so forth, followed by two thousand newsboys, was staged. The boys gave a special showing of "The County Fair" on Saturday morning. They were paraded for about a mile up to the theatre. This caused quite a sensation and the morning newspapers carried stories on the affair.

Charles Perry, manager of the New Lyric theatre, is responsible for the publicity which "The County Fair" drew forth from its Minneapolis premiere. In addition to the parade Mr. Perry conceived an elaborate prologue entitled "The Village Orchestra." The regular theatre orchestra was dressed in rube clothes for the occasion.

In Milwaukee the picture was first presented at the Merrill theatre on November 7th. It was staged under the personal direction of Manager Rouda, of the Merrill, who was assisted by Art Abelson, formerly manager of the New Lyric in Minneapolis. Every conceivable kind of circus advertising was used to put the picture over. Thousands of inches of newspaper space was also used before the run.

"County Fair" Breaking Records in South

Ceanel Enterprises, of 146 Marietta Street, Atlanta, Ga., who held the rights for "The County Fair" in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama, gave the first showing of "The County Fair" at the Grand theatre, Montgomery, Alabama, recently. Although it had had very little advertising, due to the fact that it was not booked until two days before its opening, it proved to be a knock out. Business doubled itself on the second day, and on the third day, the people were standing in the street from one in the afternoon until nine-thirty at night. It proved to be a wonderful attraction for children.

The Imperial theatre, of Charlotte, North Carolina, also played to a record breaking business for three days, and reports from small towns where it has played, proves that it is going just as well with the small exhibitors as it is with the larger houses. Cedartown, Georgia, a town of three thousand people, played to $400 in one day.

"The County Fair" will be the attraction in Atlanta's leading theatre, The Rialto, during the week of the Southeastern Motion Picture Exposition, and in anticipation of the bookings to be made the Ceanel Enterprises have ordered four more prints, making a total of nine prints to be used in these five Southeastern states.

Company's First Picture Is "County Fair"

The Lee Film Co., of 1220 Burns street, Philadelphia, who are handling "The County Fair" for that district, is a new concern, headed by Louis Bache. "The County Fair" is their first production.

Although heading a young exchange, Mr. Bache is one of the best known exchangemen in the Philadelphia territory. He is personally known to hundreds of exhibitors in the district, and is a man whose judgment of pictures is considered phenomenal.

"I believe," said Mr. Bache, in discussing "The County Fair," "that I have picked a winner and one that cannot fail in drawing at the box office. Of course, I will road-show it throughout my district. I hope to make it one of the sensations of the season. The Lee Film Co. could not have picked a better picture for their initial offering to the Philadelphia field."

Huge Business Reported at Paterson Showing

The Garden theatre in Paterson played to one of its biggest crowds during the week just ending. "The County Fair" was the attraction that crowded them in. Fabian's Garden is the theatre which staged the world's premier of "Passion" not so long ago. "The County Fair" is controlled for Greater New York and New Jersey by the First National Exchange of New Jersey, headed by J. Fabian, who also owns the Garden theatre.

In presenting the picture at the Garden, special attention was paid to the lobby display. This was conceived and executed by Alex. Reid, one of the best known stock directors in the country. The entire lobby was made to represent a country farmyard scene, with corn husks and pumpkins scattered about. The stage setting was elaborate, and a prologue of a rube choice was used. Bad weather alone prevented the execution of further streetstunts which were planned.

A. M. Fabian, general manager of this exchange, announces that "The County Fair" is receiving especially heavy bookings everywhere. It will not be roadshowed, as it was considered to be unfair to the many franchise holders to do so. The First National Exchange of New Jersey has now sold 68 per cent of its franchises, and further sales of 12 per cent are pending.

True Film Co. Controls Southwest Rights

True Thompson, president of the True Film Co., of 1911½ Commerce street, Dallas, Texas, one of the youngest and best known exchangemen of his territory, controls the rights for "The County Fair" for Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. Among other big specials which he has successfully exploited in the past was "The Whip."

Mr. Thompson announces that "The County Fair" will be a road show in his territory. It will be presented with an original prologue and a hick orchestra.

"The Screen Needs More Films Like 'Humoresque' and 'The County Fair.'"—Toledo Blade, September 13th.

Guy C. Smith, Ltd., Handling "County Fair"

DEPARTING from its customary task of handling American-made film productions for foreign distribution, the Guy Croswell Smith, Ltd., has undertaken the sale of the Maurice Tourneur production of "The County Fair" to state-right buyers in this country as well as to distributing agencies abroad, because the heads of the organization are convinced that this picture version of Neil Burgess's former dramatic sensation is destined to outdo the wonderful success registered by the stage drama when it toured the country two decades ago.

We at first contemplated the purchase of only the foreign rights to the Maurice Tourneur production, as is our usual practice, but convinced that 'The County Fair' was a picture of unusual possibilities we decided to buy the entire world's rights to the photoplay and sell the territorial rights to state-righters in this country ourselves," said Guy Croswell Smith, president of the corporation which bears his name, to a representative of the NEWS during a recent interview.

"Against the advice of many in the business we decided not to offer the picture to any program distributing organization, but to dispose of it by selling territorial rights to the production on the state-right market. And the worth of our judgment was attested by the fact that within two weeks after the picture had been made available to state-right buyers the majority of the territories in the United States had been disposed of. This leaves us at the present time with but a few territories still open for sale. The ready sale of 'The County Fair' on the state-right market goes to disprove the theory that has been advanced quite frequently of late to the effect that the independent market is becoming a 'closed' channel of distribution. Our experience with 'The County Fair' is entirely to the contrary; the really worthwhile picture finds no closed market in the state-right field as is conclusively proved by the way that the territorial rights to 'The County Fair' have been eagerly bought up by the state-right buyers.

"As I remarked at the outset," continued Mr. Smith, "we extended our negotiations from the American rights to the world's rights to this Maurice Tourneur adaptation of the old Neil Burgess stage-play, because we felt the picture version had all the elements or an extraordinarily strong box-office attraction. Our faith in the picture has been more than realized in the way that the picture has been showing to capacity business at various points throughout the country where the production has already been presented. The picture had its premier at the Rivoli Theatre, in Toledo, Ohio, during the week of September 11th, under the auspices of S. Barret McCormick, a theatrical manager of national repute. Its run of one week at the big Toledo house attracted nation-wide attention, and prominent buyers from all over the country, after viewing the picture during its engagement at the Rivoli, closed immediately for their respective territories. Thus it was that within two weeks after its opening at the Toledo house the majority of the territories had been disposed of—an achievement that stamps the picture at once with the unqualified endorsement of the leading state-right buyers throughout the country.

"'The original methods of exploitation that have attended its presentation at various big centers have also attracted considerable attention to the picture. Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Paterson, Clarksburg in West Virginia, and Youngstown, Ohio, are some of the places that have already shown 'The County Fair' with elaborate advertising and exploitation campaigns. The reports received have been most favorable. At Youngstown, it ran the full week—the only picture to enjoy this distinction besides 'The Miracle Man' and 'Why Change Your Wife.' Joe Lee is in active charge of the exploitation of the picture, with headquarters at the main offices of the Guy Croswell Smith Company in New York City, and he stands ready to lend every available aid in putting the picture over.

"In addition to the sales already effected for 'The County Fair' in the United States, several foreign rights to the production have already been disposed of. Despite the fact that 'The County Fair' is a picture of a distinctly American character and atmosphere, success has attended our efforts in distributing the picture abroad, and this because the photoplay has a strong appeal of universal heart interest that knows no geographical or political limitations. The dramatic suspense of the spectacular horse-race has also been a strong factor in securing sales for the production abroad. Already the picture has been sold for South America, Scandinavia, the Orient and South Africa. And one of the most remarkable features of its foreign sales is the fact that foreign buyers have paid for 'The County Fair' double the price that they have previously paid for Maurice Tourneur productions.

"Mr. George Bowles, our foreign representative, with headquarters at 6 Rue de La Paix, Paris, is at the present time making preparations for the presenting of 'The County Fair' in Paris. Just now he is at our London headquarters, 19 Sackville street, Piccadilly, negotiating for a theatre to stage 'The County Fair' photoplay before the English movie fans. It is expected that the Tourneur subject will be introduced to the French and English audiences in the near future."

Story and Cast of "County Fair" : : : :

THE story unfolded in the picture version of the Neil Burgess stage success, "The County Fair," is, of course, substantially the same as that presented in the play. However, there are side-plays and additions of a humorous and serious appeal which the visualization permitted over and above the dramatic and laughable situations found in the stage version of the story. The plot is a single one, providing characterizations of plain home-spun New Englanders, commonplace men and women, but compelling characters nevertheless because of the universal heart appeal and dramatic interest of the situations in which they move. Accordingly, although the characters and atmosphere of the story are distinctly American and moreover peculiar to that phase of American life found in the New England States, yet the universal appeal of the theme itself and the dramatic situations involved claim the interest of all human hearts irrespective of racial, political or geographical limitations or prejudices.

Aunt Abigail and Sally are being sorely pressed by financial embarrassments when Solon Hammerhead, who holds a mortgage on the little cottage in which they live, threatens to foreclose on them unless his schemes are complied with by them. His alternative to eviction is that Aunt Abigail become his wife or that Sally marry his worthless son Bruce. Unable to meet their financial obligations to Solon, the women are faced with the certainty of expulsion from their old home or consent to an undesirable matrimonial alliance.

Sally, who is really in love with Joel, the hired man, driven to desperation and prompted by a heroic motive to keep the roof over the head of Aunt Abigail, is about to yield consent to the perverse and selfish plans of their hard-hearted creditor, when things begin to happen. Only a few days remain before the terrible decision must be made.

That evening, Tim Vail, who was formerly a jockey of considerable repute and at present a victim of adverse circumstances, breaks into the cottage with the intention of stealing nothing but food. Vail is discovered in the act of looting the pantry and tells his story. No charges are pressed against him, and in gratitude he sets about to find some way to aid the embarrassed women. While inspecting the barn and the sole piece of horse-flesh left to Aunt Abigail, Vail discovers that Cold Molasses is built for the race track. Joel and Vail in close co-operation set out upon a well laid plan to balk the conniving Hammerhead and rescue the distressed women-folks.

Having secured permission to begin a systematic training of Cold Molasses with a view to enter the horse in the free-for-all race to be held as a part of the events attending the great County Fair. It happens that this most important county event of the year is scheduled to take place on the same date that the mortgage is due on Aunt Abigail's home. The Hammerheads, who also have a horse entered for the race, become acquainted with the intentions of Joel and Vail; and fearful of the results if Cold Molasses is permitted to run, they set about to thwart the plans of the jockey and hired man. The barn in which Cold Molasses is stabled is set afire by the Hammerheads, but Vail at great peril enters the burning building and rescues the horse from the flames.

On the day of the County Fair, interest centers in the horse-race in which Lightning is matched against Cold Molasses. Considerable speculation attends the contest. Lightning is a proved steed of considerable merit while Cold Molasses is still an unknown as to speed and endurance. At last the horses are sent away from the wire on a flying start. The struggle is a hard fought one with the ultimate victor always in doubt. At the three-quarters, Lightning and Cold Molasses are neck and neck. Down the home-stretch they tear at a tremendous rate, when in a final spurt Cold Molasses, responding to the trained hand of the experienced Tim Vail, pulls ahead of the rival horse and passes across the line, a winner. The prize of three thousand dollars is awarded to the winning horse; the designs of the Hammerheads are frustrated just in time—and, of course, there are wedding bells, while the fade-out conveys the story that never loses its appeal—that they all lived happy ever after.

In the cast that has been engaged to interpret the various parts, Edith Chapman appears as Aunt Abigail, while Helen Jerome Eddy plays the role of Sally. David Butler is seen as Joel, and William V. Mong appears as Solon Hammerhead. Charles Barton takes the role of Tim Vail, while Arthur Houseman interprets the character of Bruce Hammerhead. John Steppling is also given a prominent part, and Wesley Barry, in the role of Tommy Perkins, plays a most amusing "kid" part.

F.I.L.M. CLUB ENTERTAINS

The New York City F. I. L. M. Club held its fifth annual dinner and dance in Hotel Claridge on Saturday evening last.

It was voted by the guests the most brilliant and entertaining that this Association has yet held. Many were the compliments paid the arrangement committee headed by Mr. S. Eckman, Jr., and assisted by Messrs. Abeles, Buxbaum, Raynor and President Chadwick..

The cabaret feature was especially entertaining. The feature of the evening, however, was the first run presentation of the one-reel comedy in which all club members took an active part. President Chadwick cast in the principal role proved he can act as well as conduct club meetings. The titling, which was under the direction of Mr. George Uffner, was clever.

Three prominent exhibitors—Charles Goldreir, Hy Gainsboro and Sam Book took leading parts in the comedy. These showmen were so well satisfied with their acting that they have arranged for exclusive run in their neighborhood, it is stated.

Screening of the Motion Picture Board of Trade August Picnic was another feature that caused much merriment.

Schenck Secures Rights to "Passion Flower"

Oscar Osso, representative of the French and Spanish Authors, and Mr. Richard J. Herndon have just sold the world motion picture rights to "The Passion Flower" to Mr. Schenck. Norma Talmadge will be starred in this subject.

Conditions Affect Receipts

General Condition of Prosperity Booming Business, Declares Pathe

THE general condition of prosperity, recently pointed out in a statement from the Pathe home-office as being favorably reflected in the box-office coffers of the nation's exhibitors, is further verified, according to a more recent report from the Pathe headquarters, by the preliminary estimate of crops just made by the Department of Agriculture. The Pathe statement quotes the following excerpt from the New York Times in support of its assertion:

"American farmers broke production records, with five crops this year. Preliminary estimates announced today by the Department of Agriculture show the corn, tobacco, rice, sweet potatoes and pear crops to have surpassed in size those of any previous years in the country's history. Other crops closely approaching records, were of oats, barley, rye, potatoes, apples and hay. The buckwheat production record, however, has stood since 1866, with this year's crop more than 8,000,000 bushels under it. Final crop production figures will be announced next month."

The increase of bank deposits in the city of Philadelphia and a notable flocking of people to the picture theatres in "Quaker Town" form the subject of another statement from the Pathe office, emphasizing how prosperous conditions among picture fans are favorably affecting the motion picture business. Charles Henschel, branch manager for Pathe at the Philadelphia office, is in New York preparing for the continued heavy patronage expected in his district. He declared that last week bank deposits in Philadelphia had shown a sharp increase.

"There was the inevitable result," added Mr. Henschel. "The picture houses were crowded; everybody was in search of this most popular form of recreation because everybody felt that they could afford it. Whenever the family bank account exhibits dwindling figures, the situation is the reverse. People cut down all their expenses, and amusements are apt to come first."

British Office Aids Universal

London Firm Pushing Exploitation Campaign for Universal Products

NO stone is being left unturned by the Film Booking Office, Ltd., of London, in its drive to exploit Universal pictures throughout Great Britain, it was reported by Mr. Carl Laemmle, Universal president, upon his recent return from Europe. By special trade shows in all the big film centers, by elaborate publicity in all trade publications and by a special monthly magazine devoted entirely to Universal products, the British distributing agency is preparing for its Universal schedule of releases, to begin next year, according to Mr. Laemmle.

Since Mr. Laemmle signed a contract with the F. B. O. several months ago, giving the British film agency rights for the distribution of all Universal products in the British Isles, Messrs. Arthur and Albert Clozenberg, the two brothers at the head of the F. B. O. have concentrated their entire attention on Universal pictures. A surprising awakening of interest in the Universal output among British exhibitors, critics and patrons has resulted.

The F. B. O.-Universal program begins October 3, 1921, with "The Virgin of Stamboul," Priscilla Dean's big picture. It will be followed by one Jewel or a special attraction every week. Succeeding Universal Jewel releases are "Under Crimson Skies," November 28; "The Devil's Pass Key," December 26; "Home," with Mildred Harris Chaplin January 23, 1922: "The Right to Happiness," February 20; "The Great Air Robbery," March 20; "Once to Every Woman," April 10; "The Breath of the Gods," May 8, etc.

Erich Von Stroheim's pictures especially have met with enthusiastic reception at the hands of British reviewers and exhibitors, it is stated, "Blind Husbands" is declared to have caused more discussion than any other film previously shown in that country.

'Love Madness" to Be Shown by Saenger

The Saenger Amusement Company, operating a chain of theatres in the South, have booked "Love Madness," the J. Parker Read, Jr., production, starring Louise Glaum, which was recently released on the Hodkinson program. The booking is for a total of fifty-five days over their circuit.

George King, president of the Stoll Film Corporation of America, has received word from Ralph Proctor, general manager of the company, now in the West on his way to the Coast, that he is making rapid progress in the organization of his sales force and that in a few days he will be ready to announce its composition. Mr. Proctor left New York October 25. The sales representatives of the company, who will make their headquarters in Pathe exchanges, the distributors of Stoll pictures, will begin work December 6. The first release will be made about January 1.

At the Stoll executive offices on the third floor of the building 130 West Forty-sixth street, carpenters, painters and decorators have effected a transformation during the past three weeks.. Adequate preparation has been made for the convenience of projection room visitors.. A new screen and new machines also are being put in place.

The negatives of the first four releases already have reached New York. Also there have been received the still negatives for the same productions. These indicate that exhibitors will be supplied with a strong line of publicity with which to exploit Stoll pictures.

The Origin of Coal to Be Shown on Screen

The world as science believes it was 10,000,000 years ago will be shown in the prologue of an educational film now in production at the Rothacker Chicago studio. The prehistoric sections of the picture will be animation visualizing the origin of coal.

The animation, which is being executed by Wallace A. Carlson who puts the "Gumps" on celluloid, shows the enormous dinosaurs and pterosaurs and other strange beasts which lived when nature was filling her treasure chest with the substance which keeps us warm today.

Live Notes from the Studios

CONDUCTED BY LILLIAN R. GALE

ABOUT DIRECTORS

Robert Ellis has become a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, New York Lodge, and was initiated at the last meeting, which was well attended, to welcome the young director to the fold.

After being dangerously ill for over seven weeks, Maurice Tourneur, the French producer-director, is spending a few days in New York, where he journeyed from California to attend the national premier of his picture, "The Last of the Mohicans," released via Associated Producers. While East Mr. Tourneur will confer with a number of famous authors regarding his next story, the scenario for which will be rushed to completion so that he may start production immediately after his return to the West.

George Irving, director, and Creighton Hale, leading man, in American Cinema's production of "Her Majesty," starring Mollie King," have hung up a record for "goat getting" in a profession that knows a good bit of "goat." They recently came upon a means of getting the goat of a goat, who apparently had none. The action of the story called for the goat to emit an emphatic kick—a kick aimed at the person of the fat boy in the story. The goat apparently belonged to no union. He had no kick to register. It was Mr. Hale's brilliant idea, seconded by the activity of Mr. Irving that finally brought about results. A fine wire was connected to the rear hoof of the unwilling goat and an electrical current. The result was eminently satisfactory—as the picture promises to prove.

Thomas H. Ince has spirited Fred Niblo away from Douglas Fairbanks, and Niblo will make a series of special productions under the arrangement. Niblo is the husband of Enid Bennett, the star.

The fad of motion picture producers for filming famous novels and other published works persists, in spite of the wails of starving scenario writers. Recently it was announced that the Bible is to be filmed.

Following the trend of the times, Jay Chapman and Rene R. Rivierre, screen scribes for Ben Hampton and Robert Brunton, respectively, make an even more startling announcement. They are going to produce an all-star photodrama of Webster's Dictionary!

As Director of Motion Pictures for Community Service (formerly

Chet Withey, who is now directing Constance Talmadge

War Camp Community Service) Miss Graswinckel will have splendid opportunity to draw on her experience, said to be broad and versatile in its scope.

For a number of years Miss Graswinckel devoted her time to intensive work in the mail order field and gained an enviable position there as executive and counsel for large mail order houses.

This work, together with personal visits and study of thirty-three states in the Union and in Canada, have given Miss Graswinckel a sympathetic understanding of the territorial conditions and peoples, their interests and ideals, that is a valuable asset for her present work of stimulating community interest and spirit. With ability to interpret America to Americans and newcomers alike, Miss Graswinckel is well equipped.

At the close of the war, and after completing her wartime activities, Miss Graswinckel joined the forces of Leggett-Greun Corp. as Chief of Export Sales Films, applying her experience in export advertising and sales promotion as a foundation for industrial and educational film work.

In directing the film work of Community Service, which is one of her activities, Miss Graswinckel plans to produce the best in educational and promotional films, and to provide her audience with pictures having the most sympathetic appeal and the greatest message.

Several negroes were on location in the Mojave with Ben Hampton's company last week, filming Sahara desert scenes of "There was a King in Egypt." Dressed as Nubians, they were rolling African dominoes on a blanket. Suddenly the game halted. Director Howard Hickman's megaphonic voice was calling to his assistant:

"We'll use the still in the picture today, Billy!"

The black boys scrambled to their feet and stared about.

"Boy, yo hear 't?" gasped one. "Wundah if they makes cactus whiskey out yere?"

They descended en masse on the director.

"Captain, whereat is this still you mentions?"

"Still photography, you mean, Mr. Hickman explained, take still pictures for advertising the moving picture."

Gloom settled down on the "Sahara." Even the antics of the galloping ivories had lost their charm!

"The Road to London," first Bryant Washburn production which was picturized and directed by Eugene Mullin, will recall some of the adaptations Mr. Mullin made for Douglas Fairbanks, since the story is a rollicking one of how a young American thwarts the plans of a "dragon aunt," said to be a "true to life characterization." The role is played by Saba Raleigh, wife of the noted author-manager of London. Mr. Raleigh is the producer of some of the most successful Drury Lane melodramas, in which his wife invariably appeared in a leading character.

Victor Fleming has completed work upon the picture for John Emerson, and will make another one at once, but first spend the alloted time between New York and Hollywood. To date the picture to be made on the west coast, has not been named.

ABOUT PLAYERS

Vera Gordon, the famous mother of "Humoresque," will soon be seen as the star of "Devotion," a forthcoming Harry Rapf-Selznick special which gives this polished actress another role of the type with which she has become associated. Since "Humoresque" flashed on the screen and established Vera Gordon as the greatest film find in several years, Mrs. Gordon has been seen in "The North Wind's Malice," the Rex Beach-Goldwyn production now being shown at leading theatres.

Most recently Vera Gordon has been headlining in vaudeville as the star of "Lullaby," an appealing sketch written expressly for her by Edgar Allan Woolf. Mrs. Gordon's elevation to the highest place in the "big time" is a noteworthy tribute not only to her own sterling dramatic talent, but also to the universal box-office value of a motion picture reputation.

Lucreta Belle, recently appearing in support of Norma Talmadge, who will be seen in another First National release

Joseph J. Dowling, famous character actor of the films, is now playing another interesting role in Benjamin B. Hampton's pictures. Mr. Dowling played the gambler, "Place Hough," in "The U. P Trail," by Zane Grey; "Anderson," in "Riders of the Dawn," by the same author, and "Uncle Peter Bines," in "The Spenders." Now he takes the role of the Egyptian excavator in "There Was a King in Egypt," Mr. Hampton's photoplay of Norma Lormier's novel, a colorful and exciting romance written around the discovery of the tomb of Ahknaton.

When Olga Petrova was headlining in vaudeville out in California, last season, she met Mary Pickford for the first time. As the Polish artiste has always admired Miss Pickford's work more than that of any other American woman on the screen, she asked Mary for an interview, and this account of when Star meets Star, ought to prove particularly interesting, when it appears in the January issue—out in December—of the Photoplay Magazine. MissPickford herself says "this article is the most delicately beautiful tribute I have ever received from a fellow-player." Petrova's impression of Mary will be syndicated in 2,000 newspapers after the first rights have been given to the magazine. It is entitled "Mary, Mary, How Does Your Garden Grow?"

Marion Davies and other members of "Bride's Play" company returned to New York from California, immediately upon completion of their work. Miss Davies will immediately start upon another starring vehicle for Cosmopolitan.

Robert Scable, entrusted with the portentous role of the "heavy" in George Baker's under-way production, "Temple Dusk", finds that his ten years as stage director for John Drew, and his services in a similar capacity for Ethel Barrymore and Marie Doro, is most helpful in his work now devoted to the screen. Following a successful career as stage director and actor, Mr. Schable became an instructor at the Sargent School of Dramatic Art, which year after year he forsook to assist in directing for John J. Robertson, Charles Maigne and others. Then George Fitzmaurice persuaded Mr. Schable to turn his talents to screen acting. Since that time he has had little for anything else, although he is still interested in directing photoplays. His seasonal releases number four Paramount pictures, one Fox special and the Metro release, in preparation, "Temple Dusk."

Gary McGarry, through the good offices of the Actors' Equity Motion Picture casting department, has been assigned a role in a production for Famous Players under the direction of Jack Dillon.

"A Million More or Less", the title of the first of the Legend Film Comedies, now under production, will star Edna Shipman and John Junior.

Corene Uzzell has been cast in one of the leading roles in "Determination", the super-feature photoplay by Capt. F. F. Stoll, which is now under production. She is now busily at work in her role as Madge Daley, the confidence queen, and is rapidly creating a remarkably fine character as the leader of the London underworld.

Miss Uzzell has appeared on the screen with such stars as Edwin Arden, George M. Cohan, William Courtney, Lina Cavalieri and Elsie Ferguson, has starred with House Peters in "Thunderbolts of Fate", and co-starred with Maclyn Arbuckle in "Mr. Potter of Texas". She has also starred for World in "The Oakdale Affair", and the "Clouded Name."

Since Antonio Moreno parted company with serials, and started upon his first feature for Vitagraph, he has been enjoying the usual search for "something different" for his next picture. He has found it evidently, since the next picture he plans to do will take him to Spain, the first visit he has enjoyed abroad since 1910 when he spent a vacation with his mother at her country place near Gibraltar.

The father of Clara Kimball Young, Edward Kimball, will have a prominent part in Irvin Cobb's story, "Boys Will Be Boys", starring Will Rogers.

Maude Wayne, the talented golden-haired emotional actress discovered by Paramount a few short months ago in Sennett comedy, has moved her makeup box to Ben Hampton's studio. She takes the roles of the alluring "Millicent" in "There Was a King in Egypt", Mr. Hampton's big all-star production of the Norma Lorimer novel. Miss Wayne was once leading lady in comedy, and has switched to heavy emotional roles in cinema drama.

In "Peck's Bad Boy", starring Jackie Coogan, Charlie Chaplin's protege, Wheeler Oakman and Molly Malone will support him.

Kenneth Harlan, who recently played opposite Constance Talmadge in "Dangerous Business" and "Mamma's Affair," has proved such a satisfactory type to play opposite the Talmadge girls, that Mr. Schenck has signed him up for a year's contract. Mr. Harlan will continue with Constance in her next picture, now being directed by Chester Withey, "The Man from Toronto." It is probable that he may occasionally support Norma, also.

Kenneth Harlan is the second leading man to be signed up by Mr. Schenck, for a long term contract within the past few months, as Harrison Ford, now playing with Norma in "Satan's Paradise," was also recently signed exclusively.

Rumor has it that Marguerite Fischer, who has been unattached since she left the American company is to form her own producing unit.

A new stellar candidate for favor, Louise Price, will have the lead in the Garson production "Charge It."

The announcement of the acquisition of Virginia Valli to the cast of "Sentimental Tommy," whose recent picture with George Walsh, "The Plunger," is now being released by Fox, has been engaged to create the role of Lady Alice in the film version of the Barrie story.

Those who have commented on the dark-haired beauty of Virginia Valli in all her productions heretofore will note with surprise her appearance in this picture as a blonde. Although the part of Lady Alice calls for a blonde girl, Director John S. Robertson was so determined to have her in his company that he persuaded her to wear a wig for this characterization.

Claire Adams believes in the virtues of singing for health. Not the singing lesson or concert or private entertainment type, but free, full-throated singing of the sort that develops one's lungs. Fortunately for those around her Miss Adams has a fine voice. Director Howard Hickman observed that it was all right for her to sing so much, but not to recommend it publicly.

"If your health theory got noised abroad, good night! Blessed would be the deaf!"

Jack London's novel "The Lady of the Big House," will be titled "What is the Matter with Marriage," when it is released to theatres, with Milton Sills featured.

Having recently completed filming the leading male role in "Dead Men Tell No Tales" and the part opposite Hope Hampton in "The Better Way," Percy Marmont took advantage of a fortnight off and spent his vacation at Lake Placid. He has just returned to New York and will soon commence work in one of the forthcoming all-star

Some True Stories Not for Scenarioizing

CHARLES RAY has lost the distinction of being one of the very few recognized stars who had never made a personal appearance in connection with the showing of one of their own productions. At the Alhambra theatre in Los Angeles he made a personal appearance on the opening night of a second run of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," the first of his independently produced features from his own studio to be distributed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and from remarks he made afterward it may be taken for granted that it won't be quite so hard to induce him to make other appearances.

Since he became a star Mr. Ray has consistently refused to make personal appearances on the ground that it helped nobody.

"If a production can't stand alone, the appearance of the star isn't going to help it or the star," was his favorite rejoinder to all pleas from exhibitors and others who tried to arrange for addresses from him as an added attraction to the showing of one of his films.

In Los Angeles the personal appearance of stars is no novelty for all of them are so close that it is easy to arrange for dates if the star will consent. Many previous efforts have been made to ensnare Ray but to the management of the Alhambra goes the credit of getting him on the stage of his theatre for the first time.

"The day the picture opened at the Alhambra a telephone message was received at the Charles Ray studios as to whether Mr. Ray wanted the management of the Alhambra to send a car for him or if he would come to the theatre in his own. It was the star himself who answered the phone. A long conversation ensued, which ended with Mr. Ray much perplexed.

"I have got to go to the Alhambra tonight and walk out on the stage and make an exhibition of myself," is the way he announced it. "Somebody fooled him into thinking I had promised to appear and he went ahead with his advertising and got himself into a fine fix if I don't show up."

He went, and he received an enthusiastic reception. No star with the liking for other people that Charlie Ray has could long resist the warmth of the public's greeting and a little heart to heart address followed. As he came off the stage Edward Kidder, author of "Peaceful Valley," who had accompanied him, said:

"Well, it wasn't so bad. They sure liked it."

"They haven't anything on me," answered the star naively, "I liked it, too.'

"I should think, Mr. Roseman," said a studio technical man in conversation with Edward Roseman, who plays the villain in "Fantomas," "that you would have changed the spelling of your name long ago. Did you ever notice that it takes thirteen letters to spell it?"

Roseman, big, dark and naturally optimistic in his everyday life, dropped for the moment the villainous character of Fantomas, and stepped away from the set as Edward Roseman, the gentleman and student.

"Do you know," he said after a moment's reflection, "that I believe those same thirteen letters have pulled me through many a tight pinch during my career as a screen actor? Change the spelling to kill that combination of thirteen? Never!

"I played straight through "Bride 13," he continued, "with '13' in the title of the picture, and exactly 13 times I escaped serious injury, and possibly death. That was a real thriller. But the '13' was with me and I believe in it.

"There are 13 lights in my dressing room here, and we are now working on the thirteenth episode of 'Fantomas.' It's all in the way you look at it. The number 13 has been a lucky one for me."

Robert McKim, "the handsomest villain" and one of Benjamin B. Hampton's stars, believes in boosting his friends and disclosing their virtues in a bluff, jovial way. One day, while lunching at the Brunton studio, Hollywood movieteria, he called everyone's attention to a short, husky little fellow who wore an infectious smile.

"Who's the greatest art director in the world?"

The poor chap looked "scared to death" at such a boost in the public eye. His smile flickered, dimmed, died out and then returned. His face took on the hue of a red brick wall. McKim, with his well-trained villainous heart and cruelly focused eyes, watched his victim burn with embarrassment, and cast his eyes about for an avenue of escape. At last, the villain supplied the answer himself in his well known operatic baritone.

"Homer I. Mesick!"

Homer I. Mesick is Benjamin B. Hampton's art director, one of those modest men of big achievements whose work has won him fame and honor. Calling down all of that public notice upon him with such an embarrassing remark is perhaps the most ruthless act the famous villain has done in his career of celluloid crime.

The R. A. Walsh company early this week returned from Monhegan Island, off the coast of Maine, where the players underwent an experience rivaling D. W. Griffith's celebrated trip to the Bahama Islands.

Monhegan Island is a chunk of rock that juts out of the ocean eighteen miles off Brockbay Harbor. Director Walsh took Miriam Cooper, Henry Clive, and other members of the cast out there to shoot the final scene which featured a leap from the top of the island into the sea—a sheer drop of 100 feet.

After the picture had been successfully taken, the company started back on the Monhegan Island mail boat and got caught in the recent storm that swept the Atlantic coast. The wind blew sixty miles an hour and it was impossible for the small mail boat to make headway. She was blown far out to sea and for twelve hours the storm lashed the Walsh party with all its fury. Although their peril was apparent to two ships that passed, the violence of the gale made rescue impossible. With a dead engine it seemed for a time that the little vessel would surely founder. However, the final abatement of the wind made it possible for the boat to limp into Brockbay Harbor.

Del Clawson, Walsh's chief cameraman, succeeded in getting a hundred feet of film showing scenes aboard the boat when the storm was at its height. This will be turned over to First National by Mayflower to be used as an advance trailer with which to advertise the picture when it is released.

The discovery of a "bottomless" pool in the bed of the middle fork of the San Joaquin river near Balloon Dome has been reported to the California State Fish and Game Commission by William D. Taylor, the motion picture director.

Descent of a granite cliff 1,800 feet high was made by Taylor and his guide to reach the river, which runs for miles between unscalable precipices. Because of the velocity of the water Taylor was unable to reach bottom with a quarter of a pound of lead on his line. The pool, 150 feet wide and 350 feet long, is stocked with quantities of fly-hungry trout, Taylor says.

Tracks of bear, deer, mountain lion and wild cats were found on the sandy shore, where they come to drink. The Indians say that no human being had ever stood before at the bottom of "the big hole."

Audience Psychology the Secret, Says Vignola

THE successful production of motion pictures is predicated fundamentally upon the thorough appreciation of the psychology of the average cinema audience, according to Robert G. Vignola.

"Success in the motion picture business is based on one's knowledge of the audience, and in the proportion as we understand the emotions, feelings, thoughts, sensations, and experiences of that audience during the showing of a picture.

"It must be remembered that a motion picture audience is always a crowd and never a public. This is due to the fact that the momentary nature of present day exhibition prevents a motion picture from acquiring a public. Except in rare instances pictures are judged by single isolated crowds, here, there, everywhere with no opportunity of welding these crowds together to the end that a public criticism might finally develop.

"Therefore, having no public to deal with we fall back upon the crowd which is of a different psychological nature. The individual in a crowd is not the same as when he is alone. Close contact with the others in the same audience has its effect on him. While he may not know it or admit it if he did know, he is subconsciously influenced by his neighbors until his emotions are heightened and his desire or ability to think is lowered. The individual in a crowd thinks with his heart and not with his head. He is inclined to be more sentimental and less philosophic. He wants a maximum of entertainment with a minimum of thinking. That is why when he is in a crowd he is more responsive and more demonstrative than when alone.

"The director or writer who knows the psychology of his audience knows that for them three classes of appeal exist in every motion picture that tells a story: the sense appeal to the eye; the emotional appeal; and the intellectual appeal. Of these the first two are the most important. The second is relatively slight.

"The first impression upon an audience is caused by the beauty of the subject photographed. This delight of the eye is a primitive sensation experienced by every spectator whether he be an infant or a mature man of culture. This first impression on the audience is tremendously important. Then follows the emotional impression. The audience by a law of psychology projects its selves into the characters on the screen experiencing their sorrows and their joys. It is human nature to crave an increasing experience which is not limited by circumstance or propriety.

"It follows therefore that if audience psychology consists mainly of sense appeal to the eye and the emotional appeal the productions that satisfy this appeal are bound to be successful not only commercially but artistically as well.

"There is only one test to apply to the motion picture. It is this: does it please the eye? does it stir the self-emotion of the individual in the crowd? does it arouse and maintain his social sympathies? does it give him intellectual entertainment without mental fatigue? If it does all that it is sure-fire and cannot possibly fail."

Hemmer Stages Fire Scene

Almost too realistic, think members of the Hemmer cast, of an explosion, and fire scene staged a few days ago, at the Estee studios. Smoke and flame seemed quite likely to make it necessary to call the aid of the city fire department, but Director Edward Hemmer worked on inwardly delighted at the realistic atmosphere he had obtained, which was producing just the excitement and consternation necessary to the picture.

The production, "Sunshine Harbor," is being completed in record breaking time. Only two or three important scenes are yet to be filmed, which Mr. Hemmer figures will be only a task of a few days. Then the cutting, titling and assembling will follow with dispatch, if this strenuous director has his way, for plans are already under way for another picture, which will occupy the producer's entire attention. William F. Haddock will continue with Mr. Hemmer in the next picture.

Jacobs a Busy Man

Within the past two weeks Arthur H. Jacobs has been among the busiest men in New York, during which time he concluded negotiations placing Olive Tell and William H. Tooker in a production starring Eugene O'Brien. For Director William P. S. Earle, Mr. Jacobs secured Warburton Gamble and Lucia Moore. Miss Moore will be remembered for her noteworthy work in "39 East" and at present is scoring success upon the legitimate stage in the George M. Cohan production, "The Tavern."

In addition to the above, and in the same week, Mr. Jacobs closed negotiations through Harry Rapf, Selznick Studio executive, for the services of Harry T. Morey, Faire Binney and Roland Bottomley to appear in the Ralph Ince forthcoming production, said to be made up of an actual "all star cast," presenting "A Man's Home."

Directors to Give Annual Dinner

At the Hotel Biltmore, on the evening of December 7, will assemble members of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, New York Lodge, their brothers belonging to the coast organization, who are in New York, and a most representative body of guests. Heretofore, M. P. D. A. dinners have been affairs that the wives of members, and other interested ladies, have been obliged to hear about, yet not personally enjoy. This time, however, the popular slogan "ladies, too," will prevail.

An elaborate entertainment is planned, interspersing and following the dinner. The guest of honor, who at this writing has not been announced, is said to be one of great importance and interest. The invited guests will be authorities and celebrities affiliated with kindred arts, for the good of the art and the progress of motion pictures, in closer affiliation with the musical, literary and the artistic world.

M. P. D. A. affairs have always carried a unique distinction. This one, it is believed, will surpass all previous efforts. The committee upon arrangements appointed by Director James Vincent, should prove duly adequate, since it includes: Charles Miller, chairman; Charles Giblyn, George Irving, J. Searle Dawley and Ashley Miller, all men who have stood for "action" in M. P. D. A. activities and for the progress of the organization.

Martin Objects to Profanity

A letter from Hollywood emphatically denies that Al Martin is to be featured in a series of "Pinnacle Comedies," one of which entitled, "The Damfool Twin."

"Reading each number of your publication," writes Martin, "I am surprised to learn that I am being featured in a series of comedies with Leo White, released by Pinnacle, one called, "The Damfool Twin." This is absolutely erroneous, and though I was connected with the mentioned firm, it was not in the capacity of an actor. I am at present directing Alexander Alt and Helen Howell in a series of two-reel "situation comedies," being engaged to direct the first twelve pictures.

"Thanking you in advance for printing the above denial.

(Signed) "Al Martin."

Three New Equity Members

The Actors' Equity Association membership has been increased in number and distinction since in the past week the names of Victor Fleming, George Beranger and Richard Barthelmess have been added, hailing from the motion picture field.

"Blimp" Wrecked in Neilan Production

In the production of a number of big scenes by Marshall Neilan for his latest film, "Not a Drum Was Heard," at Glacier Park, Montana, recently, a "blimp" was wrecked high in the mountains after endangering several lives and injuring the master electrician of the movie troupe.

The use of the airship carrying the cameramen to take long "shots" of the players from the air marks the first time that a dirigible has been so employed. The accident happened after the scenes were taken. Just as the pilot was about to land a gale came up and carried the ship high in the air. After tossing about for an hour the wind abated and another attempt was made to land.

With the "blimp" about thirty feet from the ground, William Linahan, Mr. Neilan's master electrician, grabbed one of the ropes as a sudden wind again lifted the ship high in the air. Thinking his weight would bring the ship down, Linahan held fast and was carried fifty feet in the air before he let go. He fell to the ground senseless, and at the hotel later, the doctor announced a broken arm and several strained ligaments in the patient's back would confine him to bed for three weeks.

special productions to be made by Famous Players in accordance with its new policy of super pictures.

Marmont's latest picture to be seen on the public screens was "The Branded Woman," in which he played the lead to Norma Talmadge. He will be remembered as having played with Alice Joyce in four consecutive Vitagraph productions, setting a record in the number of continuous characterizations opposite this star.

A. J. Callaghan, the producer of the new Bessie Love features, announces that Bessie's projected trip to England for scenes for the filming of the Dickens's novel, "The Old Curiosity Shop" will be made early in the new year.

Giblyn to Represent Coast Directors!

At the Motion Picture Directors' Association's fourth annual dinner, which will be held at the Hotel Biltmore on December 7, the Coast Lodge of M. P. D. A. will be represented by Charles Giblyn. The appointment came by wire from Tom Ricketts, secretary of M. P. D. A., Los Angeles. It read: "At regular meeting of our lodge last evening, you were unanimously elected to represent us at the M. P. D. A. dinner December 7. Your letter to Director MacGregor read at meeting brought forth enthusiastic demonstration. Write often."

Mr. Giblyn was one of the founders of the M. P. D. A. and has been an untiring and interested worker since the early days of the organization. That he has been directing in the East the past few years has not been sufficient reason for him to have his membership transferred. He is always in attendance at New York lodge meetings, but still retains his membership in Hollywood.

Death of Wm. S. Davis

On Friday, November 19, after a severe illness confining him to a hospital, William S. Davis passed beyond. Mr. Davis was formerly a well known and popular actor. Later he became a director of motion pictures. A wife and two children mourn the loss of husband and father. The final rites and ceremonies were assumed by the Motion Picture Directors' Association, although Mr. Davis was not a member. Interment Philadelphia.

First National Releases "Unseen Forces"

"Unseen Forces," the Sidney A. Franklin Production which Mayflower is presenting as a First National Attraction, was released last week and is now available to exhibitors. Sylvia Breamer heads the cast, which includes Rosemary Theby, Conrad Nagle, Sam De Grasse, Edward Martindel and Aggie Herring.

BRUNTON

Bryant Washburn has returned to the Coast and has leased studio space at the Brunton plant. Mr. Washburn is now editing "The Road to London," which he made abroad.

Benny Ziedman has been appointed production manager of the Mary Pickford producing organization. The titling of "A Flame in the Dark," which was written by Frances Marion, is now being done.

Ruth Roland, the Pathe serial star, was injured in a fight scene during the filming of the twelfth episode of "Avenging Arrow". Her back was badly wrenched, and it will be necessary for her to absent herself from the studio for three or four weeks' rest.

Announcement is made of the supporting cast for Betty Compson in her third subject. The following members have been engaged by director Arthur Rosson: Emory Johnston, Doris Pawn, Gerald Gring, Richard Rossen, Arthur Delmore, and Mazie Harlan.

The final scenes have been made for the Benjamin Hampton production, "There Was a King in Egypt." Schayer has completed the continuity for "A Man of the Forest", written by Zane Grey.

Elliott Clawson is engaged in writing the continuity for "A Certain Rich Man" by William Allen White.

The big Robert Brunton stage will be used by the local order of Shriners for its fourteenth annual charity ball which will be held on December 2nd. Five thousand people are expected to attend. Elaborate decorations and electrical effects are being prepared for the event. The Shriners' auditorium was burned last February.

METRO

Philip E. Rosen has been selected to direct the all-star production, "What Is the Matter With Marriage?" The cast is headed by Milton Sills, Ora Carewe and Nigel Barrie. The picture has been adapted for the screen from Jack London's novel, "The Little Lady of the Big House."

Gareth Hughes, who has been playing in "Sentimental Tommy" for Lasky, will return in the near future to Metro to be starred in a forthcoming Metro release.

Albert Sheldy Lebino, who has been a member of the Metro scenario staff for the last four years and who has written sixty-one adaptations, leaves the Metro organization to enter the free-lance field.

Edward Connolly has been selected for an important role in Nazimova's production of "Aphrodite." Norman McNeil has been engaged by Metro to prepare a series of musical settings for the Nazimova production. Mr. McNeil was formerly with D. W. Griffith.

Edward Cecil and Marjorie Prevost have been engaged for the all-star cast in "What Is the Matter With Marriage?"

The allegorical episode of the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is the only portion of the Ibanez super-special that remains to be filmed.

"The Jockey" has been selected as the title for Clyde Cook's forthcoming comedy for William Fox. Jack Blystone is directing the picture.

Al St. John is working on his new Fox comedy titled "Spring."

"Chin Toy," from a story by Pearl Doles Bell, has been selected as the new starring vehicle for Shirley Mason. Howard Mitchell has been assigned to direct Miss Mason in her new production. Raymond MacKey is playing opposite the star. The cast includes Edward McWade, Eileen Northrop and Scot McKey.

George W. Hill, who was formerly a camera man for D. W. Griffith and George Loane Tucker, has written the "Unbelievers" and will direct Louise Lovely in this subject.

UNIVERSAL

While taking scenes for Stroheim's "Foolish Wives" on last Friday two cameramen were swept from the deck of a barge near Monterey by a mammoth wave. The cameramen swam to a boat nearby, and the cameras were recovered after an interval by divers. Due to the accident 800 feet of film must be retaken.

Gloria Hope has been selected as the leading woman for Frank Mayo in the screen adaptation of the stage play, "Colorado." The picture version will be brought up to date, the story being laid in the days just following the European war instead of the Spanish-American war. George C. Hull is preparing the scenario. Reeves Eason is directing.

Leo McCarey is directing Eva Navok in "Plain Folks." The supporting cast consists of Harris Gordon, Gertrude Clair, George Berrell, Clarissa Sullivan, Carl Stockdale, Lucy Conahue and many others.

The title of John G. Hawk's story, "The Prince and the Pauper," has been changed to "The Millionaire Kid." This will be used as Gladys Walton's next photoplay. Harry Harris will be the director.

Priscilla Dean will be starred in "False Colors" under the direction of Stewart Paton.

Hoot Gibson is now playing "Part of the Act," with Albert Russell directing.

E. G. Gayol, a former newspaper man of New York, and now a member of Universal's scenario staff on the Coast, is adapting for the screen "My Lady of the Island," from Beatrice Grimshaw's novel. This story will be used as the next starring vehicle of Edith Roberts.

GOLDWYN

Abraham Lehr returned on Friday of last week with Samuel Goldwyn and F. T. Godsill, after an absence of three weeks. He announced the purchase of a number of stories, including an original screen story by Booth Tarkington.

Rupert Hughes arrived on Monday of this week to work with E. Mason Hopper in the filming of "Mister and Misses Miserable Jones," an original story for the screen written by Mr. Hughes.

Kate Lester, Lewis Willoughby, Anna Lehr, Sidney Ainsworth and Otto Hoffman are the principal members of Tom Moore's supporting cast, "Mister Barnes of New York."

Victor Schirtzinger is directing, and Naomi Childers plays the lead.

Clarence Badger has completed the direction of the Irvin Cobb story, "Boys Will be Boys," with Will Rogers in the stellar role.

Reginald Barker has left for Canada to shoot exteriors for his current production, "Snow Blindness."

A large set showing three typical Chinese streets has been erected for the Frank Lloyd production on "The Water Lily," an original Morris story for the screen.

The famous Five Points of New York East Side have been reproduced for the Gertrude Atherton story, "Noblesse Oblige," under the direction of Wallace Worsley.

Announcement is made from the Goldwyn studio of the purchase of "Wake Up Jonathan," stage play by Elmer L. Rice.

ROBERTSON-COLE

L. J. Gasnier has begun production work on the C. Gardner Sullivan screen story, "Good Women." The cast includes Rossmary Thebe, Earle Schenk, Hamilton Revelle, Irene Blackwell and Peggy Pierce. The scenes are laid in France, America and Monte Carlo. W. L. Hayward is the art director.

Sessue Hayakawa's next star vehicle will be "Black Roses," an original screen story laid in the Chinese quarter of New York. Los Angeles scenes will also be shown.

Pauline Frederick has completed the 'Mistress of Shenstone," Christy Cabanne has also completed production work on "What's a Wife Worth? "

ASSOCIATED

The C. Gardner Sullivan Production Company, whose tie-up with the Associated Producers was announced last week, will work at the Ince studio. The first story is now being prepared by Mr. Sullivan. Lambert Hillyer, who is now with Hart, will direct Mr. Sullivan's initial production, which starts in January.

Thomas H. Ince will launch a national exploitation campaign for "Lying Lips," his second production for Associated Producers. As a part of his program he will send six exploitation men to various parts of the country late in December. These men will work under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg.

VITAGRAPH

Director David Smith is completing production work this week on "Black Beauty."

Larry Semon begins work on his new comedy, entitled, "The Hick."

Three producing units are absent from Vitagraph studio making exterior scenes. Antonio Marino, Director Chester Bennett and company of fifty have gone to Florence, Arizona, where a number of the prison scenes of "Three Sevens," from the Perly Poorie Sheehan novel, will be filmed. Jean Calhoun is playing the feminine lead. Director David Smith is taking the final scenes for "Black Beauty," near Santa Barbara. Aeroplanes, automobiles and railroad trains will be utilized to get close-ups and long shots of the races for this film. Jean Paige, James Morrison and George Webb are the leads.

William Duncan, Edith Roberts and company, are at Riverside using the Government Aviation field for scenes in "Fighting Fate." Work has been delayed on the Western Serial, featuring Joe Ryan because of injuries Elinore Field received in the forest fire scenes.

SPECIAL PICTURES

Roy Marshall, formerly of J. Parker Read organization, has been engaged for the making of an Art Acord two-reel Western which will be sponsored by the Western Photoplays, Inc.

Final title for the initial Ford Sterling comedy is "A Ball Room Romeo."

Reggie Morris is working with the scenario department for the selection of the next Neely Edwards picture to be released by Comic Classic and work on this will be started shortly.

Harry Edwards is directing the making of "The Winner Loses," a Chester Conklin comedy which has Lillian Hackett as leading woman. The story was written by Frank Terry, formerly of the Hal Roach-Harold Lloyd staff and the continuity by Everett Maxwell.

Bids are to be made by contractors in the next ten days for the construction of the nine unit studio on Santa Monica boulevard, near La Brea, for Special Pictures Corporation. The company purchased the site some time ago, and the plans for a big production plant are now completed.

HERE AND THERE

The Lloyd Ham Hamilton Company is now working on a comedy entitled, "Moon-Shine," under the direction of Charles Parrott. While this is being made Jack White is editing the subject recently completed.

In the hope of securing better material for theatrical publicity and lobby stills, Thomas H. Ince has engaged John Ellis, portrait photographer, to take charge of the still department of the Ince studio. Ellis has had considerable experience and will turn out three classes of stills, art portraits, for lobby display, off stage stills for newspapers and magazines and special pictures for newspapers.

Leeds L. Baxter has been engaged by Marshall Neilan to serve in the capacity as business manager. He has been affiliated in the film industry for the past four years following such service as the cashier of big corporations. His experience in film circles has been with Lasky and Fairbanks companies.

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Fred Creswell, the field sales supervisor for Famous Players-Lasky, is now on the Coast to conduct a school of salesmanship. He is spending a week at the studio while on a tour of the exchanges.

Henry Arthur Jones, celebrated English author, is expected shortly on the Coast.

Form Company to Star Florence Lawrence

Announcement was made this week or the organization of Producers Picture Corporation, backed by St. Louis capital, for the filming of a series of pictures featuring Florence Lawrence, who has been absent from the screen for several years because of an accident.

George H. Kern is to be in charge of affairs of the company, and he has engaged James Caldwell and Reed Heustis to write the continuity of the first production, which will be "The Unfoldment." D. W. Dustin, identified with St. Louis theatrical enterprises is business manager and W. E. Keef, formerly production manager for D. W. Griffith, will be production manager. The company plans to produce at the Brunton studio.

President of the Renco Film Coming East

H. J. Reynolds, president of the Renco Film Company, recently completed the filming of "Lavender and Old Lace", from the Myrtle Reed novel. He left for New York this week to make releasing arrangements for this and other Reed stories which are to be filmed.

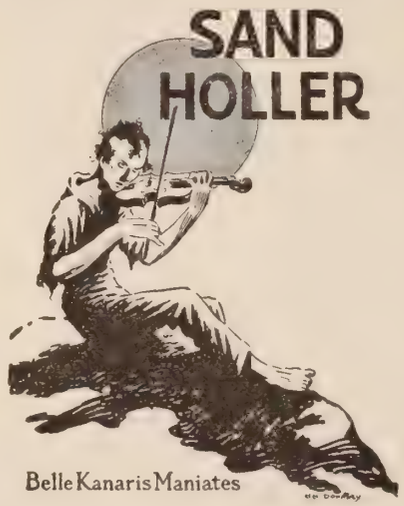
Mission Theatre, Los Angeles, to Open

The Mission theatre on Broadway, Los Angeles, owned by Mack Sennett, is shortly to be opened and will become the home of Associated Producers Photoplays. The opening bill will have as its feature the Douglas Fairbanks production, "The Mark of Zorro." This theatre has been in existence for a number of years under various names and for the past several months has been undergoing a complete rebuilding and enlarging with many important and attractive features added. One of the most important is a big stage and another is a most attractive lobby.

Irvin V. Willat is busily at work on the West Coast making his second production for Hodkinson release. It is called "Partners of the Tide" and is the screen version of Joseph Lincoln's book.

The entire cast for this production has not been made public yet, but it is stated that Gordon Mullen, who has appeared in "Nomads of the North," "Crooked Straight," "False Roads," "Paris Green," "Dangerous Hours," and who is also a featured player in Douglas Fairbanks' newest production, has been engaged for the role of the "heavy."

A CORKING NEW NOVEL THAT WILL MAKE A GREAT PICTURE



"Sand Holler" is a better story than the delightful "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley" which made such a tremendous hit in the films.

"Benny of Top Hill Trail," by the same author, has just been filmed with Bessie Love as the star.

Adolph Zukor has arrived.

Louise Fazenda is the owner of six cats.

Mildred Harris went to New York this week.

Florence Lawrence is coming back to the screen.

Harry Lehrman is training a temperamental lion.

Sylvia Breamer has come out to winter in our midst.

Arthur Kane continues to give our town the once over.

Ham Hamilton is a brave man for he is now making "Moonshine."

Sol Lesser is wiring, "Have just put over the biggest deal yet."

Bee Monson has been named "The Honey Girl" of Mermaid Comedies.

Metro staged a wild party this week for scenes in Alice Lake's "Mother-Love."

Now that Dick Jones is back on the Sennett lot the place looks normal again.

Mack Sennett is threatening to announce a definite schedule for his coming releases.

H. J. Reynolds left our town this week with "Lavender and Old Lace" under his arm.

Eddie Baker has been made coach of the Special Pictures Female Girls' Baseball Team.

Hoppy Hopins, the subtitle hound, is said to have been paid as high as Twenty Dollars per word.

Buster Keaton insists that a first night audience does not give a correct impression of a picture.

Proof of comedy was found in a Universal theatre when Lyons and Moran were caught laughing at their own stuff.

Tony Kelly has flicked the Los Angeles dust off his Fifth Avenue shoes and flitted Eastward. Come again, Tony.

Maude Wayne has been taken to be Mary Pickford, and we expect to hear of her salary being boosted at the current pay-day.

Art Rosson found so much snow on Mt. Whitney he is glad to come back to California's summer climate. How we love our State.

Saucy Stories tried to steal our stuff by putting a headline on an article, "The Hollywood Scandal." We're clean.

Seena Owen flitted from our midst this week and we learned later that she is to scintillate on the Cosmopolitan banner.

A carbon copy tells us that Hayakawa is going out to show the Universities how much they need a motion picture department.

All the extras around the Metro Studio drew $7.00 per day this week to permit three barbers to shave and cut their hair continuously.

Ora Carewe is working in Metro's "What's the Matter with Marriage" and we are confidentially told she is doing a number of dare-devil stunts.

Vi Dana is hipp-ity hopping about like a wop girl and we expect to learn of her being taken for some one who has come from the Italian quarter.

Little work is reported at the Carter de Haven Studio, because a very fascinating gambling device was required for certain scenes, (sh-h—roulette).

In our year-round southern climate Reggie Barker finds it impossible to produce "Snow Blindness," so he is scampering off to Canada with the troupe.

Jimmy Adams was kicked by a mule while working out a comedy gag, which leads to the conclusion there is a right and wrong end for working out comedy gags.

Neely Edwards is so optimistic he expects to sometime make a comedy without chases, kicks, pastry, bedrooms, skyscrapers, bathing girls, or a thread-bare plot.

Bill Duncan is a high-flyer these days for he is doing scenes at Marsh Field by aeroplane and train. This is the first time a run-away train has been caught by an aeroplane.

Eddie Cline is responsible for the statement that more girls are needed in motion pictures, which means that Business Manager Lew Anger at the Keaton Studio is going to have a lot of trouble.

William E. Keefe, who graces the Astor occasionally with his sylph-like form, is back in our midst doing a lot of things that may or may not make him famous. We hope for the former.

Frank Mayo started to run the gamut of state plays, but he is not going to do it alphabetically. His first is "Colorado" and maybe he will later be seen in "Alabama" and "Mizzouri."

Special Pictures want a catchy name for their diving maids and here are some of the suggestions:—California Kittens, Special Sirens, Morris Maids, Special Sylphs, Conklin Cuties.

Gordan Mullen, the heavy, was forced to leave his warm downy cot at 3 a. m. to work in scenes that provided he should jump over board in the cold waters of San Pedro harbor. What could be more fitting for a heavy?

Irving Willat's lighting device "got on the fritz" (whatever that means) and so he induced the United States Navy to light up a harbor scene with search-lights, which made the producer say, "Why have a Navy if you can't use it?"

Views of Mimic Aerial Raid on Washington

International News has obtained a remarkable series of air pictures made in co-operation with the U. S. Army Air Service, it is announced by Mr. E. B. Hatrick, general manager of the news service, who characterizes the series as a new International News "beat."

It is the film record of a lively mimic air-raid on Washington, D. C., by a bombing squadron of sixteen giant battle planes, undertaken by army aviators as a test flight and to demonstrate to Army heads and the nation's legislators the menace of enemy aerial attack unless America is strengthened in its flying arm.

The scenes include the battle formations of the giant war birds and their maneuvrings over the nation's capital. They show startling pictures of loop-the-loops, tail spins and nose dives over the Capitol dome and the Washington monument.

The pictures were made under the general direction of Major Scanlon, commanding officer of Bolling Field, in Virginia, and were photographed by J. C. Brown, Washington representative of the International News, and John Bookhurst and Jerome Frankel, of the News reel's New York staff. These men accompanied the battle squadron in the "raid" being carried in three scout planes which flew first above, then below, before and after the battle-planes. The air fleet made the 150-mile trip from the Langley flying field to Washington in seventy minutes.

CANADA

That 300 out of 5,800 moving picture releases had been condemned by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors during the past, was the point which was brought out by Mr. G. E. Armstrong of the Ontario censors when a deputation of self-appointed social workers appeared before Hon. Peter Smith, Provincial Treasurer, at Toronto, on November 18, to protest against moving pictures generally. The deputation received scant courtesy and Rev. Gilbert Agar, who headed the delegation, declared that he was not satisfied with the interview. Not one of the visitors spoke after Mr. Armstrong, the chairman of the Board of Censors, had defended the work of the censor board in Ontario.

Hon. Mr. Smith also spoke sharply to the "uplifters" when he gave the smarting reply that it was "impossible to censor pictures to suit eight-year-old children." The Provincial Treasurer produced a considerable number of commendatory letters which he had received after he had sanctioned the presentation of a certain feature to which objection had been raised.

During the discussion, the interesting announcement was made that one picture, which had been running in Ontario for the past four years, would be recalled for another examination by the Ontario censors with a view to possible rejection at this late date. This feature is "Poppy," in which Norma Talmadge is starred.

Winnipeg has also seen the organization of the first branch of the Good Films League of Canada, the establishment of which has been encouraged by the Association of Canadian Clubs, the latter having units in numerous Canadian centres. The purpose of the league is to cooperate with film exchanges and exhibitors for the presentation of high-class moving pictures. No announcement has yet been made as to the standard of quality which the league will determine nor just how that standard will be arrived at. Five people of Winnipeg have been named as local officers.

Montreal, Quebec, saw the opening of a brand new moving picture theatre on Saturday, November 20, when the Belmont theatre, Main street and Mount Royal avenue, opened its doors for the first time under auspicious circumstances. The inaugural feature was "What's Your Hurry?", starring Wallace Reid, and the initial program included overture numbers by the orchestra under the direction of Prof. J. Shea and vocal selections by Miss Brault.

The Belmont will be operated with a policy of continuous shows from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. and the price of admission to evening performances will be 35 cents, with matinees 17 cents. The theatre has a seating capacity of 2,000. It is understood that the house is independently owned and controlled.

Manager Joe Price of the Allen theatre, Calgary, Alberta, took advantage of the presence in the city of Gaston Glass to feature him in personal appearances at the theatre during the week of November 15 when the attraction was "Humoresque," in which this star plays a prominent role. Gaston Glass has been staying in Calgary for a number of weeks in order to appear in "Cameron of the Royal Mounted," which is being produced by the Northern Pictures Corporation under the direction of Don McRae.

The sales force of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto, has been reinforced by the addition of Mr. E. G. Zorn and Mr. W. S. Alliston, both of whom arrived in the city from New York where they had been schooled under the supervision of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

Charles G. Branham of New York, a former newspaperman, has arrived in Toronto, Ontario, to become director of exploitation for the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited. Mr. Branham will make his headquarters in Toronto but he will supervise the stunts and specialties which will be arranged to boost picture presentations at all theatres controlled in Canada by the Famous Players corporation. He will also conduct various drives for the film exchanges affiliated with the corporation.

To celebrate the first anniversary of the Alhambra theatre, Toronto, one of the handsome new houses in the uptown section, an afternoon tea was held each day during the week of November 15 on the mezzanine floor of the theatre. All patrons of the theatre were invited to attend these functions. One of the attractive features was a large birthday cake which bore a lone candle. The screen features for the week were "39 East" and "The Fortune Hunter."

Manager Clarence Robson of the Regent theatre, Toronto, a downtown film palace, has instituted a daily bargain sale of admission tickets, Saturdays and holidays excepted. The plan consisted in the placing of a block of 400 balcony seats on sale at 30 cents each at 5 p. m. on five days of the week. The reason for this stunt is quite obvious to exhibitors. It is intended to boost attendance for the supper-time shows and, for this purpose, the price of the tickets in question were slightly reduced.

Mr. John Arthur, conductor of the Regent theatre orchestra, presented an original musical novelty, "Southern Memories," with special scenic and electrical effects, as an added attraction for the week of November 15, the star being Miss Marjorie Pringle, a popular local vocalist, who was accompanied by Dr. Harvey Robb, a talented pianist of Toronto.

CONNECTICUT

Joseph Wood, who has been conducting a motion picture theatre at Stafford Springs, Conn., for the past two years, has bought the Comique theatre building in that borough and will take possession of the playhouse as soon as new equipment is secured. Joseph Lessard, who has conducted the Comique theatre under lease, has vacated it and stored the fixtures.

Mrs. H. C. Christman, for some years an orchestra leader with the Walter Murphy Amusement Company, lately attached to the Crown theatre at New London, Conn., has resigned to give her entire time to music instruction in that city. She is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music.

A new high-grade motion picture house for Springfield, Mass., to cater to patronage in the residential Armory Hill district is forecast in the purchase of the realty at 531-533 State street by Samuel and Nathan Goldstein of the Goldstein Bros. Amusement Co., proprietors of a chain of Massachusetts motion picture and vaudeville houses, and Samuel Prowler of that city. Plans for the theatre are now being drawn. Price paid for the site was $40,000, of which $15,000 was equity. The property is now occupied by three houses, that will be either razed or moved away.

CLEVELAND

Leon D. Netter, who used to manage the Masterpiece Film exchange in Cleveland, is now located in Seattle, according to advices received. Netter is associated with Mike Rosenberg out in Seattle.

The Ohio Motion Picture Review, a local motion picture trade paper published weekly in Cleveland, has been rechristened and will henceforth travel regularly through Ohio, Southern Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky as The Interstate Film News. George Cole is editor and John Hill associate editor.

Paul Tessier, manager of Pathe's local exchange has received a telegram from assistant director of exchanges Storey saying that Cleveland and Chicago are leading all other branch offices in the national sales contest, with the central division on the close trail.

A. A. Schmidt, Universal manager out here, was in Buffalo this week, visiting the branch offices there, and looking over the film situation in that section.

Albert Brown, who played the part of Ambassador Girard in the film production of "My Four Years in Germany," is in Cleveland doing character work for the Pierrot Pictures Company, a recently organized local company, making two-reel comedies. Charles Broz, managing director of the Pierrot Films is now making a series of two-reel Poker Party comedies. They are fashioned after the Penny Ante cartoons.

H. A. Bandy, manager of Associated Producers, went to Columbus this week. But before leaving he took time to announce that "The Last of the Mohicans" will play all next week at the Knickerbocker and Orpheum theatres simultaneously.

Emery Downs, manager of the Knickerbocker, sent special invitations to the members of the school board and the school principals, to be his guests during the engagement of "The Last of the Mohicans" at his theatre.

Ohio Amusement Company is listed on the boards of the Sloan Bldg. now-a-days. And on the door of room 312, under the official heading one may read the names Schumann, Fine and Kramer. This is the trio of exhibitors who now control the Dennison Square, Five Points, Savoy, Jewel and Yale theatres, all of Cleveland.

"Witch's Lure" released in Ohio through the National Film Service, 305 Sloan Bldg., is meeting with unusual success all over the territory, according to Mr. L. Levenson, general manager of the exchange. It's a picture dealing with oil, and it is of timely interest.

The entire staff of the Elyria Chronicle-Telegram, Elyria's leading newspaper, from the managing editor down to the office boy, was entertained at a regular performance of "Go and Get It" during its recent engagement at the Colonial theatre. O. J. Bannon, owner of the Colonial, was host of the occasion.

Joseph Grossman and Mrs. Grossman, who, jointly used to own and manage the Standard theatre, one of Cleveland's leading downtown motion picture theatres, have sold their beautiful lake shore home and moved to California. Mr. Grossman has been out of the picture business for a year, during which time he has been traveling in the Orient. He will probably engage in the film industry out West.

C. R. N. Morris, better known throughout the territory as "Battleship" Morris, has just joined up with the Cleveland exchange of the Fox Film Company in a sales capacity and will cover the territory with Fox specials only.

Milton Crandall, representing the Crandall Film Company, has opened offices at 501 Standard Theatre Bldg., and is already busy serving Ohio exhibitors with new prints on "Mickey" and "The Spoilers." There are three new prints of each of these pictures and Mr. Crandall stands back of the guarantee that they're better than they were when they were new.

With Joseph M. Duskin as general manager and Max Sheinman as secretary and treasurer, the Fidelity Photo Play Productions has opened an office in 416 Belmont Bldg., for the purpose of serving Ohio exhibitors with high grade independent feature photoplay productions. The first picture ready for distribution is "A Child For Sale," a picture which is said to have been a big hit in other territories. Associated with Messrs. Duskin and Sheinman is Barney Jacobs. Other pictures to be released by the Fidelity Photo Play Productions include "Ashes of Love and "Echoes of Youth."

William Finkel, who used to sign Pittsburgh on the hotel register as his home, is now located here in Cleveland. Finkel is in charge of the National Exchanges, 2163 East Ninth street, where he will be pleased to meet all exhibitors who want to hear what a tremendous success his pet feature, "Confession," was at the Hoffman-Palace theatre last week.

SAN FRANCISCO

Adolph H. Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, is spending a few days in San Francisco. He will leave soon for Los Angeles on his annual tour of inspection. He would make no statement for the press except to say that the management of the California and Imperial theatres as well as the Portola, which are connected with his concern, are being managed exceptionally well in his judgment.

F. Howard Butler, former Fox exchange manager in San Francisco is now with the Robertson-Cole concern. He has been appointed by Newton Levi, district supervisor, to represent all of the Western exchange territory.

NORTHERN NEW YORK

Shea's new North Park theatre opened in Buffalo Sunday, November 21 with Wallace Reid in "What's Your Hurry?" and Buster Keaton in "One Week." The house will change pictures four times a week. It has a capacity of 1,500 on one floor. It is one of the most attractive neighborhood houses in this end of the state and is in the heart of the rapidly growing North Park section. Art Amm is the manager and Harold B. Franklin, managing director. There is a ten piece orchestra and a Wurlitzer organ.

Hugh Rennie, Buffalo's First National manager, and H. L. Knappen, manager of the F. N. New York exchange, are traveling through the state signing up franchises. Mr. Rennie and Mr. Knappen had a conference with Eddie Hayes, city sales manager and G. E. Dickmon and Murray Hawkins, in Buffalo, Sunday, November 21. Mr. Rennie has signed up the Regent theatre in Corning, the Olympic, Watertown and the Happy Hour and Arcadia in Syracuse. Mr. Hayes has booked everything up to the franchise at the Park, Colonial, Columbia and Variety theatres in Buffalo. Mr. Dickmon has signed the same material for the Rose Garden and Jefferson theatres in Rochester. Eleanor M. Pardeis, for two years with Metro is now billing clerk at the First National office. Mr. Hayes has also closed a number of big productions for week runs at the Regent theatre in Rochester. Two First National features were on the opening week bill at Shea's new North Park.

C. A. Taylor, general manager of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., has signed up the Eckel theatre, Syracuse for an extended run of "The County Fair," which Man-

Should the Motion Picture Theatre Use Fuel Oil for Heating

A Straightforward Practical Discussion of This Important Question

By Raymond Newcomb

In some parts of the country coal is becoming scarce while fuel oil is plentiful. Whether or not it would pay the theatre owner to change fuels depends on several factors. They are explained in this excellent article.

DUE to the scarcity and high price of coal in recent years, the attention of the public has been turned to the possibility of burning the heavy crude oils in the place of coal. The purpose of this article is to point out to the theatre operator the various considerations which must be taken into account when choosing between the two fuels. Not only is there the engineering problem, but also the very important one of relative costs.

The entire matter can be separated into two main subdivisions, (a) engineering considerations, and (b) economic considerations.

The first consideration, i. e., engineering has to do with the kind of equipment required and the operation of the same. This phase of the question need receive very little attention from the operator because it is technical and can be successfully handled by any of the reliable oil-burning equipment concerns. The development of the art has reached the stage where it is entirely practical and easy to operate the system. It does not necessarily require a licensed engineer; in fact, there is a sizable installation in Boston operated by a woman.

The oil burned in every case is the heavy Mexican oils, which is either in the crude state as it comes from the wells, or having undergone partial refinement to take out some of the valuable gasolines, etc. No scheme which contemplates the use of anything but the crude oils is feasible because of the excessive cost of the lighter oils.

The oil-burning equipment consists of storage tanks, piping to carry the oil to the burner, the burner which atomizes the oil, regulating valves, motor and pump for pumping the oil and running the burner, and the fan for supplying the air.

The burner takes the oil, breaks it up into small particles by some form of rotary action and throws it into the furnace in a fine spray, so that it will burn evenly and completely. This is the important unit of the system and should be installed in duplicate, so that in case one becomes clogged with dirt, as they often do, another can be used while the first is being cleaned. The motor and fan are of small capacity and do not require much power.

The systems used for heating boilers where the steam is generated at low pressure are universally of the low-pressure type, in contra-distinction to the high-pressure type as used in power plants. In the latter case the equipment is much more specialized, but this is not necessary or advisable for heating work.

The exact requirements vary somewhat with the local rules as laid down by the fire commissioner. This phase will be discussed later in the article. Almost any type of boiler can be adapted for oil-burning, even if it is now using coal. The grates are removed and the burner usually set in the ashpit door; sometimes special brick work is put in the furnace of the boiler to increase the efficiency of combustion.

The principal advantages of fuel oil are:

1. Ease in regulation of the fires and ability to conform with changes in load. This is accomplished by adjustment of the oil feed valves, etc. For instance, when the auditorium is being first heated and the fans are started, there is a severe load on the heating system, but once the theatre is warm throughout, the load is very materially reduced.

2. Less attention in the handling of the fires and reduction in labor. There is no banking of fires or cleaning of fires. This is somewhat offset by the fact that the usual heating system only has one man in attendance anyhow, and even though the labor is materially reduced, it would still be necessary for one man to be on the job.

3. No ashes to handle and greater ease in storing and handling the fuel.

4. It is a simple matter to put the grates back in the boiler and burn coal if the oil supply fails.

5. If the system is operated properly there is a marked increase in efficiency due to the more complete combustion of the oil than with coal.

On the other hand, the advantages are somewhat offset by the fact that:

1. An improperly handled fuel oil fire means a greater decrease in efficiency than with coal, and also the former will then give off a smutty black smoke which is a

Interior of Broadway theatre, South Boston, Mass.

Description of Broadway Theatre

WITH the opening of the Broadway theatre in South Boston a few days ago the Hub added an amusement center to its long list that compares favorably with any of the long established and well patronized houses in the heart of the city. The orchestra, with its loges equipped with comfortable arm chairs, is entered through a spacious lobby built of marble with green and gold decorations.

The entire scheme of light, warm colors, with liberal uses of gold is in keeping with the best examples of the last French Renaissance period, as found in the beautiful palace at Fontainebleau. The walls, the ceiling and the front of the balcony show a range of closely harmonized grey green shade tinged with gold, which shades down to an ivory color in the moulding of the relief ornaments. The frame of the proscenium arch is finished in pale gold again toned down to an ivory. Gold, grey green and rose violet are the prevailing colors visible to the seated audience. Rose violet is also the color of the stage curtains, for the box hangings and the curtains. These effects are beautified by the large mirrors back of the auditorium and carpets of Jacquemot rose colors.

An orchestral organ purchased from the Robert-Morton Company, of Los Angeles, at $55,000 has a special arrangement that is new to Boston theatres. By means of hydraulic power the instrument is raised three feet above the level of the stage, when the vaudeville is completed at each performance and the organist furnishes a concert in full view of the audience.

The curtain of the Broadway theatre is adorned with a $10,000 oil painting of unusual beauty and of particular historic interest. It depicts Washington and his generals at Dorchester Heights and was reproduced from a Congressional medal awarded to Washington to commemorate the evacuation of Boston. The scene of the painting is less than a mile from the site of the theatre, and for this reason it is an appropriate decoration.

The house is furnished with a women's rest room and smoking room on both floors. The gold fibre screen is set back on the stage and is slightly slanted. Potted plants and palms are a part of the decorations of both lobbies and an internal telephone system connects all parts of the house. The manager, Joseph J. Raymond, is well known in New York film circles and gives his theatre, which seats 2,500, as much attention as if it was on 42nd street.

James Opens as 3000 Seat House

THE James, at Columbus, Ohio, will be opened to the public about the first of the new year. It will be dedicated to the showing of super-films and will fill a long felt want in the Buckeye capital. Approximately $1,500,000 has been invested in the structure and its equipment.

The building has a frontage of 194 feet on West Broad street, one of the city's principal thoroughfares, and extends to the street in the rear, a distance of 187½ feet. In addition to the theatre auditorium there is a five-story office building in the front. The seating capacity on the two floors is 3,000.

E. Howard Crane of Detroit and his competent staff of co-workers drew up the plans and specifications for the building, which is generally conceded to be an architectural gem. The Longacre Engineering & Construction Co. of Chicago was awarded the contract for the work, and despite the fact that construction work was not started until the middle of the summer and considerable delay was experienced in the delivery of materials, the building is rapidly nearing completion. Charles C. Hamilton served as superintendent of construction for the Longacre Company.

The entire building is of fire-proof construction. The exterior is of white glazed terra cotta and pressed brick and is very elaborate. Over the 35-foot entrance leading to the auditorium is a large ornamental iron marquise which extends to the curb.

No expense has been spared in treating the auditorium, vestibules and lobbies. The floors and walls of the latter two have been artistically finished in white and green marble. Ivory, blue and gold form the color scheme of the theatre proper. There will be a large velours curtain at the stage opening, and beautiful hangings to match will be found in all box openings.

Is Your THEATRE a BRIGHT SPOT?

PEOPLE can't get inside your theatre without seeing the outside first. They are more apt to go inside when they like the outside. Unless the outside of your theatre is as bright and colorful—and as beautiful—as it could be, you'll never know how many more people might have stepped up to the box-office.

Just visualize the color scheme of this Rialto Theatre. The main body of the frontage is speckled gray Terra Cotta. To set it off, the first story, the columns, the frieze, and the cornice are in green matt glazed and purple bright glazed Terra Cotta.

Such a color scheme and such modelled ornament as the frieze and other features show are possible only in Terra Cotta. They are what make the Rialto not only a bright spot but a thing of beauty. They give it an outside that is its best advertisement.

Terra Cotta comes in any shape and any color. It is fire-resistant to the utmost and permanent. You can make it your best advertisement.

The new Terra Cotta brochure, "The Theatre," has been written for you. Its 36 pages are closely packed with pictures of some of the finest theatres in the country. It shows how your new theatre should look. It shows how your old theatre can be made to look new. Write for it today, to National Terra Cotta Society, 1 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y.

balcony is a spacious mezzanine lounge. This has been treated in the form of a large well opening. Luxurious furnishings are to be provided, making it an ideal place for patrons to meet and gossip. There is a cunningly arranged tea room for women which is decorated in quaint Japanese style.

A concealed system of lighting will be used throughout and the latest electrical devices for the manipulation of the lights will be employed. It will be possible to illuminate the theatre with four different colors, all separately controlled from a switchboard on the stage. This board is arranged so that the colors may be dimmed or blended to give the most unusual effects.

While the James is being planned solely as a motion picture theatre, its owner has provided a stage large enough to accommodate any road attraction. On this has been fashioned a French garden of rare beauty, with the screen itself in the background. A huge pipe organ has been installed and thirty-five men will play in the orchestra, to be directed by Prof. F. L. Neddermeyer, formerly of Detroit.

Columbus' new theatre will stand as a monument to the progressiveness and enterprise of William M. James, president of the James Building Co., which is erecting the structure. Mr. James opened the Broadway theatre, a vaudeville house, about ten years ago, and succeeded despite the fact that other theatrical interests fought him at every turn. He enjoys wide acquaintance in business and theatrical circles.

Mr. James retains his interests in the Broadway, which adjoins the new building. He also controls the Ada Meade theatre in Lexington, Ky., and the Rivoli and Empire theatres in Toledo. J. Real Neth, formerly assistant manager at the Broadway, who for the past two years has been in charge at the Lexington house, will return to Columbus as manager of the James.

"To Be Larger than New York Capitol"

WITHIN thirty days ground will be broken for construction of the largest and finest motion picture theatre in the United States, on Fourth street, between Jessie and Stevenson streets, San Francisco, according to a statement of Fred Dahnken on his return from New York. The new theatre will be known as the "T & D." It will cost $2,500,000. The house will have a seating capacity of 5,000 people and will take 12 months to build. Complete plans for the new structure were brought back from the east for the new theatre by Mr. Dahnken.

"The Capitol theatre in New York is now the world's largest film theatre, but it has practically no lobby. Our new theatre will surpass it in every respect," declared Mr. Dahnken in an interview to local newspaper men. The T & D theatre lobby will be 55 by 110 feet and 70 feet high.

The lobby of the projected T & D theatre in Sa n Francisco. This lobby will be 70 feet in height and the theatre as a whole will be the largest in the world according to its builders

Frank Costello, manager of the Tivoli, whose prologues are famed the country over will be in charge of the new theatre, it is understood.

"The theatrical business is booming everywhere, and San Francisco certainly has its full share of the business," said Mr. Dahnken after his six months' trip to the East.

"Motion picture houses of San Francisco are ahead of those in New York, and the Western city has a decided supremacy in productions," said Mr. Dahnken. "This is also true of the smaller California cities, as compared to towns of the same size in the East," he averred.

"Big theatres are now the rule," declared the head of the T & D circuit. "The day of the huge production has come, and, although the smaller theatres are still prospering, no more are being erected."

Turner & Dahnken are building a house at Richmond, Cal., which will have a seating capacity of 1,800 and one at Salinas to seat 1,200.

New Theater Opened in Eaton Rapids, Mich.

The new Capitol theatre has just been opened at Eaton Rapids, Mich., a city of a few thousands half-way between Jackson and Lansing, the capital city. The new house is one of the most attractive small-town theatres in the state, according to picture men, and the class of picture programs lined up gives Eaton Rapids an exceptional amusement enterprise.

The new theatre is owned and operated by the Capitol Theatre Company, composed of Earl M. and Cleopatra Whitehead, who for the past five years have been managing the Bijou theatre at Eaton Rapids.

Four hundred fifty-four are seated in the new house. The chairs are all eight-ply mahogany, upholstered in brown leather, ball-bearing hinges, making them easy to adjust and noiseless.

The front of the new house is of white marble Kellastone with a red tile coping. The marquise is white with embossed gold letters, "Capitol Theatre." In ap-

More Beautiful—Wears Twice as Long

THE superiority of Duratex Better Upholstery is apparent to the most casual observer.

Duratex has a smoothness, a softness and a richness of beauty found in no other upholstery. It always looks fresh. It stays new.

And Duratex is vastly more durable.

The scuffing of children's feet, moisture and stain of sticky hands and continual day after day service are hardships which Duratex withstands without harm.

Tougher fabrics protected by the patented Duratex coating make Duratex wear-resisting and water-proof.

Duratex is washable, therefore sanitary. It cleans as easily as a piece of china.

Let us send you samples of this more beautiful and more durable upholstery. And let us estimate cost of equipping your theatre.

Duratex costs no more than other upholsteries. It wears twice as long.

A New Design of Opera Chair that Adds to the Comfort of Your Audience

Eliminates Constant Rising of Patrons to Allow Late-Comers and Early Goers to Pass

ANYTHING that adds to the enjoyment or comfort of your patrons has a vital effect on box office receipts. There is a constant striving on the part of men interested in the motion-picture business to reach the ideal of pure enjoyment for their audience. Great strides have been made in the pictures themselves, the music has been improved, the best actors have joined the ranks of the motion-pictures, the photography is well nigh perfect. Ventilation, lighting and the mechanical and electrical equipment for projection and ease of operation have all been developed to a wonderful extent. The method of seating is practically the only thing that hasn't experienced marked improvement.

One type of MovEzy Chair

The pictures themselves have been developed to such an artistic extent, the audience is so much more critical than in the past that the slightest interruption often makes a great difference in the enjoyment of a picture. One often hears "We're always bothered at the most exciting time!" An annoyance at the thrilling part of a picture is liable to spoil the whole effect. It is also embarrassing to come into a dark theatre and grope around for a seat—bumping into people and stepping on feet, as well as trying for the people who own the feet!

A new invention that will solve many of these difficulties in a simple and unique way has recently been placed on the market and called the MovEzy chair. It is the last word in comfort and eliminates the greatest inconvenience in theatre operation.

The seating capacity of a theatre is not lessened by the installation of these chairs. As many can be put in as you could of the old-fashioned opera chairs. In fact, additional seating capacity is gained in a good-sized house and there is still more room for passing and for people's limbs. Just one type of chair has been developed—the most comfortable possible. It feels something like a Pullman. Different finishes are obtainable and can be furnished in the following materials:

Blue leather and imitation leather, brown leather and imitation leather, velour—any shade, dark green leather and imitation leather, silver gray leather, brick and mahogany wood finishes.

The base is the same in all cases and is finished in black enamel.

The MovEzy chair has been developed to accomplish a long felt need and its two main advantages are ease of operation and comfort. Simply revolving noiselessly a quarter turn or less to one side when anyone passes sums up the operation. The chair has an easy tendency to face straight forward and all chairs will line themselves when unoccupied. The comfort of the chair combines all good features and developments in chair manufacture. One of the chief comforts being that the MovEzy chair is an individual chair with two arm rests of your own.

There is a feeling of ease, luxuriousness and roominess when seated in this chair. Lots of elbow and foot room!

This new invention removes the greatest cause for complaint. It means less time required to fill and empty the theatre, no crowded aisles, greater comfort to everyone concerned, pleased patrons and bigger box office receipts.

The Argus Enterprises with branches in all the principal cities have made arrangements with the Motion Picture Chair Co., whereby they will handle exclusively the MovEzy chairs. Mr. L. C. Toole of the Motion Picture Chair Co. has been placed in full charge of the Chair Sales Department.

Oil as Fuel for Theatres

menace to the surrounding community.

2. Increased fire hazard, which means strict supervision by the municipality.

All in all from a solely engineering standpoint, it would seem that fuel oil is very desirable, and it is.

The second consideration, i. e., economic has to do with the cost of installing the equipment and the relative cost of fuel oil and coal. These are matters which vary with each case and should receive the most careful study prior to any decision.

Oil-burning equipment is expensive and made more so by the regulations laid down by the various municipalities. New York City issued its regulations in December, 1919, and while they are more severe than the average, they are typical. These regulations govern the grade of oil to be used, the design of the installation, the apparatus to be installed and the operation of the system. Thus they require the large storage tank must be at a lower level than the burner in the boiler and surrounded by concrete walls. This usually means that the tank must be set down in a pit underneath the boiler room. And if it is a question of changing over a system already in operation, then probably the tank must be brought into the building in sections, fabricated on the job; and the floor dug up to accommodate the tank.

Then there is the problem of cost and reliability of the supply of fuel oil. This is indeed the crux of the entire matter and requires the most thought. The operator must be able to get a long term contract for delivery of the oil at such a price that it will allow him to pay for the equipment in a reasonably short time and give a saving over coal besides. In certain parts of the country these contracts are available, as on the west coast and other places, but in New York City they do not seem to be on the market. Indeed, these conditions may change in the course of time, and it is for the operator to determine the conditions in his locality.

The available supply of the two fuels on this continent is another important matter. David Moffat Myers, in "Combustion" October, 1920, points out that the supply of coal in this country is estimated to last 2,000 years and upward, while the supply of oil so far as can be prophesied by our best geological authorities will be completely consumed in a period of 20 to 30 years at the present rate of consumption. This combined with the increasing use of fuel oil in the industries, merchant marine, and the Navy points to an ever increasing price. In fact, there is a movement under way to secure governmental control of the oil supply so that it can be conserved and directed to the most useful channels. The advantages of fuel oil in marine and industrial work are much more pronounced than in the heating field, and it is entirely possible that there may be some unfavorable legislation or at least governmental regulation.

Engineers use the following rough and ready rule; if the cost of coal in dollars per ton is greater than twice the cost of fuel oil in cents per gallon then fuel oil is probably the cheaper fuel. One hundred and fifty gallons of fuel oil is approximately equal to one ton of good coal in fuel value.

It can be only pointed out again that this question of fuel oil versus coal is one that varies with each particular case, and it is for the operator to make his investigation along the lines suggested and then draw his own conclusions.

The Floor-Covering for Your Theatre—

Of course, there are a lot of requirements to keep in mind when planning the floors of your theatre. But doesn't Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum fill them all? Let's see.

In the first place, it is sturdily tough and durable—well able to stand for years the grind of floor-service in the busiest theatre. Second, it can be cleaned easily, quickly and at remarkably low cost. Third, and of interest to your patrons—it is restfully quiet under tramping feet. Fourth, its soft brown tone blends artistically into any scheme of interior decoration.

Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum is built to conform to the rigid specifications of the U. S. Navy—built to stand the grinding wear of deck service on our fighting craft. But it is not only built to give this satisfactory service, it is guaranteed to give it.

On every roll of Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum you will find our Gold Seal Guarantee —"Satisfaction Guaranteed or Your Money Back"—a guarantee that means just what it says.

And this, after all, is the big point: When you buy Gold-Seal Battleship Linoleum you buy a certain investment in floor-covering satisfaction.

Gold-Seal Cork Carpet

Here is a remarkably durable floor-covering as restfully silent and yielding underfoot as a carpet of pine needles.

It is made in pleasing soft shades of green, terra cotta and brown—the surface polished or dull—10 shades in all. Of course the same pledge of satisfactory service, the Gold Seal Guarantee, goes with it.

pearance, it is exceptional and forms one of the most imposing structures in the business section of the lively little city.

The decorative scheme inside is pale rose, ivory and gold, with beautiful floral effects used in abundance. The auditorium, being finished in the pale rose, blends into the cream or ivory ceiling. The exits on each side of the stage consist of French doors finished in ivory, with fifteen mirrors each, making a total of sixty mirrors in the four doors.

Above these doors are French windows, finished in ivory, overhung with beautiful rose sprays. The screen, a pure white velvet finish, encased in a two-foot black shadow box, will bring out every detail of the picture. It is ten feet three inches by thirteen feet six inches.

In finishing the proscenium arch, ivory scrolls have been used, covered with the rose sprays, in the center of which the word "Capitol" appears in large raised ivory letters. There are large palm trees on either side of the stage.

The main floor seats 336, besides the boxes, of which there are eight, with six bent wood chairs in each. The balcony will be entered from either side of the foyer by winding stairs, finished in ivory and mahogany. The foyer and lobby are finished in mahogany. Green silk plush drapes separate the auditorium proper from the foyer.

There is a ladies' room, drinking fountain and all that goes to make up an up-to-date little theatre.

The lighting effects are unique and pleasing to the eye. During the presentation of the picture, a subdued light will prevail from eight inverted bowls, made possible by the use of dimmers. During the intermissions, the lights in the bowls will be brightened and a dozen ivory finished wicker wall-pockets filled with handsome illuminated bouquets will enhance the beauty of the place.

An American blower has been installed which will change the air of the place every six minutes with the aid of powerful fans. In the winter, this blower is attached to the steam plant and forces the fresh air through large radiators.

The projection room is absolutely fire- and sound-proof. It is ten by twelve feet, and the walls, ceiling and floor are made of eight-inch concrete. All the fixtures are made of iron, even the window casings being covered with the metal. Two of the latest type Powers machines are installed, eliminating all waits between reels—a real feature in the small picture houses of Michigan.

Mayor Opens Missouri Theatre

WITH the opening of the Missouri theatre, just completed at a cost of more than $1,000,000, St. Louis acquired the second largest, and by many considered the most beautiful moving picture theatre in the United States.

The new showhouse was opened yesterday afternoon with a matinee performance. It was formally dedicated at 8 p. m., when Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, of New York City, presented the Missouri to the citizens of St. Louis, through Mayor Henry W. Kiel.

The dedication ceremony was attended by prominent motion picture magnates from all parts of the country. Every one of the 4,000 seats were occupied and crowds thronged the lobby and foyer in an effort to see the beautiful showhouse.

Visitors at the new showhouse were amazed at its beautiful architecture, sumptuous appointments, excellent lighting and scenic effects, and other features that go to make the perfect theatre. While elaborate in every respect, the Missouri instills a feeling of comfort that is seldom found in the modern theatre.

The lobby and mezzanine promenade and the softly lighted corridors made such an impression on patrons last night that many were loath to leave until the last lights were turned out. Many visits were paid to the ladies' rest rooms and nurseries in the foyer of the balcony.

The general layout of this foyer and the arrangement of the smoking room, rest rooms and other features surpasses anything that has ever been attempted in St. Louis in the construction of theaters of any type.

The lobby, with its beautiful marble staircases, excited the admiration of all who visited the place yesterday.

The arrangements of the seats, both on the first floor and in the balcony, are quite perfect. The theater is so designed that patrons are not required to crane their necks or compelled to view the picture from behind a post or other obstruction. All seats command a direct view of the screen.

To further fascinate the patrons of the Missouri, an orchestra of 40 pieces will render musical selections perfectly synchronized with the picture being screened. Another musical feature is a pipe organ, the largest in use in any theatre in this section of the country.

More than 100 employes are required to operate the theatre. In addition to the orchestra and manager's staff, there are 25 ushers, six stage hands, three cashiers, and more than 25 maids, nurses and matrons.

The opening attraction was the Paramount feature production "Behold My Wife." The leading parts are taken by Elliott Dexter and Gloria Swanson.

Charles Dahl is stage manager. The musical selections will be arranged by Emanuel Baer, imported from New York to take charge of the music at the Missouri. Antonio Farli will conduct the orchestra.

Mirroroid Produces New Type Screen

A special weight projection screen has been perfected and is now ready for marketing by the Mirroroid Mfg. Corporation of 727 Seventh Avenue, New York. Mr. Cohen of that firm reports that the qualities of the screen are such that distortion and fade out are eliminated. At the New Rialto theatre in Newark, N. J., one of these new screens was installed and even though the auditorium is wide the picture seen at the sides is exceptionally satisfactory.

This machine, considered first as a camera, is built on the principle that if a ray of light coming from a distant point could be bent just after passing through the lens so that it would impinge on the film at an initial position, that is, at the top of the aperture, and should then be caused to travel down one frame in exact synchronism with the movement of the film, our problem would be solved.

This bending of the ray of light just after passing through the lens can be accomplished by interposing a prism, say of 5 degree angle, with ith base up, (S., Fig. 1) which will project the ray to its initial position (a) at the top of the picture aperture; and finally with its base down (S., Fig. 1) to project the ray to its final position (b) at the bottom of the aperture, that is, the end of the downward travel of the film. Obviously at the moment the ray passes the middle of the aperture it is not bent at all, and, therefore, the "prism" cannot be a prism at this point but only a plain, parallel-sided piece of glass.

The light ray acts as though it were hinged at the location of the prism. If, therefore, we could make a solid glass prism and endow it with the ability to automatically change the angle of its faces in synchronism with the movement of the film, the ray of light or the picture-carrying cone of light would follow the film, which is exactly the object we seek.

Such an assumption seems paradoxical, but it may be accomplished by employing a long strip of glass of prism section with the base up at one end and base down at the other end and a gradually changing contour from end to end between these two extremes. (See Fig. 2). If this strip of glass is passed across the path of the film, in the light cone and in synchronism with the travel of the film, the constantly running film will appear stationary on the screen when used as a projector.

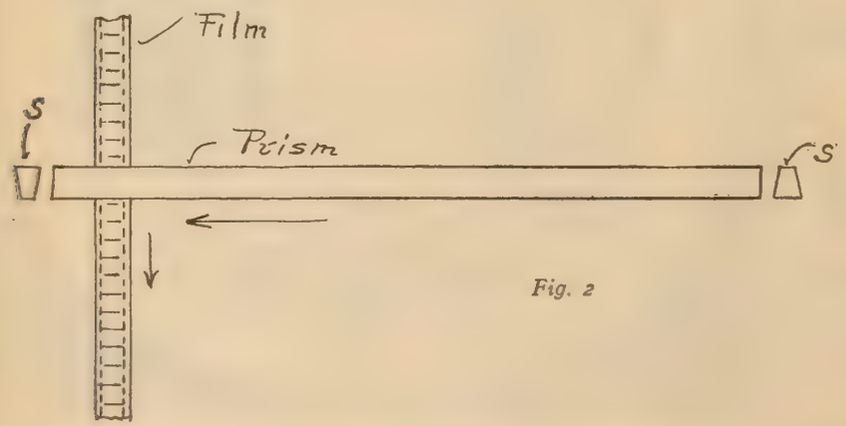

Fig. 2

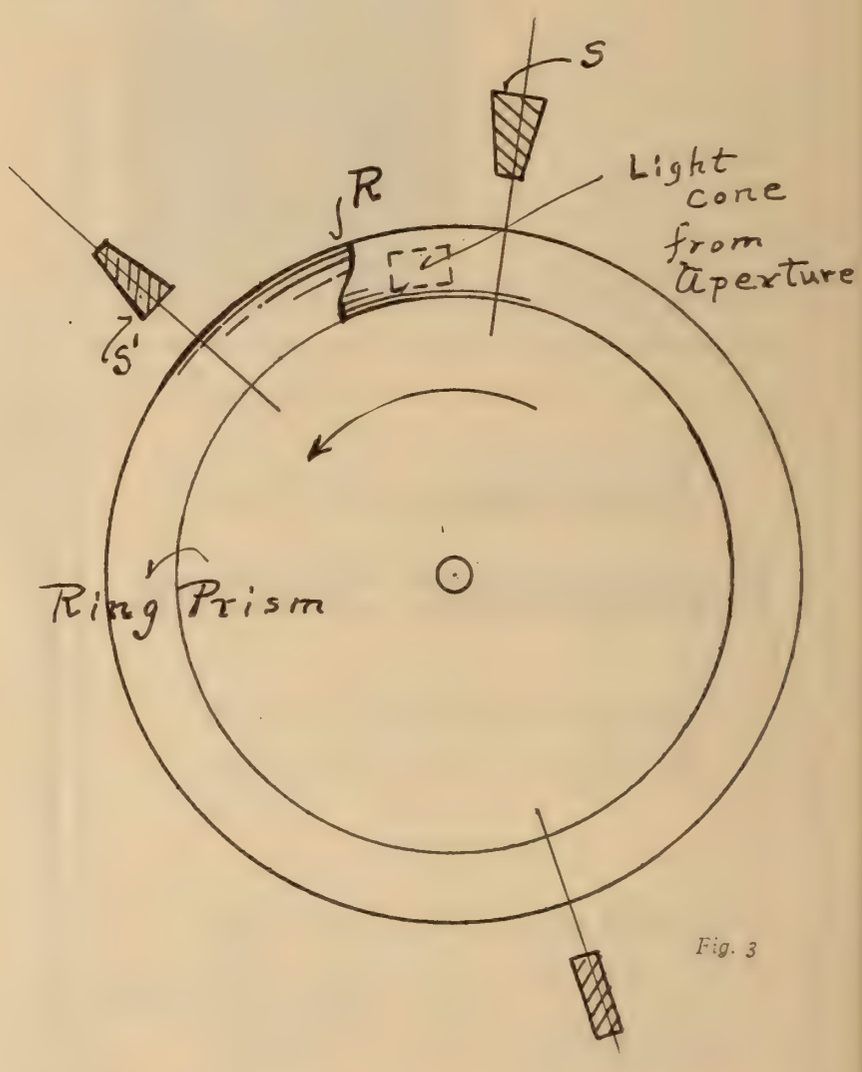

Fig. 3

But to make the continuous motion machine of these elements the strip of prismatic glass must be made into a ring (in the plane of its width) with the two ends abutting. When this is done, the contacting ends (R., Fig. 3) rep-

TO THE MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY:

Unfamiliarity with actual conditions has led to an assumption in some quarters that the near future will bring a material reduction in the list prices of Power's projectors.

The error in this assumption is quite apparent to those who are in position to know the facts. Aside from there being no possibility of any reduction in the near future, there is but scant probability that a marked reduction will ever take place.

During war times the cost of labor and material advanced so rapidly, and to such extremes, that it was impossible for us to make proportionate increases in the list prices of our product. We do not expect this cost ever to revert to the low pre-war level. When the cost of labor and material does decrease somewhat, it can have no effect on list prices which were never advanced to adequately take care of the increase in cost.

Then too, a comparison of our 6B equipment today with that of several years ago reveals the fact that during this period of time many refinements and improvements have been made, each by itself not having been sufficient to justify an increase in the list price of the complete equipment, but all together making a substantial increase in the cost of our product, for which we must receive remuneration now and in the future.

Our confidence in this opinion is best expressed by the following guarantee:

ANY EXHIBITOR PURCHASING NEW, COMPLETE POWER'S EQUIPMENTS THRU OUR AUTHORIZED DISTRIBUTORS OR DEALERS AT ANY TIME UP TO JULY 1, 1921, WILL BE REIMBURSED IN FULL BY THIS COMPANY FOR ANY DIFFERENCE IN PRICE ON SUCH EQUIPMENTS, OCCASIONED BY A REDUCTION IN THE LIST PRICE, IF SUCH REDUCTION BE MADE BEFORE JULY 1, 1921.

Yours very truly,

resents crossed prisms, one with the base (S) outward, and the other with the base (S') toward the axis of rotation of this ring.

As a matter of convenience on fabrication, this ring prism is actually ground in the face of a disc of glass, as you will observe, for this then makes its own support on the rotating shaft, upon which it is mounted.

This ring is so geared to the film-feeding sprocket that it makes one revolution with the passage of each single frame across the aperture, and, of course, in exact synchronism therewith. The median line of the prismatic ring, the objective, the picture aperture, and the light source are all located in the axis of the cone of light, the prism being located at the point where the hinging or beginning of the light cone is to be effected.

As explained above, the ring makes one complete revolution for the passing of each picture frame, and in synchronism therewith, each frame instantaneously dissolving into the next as the joint in the prism ring crosses the light cone, so that the picture on the screen is stationary, continuous in action and without interruption by shutter blades.

Observe that the machine employs standard film, stock objectives and condensers, and the usual light source, all readily changeable as to size, focus, etc. However, as noted, it does not have the usual fifty-fifty rotating shutter necessary on the intermittent machine, and so the incandescent lamp may be expected to still further replace arc-lamp equipment, for there is 100 per cent increase in screen lighting efficiencies.

It is not my intention to suggest that the problem is solved to an extent precluding further improvement, for I do think any work along this line is worth while. Certainly the curious fact that no marked change in projecting machines has been made in twenty-five years would seem to warrant the assumption that there is abundant opportunity for research work.

Projection Room of Missouri Theatre, St. Louis

By J. R. Espy

AN essential feature of the perfect theatre that was not overlooked in the erection of the Missouri theatre, St. Louis' $1,250,000 movie house, the second largest in the United States, is the projection room, which is said to be one of the most complete in the country.

The Missouri is being operated by the Famous Players Missouri Corporation, exhibitors of Paramount pictures. The same corporation also operates a number of other St. Louis theatres, including the Delmonte, the largest one-floor theatre in the world.

While the Delmonte, which was completed several months ago, is equipped with an excellent projection room, the booth at the Missouri is even more perfect. The equipment is virtually the same in both, but the Missouri has a larger and more comfortable working space for the operators.

The Missouri booth is 20 feet long and 10 feet wide. The greatest advantage however, lies in the height, which is 12 feet. This eliminates the discomfort to operators of having to bear the heat from the powerful arc lights. The light is also good, while the ventilation could not be improved upon.

In order to avoid any possibility of delay in the screening of pictures, the theatre is equipped with three projecting machines. All of these are of type S. Simplex design. Two are used at a time, the third being held for emergency.

While film is being thrown from one, the next is already in the second machine, ready for immediate transmission.

The room is equipped with two 200 Amp. Generators designed by the Chandeysson Electric Company of St. Louis. The generator room is five feet wide by ten long, and fully equipped with the latest devices for quick repair of damages.

The comfort of the operators was taken into consideration throughout, lavatories and dressing rooms being provided in a room adjoining the booth. Three operators are employed, working on interchangeable shifts. The theatre is operated from 1 to 11 p. m. daily.

The booth is located at the highest point in the building, being situated at the extreme top of the upper balcony. The length of throw to the screen is 171 feet. The lenses used are 8½ inch Kenolite type. The booth is situated at an angle of approximately thirty-five degrees above the screen. One spotlight is used.

Because of the location of the booth none of the light from the machines is reflected in the eyes of the audience. The rising of a person in the center of the upper balcony during the show will not cast a shadow on the screen as is often the case in an improperly designed theatre or where the location and arrangement of the projection room has not been thoroughly considered.

A special device, designed by Chief Projectionist Wallace McDonnell, supplanting the old change over system, is in use at the Missouri. McDonnell is preparing to patent the device, which he has perfected after several years of study. Through the use of the new change over system, the operator does not have to stop one machine when he wishes to start the other. The starting of the second machine automatically stops the first.

The machines are equipped with Robbins' speed indicators and McAuley arc controls. The machines are so set in the concrete floor as to permit the operators to work around them without inconvenience. Provisions for the repair of broken film and the extinction of fire are the same as used in every other large motion picture theatre in the country.

McDonnell said that the Missouri projection room is more comfortable and easier to work in than any he has occupied in the years he has been engaged in the business. He attributed this not only to the completeness of the devices and machines used, but to the space provided and the manner in which the room was lined up with the screen.

Scenic effects and lighting arrangements play no small part in the regular program of the Missouri, and in this respect the projection booth is a big factor. The reflection from the lenses and the spotlight are used in various ways to enhance the scenic and stage properties.

Some of the Properties of Film

Exchanges might read with good results certain paragraphs in the patent office claims of R. D. Hanish, of Columbus, Ohio, as comprised in Patent No. 1356356 covering his "Methods of Treating Motion Picture Films." These sections read:

"A motion picture film consists of a strip of celluloid to which a coating or emulsion of gelatine, and sensitizing chemicals has been applied; glycerine is usually added to the coating before it is applied to the film to prevent the warping thereof, which the gelatine would otherwise cause as it dries, and to keep the gelatine flexible, so it will not check or crack as the film is wound on and unwound from the reel. Both the gelatine and the glycerine are hygroscopic—that is, they absorb moisture from damp air, and give off moisture to dry air. Various disadvantages result from this characteristic of the coating. Among others is the tendency not to dry thoroughly under certain atmospheric conditions, and to dry too hard under other conditions; and to sweat or exude an oily substance which collects on the coated surface. When insufficiently dried the coating become viscous or adhesive when subjected to the heat of the lantern. When dried too hard it will crack or check as it is wound on or unwound off the reel. A moist or adhesive surface will collect dust or dirt which not only detracts from the clearness and transparency of the film, but has an injurious effect on the film as it is wound and unwound. An adhesive coating will collect in small quantities on the tension spring and other contacting parts of the projecting machine where it is baked hard and causes a scratching or tearing of the film. Oil or sweat on the film produces in the picture blotches or cloudy effects. These disadvantages not only detract from the clearness of the picture as it is thrown on the screen, but they seriously interfere with the operation of the projecting machine and materially shorten the life of the film."

Mr. Hanish claims that his invention furnishes the means of overcoming these faults in films. If so, and we have every reason to believe them, there is not an exchange in the country that would not benefit by making use of it.

Some time ago a friend of the News secured employment in a New York exchange for the sole purpose of becoming acquainted with exchange procedure and practice. In the near future we expect to publish some of the notes made during his employment. They will make good reading for the exhibitor projectionist and the producers themselves.

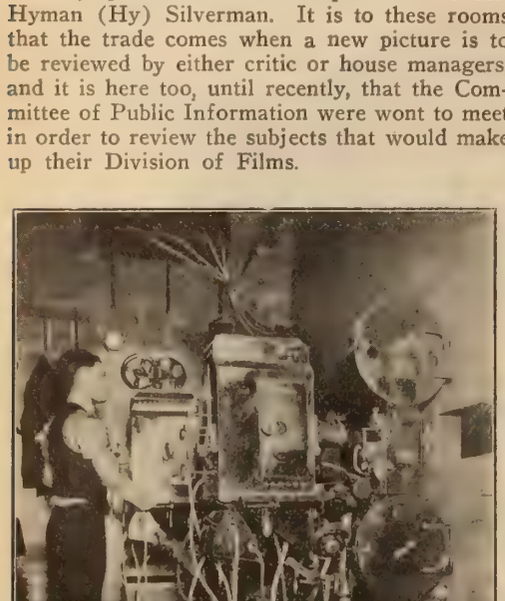
Godfrey Projection Rooms Use Simplexes

On the 6th and 7th floors of the Godfrey Building, which latter is truly a representative film structure, are located the Public Projection Rooms, operated under the supervision of Mr. Hyman (Hy) Silverman. It is to these rooms that the trade comes when a new picture is to be reviewed by either critic or house managers, and it is here too, until recently, that the Committee of Public Information were wont to meet in order to review the subjects that would make up their Division of Films.



The Public Projection Room

These rooms were also used by the Custom House Officials, whose duties included the inpection of all films leaving this country. The Public Projection Rooms were established four years ago and until recently, comprised three distinct rooms, all of them equipped with the very latest projection room equipment including Simplex Projectors, besides providing all necessary comforts for the reviewers.

In the Projection Rooms, which are uniformly equipped, are located two Simplex Projectors, motor driven, regulation models, operated with 25-40 ampere rheostat. The projection distance in each instance is approximately 40 feet, with a 10 foot picture on specially prepared screens which Mr. Silverman has had devised. Mr. Silverman, who has had 12 years experience in various divisions of the industry, is a member of Local No. 306, Moving Picture Operators, of which Local, his assistant, Mr. Samuel Kershenbaum is also a member.

The Public Projection Rooms are open to trade showings at all hours of the day and night and are patronized by the trade along "Film Row."

Peerless Arc Controls in Big Chicago Circuit

What is reported to be the largest single retail order ever closed for Automatic Arc Controls, was recently placed by Ascher Bros'. Amusement Enterprises, of Chicago, for fifty-two Peerless Automatic Arc Controls, manufactured by the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Co., 3034 North Jefferson Street, Chicago.

Ascher Bros. operates twenty-six high-grade theatres in Chicago and suburbs, and the fact that they have equipped their entire circuit with Peerless Automatic Arc Controls is evidence of the tremendous improvement which these truly remarkable instruments affect in the screen illumination.

Poor Prints His Trouble

Charles Blaine, manager of the Yale and Morgan theatre, Henryetta, Okla., writes the NEWS as follows:

"In your July 17th issue 'editorial' when you said, 'Renting pictures which will give the small exhibitor decent prints,' you hit the bull in the heart.

"If you were in my place and get prints like we are getting from some of the exchanges you would have said a lot more, in 'different words.' For instance, 'Select' out of Kansas City—sending salesman, promising all news prints on every film that we'll run, convincing me into deposits on every star of 1918 series, and, after leaving town, the first picture they send cut up all to pieces; then calling up the manager at the cost of $2.75 telephone expenses; manager promises that he will see to it in person; well, the second picture in worse shape than the first one, and not a decent print sent to date. I've been compelled to turn down films right from the express, by looking in the box, with each of the five reels half gone and looking like miniature reels.

"Now, what is to be done. This exchange has my deposits. I am writing them to either return my deposits or send me better prints. But they say that I can't cancel until I play two pictures of each star. If I do that in sixteen weeks (of eight stars) I will not have any show by that time and they will be still sending C. O. D., which I will be refusing if they are in that terrible condition. The exchange calls such films—good-running condition. Of course, you can make it go through the machine, but what about the story of the picture after half of it is gone? Why don't some of the exchanges play fair? If they can't supply the exhibitor with good prints why don't they return the deposits and settle all arguments and disappointments? The small towns have just as good people as the big towns have, and they know when the film is all there. You'll find all the small exhibitors here having the same trouble.

Power Buying Stock For 1921

THE Nicholas Power Company is expressin its confidence in the business outlook in very practical manner by making arrangement at the present time for future supplies. Th photograph on this page shows Mr. Georg Moyer, General Superintendent of the Textil Machine Works; Mr. S. S. Cassard, Vice Pres dent of the Nicholas Power Company, and M Louis Merkin, Works Manager. Mr. Cassar and Mr. Moyer have just signed a contra covering next year's supply of all cast parts o the stand for Power's Projector. The rela tions between the companies have been of a ver friendly nature for many years and betwee Mr. Cassard, who was formerly Purchasin Agent of the Nicholas Power Company, an Mr. Moyer there has existed a personal friend ship of long duration.

The contract just signed with the Textil Machine Works is one of a number coverin future supplies recently arranged by Mr. Cas sard and indicates a definite decision to g after business vigorously next year. In spite o the general slowing up of business in man lines, the Nicholas Power Company reports tha business for the year 1920 was almost double tha of the year of 1919. As shown by the adver tising of the Nicholas Power Company man of the largest theatres and circuits have bee placing orders for equipment in new houses o replacing old equipment with new machine There is a growing tendency on the part of ex hibitors to realize that it does not pay to econo mize in the matter of projection and many o the old houses have been placing orders fo the very latest Power's 6B Type "E" to replac old equipment. The Nicholas Power Compan is showing a commendable energy and confidenc which if emulated by other business firms wi have a tendency to check the attack of "col feet" which may become epidemic if not halte before it goes too far. Retrenchment and con servatism are very good and may be badly neede but it may be just as well as to be moderate i these things also. The example of the Nichola Power Company in making contracts now fo next year's supplies and facing the future chee fully is a good one.

How To Obtain Results With Studio Lighting Equipment*

A Technical Paper Prepared by Mr. Max Mayer of M. J. Wohl & Co.

INSTALLATION OF EQUIPMENT

First of all let us deal with the manner of installing the overhead lights, as this seems to be a source of worry to everyone equipping an artificially lighted studio.

An overhead carriage or trolley system which facilitates the free and easy movement of the individual lamps or banks, both longitudinally and transversally through the studio, and which provides for the convenient raising and lowering of the lamps; that is the problem usually handed to the architect, or contractor.

After ascertaining the weight of the lamps, the weight of the structure required to move and support them grouped in most any position over an area—usually of 5,000 square feet or more—he finds this a weighty problem in more than one sense; often requiring reinforcement of the building structure to provide for the added weight.

Suitable means must also be provided for carrying the current to the lamps in all positions and when the installation is to be made in a glass studio, it must not obstruct the sunlight nor cast shadows.

When it comes to the reckoning, a system meeting all these requirements will cost a very substantial sum and should be planned by a skilled structural engineer, guided by someone well versed in the requirements of the studio.

In one of the modern studios in the east, the lamps are hung from four independent transverse carriages, each movable longitudinally through the studio. Each carriage is provided with a platform, easily reached from a fixed platform with stairway on one side wall of studio running the entire length. From these platforms the electrician has access to the lamps, electrical connections and raising and lowering devices. The individual lamps are hung in tracks on these transverse carriages and are thus movable to any position across the width of the studio. Each lamp takes its current through contact shoes from properly protected bare copper feeders strung along the carriages. These feeders on the movable carriages pick up the current through larger contact shoes from a set of stationary bare copper mains strung along the side wall and connecting with the switchboard. The top lights are thus all controlled from one switch.

When a light effect is called for, requiring one or a number of top lights, controlled independent of the rest; provision is made for this in the following manner:

Each lamp is connected to its respective contact shoes through a separable plug with a short piece of flexible cable. In the center of the studio, throughout its length and above the transverse carriages, there is an auxiliary feeder run in conduit, from which are hung at intervals, pendant cables terminating in plugs which fit the plugs attached to the lamps. Thus, any of the carriages may be moved to a desired position, one or more lamps thereon disconnected from the trolley feeder and plugged through the nearest available pendant plugs to the auxiliary feeder which is under separate switch control on the board.

This equipment has proven quite satisfactory, but is cited here merely as an example and not for any superiority over numerous others now in use.

In the dark studio, where sunlight is never available to the camera, it is practicable to dispense with the carriage system by lining or studding the ceiling with lights properly spaced and wired for individual control, so that wherever a set may be placed on the floor, top light is provided by simply switching on the desired lamps. Provision should however be made for raising and lowering the lamps individually, to meet the various conditions.

FLOOR LAMPS

It is hardly appropriate to suggest here, either the kind or quantity of lamps required for any assumed condition, but it is important that all floor lamps be sturdy in construction and light enough in weight to be readily portable. They should be fitted with easy running swivelled rollers of large diameter so that they will readily ride over floor obstacles.

The lamps are continuously moved from place to place and ease of handling is very much desired.

Stage cables of 25 feet length or more, are usually attached to the lamps and dragged about with them. It seems a good suggestion to fit each cable with a separable plug close to the lamp, so that the lamps and cables may be separately moved and quickly reconnected.

DISTRIBUTION OF CURRENT TO FLOOR LAMPS

A simple, safe and flexible arrangement of current distribution, devised by the writer several years ago, is described as follows:

Along both side walls of studio a series of plugging boxes is arranged. Each box consists of a 3-wire 100 ampere (per side) plugging pocket, fed by rigidly installed wires from the switchboard. The boxes should not be more than fifteen to twenty feet apart and about four feet above floor. The pocket openings should be downward. This will prevent their being used for ash trays or storage receptacles.

To each of these pockets is fitted a 3-wire plug attached to a 3-wire stage cable of equal capacity, 20 to 30 feet in length. Each of these cables terminates in a portable spider or plugging box having four 2-wire pockets each of 50 ampere capacity.

The plugs fitting these pockets are attached to the lamps by stage cables of suitable length, usually about 25 feet. In this way each wall pocket would supply four lamps of 50 amperes or less, with a large radius of movement for the lamps.

The switchboard is fitted in addition to the top light switches, with one switch for each plugging pocket, each switch being triple-pole, double throw, with the blades connecting to the plugging pocket. One throw of each switch is connected to a set of bus bars fed through a master switch, the other throw of each switch is connected to a separate set of bus bars, fed either through another master switch or direct from the service.

This enables the electrician to set his switches and lamps so that upon signal he can turn on or off a portion of the lights in a set without disturbing the rest; so that a light change can be played in a scene. In the old days this was usually done by holding the action, stopping the camera until the light change was made and then resuming action.

Before concluding, I want to dwell upon the use of alternating current in the studio.

In the third report of the Society proceedings, a reference is made (Paragraph 6, Report of the Committee on Electrical Devices) to the use of alternating current in the projection arc. The objections cited apply here with only this difference, that in projection there seems no real remedy except converting or rectifying to direct current, while in the studio the remedy is simple on account of the plurality of the light sources. All that is needed, to overcome the phase flicker, is a two phase installation with the lamps properly distributed and balanced on the phases.

A word of caution here to the camera man may save him many feet of retakes.

The exposure variations resulting from phase flicker become particularly pronounced on close up, dissolves and fades. This is due to the variations in the exposure period as the shutter opening in the camera is varied, and as close ups are often made with a single lamp, a flicker results, much more pronounced than that in alternating current projection, where at least the shutter value is constant.

To obviate this, never use a single lamp on alternating current, but always arrange the lamps in pairs connected on opposite phases; the results will surely justify your taking the trouble to see that this suggestion is carried out.

In conclusion, I want to say a word in behalf of the man behind the camera. This subject intimately concerns him; for he is the one who assumes almost all of the responsibility of the lighting. If he is to carry the blame for failures he should also have the exclusive say as to the arrangement of the lights.

Let the camera man make himself thoroughly conversant with lighting and the physical characteristics thereof which aid or disturb the results he seeks to attain, so that the director may be justified in entrusting to him this important phase of the work.

Thus, let Science wait on Art, and good judgment on both.

First Steps in Music Understanding

"The motion picture has been a shock to many. It scandalized, it brought blushes to the cheek, but it got inside, it unlocked brains. It set imaginations at work. It made people think outside themselves.

"Now, if there is one way out for America and the rest of the world in these present crises, it is through imaginations. If people have lively imaginations, if they can see further than their noses, if they are able to put two and two together with a little gray matter, then we will laugh at disorder, and take care of our Ship. The radicals who are setting flame to our orderly state are men of vision and imagination gone off on a tangent. The people who are to show them the respect due our nation, must have as much or more vision and imagination, properly directed.

"There is the call to the imagination. The listener must arouse his imagination with that of the artist-creator and the interpreter. He may not look with dull attention or listen without the exercise of his own superior functions. When imagination is operating, the whole being of the individual is transformed. The life of the imagination is capable of bringing joys far more poignant than those of reality. There is a great need for imagination. I think I shall establish the life of the imagination, and we will have meetings every day and we will imagine everything we desire, without cost or trouble. Such a wonderful thing! But seriously, what is pleasure and enjoyment but the exercise of the imagination? I know millionaires who might sign their names to checks for fabulous sums, whose imagination is so dead they could not see anything unless it were laid right before their eyes. And I know some very poor folks, myself included, who can imagine enough to make them happier than all the millionaires put together. To be able to hold the past of history and the future in my imagination—to conjure Caesar and Napoleon into my home; to imagine the wars of the Carthaginians and the terrors of the Inquisition; to imagine the home of Budda and of Mohammed; to imagine the meeting between Samson and Delilah and of Romeo and Juliet. To imagine the wonders of Cathay and even California and ancient India. Some people just have no imagination; pity them.

"You see the motion picture makes the watcher exercise that same imagination. It doesn't permit him to have everything fixed for him. The words not being there, he must be alert and active himself. This is something generally overlooked. You go to a stage play—everything is given the listener; you go to a film play, the watcher must participate and exercise his own functions.

"Therefore, returning to the subject of the musical idea, one can readily see that anything which serves to give impetus to the imagination and clothes the mood of the action in the right atmosphere, is quite properly within the right technique of the picture theatre.

"Now the very first step in musical understanding is to catch one important idea. This step is so important, that if you don't understand it, if you don't believe it, if you don't follow it—you will never make a success of picture music. But once you do grasp it, once you do understand, once you thoroughly believe it, everything else is easy.

"Here is that first step—that all-important point:

"Music is a language that is universal and has its alphabet, its words, its sentences, its stories. You can say anything you like in music. You can do anything you like in music. You can laugh, cry, swear, plead, go crazy, become mute, run a race, go to sleep, become sick, fight, riot, war, make a revolution. You can paint an Indian, Irishman, Chinaman, Italian, savage, priest, marchioness, effeminate man, bad boy, gurgling baby, sweet old lady, doddering profligate, dignified judge. You can indicate thunder, sunshine, fields in summer and winter, icebergs, mountains, valleys, rivers, waterfalls, clouds, sunshine. You can give the feeling of antiquity, of the jungle, of the open ocean, of the crowded city, of the tiny village, of the farmhouse.

"If you see that this is true, everything else is easy. Music doesn't make an absolute picture or decription of anything. For instance, it doesn't make an actual crying baby, it suggests it. Music is suggestive rather than actual. It doesn't show the Chinaman, but it makes the mind go through the same process as it would if a Chinaman appeared. See therefore how the picture and the music dovetail. The film shows the actual idea, devoid of the subtle feeling of actuality. The music brings forth the subtle feeling which would be the response of the actuality but does not show the real thing.

"If the music were played alone, the listener would feel happy or sad or excited or calm; but when the film works with the music, the listener and watcher feels happy with the heroine, sad with and over the death of the mother, excited with and about the terrible thing that is being enacted in the wife's boudoir, is calm with and in the spirit of the country scene where the young couple have just emerged.

"Now it is as plain as anything that when the right kind of music is used as accompaniment to the film, at the right time, the film becomes illuminated and improved.

"But is also as plain as can be, that if the wrong kind of music is in the wrong place that the film is misunderstood and hurt. The listener becomes distracted, the music is saying one thing, the film another, and he can get no good out of either.

Also if the music is badly rendered, he is conscious of that; just as conscious of it as he is when the actor on the stage doesn't register what he is supposed to show. The musician must be a passive creature—he must never appear during the film presentation—I mean the audience must not be conscious that an artist is making the music, or that an orchestra is doing it. The performers of the music must sink out of the audiences' attention, but their playing must be true to the spirit of the picture.

"Of course, in making the music right, there's a big problem—get the right man with the right associates, and provide the musicians with the proper instruments and the proper music for the library. But the Right Man? How are you to know him. If he appreciates the first step (see above) and can follow it through and can play well and is neither a snobbish high-brow or a dub of the cheap-underworld, he will be a valuable assistant. And right here I must repeat, that when the motion picture theatre tries to compete with the vaudeville and the music hall, it is lost! LOST! But when it tries to lift its tone and atmosphere to rival the concert hall and the opera house without getting high-faluting and forgetting the box office, it is ON THE ROAD!"

The Music Forum

(Under this heading the new ideas, queries, suggestions are gathered. This is where the motion picture fraternity gets together on music.)

Word is received from the West that Overland Magazine of the Coast carried an important discussion on the part played by the Motion Picture theatre in developing music. Illustrations of the Robert Morton Organ and the Fotoplayer were used.

The Musical Courier (a magazine devoted to the art) now carries a column of information about film music.

The Pantages Theatre in Los Angeles has installed a Robert-Morton Organ which is remarkable in that the organ pipes are under the stage instead of along the proscenium as is generally used. The orchestra is lead from the organ and a more rapid response of the tonal quality and volume is obtained from this method which has proven very successful in Pantage's million dollar theatre in Los Angeles.

The Fort Worth Record carried a two column article recently commending the Musical-Motion Picture Conference:

IMPROVEMENT OF MOTION PICTURE MUSIC TO BE SUBJECT OF CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK CITY WITHIN NEXT FEW WEEKS

"In line with the rapid forward strides music development is making throughout the country, is the concerted interest being taken in the improvement of motion picture music, the first annual conference on which will be held in New York City early in the new year.

"The conference is the result of a call issued by the Motion Picture News, the music editor of which is that distinguished journalist, Charles D. Isaacson, who, for some time, has conducted the Family Music Page of the New York Evening Globe, and whose presiding genius is responsible for the 1,000 free concerts for the people of New York, given at the Metropolitan Opera House with the world's greatest artists as soloists.

"Pioneers in the motion picture world, men who stand at the head of long chains of theatres, and leading orchestral conductors and musicians have already signified their intention of attending the conference and of lending their aid in solving the problems which are retarding the development of motion picture music."

"Those most interested predict as great a success for this compaign and conference as for any previous developments in the music world fostered by Charles D. Isaacson."

Music Editor:

"Answering your inquiry, we have music cues on all our pictures but only have music scores on "Broken Blossoms" and "The Love Flower."—United Artists Corporation.

Music Editor:

In response to your call to the First Annual Motion Picture Musical Conference as proposed to be held in the near future at New York, you may count upon me to heartily answer "Here" at the first roll call for the organization of a much needed permanent institution that should make for greater progress in the motion picture world of music.

The need is great and the time ripe for a big get together of managers, producers and conductors that a closer relationship be established among this great fraternity throughout the land, a keener appreciation of the problems met by each, and ways and means devised which will make their solution easier.

There is a need for more concerted action. Too much in the past has it been an individual struggle of individual managers and orchestra leaders working out their own salvation for their own particular theatre, whereas, if an agency were created for the exchange or dissemination of programs, overtures, special features, etc., that had been used successfully, how much might the abler leaders help the younger, and all profit by the experiences of their fellow workers.

A monthly magazine devoted to this effort might prove very helpful. This is just one of the many needs that the conference might well take up. Personally, at times I have made special trips to New York to get in touch with some of the big fellows there, feeling as many of my fellow directors, the need of getting new ideas and a bigger grasp upon the opportunities for a wider field of uplift and endeavor in our calling.

We need all the inspiration, all the best thought of all those who have directed their best efforts to the development of the great new industry and art to its present place of dignified influence for good if we are to successfully carry forth and develop the highest ideals from the standpoints of good business and fine art.

New demands, new possibilities are before us. We should organize for a bigger success. The conference will help.

Director of Music,

Music Editor:

It is real gratifying to know that some one is really taking an interest in better music for feature photoplays. East Pittsburg is only a small town, but pos sesses a large drawing population, and we are endeavoring to present our programs with the correct musical scores for every feature. Mr. E. H. Shakeley, formerly musical director of the Olympic Theatre, Pittsburg, Penn., is in charge of our music department.

The writer will consider it a great honor to be among those present during the Music Conference and shall look forward with much anticipation to the opportunity of participating in such a splendid undertaking.—J. Howard Lichenstein—The Sedler Theatre, Pittsburg, Pa.

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

I am very much interested in the proposed convention of motion picture musicians to be held in New York, and want to assure you that I will be pleased to indeed do all, whatever my small part may be, in the furthering of music for the films. I do not believe anyone is more able to appreciate how badly the music for pictures generally needs improvement. I have some fourteen houses to take care of and you can readily see just what I am up against in trying to make the various leaders see the advantage of some serious thought and some hard work in order to make the picture more interesting and more saleable.

I want to say also that I think your idea of stories with the music an exceptionally good one, and one that will have a great deal to do with the making of good music, popular music.

I will be in New York for the convention without fail.—Bert Hallowell—Musical Director, Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Mr. Isaacson:

Relative to your article on "Acoustics" in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of October 30, 1920.

In a subject so broad and far reaching, your article might be summed up into a series of "DONT'S" and with one or two exceptions, a safe guide to follow; and if followed, productive of better acoustical fundamentals in theatres.

May I be allowed a correction? If memory serves rightly, the City College of New York City, was designed by Geo. B. Post and Sons, and not by Stanford White. In either case the fault is not theirs, but in those responsible for the employment of architects without due thought being given to their qualifications for properly handling the acoustical problem, and while both firms rank highest in their profession, it would have been safer to have employed an additional associate expert on acoustics. That monument of gorgeousness and architecture, the present Century Theatre at Columbus Circle, is still more virile proof that money alone will not buy proper acoustical perfection. As you possibly recall, wires were tried and finally a large canopy was dropped from the ceiling over the auditorium in an attempt to make a correction, thereby concealing entirely from view a most elaborate and beautifully designed ceiling.

I cannot agree with you that the mere finding of the trouble and then correcting it will suffice. The original trouble is too often caused by the improper use of materials in the general construction caused by an unwise attempt to save money on construction, consequently precluding any possibility of ever making a full correction. The only sure way, is to employ at the outset, those who are familiar with the pitfalls, and whose experience and training are centered in the design of theatres.

I agree with you most thoroughly that there is nothing uncanny about acoustics; but it is uncanny the way the average theatre owner will entrust his theatre problems to any architect regardless of the latter's experience. There are times of course when a most worthy and well qualified architect must make his knowledge subservient to the wishes of the theatre owner, but that is the exception and not the rule.

As a general rule, the acoustic properties of an auditorium are dependent upon nothing more mysterious than its shape, size, materials and contents. Usually the architect has control over all these factors except size and since he should know accurate methods for computing loudness and distinction, no excuse is plausible for bad results. Girders and beams projecting below the ceiling, or under the balcony; odd shaped ceiling domes and improper handling of the sounding board are a few faults to be avoided. By all means keep fan grilles out of the sounding board and proscenium arch. There is a certain type of ventilating system that has given excellent results, where it is necessary to blow the air in from the ceiling, and it is in the use of this system particularly that grilles in the sounding board and proscenium arch should be avoided. Fans properly adjusted that are in the roof space, should not ordinarily interfere with the acoustics, but care must be taken that they be of the noiseless type.

A correction of faulty acoustics can be accomplished at times by the application of softening materials, such as specially prepared felt applied in an intelligent manner, but care must be taken not to overuse this material, for too much would be as bad as none at all. Carpets on the floor will always help and the free use of draperies and seat covers will at other times give a decided improvement. Each case, however, requires individual study and no fixed rule can govern.

In the particular problem you mention, I would suggest the entire ceiling be furred down to a level surface below the beams with a treatment of acoustical felt such as made by the Johns-Manville Co.

Concluding, I can but refer to my article recently published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS to substantiate what is contained herein. Start out right by employing the right architect to design the theatre, those in whom entire confidence can be placed, so that you will feel assured that when the theatre is opened, not only acoustics, but sight and projection will be correct, and that a further outlay of money to correct that which you have already paid for, will not be necessary.—Henry Prince, Benjamin & Prince, Dallas, Texas.

Dear Sir:

I have read and am reading all your articles with great interest. I recently wrote and published in one of our local dailies an article entitled "The Evolution of the Picture Player," and I strive always to give the best I know. In your position and with your experience you can tell me something I should very much like to know and that is—do the best picture players depend solely upon improvisation? I improvise some but try to work out a regular program for each picture. Will you tell me also where I could procure some names of selections for melodramatic music? I should think some of these organists with vast repertoires could publish a book of references to music to aid the inexperienced player.—J. Butler, Organist—Rialto Theatre, Medford, Oregon.

Music Editor:

Your conference idea is a great and timely thought. The phase of "Music in the Movies" that interests me principally is this: Through the development of the symphony orchestra in the moving picture houses we may some day arrive at the realization of a hope that many of us cherish—the hope of seeing a symphony orchestra of Americans presided over by a conductor equally American. My experience as a music critic has led me to the conclusion that the greatest artists are the American artists, and I wish with all my heart that your conference might conclude to "give the American orchestra musician a chance first."—Philip Gordon, Director of Music, Newark, N. J.

Music Editor:

I am the owner of the Star Theatre, of this city, population 3,400, seating capacity 275, width of theatre 22 ft., length 100 ft., using piano; local talent hard to get and only fair. Would like to install automatic musical device at a reasonable cost. What instrument would you advise? Thanking you in advance for your trouble.—W. B. Hitchcock, Star Theatre, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

Music Editor:

We have the first run of all William Fox pictures in this city. What we have been receiving from them are not music cues but tempo cues. In your department we notice cues of music pictures. Do you have such cues for the William Fox Pictures, regular program and specials?

We are to use "While New York Sleeps," November 21st. The week of November 7th we used "The Plunger," featuring George Walsh, and "Her Honor the Mayor," the week of November 14th we used "Girl of My Heart" and "The Challenge of the Law," all four of these being William Fox pictures.

Kindly let me know as to music cues on these pictures.—Rialto Theatre, Dayton, Ohio.

Music Editor:

I am operating this theatre in a very small town of less than 1,200 and am having a great deal of trouble with musicians, as you will see I cannot afford to pay top salary to only one musician and as to more than to work in the evening only, I cannot keep very long as they drift around a lot, and the most of them have not had any experience playing pictures and so are disqualified. I have now a fairly good pianist, and I have been considering buying a small mechanical orchestrian such as a Wurlitzer or Photoplayer, etc., have also considered a small pipe organ, but as the investment means about $3,000 or more, I hesitate. Now I have a small house seating 315, remodeled store, 24 ft. x 90 ft. inside, incline floor, ceiling at rear 14 ft in front about 21 ft. I wish to ask if it would be advisable to purchase an instrument as mentioned. I am partial towards Wurlitzer, price $2,850 F. O. B. Los Angeles, Calif.

Any advice you could give me that will better my musical program will be highly appreciated, and if there is any charges for such advise. Am ready to pay. —Henry E. Lang, Kingman, Ariz.

Music Editor:

I am enclosing a little booklet with comments on my lectures as I thought that the "dope" might help in your campaign for the music addition to movies—I mean that some of this boost might make people think that my belief in music, etc., meant something.

It occurs to me that Professor Louis Leaky, Room 805 Carnegie Hall, might be of real service in your movement since he makes it a business to cultivate all musicians and artists and at his loiterers' meetings and also in his French Salon there are always a number of well known musicians. Use my name in asking him to help the cause.

Mrs. Jackson Edwards, who has recently come to New York and was formerly a great worker for music in Pittsburgh circles might be of help. Her address is 745 Riverside Drive.

I think that Mrs. Oscar Hammerstein (if you have not already invited her) would help in this big cause. She seems to be so eager to give more music to New Yorkers.

Have you asked Mr. Adolph Lewisohn's cooperation? He wants to help humanity and if given a few words of publicity, generally opens his purse strings.

With every good wish.—M. Stoner, New York.

From Leading Baltimore Critic

Your information about the coming conference on Music and Motion Pictures has given me much to reflect upon, and I must congratulate you for your courage in steering the movement to fruition. Here's hoping that your organization will prove epoch making in musical enterprise.

I've been bored beyond endurance by the awful mess served as the so-called musical accompaniment of many otherwise interesting films. Surely a standardized effort will result in eliminating many crude abominations and, I believe, with careful scrutiny and perhaps through ambitious editing the matter of musical garb of a picture may be kept within the realm of good taste, both appealing to the general as well as not offending the more cultured musical mind. Such ideal conditions will surely be beneficial to our young generation, and also give the emotional stimuli to the host of "Movie Lovers."

I might press upon your valuable time by briefly stating our local conditions in movie music. Our two principal houses employ only small orchestra combinations, far from adequate, but at least an attempt is made to use a cue sheet with some little attention to synchronizing effectiveness. However, the point that I would object to in the general tone of our local movie music is the inclination to "mawkish slush." Doubtless this may be traced to the demands of the management which underestimates the character of its clientele or may be a slight misjudgment on the part of the orchestra leaders. But it does seem abortive to have gems of the classics mauled over by a vibrating fiddler, or by unnecessary pommelling of Indian drums and poorly tuned timpani, or with the asthmatic gargle of muted trumpet, and the terrible wiggle of that dread the Tremolo or Vox Humana on the organ. It seems to me that just these little details of bad taste are deplorable and might prove the canker that will eat away the vitality of the media for real development. That there is art value and also simple appeal possible cannot be gainsaid. Only through a vigorous propaganda, which must reach the smaller centres and not be directed to the Metropolis alone can the field of motion picture grow to a verdant future.

I have purposely gone into an account of my impressions of our local conditions, for if your organization is to prove efficient it will doubtless need information from all angles, therefore my personal views will be accepted in good form, I hope.

If I can assist you in any way from this point, though far afield, I shall gladly give your questions attention.

Again wishing your organization success and encouraging you to continue your efforts and personal direction, from which doubtless there will arise a better condition, I am,

FRANZ C. BORNSCHEIN,
Baltimore, Md.

Editor News:

As regards musical acts and numbers, the writer can forsee the coming necessity for this, providing that the talent can be superior enough to satisfy as a whole the different localities and not leave a taste in the patron's mind of vaudeville. The farther the first-class picture house keeps away from the idea of vaudeville and maintains a high class clientele, the surer he will find the admission prices of this type of house will always exceed the general run of vaudeville houses.

Swinnen Makes Organ Arrangements

Firmen Swinnen is the author of a series of twelve organ transcriptions for pianists and organists in theatres. Mr. Swinnen has made a national reputation for his work as organist at the Rialto theatre, New York, where he has had occasion to improvise and score hundreds of films. His twelve selections (published by G. Schirmer's, N. Y.) cover every possible mood and emotion.

The ROBERT-MORTON

The dominant idea guiding the building of the Robert-Morton is ever to maintain a standard—a standard of saneness and serviceability in organ construction ¶How well the exhibitor has favored this policy is best indicated by the number of satisfied owners and the reputation that the Robert-Morton enjoys among organists

C. B. Hoy of the Hoy Reporting Serice, was a Buffalo visitor last week. He ound managers of the various exchanges
d few complaints on their hands.

Charlie Nickum expects to open his ew Gem theatre in Olean during the olidays. The theatre, which is located
First and State streets, has a seating apacity of 500. B. U. Taylor of Olean erecting the structure.

The audience in the Temple theatre, lbion, N. Y., was given a scare on the vening of November 15 when the Jack empsey serial which was being proected caught fire. The house was soon mptied. The fire department soon put t the blaze, which was confined to the ooth. The operator had a narrow es-
ape. Property loss was small.

Howard Brink of the Robertson-Cole change conferred with Rochester exbitors last week on "Kismet," and on turning to Buffalo announced that he pected to close a contract soon for a ng run in the Flower City. Mr. Brink urneyed to Erie, Pa., Tuesday morng, November 23 to screen the Otis kinner production for northern Penn-lvania exhibitors in the Columbia thea-e in Erie.

Byron Interbitzen of the Pioneer sales
aff and J. L. Cook of the same outfit, ve returned to Buffalo from trips down-ate where they signed up a record num-r of contracts for "The Son of Tarn." Interbitzen closed a number of ookings in Binghamton and Cortland d Cook signed 'em up in Corning.

Ira M. Mosher, former manager of e Palace theatre, Buffalo, was in charge a film entertainment given for the otary club in the Hotel Statler last hursday. He showed Harold Lloyd in Get Out and Get Under," and other bjects.

Frank Davidson, chief operator at the ark-Strand theatre, Buffalo, has acuired the agency for the Powers maine in this part of the state. He will ntinue for the present his duties in e Strand booth.

Harry E. Lotz, manager of the Realart ffice, has reached 94 in his list of franises in the territory and declares he ll hit the 100 mark before next week.
r. Lotz announces that the Palace will ow the special production, "The Fur-ce," for an extended engagement soon.

H. L. Taylor of the Buffalo Theatre
pply company has placed a Motiograph
achine in the Rex theatre, Geneseo,
Y. "Hub" visited Rochester last eek and returned with a big batch of siness.

Art Schmidt, district manager of Unirsal, was in Buffalo three days last eek for conferences with M. A. Chase, cal manager and visits with local exbitors. Mr. Schmidt is interested in e Central Park and Premier theatres
Buffalo.

Ben Fitzer, who has an independent change in the Palace theatre building, uffalo, has closed a contract with the cade theatre in Rochester for the owing of "The Golden Trail." Ben ll soon screen "Madonnas and Men,"
Buffalo exhibitors.

John Sitterly, manager of the Dooley ice is touring Western New York this week, renewing acquaintances with his many exhibitor friends. John screened the second Neal Hart production, "Sky Fire," last week and received many favorable comments. George Blackman, sales manager for Dooley, was in Buffalo last week.

NEW ORLEANS

Shall it be a motion picture house or a delicatessen? That's the question a New Orleans court has to decide. Peter Fabacher, owner and manager of the Electric theatre, 934-36 Canal street, last week filed suit for possession of the house against Theodore Grunewald, who wants to make the place a delicatessen.

The "old" Orpheum, so designated to distinguish it from the new Orpheum which is under construction, has been leased by the Shuberts for 10 years. It it not likely the Orpheum folk will move out this season.

W. J. Pratt, district manager of Atlanta, of the Paramount-Artcraft, and R. D. Burdge, of Atlanta, Southern sales manager for Realart, were in New Orleans last week looking over the new location of their branches here.

C. Jimmie Briant, exchange manager for First National, was host last week to Messrs. Burke and Browne, officials of the Associated First National.

Al Shear, of Sobel, Richards Shear Enterprises, is back at his desk after a vacation in Brown's Well, Miss.

The Newcomb theatre, 908 Canal street, caught fire twice in three days last week. The first blaze destroyed 500 feet of film, according to the police, and 10 feet according to Frederick Pearce, owner of the house. The second fire did about $300 damage to the projector and burned $100 worth of film. Both blazes were caused by carelessness of operators, said Mr. Pearce.

About a year ago Motion Picture News published a short item from New Orleans about the invention by a New Orleans man of a system of designating by electric lights on a board in the lobby of a theatre just what seats were vacant so patrons could find a seat in the dark. It is stated to be the same system that is being installed by the Rivoli of New York. W. L. Guerin is the inventor.

ATLANTA

The formal opening of the Maxime theatre, in Crosswell, Ga., took place last week, when the theatre played to capacity business with "The Miracle Man." The theatre seats 650 people.

The Princess theatre, Florence, Ala., with a capitalization of $25,000, of which $10,000 is paid in, has filed notice of incorporation with the Alabama State Secretary. Louis Rosenbaum heads the list of incorporators, and they intend to build other theatres in the near future.

The Princess theatre in Oskaloosa, La., recently opened, following repairs and remodeling. The Princess is managed by Mr. W. I. Neagle.

J. C. Felsonthal, owner of the Marlowe theatre in Jackson, Tenn., is now considering plans for the remodeling and enlarging of his theatre, at which time he will install modern equipment throughout.

A motion picture theatre will be built in Richmond, Va., on the east side of Second street, between Marshall and Clay streets, at a cost of $45,000. The People's Amusement Company are the builders.

The Saenger Amusement Co. will soon begin construction on their new theatre building at Monroe, La. This contract has been awarded the Underwood Construction Company, of New Orleans.

Paul Phillips, who used to travel the roads for Robertson-Cole, has returned to the exhibiting game, and opened his new theatre—the Wilson—in Wilson, N. C., last week, reporting a capacity business. He reports that the outlook for business was never better, but that he will have to keep hustling—which will be no hardship for Paul!

The new Lenox theatre, in Augusta, Ga., will be opened to the colored people of that district within the next two or three weeks. The ambition of the management is to make it the best colored theatre in the South.

The newest Gulfport, Miss., house to open is the Strand, which opened last week to capacity business with Norma Talmadge in "Yes or No."

The Casino theatre in Lakeland, Fla., is to have a complete remodeling, under the management of H. B. Carter. The present plans are to spend about $15,000 on these changes.

E. W. Holt, formerly assistant manager for Southeastern Pictures Corporation, Atlanta, has succeeded Louis S. Collier as manager for the Atlanta office of Pearce Films.

Manager Chase of the Parlor theatre, Key West, Fla., is increasing the seating capacity of his house to about 800.

C. A. McCrea has bought the Liberty theatre from G. B. Hendrickson. The Liberty theatre is in Darlington, S. C.

The Buffalo Mills, three miles out from Union, S. C., has purchased two new Powers projectors, which completes their splendid auditorium, where movies are given for the employees on certain nights of the week. There is no entertainment nearer than Union, for these employees and they welcome the movie shows with joy.

The New Lyric, Huntsville, Ala., opened early in October and is enjoying a run of excellent business. The house is under the management of C. A. Crute.

Mr. Edenfield, manager of the Dreamland, the only independent house in Augusta, has purchased a complete producing outfit, and his activities are being watched with interest by his friends. (He hasn't any enemies.)

F. Skeen of Biscoe, N. C., has recently opened a theatre there. The town is a very small one, and hard to find on the map—but it is in the center of a rich farming section and the only theatre in miles. So Mr. Skeen seems justified in believing that his present good business will continue.

Marion, N. C., also boasts a new theatre—"The Oasis." The house is a beautiful one and very up-to-date. Marion "fans" insist it is five years ahead of other theatres in similar towns in the territory.

L. D. Miller has opened a new theatre the Rex—at Rutherfordton, N. C.

The Chesnee Cotton Mills of Chesnee, S. C., has installed projectors and now runs selected movie programs several nights each week. W. C. Sibley is the manager.

The Clinton Manufacturing Co., of Clifton, S. C., also boasts a new theatre for the benefit of their employees. L. O. Brown, superintendent of the mill, is now acting as manager.

PORTLAND, ORE.

New sales methods are being injected in Portland's film row by John Brill, who came out two weeks ago from the New York city office to assume general charge of the Portland Universal exchange. Press books given by film manufacturers some months ago began the practice of including a rhymed review for possible use in newspaper copy. Comes Mr. Brill now with a rhymed letter which he sent last week to every exhibitor in the state of Oregon. The poetry, however, was not for the public but primarily to sell film to the exhibitors—merely a new way of attracting their attention.

"The Prohibition Monk" is responsible for Mr. Brill's poetic outburst. As a matter of fact, this two-reel comedy featuring the ape, Joe Martin, has already been shown in Portland at the People's theatre for which C. S. Jensen has purchased the entire lot of this series. The third of the series is expected in Portland the latter part of the month.

The recent election in Vancouver, Wash., gave to John Kiggins, owner of the U. S. A. theatre in that city, the mayorship by a plurality of two to one. Mr. Kiggins was in Portland and left on film row his only printed propaganda which he had issued during the campaign. It was an eight-page leaflet, the only writing appearing on the cover was: "What I Have to Say About My Political Opponents."

A similar method of conducting the Portland campaign in the recent strike issues was used with success. At no time during the four months of the strike was any theatre owner or employee quoted as saying derogatory or personal remarks about union musicians, operators and officers.

The Portland police quartet had charge of the vocal musical numbers at the Liberty theatre recently. The quartet was organized by Chief of Police Jenkins who is a profound believer in cooperation among his men. It has appeared at many civic gatherings gratis, and the money made for appearing five times daily for one week at the Liberty will go into the general quartet funds. The quartet is composed of R. L. Crane, Ralph Gowanlock, Ed Lawson and George Johnson.

William Wood, "Nursemaid" to the five Jensen and Von Herberg orchestral organs, last week completed an attachment for a marimba-xylophone to be added to the Columbia theatre. Mr. Wood purchased the marimba-xylophone for $375 and then personally built the attachment with its minute electrical wiring which gives not only the single but reiterating tones. As the marimba-xylophone now stands it is valued at nearly $1,500, although aside from the time and labor represented by Mr. Wood's efforts, it has cost approximately $800.

Bert Lytell, one of the screen stars whom Portland exhibitors declare to have excellent drawing power—the best possible proof of popularity—is scheduled to arrive in Portland sometime during this month, according to William Ely, manager of the Hippodrome theatre. Mr. Ely received word last week that Mr. Lytell has already started on a tour of the Loew theatres in Greater New York. His tour completed in that city, he will start a continental tour of the Loew string which includes the Portland Hippodrome. Announcement was made last month by Mr. Ely that all future Metro productions would come to the Hippodrome for their Portland first runs.

An extra picture program was given at the Hippodrome theatre on Armistice Day. The majority of houses ran past 11 p. m. on both election and Armistice nights.

DETROIT

Al Mertz has been appointed assistant manager of the Universal Film exchange. Mr. Mertz has been the exchange booker for the past three years.

David Mundstock, in co-operation with W. S. Butterfield, has purchased the Michigan rights to "Up in Mary's Attic," and it will be distributed by the Strand Film Co., which Mr. Mundstock controls. Frank Drew, well known local salesman and exchange manager, will have charge of the Strand exchange.

George Custer has been sales manager of the feature departmet in the Pathe exchange.

Warning has been issued by the city fire marshal to theatre owners over violations of the standing room ordinance which have been repeatedly vio'ated by numerous houses. Managers of the New Home and Fredo theatres were recently brought into court.

H. White, of the Beechwood theatre, has left to spend the winter at Lake Worth, Fla.

M. W. McGee, former manager of the Majestic theatre, when it was the leading photoplay house in the city and who, in recent years, has been in charge of one of the big amusement parks, it is rumored, will take over one of the big downtown houses in a few days.

FON DU LAC

E. C. Marshall of Oakfield, Wis., and W. Burkholder of Waupun, Wis., have leased the new Liberty Hall at Oakfield, erected by the citizeus of that place and the town of Oakfield and recently dedicated to the men who entered service from that community, and have converted it into a modern moving picture house to be used as such two nights in the week—Saturdays and Sundays. Mr. Marshall is managing the enterprise which was launched on Nov. 6 with Marguerite Clark in "Luck in Pawns," playing to excellent business. As a

Index to Complete Plan Book and EXHIBITORS' BOX OFFICE REPORTS

EDITOR'S NOTE—Exhibitors will find here a complete list of all feature pictures for the last eighteen weeks arranged alphabetically as an index to The Complete Plan Book for this period, naming the picture, the producer, the star, the release date, and designating the issue of Motion Picture News which contained the original review.

The following also contains our reviewer's opinion encompased in a brief single line and gives the comments of exhibitors who have shown the picture and forwarded their opinions. And we also publish a final line fairly summarizing a consensus of all opinions received on each picture. As many of the exhibitors do not comment on every picture (merely checking it Big, Average or Poor), we arrive at the consensus not only by the actual comments made and published, but are also guided by the reports from exhibitors who have made no actual comments, but have merely checked the box office value of the picture.

All the pictures mentioned are five-reel features, unless marked otherwise. Serials are reviewed also. At the conclusion of this department will be found the "Flash-Backs," being comments on films released prior to August 4, 1920.

PICTURE — BRAND — STAR — RELEASED — PLAN BOOK

ADORABLE SAVAGE, THE (UNIVERSAL) EDITH ROBERTS.....AUG. 14
"Colorful picture on a time-worn formula."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Several parts of this picture are unusual but the public does not seem to get enthusiastic about the local color and scenery of this feature. Fair receipts."

ALWAYS AUDACIOUS (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WALLACE REID .....NOV. 20
"Clever twists make interesting crook story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is a sure-fire box office attraction. Audiences seemed well pleased." "Story little impossible but business was big. Some fine double exposures in this and picture one of his best." "An entertaining feature which drew well." "Great in story and in production. Wally Reid always has good following and great stories. Went over big."

ARABIAN KNIGHT, AN (HAWORTH-ROBERTSON-COLE) SESSUE HAYAKAWA.....AUG. 28
"Japanese star versatile in good production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture interested them and it did big business for three days."

ARE ALL MEN ALIKE? (METRO) MAY ALLISON.....NOV. 6
"Rather inconsequental for feature length."—M. P. News.

BEGGAR IN PURPLE, A (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST .....NOV. 13
"Good production given average story."—M. P. News.

BEHOLD MY WIFE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST..OCT. 23
"Novel story given rich production."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very entertaining picture. Crowded my house every showing. Box-office results very good." "Good picture but nothing extraordinary and did average business for one week." "Very good picture. Business so good held over for second week." "Opened to splendid business and held up so well it was continued for a second week." "Unusually entertaining, and box-office testified to the fact that it was well liked."
Consensus—"Good picture, good puller."

BEWARE OF THE BRIDE (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....OCT. 30
"This would look better as a two-reel slapstick."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Favorably received and good program picture. Average business three days."

BIG HAPPINESS (ROBERTSON-COLE) DUSTIN FARNUM.....SEPT. 11
"Fair entertainment in Dustin Farnum's latest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Only average picture but drew fairly well." "This picture contains a good story with plenty of pep. The audience was pleased and receipts were very gratifying." "The poorest box-office picture I've played in years. Farnum well liked—but the people who liked him want him in Westerns and plenty of action. The foreign locale of this confused them. Lost money steadily all week."

BLACKMAIL (METRO) VIOLA DANA.....OCT. 16
"Viola Dana gives color to familiar story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Interesting. Instructive as well. Favorably commented upon. Average business."

BLUE STREAK McCOY (UNIVERSAL) HARRY CAREY.....AUG. 7
"Enjoyable western melodrama with star in likable role."—M. P. News.

BODY AND SOUL (METRO) ALICE LAKE.....OCT. 23
"Story of dual personality fairly interesting."—M. P. News.

BRANDED WOMAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL).....SEPT. 18
"Plenty of melodramatic fireworks in this sob-sister story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Picture not up to the previous high standard of the star, Norma Talmadge." "Very big business, but picture criticised for slow action." "A slow-moving affair which failed to create any excitement, although Norma Talmadge performs in her usual excellent manner. A cut-back showing a Roman slave market was unnecessary and was plainly lugged in for its sensual appeal." "Fair picture which brought but average business."

BRANDING IRON, THE (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 23
"Story of primitive passions is rather overdone."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An entertaining production. Business good during run." "Splendid business attraction. Norma Talmadge always stands them up. Picture well produced and acted." "Norma Talmadge pictures continue popular. We did little better than average business."

BROADWAY BUBBLE, THE (VITAGRAPH) CORINNE GRIFFITH .....NOV. 27
"Corinne Griffith does excellent work in dual role."—M. P. News.
"Did better than average business at two first-run houses simultaneously. Just melodramatic enough to attract, and not too emotional, so as to offend."

BRUTE MASTER, THE (HODKINSON) HOBART BOSWORTH....NOV. 6
"Hobart Bosworth scores in vigorous story of the sea."—M. P. News.

CHALLENGE OF THE LAW, THE (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL....OCT. 23
"Russell at his best; a real entertaining drama."—M. P. News.

CHORUS GIRL'S ROMANCE, THE (METRO-SPECIAL) VIOLA DANA .....AUG. 21
"The best light comedy of the year."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew well all week. Excellent picture. Viola Dana is an especial favorite." "Fair picture. Drew average audience." "Fair picture to average business." "Picture fair; business no better." "Good picture. Lots of interesting situations well done by star and capable company. Opened to nice business and held public interest all week." "Big box-office attraction, a good title, pleasing picture and a well liked star who does a good 'shimmy'." "Two days to big and average business." "Everyone voted this the best Dana picture they had ever seen." "This picture certainly went over big. A pleasing story, well liked by my audiences." "A fine picture, and one which pleased my audiences, bringing good business."

CIVILIAN CLOTHES (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Entertaining picture with Meighan as a star."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Has met with much favor. Good money maker." "Held up splendidly on third week run. Picture has very entertaining qualities." "Picture went very well. Patrons seem much pleased. Box office returns were very good." "A bully fine picture, with popular plot. Going like wild fire here and getting the best press notices." "Seven days to capacity. Picture well liked but those who saw the stage play not satisfied." "This is a good production as far as entertainment goes but it brought only average business." "Went over big. Meighan is well liked in this city, and his vehicle lost none of its effect in the transposition to the screen."

CLOTHES (METRO) OLIVE TELL.....OCT. 9
"Talky picture made from stage satire."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair picture. Picture drew well for first two days; rest of week mediocre. Average week's receipts." "A good picture which pleased. Average business two days."

CONRAD IN QUEST OF HIS YOUTH (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) THOMAS MEIGHAN .....NOV. 20
"Delightful story is enriched on the screen."—M. P. News.

CRADLE OF COURAGE, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) WILLIAM S. HART .....OCT. 9
"Has plenty of action and should please."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Pleasing picture but we had about average business." "Well up to the average of Wm. S. Hart's pictures and should be a good drawing card at all theatres where he is popular. We did excellent business with this picture for one week." "The combination of a popular star and a good picture, and the result is good business." "Out of Hart's line, should be kept in the Western type." "Carried picture seven days. My custom is two changes weekly."

CUMBERLAND ROMANCE, A (REALART PICTURES) MARY MILES MINTER .....AUG. 21
"M. M. Minter's best—a real picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A very good picture which pleased and did good business for one week." "Played it two days to average business." "Did well with this, though Mary Miles Minter's popularity has dropped a bit because of her persistently saccharine roles. This is as good as her best and pleased."

CURTAIN (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....OCT. 16
"Lifelike story suffers from mechanical development."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played to exceptional business. Katherine McDonald appears to be growing more popular." "Katherine MacDonald gave entire satisfaction. Picture well produced. Splendid supporting cast. Business very good." "It's by far the best acting Katherine MacDonald has ever done. People liked it well enough to fill two houses for a week simultaneously. Good entertainment."

DARK LANTERN (REALART) ALICE BRADY.....AUG. 14
"Draggy picture develops to an evident conclusion."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Just an average production. Played it four days to average business." "A good picture to big business for one week." "Patrons did not like this one. Just an average feature to average business for three days." "Very poor production but brought fair business." "Fair picture. The star is the drawing card." "Very poor picture, box-office receipts are terrible." "Alice Brady's performance seemed rather disappointing. Picture ordinary. Poor business one day." "Fair average business one day." "This is a fair picture but the box office receipts were awful."

The Complete Plan Book

Everything the Showman Needs on Every Picture Released

"Isobel; or, The Trail's End"

(George H. Davis-Edwin Carewe Production)

A SCREEN play adapted from a James Oliver Curwood story has never failed to be rich in entertainment values. Of all his documents which have reached the silver sheet none have come to it with the breadth, the humanities, the realities of "Isobel; or, The Trail's End." It is natural in passing judgment upon a new work to forget what has gone before. The picture is so vivid in the mind that the forerunners are more or less forgotten. Still in remembering their good points the latest Curwood outclasses them all.

It strikes us as a better picture than "The River's End" because it is more consistent in theme and characterization. It has a power, a grip, a spiritual note and lifelike dimensions which are caught by the spectator, so much so, that one forgets the lapse of time—forgets the environment and is truly transported to the Hudson Bay district itself. As gripping as its story which builds evenly and surely to powerful climaxes—climaxes which contain twists and surprises and keeps one guessing at the outcome—it is the manner in which it is developed by Edwin Carewe which makes it stand forth so resplendently. He has collected a marvelous array of backgrounds. The snow scenes—the huts and igloos north of 53° or 60°—the painstaking care to compose shots which are absolutely correct—the atmosphere—these are what constitute the ruggedness of this Curwood.

The story is simplicity itself but is handled in such a way as to dispel any anticipation of the denouement. As usual the figure in the uniform of the Royal Mounted is on a man hunt—"to get his man dead or alive." The fugitive and his wife have found sanctuary far to the North in an Eskimo village. And the Policeman learns of the white people there and thinks he has located his man. But there comes a surprise at this point which is one of the most startling and dramatic situations ever conceived. He comes upon the wife hauling a rough box, supposedly containing the remains of her husband. His heart goes out to the woman. But in the morning he discovers the contents empty and the women gone. There is a minor conflict between another of the Mounted and the hero. The latter gives the fugitives their liberty after tracking them down. These scenes are splendidly played by House Peters and Jane Novak, both representing the country in the manner of their vivid and vital portrayals. Eventually Isobel and her husband come into the Policeman's life again—through the medium of their child who has been adopted by his fellow officer. The father dies and the mother's life is nearly spent. In the end she is reunited with the officer who has resigned from the service.

The picture is remarkably lifelike, Mr. Carewe seeing to it that full emphasis is given to the vital touches. Some of the shots are punctuated with Prizma coloring which enhances their beauty. All are rich in picturesque photography. The types are splendid. The picture carries every element which spells entertainment. It has bold, vivid strokes. It is not only Carewe's best picture—it is the best snow picture that any director ever made. The offering is preceded by a Prizma prologue "Way Up Yonder," which is marvelous in its awe-inspiring colors. It is life in the frozen North. James C. Bradford has arranged an appropriate musical setting for the feature, the selections harmonizing with the action. The exhibitor who books this picture is giving his audience a rare treat.—Length 6 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Wet and Warmer"

(Lehrman Comedy—First National)

HENRY LEHRMAN has done a first rate job of it in his latest comedy, "Wet and Warmer." It is a sure laugh provoker and carries some incidents which are uproariously funny. The director has taken a hotel, filled it with grotesque comedians and started them running about avoiding water and fire. Albert Ray has installed a Roman bath for his bride but the comic pair use it for a swimming pool while it is empty. The picture moves at its best when Ray puts a hose stream on a fire. The stream is inflammable "hootch" and the fire spreads. Meanwhile a grotesque guest, provoked at the management, telephones that he is leaving. He makes his exit in his night shirt and finds comfort from the flames far up on a ledge overlooking the street.

The fun is real snappy at this point and sends forth a deal of suspense. He leans over to catch the telephone receiver and nearly loses his balance and a stream of water sends him scurrying along the ledge. This is knockabout stuff which certainly gets over because it is developed spontaneously. One may be safe in calling it slapstick of the full grown garden variety. Certain comedians are propelled through space; others land through apertures in the floors of the hotel; the cops and firemen are called out and the finish brings a roof chase. The janitor and the porter and the obnoxious guest are hurried away by the collar. Lehrman has taken a page from Mack Sennett's note-book by introducing titles which are snappy and to the point. There is no forced humor in any department of the offering. "Wet and Warmer" is a sure gloom-chaser.—Length 2 Reels.—LAURENCE REID.

"Women Men Love"

(Bradley—Six Reels)

"WOMEN MEN LOVE," made by the Bradley Feature Photoplay Company of Cleveland, is a domestic drama, not particularly new in theme, but done on such an elaborate scale, and so well acted, as to be lifted from the plane of mediocrity. The acting is satisfactory. The settings are beautiful, the photography is beyond criticism, and the direction shows great care as to detail. The picture entertains all through its six reels. It holds the interest throughout, and never for a moment does it reveal the outcome of the family difficulties until the very end.

It's all about the Hunter family. David Hunter has become rich building beautiful houses. He has built himself a beautiful house, too, but it is only a house. Never has it been a home. Evelyn, his young wife, is gay and frivolous. Her home duties and her maternal obligations she has turned over to her sister Ruth, who lives with the Hunters, while she basks in the flattery of Stephan Dabney and Moira Lampson and loses great sums of money playing bridge. Desperate over her consistent bridge losses, Evelyn turns to Stephan for sympathy. David Hunter happens upon the scene at the moment the sympathy is being administered. His objections to Stephan Dabney as a guest at the Hunter home and Evelyn's insistence that she will not give up Stephan cause a serious rupture.

Divorce proceedings are instigated by Mrs. Hunter, but the strain is too much for her. She suffers a nervous breakdown, and is recalled to life only when her husband forgives her and takes her back again to the house which henceforth will also be a home.

There are side themes, which add to the story—such as the devotion of Ruth to Evelyn and to Evelyn's baby daughter; an attempt to vamp Hunter; a thrilling episode when Hunter is about to strangle Moira, the vampire; lively cabaret scenes, and a short glimpse into the underworld. Except in the beginning, where the action is rather slow, "Women Men Love" moves along easily without any unnecessary padding, and is logical throughout.

The story was written by Charles and Frank Dazey, while Samuel Bradley directed. In the cast are such popular favorites as William Desmond, Marguerite Marsh, Martha Mansfield and Denton Vane. They all give adequate performances.—ELSIE LOEB, Cleveland, Ohio.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

GREAT REDEEMER, THE (TOURNEUR-METRO) SPECIAL CAST SEPT. 4
"Van Loan contributes another winner."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture but not the kind the public will pay money to see. It's too religious. Screen is for entertainment, not for preachment. Fair business, but not enough to justify longer than one week run." "The picture was well received for the entire week. The patrons say there is "just enough" religion in the picture." "Religious picture. Fair business."

GUILTY OF LOVE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOROTHY DALTON....OCT. 9
"Star gives splendid portrayal of mis-led girl."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is an average picture but drew more than usual business." "Picture fairly popular. Dorothy Dalton very well carries off her emotional role." "Good picture which brought about the usual audiences." "Pleased some classes while some resented it."

HAIRPINS (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ENID BENNETT...AUG. 14
"Sullivan has taken a familiar idea and made it throb with lifelike touches."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A pleasing production to average business for one day." "Seemed to please. Week's audiences were about the average. Picture was fair." "Fine picture that is being thoroughly appreciated. It opened to nice business which grew daily, indicating that the public likes this type of entertainment." "Good picture. Business about usual." "Good picture but business about as usual."

HALF A CHANCE (JESSE D. HAMPTON-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST).OCT. 30
"Well acted and directed, but development suffers."—M. P. News.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER (MAYER-FIRST NATIONAL) ANITA STEWART....OCT. 30
"Favorite formula given rich production."—M. P. News.

Exhibitor Comment—"Fine picture that pleased all. Average business one day."

HELD BY THE ENEMY (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) SPECIAL CAST....OCT. 9
"Civil war romance looks good as a picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture. Fair business." "Business exceptionally good. Surprisingly large crowds. Good picture, well liked, surrounded by attractive program." "A beautiful picture but not a box-office puller. Got through a week's run by the skin of the teeth. "One of the best Civil War stories I've ever played. Crowded houses for the entire run, and everybody liked it. From a box-office standpoint it was a splendid attraction and business was great."

HELD IN TRUST (LOEW-METRO SPECIAL) MAY ALLISON.....AUG. 21
"Incongruity and sadness mars entertainment value.—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The best picture May Allison has ever appeared in, is the opinion of a manager and of his patrons." "Action well sustained throughout. Fine picture. Doing well." "May Allison getting more popular here. Picture pleased all classes." "Picture has plenty of action and a very remarkable dog in it. Business average." "We found this to be a good picture as regards box office receipts and an entertaining production." "Very good picture and box-office registered a little better than average for two days."

HELP WANTED—MALE (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET....OCT. 2
"Too light and vapid for a five-reeler."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture to average business for one week." "This is an average production which brought usual business." "A good picture to poor business one day."
Consensus—"Average picture, average puller."

HER HONOR THE MAYOR (FOX) EILEEN PERCY.....SEPT. 4
"Impossible story overacted and hardly entertaining."—M. P. News.

HER UNWILLING HUSBAND (HAMPTON-PATHE) BLANCHE SWEET....NOV. 27
"Good production given average story."—M. P. News.

HERITAGE (W. L. ROUBERT PRODUCTION-STATE RIGHTS) MATTY ROUBERT....AUG. 28
"Worth a trial on strength of title."—M. P. News.

HITCHIN' POSTS (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO.....SEPT. 4
"Colorful story and splendid cooperation make praiseworthy picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A picture that would appeal to any audience. The people in this city like the Mayo productions."

HOMESPUN FOLKS (INCE-ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) SPECIAL CAST....SEPT. 11
"Rural drama is interesting despite a theatrical touch."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good audience picture. Broke no records but did good average business for three days." "Ordinary photoplay. Not a bit exciting at any point. Much too tame for the general run of picture patrons." "Entertaining picture which drew more than usual patronage." "A very good picture. Filled house entire week." "An average picture in all ways. Pleased, but had no box-office draft." "A fine rural drama of the Chas. Ray type but did not draw. Personally classed it as a very good picture worthy of patronage."

HONEST HUTCH (GOLDWYN) WILL ROGERS.....SEPT. 25
"Rogers scores again in human likeable role."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Wonderfully entertaining picture which the audience seemed to like. Box-office receipts larger than usual." "Great as an entertaining feature and brought a well filled house at each performance." "Lauded by the critics as the best picture of the week." "A good picture but Rogers not popular with the women folks. Poor business two days."

Feature Subjects of Short Length

"The Daughter Pays"

(Select)

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN, who is rapidly establishing herself as one of the most refreshing personalities on the screen, has a splendid role in this screen adaptation of Mrs. Baillie Reynolds' novel. The chief—in fact, one of the very few—faults that can be found with the story is the ending, which leaves the heroine after all her sufferings, still married to the unsympathetic, unlovable Gaunt, who is obviously twenty-two to twenty-five years older than the girl. Gaunt had been the lover of the girl's mother, and had been jilted by that heartless young woman. In after years, becoming wealthy, and seeing the young daughter of his former sweetheart, Gaunt "buys" the girl in marriage, to avenge himself on her for her mother's heartlessness in their youth.

Robert Ellis, who also directed the picture, makes "Gerald Lawson" such an attractive figure of youthful romance—so ideal a mate for "Virginia"—that one cannot prevent a feeling of disappointment when the final scene leaves the girl married to a man old enough to be her father.

The picture-version follows the book in detail, save that the six reels do not effect as genuine a change in the character of Gaunt as the book did; and here is one of the few times where a radical change in the ending of a picture would have been more satisfactory. The ending as it now stands will be a disappointment to nine-tenths of the audiences. Length, six reels.—Reviewed by Pearl Gaddis, Atlanta, Ga.

"Red Foam"

(Select)

THIS is one of the best Select pictures we have seen in a long time. The story, while its main theme is founded on as old a situation as Time itself, has been handled with a refreshing novelty, and the result is an engrossing, interesting and well developed production.

Director Ralph Ince has lost no faint opportunity of making the story a tense one, and his cast, headed by Huntley Gordon, as "Silent Doom" Driscoll, Zena Keefe, as Mrs. Andy Freeman, and Harry Tighe, an erstwhile vaudeville favorite, as Andy Freeman, is excellent. The story, from its very beginning, holds the interest. And it is not until the final reel that the complications are cleared up and a definite reason given for everything.

One pleasing point about the picture is that most of the happenings and complications are suggested, rather than showing them definitely. For instance, Andy Freeman, carrying on a flirtation with Matt Murphy's wife, tells her that he is leaving the next day, for Kansas City. She tells him, with apparent irrelevance, that her people live in St. Louis. She smiles at him—and, a few days later, when an acquaintance asks to be taken home to Matt's for dinner, and to meet Matt's wife, Matt explains that his wife is in St. Louis visiting her folks—and the man happens to mention quite casually that he was in St. Louis a few days ago, and saw Andy Freeman there with his wife—"a good-looking blonde." Whereas Andy's wife is a brunette—but Matt's wife is a blonde. Matt says nothing—but leaves two days later for St. Louis. There are no unnecessary scenes of Andy Freeman meeting the wife in St. Louis, or of their going away together—the whole thing is laid clear in a half dozen casual sentences. The whole thing is excellent, and will please audiences anywhere. There's plenty of action and excitement in the last reel to please the most rapid, too. Length, seven reels.—Reviewed by Pearl Gaddis, Atlanta, Ga.

"Velvet Fingers"

(Seitz-Pathe Serial—15 Episodes)

WELL! George B. Seitz is at it again. The champion long distance and short dash serial writer, director, and actor has gotten off to an excellent start with "Velvet Fingers." The versatile impresario has only taken care of the direction and interpretation here, leaving the story to Bertram Millhauser. It is the crook type of serial which means that the protagonist is skilful with the mask or dark lantern or jimmy or dynamite or velvet fingers The picture is offered to the public as an Arsene Lupin serial with a Sherlock Holmes twist. And this looks like a first rate definition. The plot is woven around a smooth second-story man, a gentlemanly Raffles, whose object is to collect jewels and valuables at the expense of the owners and engage in a battle of wits with a criminologist.

The first three episodes are very effective in planting Velvet as a very resourceful figure—a man who makes a complete goat out of his opponent. There is considerable suspense, as there should be with a serial. The picture gives evidence of packing quite a healthy wallop in the shape of snappy action. Mr. Seitz has directed himself with caution. He uses good repression and makes quite a dandy in his Raffles garb. The goddess in the machine is played by Marguerite Courtot, while others in the cast are Harry Semels, Lucille Lennox and Joe Cuny. The picture is well staged and photographed and should prove to be a humdinger. —LAURENCE REID.

"The Huntsman"

(Clyde Cook Comedy—Two Reels—Fox)

WHILE "The Huntsman" does not quite equal "Kiss Me Quick," Clyde Cook's first picture, it is a good bet for any house. The serious faced, rubber jointed comedian continues his usual tactics of bending himself in two and doing his loose limbed dancing.

The first part of the picture is not equal to the latter half. Cook, after varied incidents, finds himself mistaken for a French count. He attends the fox hunt. Mounted on a hairy and round bellied steed, he has some difficulty in keeping up with the hunt. This horse refuses to jump over the stone wall. He kicks them down with his back legs first and leisurely steps over them. The fox is finally cornered in a hollow log. After considerable time, Cook catches an animal, only it turns out to be a skunk instead of a fox. The picture ends when the real count appears and Cook is exposed. In spots the picture is as funny as possible. J. S. Blystone directed.—MATTHEW A. TAYLOR.

Twelve Plan Book Reviews of the Latest Features in this Issue

"Swat the Landlord"

(Chester-Outing)

ONE of the most interesting one-reelers we have seen in a long time. It deals with Chinese life upon the rivers and brings the observer into close proximity with these peculiar people.

The schoolboy and his teacher have read of the wonderful Chinese boatmen, the construction of their boats and the methods of operating them, but neither one could visualize them as they really are without the aid of the moving picture camera.

"Swat the Landlord" is compact with scenes showing the boatmen and their women and children in their daily pursuits.

When they are not handling the oars in which the children take a hand, beginning at the early age of four, they are doing various other stunts too numerous to mention.

An interesting moment shows the way some of the larger boats are operated. These junkets are large enough to be operated by steam power. They are easily handled, however, when all hands turn out, men. women and children, and with the aid of their strong legs work the paddles in standing formation a la bicycle. Great exercise.

The reel also shows the methods of raising and caring for ducks which they breed in thousands upon the waters.—FRANK LEONARD.

"Wilderness Friends"

(Educational)

THIS one-reeler was produced by the Conservation commission of the state of New York in co-operation with Educational Films.

Birds and animals in their native haunts are shown here in a most interesting manner. The cameraman has secured some wonderful close-ups of the loon and partridge in their wild state and then shifts to the moose, deer, mink, bear and raccoon.

One of the most remarkable scenes pictures the moose swimming the lake with the cameraman in hot pursuit. The action is very clear and shows that this animal is a very strong swimmer.

Other scenes show a deer and dog feeding from the hand of an attendant, a raccoon and dog in a good "mix-up", deer, sheep and cows feeding in the same enclosure and the disgusted look upon the deer's face registering his disapproval of the new tenants, and last but not least a cow mothering a young fawn. It is most amusing to see the young fellow obtaining its milk from the cow's udders.

A most interesting short subject and one that will hold its own on any program.—FRANK LEONARD.

IN THE HEART OF A FOOL (DWAN-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 23
"Very good entertainment in this complicated story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good audience picture. Its many leading love themes are apt to be confusing but it opened very big." "Good productions, which brought the crowds."

IT'S A GREAT LIFE (EMINENT AUTHORS-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"Best ever if you went to boarding school."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fine production which played to good business." "Fine production. Played to good business." "Clever picture which appealed strongly to our patrons. Turned thousand people away Sunday night and did big business for the entire week." "Only liked by those who etnjoy Mary Roberts Rinehart's humor. Business far below normal." "This is a fair pncture, both from the entertaining point of view and the box office receipts."

JACK-KNIFE MAN, THE (VIDOR-FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST ..... AUG. 14
"Human interest story rich in characterization, humor and atmosphere."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fine picture. Exhibitors say so. Critics say so, but the public is slow to appreciate it. So unusual, so different from what is generally seen on the screen. A picture that is ahead of the times. Did only fair both downtown and in neighborhood section."

JAILBIRD, THE (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) DOUGLAS MACLEAN ..... OCT. 9
"Rather obvious, but fairly diverting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Played last week and drew about average crowds. Consensus of opinion was that picture was fair." "Not so good as the McLean-May predecessors. Falls down on story, but acting of this popular pair keeps the interest going until the finish. Did fair business." "They all came—but they were disappointed. In point of business, it did very well. But I don't like to disappoint my people. They expected something as fine and peppy as 'What's Your Husband Doing?' and "Mary's Ankle." MacLean does good work in a typical Charles Ray part—but it was not his sort of role, at all. May very good, also." "Disappointing after seeing '23½ Hours Leave.' Fair business." "Very bad for the star and weak story. Business was poor." "Picture started big, slumped, and then ended big. But on the whole it's a lemon."

JUST PALS (FOX) BUCK JONES ..... NOV. 27
"Jones in new type of story; good entertainment."—M. P. News.

KENTUCKY COLONEL, THE (NATIONAL-HODKINSON) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 25
"Old time favorite makes moss covered picture."—M. P. News.

KISMET (ROBERTSON-COLE) OTIS SKINNER ..... NOV. 6
"Otis Skinner gives superb performance in lavish production."—M. P. News.

LADY ROSE'S DAUGHTER (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) ELSIE FERGUSON ..... SEPT. 11
"Mediocre picture made from best seller."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Story criticized by newspapers. Audiences appeared to like it. Large attendance." "Elsie Ferguson draws certain class, but class is limited. Each of her pictures does just about the same." "Fair business. Story not much, but star carried it over." "Star attracted many, as she has not been out for some time. Picture not one of her best. Fair amount of business." "A good picture to extra big and big business for two days." "A very entertaining picture and brought big crowds to my house."

LAHOMA (EDGAR LEWIS-PATHE) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 4
"A good production from all angles."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Much to my surprise, this one went over well. A very weak picture, with action taking place too far back to be of interest. Costumes hideous, though true to period. They liked this fairly well, but I'd hate to try to play another one like it!"

LAW OF THE YUKON, THE (REALART) SPECIAL CAST ..... OCT. 2
"This picture proves a disappointment."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which drew the usual business."

LEOPARD WOMAN, THE (ASSOCIATED PRODUCERS) ..... OCT. 16
"Melodramatic romance adapted from adventure story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Terrible picture. Awful business. Was not liked at all." "An excellent picture and a good box office attraction." "Louise Glaum is one of the favorites here. Her acting pleased the audience and the details of the picture were well carried out. Drew big houses entire week." "Star fairly well liked, and picture did fair business. Was somewhat disappointed in the production, for while lavish the story did not carry." "Good production. Business was about usual."

LIGHT WOMAN, THE (AMERICAN) HELEN JEROME EDDY ..... OCT. 9
"Not above the average."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Helen Jerome Eddy is fair in this picture. Business as usual."

LITTLE GREY MOUSE, THE (FOX) LOUISE LOVELY ..... NOV. 13
"Netw star's first picture mildly interesting."—M. P. News.

LITTLE MISS REBELLION (NEW ART-PARAMOUNT) DOROTHY GISH ..... OCT. 2
"Dorothy Gish scores in story filled with hokum."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This picture affords real entertainment for most any audience and brings hearty laughs from everybody, even from those who claim the situations weren't funny. The photography and cast are very good, direction acceptable. Average business." "Star at her best Picture only fair. Business no better."

LITTLE WANDERER, THE (FOX) SHIRLEY MASON ..... AUG. 28
"Heavier-than-usual story does not suit Shirley Mason."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A good picture which played my house three days to big business."

LOVE FLOWER, THE (GRIFFITH-UNITED ARTISTS) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 4
"Not Griffith's best, but has audience appeal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Beautiful picture. Up to Griffith's high standard and appealed very strongly to audiences. Played two weeks to capacity houses and on account of big business was held over for third week." "Usual Griffith type. Business picked up every day." "A pleasing picture which brought more than normal business." "Eight-day engagement. Very good business. Griffith name still very valuable."

LOVE, HONOR AND OBEY (METRO) SPECIAL CAST ..... SEPT. 11
"Too-familiar story causes interest to lag."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Fair picture. Better houses last two days than when picture opened."

LOVE MADNESS (J. PARKER READ-HODKINSON) LOUISE GLAUM ..... AUG. 21
"Excellent crook story; finely acted and produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew good-sized audiences for seven day run. More sex stuff which appeals to some, but is 'passed by' by most patrons." "A pretty good picture but a poor box-office attraction." 'Name of photoplay drew rather large audiences. Star at her best in her emotional role. Business not bad." "The essence of mellow melodrama. No good as an attraction for those who look for plausibility in a photoplay. Glaum displays her usual intenseness. Not a great picture, but one that will make money wherever patrons like thrills. Played to fair business." "Louise Glaum well liked here and picture presented her in ideal role. Did very good business with it throughout week."

LOVE'S FLAME (FIDELITY PICTURES CO.) THOS. J. CARRIGAN-VIVIENNE OSBORNE ..... OCT. 16
"Story has distinctive appeal."—M. P. News.

MAD LOVE (VICTOR KREMER PRODUCTION) LINA CAVALIERI ..... NOV. 6
"Average production stars Cavalieri."—M. P. News.

MADAME PEACOCK (NAZIMOVA-METRO) NAZIMOVA ..... OCT. 16
"Picture looks artificial through poor direction and acting."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Drew big houses each day. This city has large number of Nazimova 'fans' and these liked the film. The women were exceptionally pleased with it." "Nazimova popular here. House did a normal business only. Lack of punch in previous Nazimova picturets has affected the box office." "The crowds came to see this picture because they are enthusiastic about the star, Nazimova. Drew well for entire week. "Worst Nazimova picture ever produced and shows plainly lack of direction and lack of judgment in picking story. Another picture like this and Nazimova is finished." "One of the best money-getters I've had in a long time. Personally, did not care for the picture, so why worry?"

MADAM X (GOLDWYN) PAULINE FREDERICK ..... OCT. 9
"Tremendous drama faultlessly acted and skillfully produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"This is a fair picture, its only value being the fact that it was made before." "Medium business." "Pauline Frederick's greatest picture and one of the best productions ever offered by Goldwin. Broke house records for box office receipts Sunday and did big business during entire week. Held over for second week's run." "Wonderful production. Pauline Frederick is at her best. This picture went over extra big, making the biggest week in months." "Great picture. Audiences seemed to like this one very much. Big business during run." "The best work Pauline Frederick has ever done. Picture built for acting more than action." "Opened tdo very poor business: competition to circus and Fair as well. But has built steadily up etver since. Business, total, very good. A fine picture—a classic." "Not up to the standard of Nazimova pictures. There are moments in the picture that do not ring true. However, Nazimova followers seemed satisfied." "An average production. Box office returns fair."

MAN WHO DARED, THE (FOX) WILLIAM RUSSELL ..... AUG. 14
"Probably Russell's best work to date."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The picture is fair and brought the usual audiences." "Fair program picture, about the same as usual run of Russell pictures. Average business three days."

MARRIAGE PIT, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO ..... OCT. 16
"Interesting story of big business and feminine pride."—M. P News.

MASTER MIND, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) LIONEL BARRYMORE ..... OCT. 9
"Melodrama of interesting quality."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An artistic picture which played to only average houses." "Barrymore is a great favorite. The picture pleased." "Large audiences. Very good attraction." "Powerful and very high grade picture which did better than average business."

"THE LAST OF THE MOHICANS"

(Tourneur-Asso. Producers)

A Masterpiece of Its Kind

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S first picture for Associated Producers, "The Last of the Mohicans," a visualization of J. Fenimore Cooper's American classic, will certainly earn him a tribute. It cannot be disputed that it is his greatest achievement—a picture which will be talked about as a masterpiece of its kind. He has kept faith with the author's memory by humanizing the characters and visualizing scenes just as they are depicted in the book. We approached this picture rather skeptical fearing that Tourneur would be unable to make anything out of its descriptive passages. But he has taken the salient episodes and dramatized them with stark reality. As for the atmosphere which follows every paragraph and which makes the reader catch the odor of the woods and makes him tense with excitement—well the picture is saturated with it.

We knew Tourneur would not fail with the production—that every detail would be complete—that expert photography and tinting and suggestive backgrounds would be evident throughout. There are moments which are simply breath-taking and the suspense of the book becomes overwhelmingly acute as one follows the fortunes of the white stragglers and the efforts of the faithful Uncas to rescue them from the Hurons in general and Magua in particular. The action moves against marvelous backgrounds—backgrounds which are rather awe-inspiring and give one an eerie feeling. The scene of the Fort William Henry massacre is stark in its realism, and Tourneur has kept faith again. It is not a scene for the tender hearted. Why you can almost catch the sound of the screaming women and children as they are tortured by the blood-thirsty redskins.

This is Cooper to the life. And with true dramatic instinct Tourneur switches to the sentimental side. He shows considerable knowledge of Indian customs. Magua has captured the two white girls. The brunette offers to go with him so that the little Yellow Hair may be spared. And the Delawares permit him to go according to Indian justice. But Uncas, who loves the dark-haired girl and whose affection is reciprocated, follows the trail. And far up on a rocky ledge he fights with the Huron. The girl had threatened to jump off if the vicious redskins approached. But with Indian patience he waited. He pushes the girl to her death and the fight with Uncas is a thriller as the two men grapple and tumble down a mountain side, over rapids where the Mohican is stabbed to death. The Indian burial is poignant and impressive. The acting is close to perfection. Wallace Beery as Magua presents a study in cunning, malicious devilishness that is quite as Cooper painted it. Albert Roscoe is good as Uncas and Theodore Lerch makes a splendid type as Chingachgook. Barbara Bedford's beauty and her acting ability are thoroughly appealing. There is not a false touch in the picture. The Indians have their heads shaven and are costumed correctly. The camera work is exceptionally good. It's the greatest Indian picture ever shown.—Length, 6 reels.—Laurence Reid.

By J. Fenimore Cooper.
Scenario by Robert A. Dillon.
Directed by Maurice Tourneur and Clarence L. Brown.
Photographed by Philip R. DuBois and Charles E. Van Enger.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

An adaptation of J. Fenimore Cooper's immortal tale, "The Last of the Mohicans," will be the feature attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. Readers of the Leather Stocking Tales will be delighted to see this humanization of the story which is called the greatest Indian story ever written. Maurice Tourneur, who directed the feature in collaboration with Clarence L. Brown, certainly deserves all the credit he is certain to receive. The picture shows him a master of detail, a stickler for atmosphere and he has been faithful with the author by touching upon and giving life to the characters and incident.

The silhouettes of the characters—the reproductions of the prints of early Indian days—the struggle of the French against the English and the horrible massacre of the latter forces who were led to believe that their lives would be spared—these are caught bby Mr. Tourneur with emphasis placed upon their beauty or ruggedness or suspense or vivid drama. The scenic investiture is magnificent—the exteriors being enchanting and picturesque. The acting is thoroughly in character. Wallace Beery as the treacherous Magua is superb. Barbara Bedford is splendid as the white girl, while Albert Roscoe as Uncas and Theodore Lerch as Chingachgook are capital.

PROGRAM READER

Positively the treat of the season will be presented at the ———— theatre next ———— when Maurice Tourneur's masterpiece, "The Last of the Mohicans," is shown. This picturization of J. Fenimore Cooper's immortal Indian story is a distinct tribute to his memory. Manager ———— declares it to be the greatest Indian picture ever revealed upon the screen. It is in perfect keeping with the story—the action, incident, backgrounds and acting.

"HELIOTROPE"

(Cosmopolitan-Paramount-Artcraft)

A Different Picture Here

GEORGE D. BAKER'S production of Richard Washburn Child's "Heliotrope" is certain to arouse discussion. In the first place the director deserves credit for what he has left out as much as for what he has incorporated. A peculiarly pathetic tale of a "lifer," the story convinces through its logic and vivid quality. There is no denying that the theme is different from the average stereotyped screen play. It is based upon paternal love and its drama reaches out and touches the spectator through its simplicity, pathos and sentiment.

Here is a "lifer" in prison who is warned by a reformed crook outside that his daughter is about to forfeit her happiness through the blackmailing tactics of her mother. The girl has been raised an orphan in a convent and has no knowledge of her parents. Good fortune smiles upon her when her engagement to a wealthy young man is announced. This information starts the battle of cross purposes—the father, determined to have his freedom and protect his child, the mother, eager to gain riches by blackmail. The prison scenes contain a heart throb—so realistically are they done. The "lifer" is given his freedom by a Governor who is a humanitarian. The incident where the convict attempts to break jail is poignant in its pathos. The girl is everything in his life. And so he has his freedom on the promise that he will keep within the law.

He is called Heliotrope because of his love for the flower. And so he sprays his clothes with the perfume and in due time his wife is warned through the odor that her husband is near. Wherever she goes the perfume follows, and to escape him she forgets her blackmailing plan. Finally, goaded to desperation, she kills the former convict and turns the weapon upon herself. Thus the daughter is spared. The good point about this picture is the manner of its development. Mr. Baker has credited his audience with intelligence. There is never a moment when the girl is aware of the drama being enacted about her. She is entirely unconscious of it. There is no playing up of the love interest. The director has concentrated upon the conflict between the "lifer" and the evil mother. These two characters, with the reformed crook take up the majority of the scenes, the others being subordinated, naturally. Up to the "lifer's" freedom the picture soars with tremendous vitality. It loses some of its force thereafter because the most hasn't been made of the subtleties established by the perfume incidents. Yet its suspense is dominant throughout. Julia Swayne Gordon overacted and destroyed some of its fibre. However, Fred Burton as the "lifter" gives a masterly performance—one charged with keen understanding and feeling. William B. Mack is excellent as the reformed crook. "Heliotrope" is a different picture. It carries power and pathos—reality and tragedy. Its unhappy ending should not destroy patronage.—Length, 7 reels.—Laurence Reid.

THE CAST

Heliotrope Harry Hasdock ..... Fred Burton
Josephine Hasdock ..... Julia Swayne Gordon
"Spike" Foley ..... William B. Mack
Alice Hale ..... Diana Allen
Jimmie Andrews ..... Wilfred Lytell
Governor Mercer ..... William H. Tooker
Warden Michael Pyne ..... Thomas J. Findlay
Mabel Andrews ..... Betty Hilburn
George Andrews ..... Clayton White
Sol Goldman ..... Ben Hendricks

By Richard Washburn Child.
Scenario by George D. Baker.
Directed by George D. Baker.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"Heliotrope" is the name of the special feature which will be presented at the ———— theatre next ————. This is an adaptation of Richard Washburn Child's story which George D. Baker has excellently directed. It concerns the effort of "Heliotrope" Harry Hasdock, a "lifer," to protect his daughter from the blackmailing tactics of her mother. She is unaware of her disgraceful parents because she has been brought up as an orphan.

It happens that she falls in love and marries a wealthy youth, and news reaches "Heliotrope" that her vicious mother intends to make her unhappy. So he obtains a pardon from the Governor on the promise that he will keep within the law. And the ex-"lifer" accomplishes his purpose. He inspires fear in an unseen manner by simply placing heliotrope flowers or the perfume in his wife's room, and she realizes that he has his freedom. In the end, driven to frenzy, she kills him and then turns the revolver upon herself. So the daughter is spared. This picture sends out a heart throb which is caught by the spectator. It is well told and finely acted by Fred Burton, William B. Mack, Thomas J. Findlay, Julia Swayne Gordon and Diana Allen.

PROGRAM READER

An occasion of great interest to patrons of the———— theatre is the announcement that "Heliotrope" will appear next ————. This is a George D. Baker production of Richord Washburn Child's story of the same name. It is a graphic tale of redemption, self-sacrifice, paternal love, mystery, love, sentiment, pathos and thrills. It is a story of a "lifer" who is given a pardon after fifteen years in the penitentiary on his promise that he will keep within the law. He knows that his daughter is in danger and he protects her in a novel manner. To detail the plot would be destroying the interest in this remarkable picture. Come and see for yourself. It is wonderfully directed and acted by a cast that includes Fred Burton, William B. Mack and others. Don't miss the treat of the year.

SUGGESTIONS

You are going to have a big crowd on this picture once you have the first audience in. Word of mouth advertising will certainly draw patronage. It is a picture which is certain to be talked about by every one who sees it.

PICTURE BRAND STAR RELEASED PLAN BOOK

MID-CHANNEL (CARSON-EQUITY) CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG..SEPT 25
"Drama lost amidst family squabbles and omnipresent dream ending."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big picture which drew more than usual business." "A good picture which drew well." "Filled two houses during a simultaneous first run. Young has a steady following, who are enthusiastic supporters. This picture is different from those which have preceded. Star not so much in evidence as in 'Eyes of Youth.' Good support helps to make the picture interesting." "Picture is O. K. but we had poor business." "Mediocre picture not up to Clara Kimball Young's standard as to either drawing qualities or picture. Fair business. They came, but expected something better."

MILESTONES (GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 18
"Atmosphere and scenic stuff, but short on screen drama."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Good picture but brought about the average business."

MODERN SALOME, A (HOPE-HAMPTON-METRO) HOPE HAMPTON (FEB. 1).....JAN. 31
"Satisfied from all angles."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"An average picture which did big business for three days." "My patrons did not like this one at all." "This is a very poor offering, and we had dull business during run."
Consensus—"Average picture, average puller."

MONEY-CHANGERS, THE (BENJ. B. HAMPTON-PATHE).....NOV. 6
"Hectic melodrama may draw in the neighborhood houses."—M. P. News.

NOMADS OF THE NORTH (FIRST NATIONAL) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 9
"Colorful backgrounds and vivid action in this picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good, played to better than average business. Lots of action. The big scenes, especially those in which the animals participated made a big hit." "Not up to some of the other Curwood stories but was liked. Average business."

NORTH WIND'S MALICE, THE (REX BEACH-GOLDWYN) SPECIAL CAST.....OCT. 30
"Probably the best Beach picture yet produced."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Not much. Did fair business."

NOTORIOUS MISS LISLE, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....AUG. 28
"Katherine MacDonald in drama of divorce scandal."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture with well liked star. Played to average business three days." "Good picture bringing more than usual business." "Only fair picture, but is drawing good on account of title and star's reputation for wearing clothes." "This picture was not up to the usual standard of the Katherine MacDonald pictures, although it appeared to draw well." "Very entertaining picture. Went big here, drawing large audiences." "An average picture, which brought usual business."

OCCASIONALLY YOURS (GASNIER-ROBERTSON-COLE) LEW CODY.....OCT. 2
"Male vampire in a mere succession of society scenes."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Entertaining picture. Business about as usual."

OFFICER 666 (GOLDWYN) TOM MOORE.....NOV. 13
"Fair entertainment, but titles earn most of the laughs."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"The combination of Moore and a popular stage success won. Public praised the picture." "Not up to Tom Moore's standard although it did fair business for a week." "Fine picture and box-office returns while not especially great were satisfying." "This feature brought more than usual business and seemed to please my patrons."

OLD FASHIONED BOY, AN (INCE-PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT) CHARLES RAY.....NOV. 13
"Not much to the story, but Ray puts it over."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Although many persons—among them the dramatic critic of a metropolitan newspaper—considered this an excellent farce and an excellent picture, it made no big hit with the 'fans' here. The houses were but average, although the cold weather may have had some bearing on this. Many of Ray's followers did not like the kind of part he played." "Good—but last two Ray pictures not up to Ray standard." "Ray always good and does not fall down on this. Had more than usual business."

ONCE A PLUMBER (UNIVERSAL) LYONS-MORAN.....SEPT. 18
"Average comedy which should interest."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Picture is good throughout. Seemed to please audiences." "Only an average picture. Average business one day."

ONCE TO EVERY WOMAN (HOLUBAR-UNIVERSAL) DOROTHY PHILLIPS.....OCT. 16
"Absorbing story, well produced and acted."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"A fair production bringing average box office returns." "This picture had little comment either favorable or otherwise. Box office returns say production is fair."

OUT OF THE DUST (APEX FILMS) SPECIAL CAST.....SEPT. 11
"Old-time western, well produced and acted."—M. P. News.

PASSION'S PLAYGROUND (FIRST NATIONAL) KATHERINE MACDONALD.....OCT. 16
"An artificial story holds it back."—M. P. News.

PEACEFUL VALLEY (KANE-FIRST NATIONAL) CHARLES RAY..OCT. 23
"Humorous incident, rustic settings and Charles Ray—enough."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Registered a big hit. A real Ray triumph. Audiences applaud enthusiastically." "Very good week. Ray always sure of big business. This considered much better than "45 Minutes from Broadway."

PEDDLER OF LIES, THE (UNIVERSAL) FRANK MAYO (MAR. 1).....JAN. 31
"Good production of mechanical and unreal plot"—M. P. News

PENALTY, THE (GOLDWYN-EMINENT AUTHORS) SPECIAL CAST.....NOV. 27
"Great vehicle for Lon Chaney, but falls short in many ways."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very good picture although some women were shocked at the idea of Lon Chaney with legs cut off." "Very good. Chaney's work is wonderful. Average business four days."

PERFECT WOMAN, THE (FIRST NATIONAL) CONSTANCE TALMADGE.....AUG. 7
"Constance Talmadge has had better ones than this naive and single-track story."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Average picture. Played to average business for two days. Pleased the admirers of Constance Talmadge." "Fine picture. Drew average crowds." "This is a good picture and well liked. Drew more than average crowds." "Good business. Usual Talmadge type. Rather clever." "Picture went very big. Drew well every day and was well done in the opinion of many patrons of the theatre." "Held up good for week run. Audiences liked it. Constance always a surefire attraction at this house." "Consider this the star's best. She is popular here and I played to capacity throughout week. A decided improvement on her late pictures." "It is hard to understand the story and the cold beauty of the star does not help it much. Fair business." "Great picture. Star well liked. Played two days to big business."

PINK TIGHTS (UNIVERSAL) GLADYS WALTON.....SEPT. 25
"Slight story, but entertaining incident, in circus picture."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Great picture. Turned them away at night." "The boiled down opinions on this picture is 'Old Stuff.'"

PLUNGER, THE (FOX) GEORGE WALSH.....NOV. 20
"Story of frenzied finance makes ordinary picture."—M. P. News.

PREY, THE (VITAGRAPH) ALICE JOYCE.....OCT. 9
"Alice Joyce has highly involved story here."—M. P. News
Exhibitor Comment—"Patrons did not like this one. Two days to average and poor business." "One of the best Alice Joyce subjects this year. Did unusually well at the box office."

PRICE OF REDEMPTION, THE (METRO) BERT LYTELL.....OCT. 2
"Lytell has hectic melodrama and acting opportunity here."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Big houses first two days. Rest of week fair." "Fine picture which brought good box-office receipts." "A splendid picture. Thrilling. Fine acting. By far the best work Bert Lytell has done." "Had a big opening and average crowds during the rest of week. Fair as a picture." "Good both as to entertaining value and box office retsults."

RIGHT TO LOVE, THE (FITZMAURICE PRODUCTION-PARAMOUNT) MAE MURRAY-DAVID POWELL.....SEPT. 4
"Worthy successor to "On With the Dance."—M. P. News
"Played it two days to big and average business." "Very fine picture. Did big business. Playing second week." "Did not do as well in its first week as 'On With the Dance.' Will probably only run two weeks." "Second week's business complete flop. Attractions failed to please." "Ordinary story, but drew good houses. Picture well produced." "Was only fair. Miss Murray is an actress of ability, but the production was not up to the standard of some of her former successes." "Business very good. Crowded houses all week. Audiences well pleased. Booked for indefinite run." "Second big week. Good business, full houses. Audiences like it." "An average picture and played to usual business."

ROUND UP, THE (PARAMOUNT-ARTCRAFT).....SEPT. 18
"Colorful western with Fatty Arbuckle as feature star."—M. N. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Very disappointing and tame. Just like hundreds of other Westerns. Those who liked Westerns didn't mind it very much—but they certainly didn't like it. Box-office receipts good, because they wanted to see Fatty in a five-reeler." Fairly good picture, but business not exceptionally good, due largely to the fact that the star has yet to make his reputation as the principal in a feature picture, His fame rests only upon his work in comedy." "This is an average picture but seemed to please the audience." "Fair business to fair houses." "Very good. Played it two days to big business." "Very entertaining. Fatty liked better in comedies."

SECRET GIFT, THE (UNIVERSAL) KOHLMAR-CHRISTIANS....SEPT. 18
"A pretty story with appealing value."—M. P. News.
Exhibitor Comment—"Unusual picture, which brought more than usual business." "Good. Big business one day."

"DINTY"
(Neilan-First National)

Melodrama and Sentiment Put This One Over

THERE are enough elements in this feature to please every type of picturegoer. If one wants unadultered melodrama which strains credulity, but moves with considerable vigor, one will find it in the Chinatown sequences; if one wants wholesome sentiment, which is exaggerated to bring out the pathos, one will find it in the struggle of the newsboy to make both ends meet and to bring comfort to his invalid mother. These are the dominant forces in the latest Marshall Neilan picture, "Dinty," starring Wesley Barry. The freckled youngster makes his stellar debut here and there is no question that he will establish a healthy following. His personality is ingratiating and he is gifted with considerable talent.

While Mr. Neilan has written his story around him he has been forced to add several counterplots to give it substance and vitality. The sequences of the youngster would not cover over two reels or three and they must be fortified with melodrama to reach every type of patron. This melodrama, by the way, is far-fetched and often resembles a serial in its wild action. The villain is a smuggler in 'Frisco's Chinatown, and before he is forced to talk "turkey" to the authorities he runs afoul of the Navy, metes out revenge upon the Judge who refused to pardon his boy, and kidnaps his daughter. Underground passages, aeroplane feats, smuggling and what not take up these sequences.

As for the sentiment or the juvenile interest, the picture gets off to a flying start by showing the boy emerging from his cellar home via the sidewalk elevator. His fights with the bully and his return home of an evening to be lectured by the mother who advises him to turn the other cheek to his enemies—these are lifelike touches. But the newsboy isn't freckled and sorrel-topped for nothing. His intimate comrades are a tiny Chink and the colored boy who supported Harold Lloyd and Snub Pollard. Dinty forms a syndicate and actually gets police protection by doing a good turn for the prosecuting attorney. The boys have their inning in restoring the Judge's daughter and are rewarded with adoption. The picture is rich in humor, there being a deal of original highlights about it. And this element keeps pace with the pathos and sentiment. The star is supported by a competent cast which includes Colleen Moore, Marjorie Daw, J. Barney Sherry, and Noah Beery. You can make sure of "Dinty." It's a great audience picture.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Marshall Neilan's juvenile actor, Wesley Barry, has been made into a star, and his debut occurs in "Dinty," a story conceived by Mr. Neilan, adapted by Marion Fairfax for the screen and directed by the author. It will be the main attraction at the ———— theatre next ————. The story concerns a spirited Irish lad whose efforts to keep a roof over the head of his invalid mother brings him into all sorts of adventures. Being Irish and freckled certainly has its advantages when it comes to taking care of one's self. So "Dinty" as he is called sells his papers and forms a syndicate on the money donated by a friend he has favored in the past.

After the death of his mother, "Dinty" loses some of his happy-go-lucky spirit, but he embraces the opportunity to help his friends—two of them being newsboy cronies and the others a prosecuting attorney and judge. It falls to "Dinty" to save the life of the latter's daughter and for his bravery is rewarded with adoption—which means a good home and good things to eat. The picture carries a wealth of drama, sentiment, heart interest and pathos and also considerable humor. Wesley Barry justifies his stardom with a clever performance and the others in the cast, particularly Noah Beery and Colleen Moore, are good.

PROGRAM READER

Wesley Barry, the boy actor, who has adorned several Marshall Neilan pictures, will come to the ———— theatre next ———— as a star in "Dinty," a story of a newsboy, whose pluck, courage and good nature brought sunshine into the lives of everyone who met him—including his enemies. It is a picture which is rich in melodramatic incident with Noah Beery carrying off the acting honors. It is also rich in homespun sentiment, humor, pathos and heart appeal. The freckled-faced Wesley makes a hit every minute he is on the screen and patrons of the ———— will takes him to their hearts. Prominent in his support are Colleen Moore, Pat O'Malley, J. Barney Sherry, Tom Gallery and the colored child who has played in the Harold Lloyd and Snub Pollard comedies. See this picture.

SUGGESTIONS

If you have played the Marshall Neilan pictures your crowd is certainly familiar with the name and face of Wesley Barry, the boy actor. This freckled-faced youngster, a born comedian, has been made a star and it would be a good angle to tell that to your patrons. Bring out that he makes his debut in "Dinty," a story written by Mr. Neilan himself. Tell that he plays the part of a newsboy who fights and smiles and does favors for his mother, friends and enemies. Play up the star and have an artist draw a likeness of him—a head and shoulder sketch. Use catch lines exploiting him as "a broth of a lad." Play up the fact that he

"THE FURNACE"
(Realart)

Talky Picture Has Little Appeal

WHATEVER merit the original story contained certainly hasn't been taken advantage of in the screen adaptation. There is very little plot material present, the idea being based upon a honeymoon quarrel which is such an inconsequential matter that it is amazing how it ever appealed to the sponsors as picture entertainment. A word or two by the parties involved in the quarrel would have brought peace, but for five reels their foolish conflict is forced with nothing tangible in the way of logic or argument or drama or anything else than a grand spread. William D. Taylor has been given a good sized check-book and he has gone the limit in staging the picture. He has designed some massive sets and others which are thoroughly in harmony.

In fact the one redeeming thing about the offering is its production. No expense has been spared to make it lavish. If as much money had been spent for a good story the result would have been different. The characters move about like so many puppets entirely at the whim of the director. Some of their actions and arguments have very little sense about them. For instance, the wife who walks around in an amazing variety of gowns asks a masculine friend to lend her some money. Her husband is rich enough to provide her with funds. There is no foundation for many other scenes and situations. The figures are moved about from London to Monte Carlo to Scotland to Canada and one has difficulty in keeping track of them. They flit around from one room to another with equal speed.

There is really no head nor tail to the thing. Inconsequential as the quarrel between the honeymooners is, the development of their "spat" is even more lacking in substance. The title is meaningless unless one is led to believe that the married couple must be purged of their selfish whims in the crucible. The characters extract no sympathy from the spectator. Mr. Taylor has piled on the detail and given stress to every little incident. And drama is missing; likewise reality and truth. Agnes Ayres doesn't get beneath the surface in her characterization, although she commands considerable attention with her beauty and distinctive costumes. Theodore Roberts is good as usual in a crotchety role. Milton Sills and Jerome Patrick are rather wooden in their portrayals—which is not to be wondered at considering the spineless plot. There is a good church scene representing the marriage ceremony. It is the only true touch in the picture.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Furnace," William D. Taylor's newest production for Realart, which will be showr at the ———— next ———— is declared to be one of the richest pictures in spectacular scenes and lavish settings which have been viewed for some time. The picture is an adaptation of the novel of the same name by the English author, "Pan," an anonymous writer. The theme of the tale is that a marriage without love is a furnace of unhappiness and that from such a union the direst of complications may result. The husband learns that his wife had lightly vowed to sue him for breach of promise if he jilted her. He then marries her and tells her that he knows her feelings, and that he will be her husband in name only.

This precipitates a quarrel which makes them the unhappiest couple in England. The picture builds with plenty of complications which are gripping and a climax which is genuinely dramatic. The director has reproduced several bits of England as well as incorporating novel scenes which comprise a storm, a garden party and a wedding ceremony. The picture is played by a notable cast that includes Agnes Ayres, Jerome Patrick, Theodore Roberts, Milton Sills and Mayme Kelso. Julia Crawford Ivers scenarioized the story.

PROGRAM READER

"The Furnace," the Realart picture which comes to the ———— theatre next ———— is an unusually powerful photodrama. The theme is striking, the action and plot gripping and well portrayed by an all-star cast of notables including such popular favorites as Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, Jerome Patrick, Milton Sills, Helen Dunbar and others. The story revolves around a society marriage—a marriage which starts with a quarrel. How it develops—how the husband and wife learn to appreciate each other's faults and look for happiness is told in five reels of interesting drama. The picture is beautifully staged and Miss Ayres wears some magnificent gowns.

SUGGESTIONS

If you mention the plot of the story you will be destroying interest. So the best idea is to concentrate upon your all-star cast. Mention the names of Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, Jerome Patrick, Milton Sills and Betty Francisco. Use stills of Miss Ayres in some of her beautiful gowns. This will arouse interest among your feminine crowd. Bring out that the marriage ceremony may develop into a FURNACE of unhappiness if the parties lack a forgiving nature. Bring out that it furnishes an interesting hour—an hour charged with gripping moments.

"THE LIFE OF THE PARTY"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Fun and Hokum in Fatty Arbuckle's Latest

THOSE exhibitors who cleaned up with Fatty Arbuckle's short comedies should go after his latest feature, "The Life of the Party," for it is nothing but an elaboration of one of his two reelers—one of his polite two reelers. It is much better material for the star than his first venture, "The Round Up," since it employs his well known brand of humor without asking him to be dramatic. Irvin Cobb is the author of the tale and as far as logic goes he has not contributed anything lifelike. But then it is a burlesque anyway. In fact that is what Joseph Henebery has made of it. For two reels there is a semblance of an idea with a group of restless women determined to put the skids under the milk profiteers so that the Better Babies' League may thrive. They employ Fatty Arbuckle, who is disguised as a lawyer.

The picture is not meant to be taken seriously and it certainly gets over with some sure-fire hokum and incident. The star has his "cellar" in his safe, but he persists in putting the bottle upon the buzzers on his desk. So the staff is always called in. He takes a tumble out of the window and says "I sure fell for that girl." This is a sample of the titling—most of which is as snappy and bright as the action. Fatty has a good time in court with Frank Campeau sitting as judge. This good character actor makes a splendid foil. He is owned by the profiteers who scheme to discredit Fatty, who has been sponsored for mayor. The scenes develop with a good deal of humor and many will remind the spectator of the stunts employed by Charlie Chaplin.

Fatty goes to a masquerade ball disguised in rompers. His appearance is enough to put a house in an uproar. And when he gets caught in the cold and robbed of his overcoat it brings a fitting climax. The hokum piles up when he stumbles into several apartments and he resorts to a tried and true slapstick trick by taking the cover off a chair and hiding himself with it. This should be a great picture for the children. Those in the Rivoli, New York, chuckled with glee. The grown-ups had a good time, too. This type of picture is just the thing for Arbuckle. It doesn't tax his capabilities and ask him to do the impossible. He is the Fatty Arbuckle of the short comedy. Which means he is at his best.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

The combination of Irving Cobb, author, and Roscoe Arbuckle, star of "The Life of the Party," is certain to attract patronage to the ———— theatre next ————, when the picture will be the feature of an interesting program. This is the second of the rotund star's feature productions, and it permits him to display his comedy talents with the same degree of expression as was found in the short subjects. It also offers him a chance to display his versatility in a dramatic direction.

The picture is an adaptation of Mr. Cobb's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name and concerns a genial young lawyer, who for the sake of a pretty girl undertakes to break the Milk Trust and gets himself into all sorts of amusing complications. Fatty Arbuckle certainly has his troubles in this picture. He is "vamped" by a pretty girl and certain shady politicians attempt to lure him from the straight and narrow path, but in the end he triumphs. Viora Daniels is the leading woman and the "heavy" role is played by the accomplished Frank Campeau. Walter Woods scenarioized the story, while Joseph Henebery directed. They have succeeded in turning out a picture which is humorous and rich in incident.

PROGRAM READER

The funniest fat man on the screen is coming next———— to the ————: theatre in "The Life of the Party." Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle is the star of this rip-roaring farce comedy adapted from Irvin Cobb's Saturday Evening Post story of the same name. This feature is a distinct departure from "The Round-Up," the first of the star's feature offerings. It carries more comedy and places the star in a role which is excruciatingly funny. He is "vamped" by a pretty girl—chased by crooks and cops—and all because he wants—— You'll want to see the picture and laugh for yourself! The funny fat man in a story by Irvin Cobb, America's greatest humorist. Don't miss "The Life of the Party."

SUGGESTIONS

This is the second of Arbuckle's feature pictures and it would be advisable to state that it differs a great deal from "The Round-Up." Bring out that it places the star in a role which he has capitalized upon the screen. Tell that it is ideal for his personality. Bring out that it is an adaptation of Irvin Cobb's funny story which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Play up the star and the author. Exploit the fact that America's funniest fat man comes to the screen in a story by America's greatest humorist. Use catch lines. Play up all your copy in a humorous fashion.

"THE DEVIL TO PAY"
(Brunton-Pathe)

Strong Mystery Story Carries Interest

"THE DEVIL TO PAY" is one of the best mystery dramas produced upon the screen in a long time. It has about everything necessary to excite, thrill and keep an audience pitched in a high key throughout, for the reason that its plot is unique and abounds in action from the time the opening scenes are thrown upon the screen to the last foot of film projected.

Although credit must be given to Frances Nimmo Greene, the author, for the clever way she has written the story, withholding the suspense to a remarkable degree until the finish, the director and cast should not be overlooked.

This happy combination has grasped situation after situation and painted them in most natural colors. In fact, at times it looked as though the actors had been playing their roles for some time before the scenes were taken.

The production is well mounted, Ernest C. Warde, the director, taking particular care in the selection of his exteriors.

The theme is based on the unique idea as to whether a man can be resuscitated after being officially hung and pronounced dead by state authorities.

As the story unfolds it discloses the life of a leading banker and political dictator of a small town who commits a crime and causes another to be sent to the gallows to cover up his guilt.

After his execution the man is resuscitated and like a ghost haunts his betrayer until the latter shoots himself. The climax is reached in a court-room scene which is highly dramatic.

The cast, which is particularly strong, includes Robert McKim, Roy Stewart, Fritzi Brunette and George Fisher.—Length, 6 reels.—Frank Leonard.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

"The Devil to Pay," Robert Brunton's latest production for Pathe release, will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ———— of next ————.

This picture has a corking story, chuck full of action and is told in such a way as to grip any audience.

The theme is decidedly novel and has an interesting introduction which like a good book holds the attention from the beginning without having to delve into the pages and "dig out" the story. It deals with the question, "Can a man be resuscitated after being officially hung and pronounced dead by the State authorities.

The leading banker and political dictator of a small town commits a crime and causes another to be sent to the gallows to cover up his guilt.

After the man's execution, a physician secures his body and resuscitates him. Secretly he assists the district attorney in gathering criminal evidence against his betrayer.

And it is his evidence which convicts the banker in one of the biggest dramatic scenes ever produced upon the screen.

The picture has been exceptionally directed by Ernest C. Warde, who has taken particular pains in the selection of his cast.

Among the prominent players are Roy Stewart, Robert McKim, Fritzi Brunette, George Fisher, Evelyn Selbie, Joe. J. Dowling, Richard Lapan and Mark Fenton.

PROGRAM READER

Can a man be resuscitated after being officially hung and pronounced dead by the State authorities?

A rather startling solution of the problem is solved in Robert Brunton's latest production for Pathe release, "The Devil to Pay," which is coming to this theatre next ————.

This feature has one of the most unique themes ever selected for the screen. The principal character is a leading banker in a small town who has committed a crime and caused another to be sent to the gallows to cover up his guilt.

A most peculiar thing happens, however, for after the man's execution, he is resuscitated by a physician and hounds his accuser even into the court room, where in one of the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed upon the screen he turns the tables on his accuser and helps the district attorney win his case.

The feature is well produced, excellently directed and has a splendid cast among whom are: Roy Stewart, Robert McKim, Fritzi Brunette, George Fisher, Evelyn Selbie and Richard Lapan.

SUGGESTIONS

Robert Brunton has produced a darn good picture in "The Devil to Pay." It has a most unique theme which is gripping from start to finish.

The picture is well directed, has an even continuity and plenty of action. You need not be afraid to book this feature, for it will give satisfaction to your patrons.

In your exploitation, play up the title, which is attractive and has a meaning. A splendid idea would be to run a series of short stories in your town papers bringing out the point with the question, "Can a man be resuscitated after being officially hung and pronounced dead by State authorities?

These lines alone should draw the reader's attention and when a short synopsis of the story is given it should arouse interest.

"A CITY SPARROW"
(Paramount-Artcraft)

Weak in Drama, But Strong in Sentiment

ETHEL CLAYTON doesn't seem to be fitted by temperament or talent to play "sob" roles, which may be the reason why "A City Sparrow" doesn't ring forth with any sincerity. The picture is quite a departure for the emotional star and because of its lack of moving moments or dramatic ingredients fails to make a worthy vehicle for the expression of her talents. The plot material is really frail and always obvious and the thread of story has a hard time sustaining itself. The idea is really propaganda for the country since it contrasts the life in the open with that of the city.

Miss Clayton plays the part of an unsuccessful actress. She has come to the metropolis with visions of earning fame and fortune, and discovers that she is only a "city sparrow." When she meets with an accident she learns that she can never become a mother and her despair seems complete until the country youth comes to town and urges her to return with him. The picture doesn't present any conflict, nor any detail of theatrical life, and relies entirely upon its sentiment and pathos. Because the heroine cannot rise above her sordid environment the spectator is invited to sympathize with her. But Ethel Clayton is not the brooding type of star, so her effort to appear forlorn isn't very effective. The story is sugary and often dull because of its lack of variety. The heroine goes to the country, regains her health, and develops a fresh outlook upon life, and the climax shows the inevitable ending.

The feature is interesting in its backgrounds. The director has effective interiors to represent a theatrical boarding house and the exteriors of the country are first rate. In fact the settings make the picture. It might have developed some highlights if the director had introduced some theatrical bits and contrasted them with the country incident. But he has treated the story in a matter-of-fact way so that the elements of spontaneity and surprise are missing. One thing in its favor is its note of simplicity. The title is attractive and with the star's name should invite patronage. Walter Hiers is fairly amusing in a colorless role and Clyde Fillmore is good as the country youth. "A City Sparrow" is just a program feature.—Length, 5 reels.—Laurence Reid.

PRESS NOTICE—STORY

Ethel Clayton, the Paramount star, will appear at the ———— theatre next ———— and ———— in "A City Sparrow," a picture which is well suited to her charm and personality. It is a picture which places her in a peculiarly sympathetic role—the role of a young girl who finds "bucking the tiger" in the city is a mighty task—a task too great for her resources. She has endeavored to make a success upon the stage but only discovers that she is wanted for obscure parts. Finally she is taken ill and despairs of ever reaching the pinnacle of fame. Then from the country comes a youth whose fresh outlook changes her attitudes.

He takes her back with him where she recuperates under a balmy sun and outdoor life. And she learns to appreciate that the city cannot cope with the country in building happiness. She realizes that she has been nothing but a city sparrow. The story permits Miss Clayton to display her talented expression—a role in which she extracts a deal of sympathy. Prominent in her support are Walter Hiers, who is humorous in a comedy role; Clyde Fillmore appearing opposite, and William Boyd. Sam Wood directed the picture and he has succeeded in bringing out the human and humorous highlights. The offering is an adaptation by Clara Kennedy of Kate Jordan's story.
